But now, for the Conservatives, at least, something is being done about it.

Conservative leader Stanfield has set up a two-man research staff to help you and other MPs research, and if necessary, assist in the preparation, even the writing of some of your speeches.

The bureau is manned by two old hands on Parliament Hill, Thomas Van Dusen and Gregor Guthrie, former executive aides to ex-prime minister and Conservative leader Diefenbaker.

Guthrie is a World War II infantry officer and former United Nations peace - keeper in Kashmir; Van Dusen a two-time bilingual Conservative election candidate who colorfully if unsuccessfully campaigned from the back platform of a chartered train through the nearby Gatineau Hills.

Together in recent years they did what, until they arrived on the Hill scene, had been the impossible. They managed to organize John Diefenbaker's once wildly disorganized speeches.

Dief wrote his speeches one thought at a time, each on a separate piece of paper with which he covered his parliamentary office floor, tippy-toeing around when the job was done to pick them all up, hopefully in order.

Van Dusen and Guthrie, when they took charge, grabbed each separate note as Dief jotted it, assembled them all and ran them through the typewriter, producing, lo and behold, a speech with beginning, centre body, and best of all, end.

Now they've got their typewriter churning out speeches on practically any parliamentary or political theme ordered, for the overworked MPs.

You may have detected new bark and bite, clearer reason, more compelling argument in some of the more recent speeches in the Commons and on the constituency stump. Thank Guthrie and Van Dusen.

How good are they?

Well, they prepared a rouser of a speech for former Conservative Labor Minister Mike Starr last October when he had a speaking date with the World Congress of Ukrainians in New York's Madison Square Garden.

And when usually sweetly-reasonable, disarmingly-mild and ever-so-friendly Mike Starr let fly with that speech about the glories of the once-great Ukraine now captive of the Soviet, hundreds of fired-up Ukrainians marched out of Madison Square Garden and over to the Soviet Embassy where they burned the hammer-and-sickle on its steps.

There was such a patriotic ruckus the Soviet Ambassador protested to Starr's boss, Bob Stanfield. Honest!

Man, that's speech-writing!

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 17, 1968 . . .

The last local resistance to Louis Riel's Metis government of Manitoba ended 98 years ago today—in 1870—when Major Charles Boulton and his 47 men were captured. Thomas Scott was shot two weeks later when he refused either to leave the province or submit to Riel's government.

1919—Sir Wilfrid Laurier died at Ottawa.

1948—Imam Yahya of Yemen was murdered.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1918—Lord Northcliffe was appointed director of propaganda in enemy countries; the Russian government demanded evacuation of Bessarabia by Romania; German airmen attacked London.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—the Japanese landed forces in Kwangchowwan, French leased territory on China's far southern coast; British heavy bombers attacked targets in western Germany; Russian armies extended their gains on the 400-mile front from Kursk to Rostov.

Feb. 18, 1968 . . .

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in vanced rapidly into central Russia and the Ukraine taking many prisoners and hundreds of guns; Dvinsk and Lutsk were captured; Russians evacuated Armenia; French repulsed Germans southwest of the Butte du Mesnil in Champagne.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—German forces occupied Sbeitla, Kasserine and Feriana in central Tunisia; United States warships bombed Japanese positions at Holtz Bay and Chicagoe Harbor on Attu, Aleutian Islands; RAF and RCAF fighters made daylgiht attacks on railways in Belgium and France.

Family Privation

Owen - Sound Sun - Times

The wage earner of a family, possibly with five or six children is suddenly laid off. Unemployment insurance is far from immediate. Yet hunger is a constant thing, as is need for heat. A person is injured on the job. Compensation often takes quite a long time to be processed. Many people who meet such circumstances have no financial reserves, generally through no real fault of their own.

Many such cases result from jailing of the father of the family, generally the result of drunkenness. And no matter what the father's "sins" against society, children and wives must be cared for in the interim period. Mother's allowance often does take over in such cases, and those of desertion. But again there is time necessary for processing. Such families seldom if ever have reserves of any kind, or have any close family to whom they can turn for aid.

Culture and the People

Windsor Star

Older nations, by the very reason of their age, have a cultural heritage which younger nations lack. But, too often, their culture was restricted to an upper fringe, though in Russia the ordinary people have an appreciation of the ballet as in Italy they have for the opera.

Most of our ancestors were not cultured in this sense. They were ordinary people who sought to escape the potato famines in Ireland, the clearances of the highlands in Scotland or from other impoverished conditions, or from religious persecution.

The first generations of pioneers had little time or opportunity for cultural pursuits, even if they had a mind for them. They were too busy clearing the land and making themselves self-sustaining. And, because they were in pioneer settlements, they didn't have ready access to good music, art or even literature.

Nowadays it seems Canada is intent on catching up, what with the ballet, the opera, art museums, etc. This is all to the good, with one proviso. Our culture shouldn't be dependent on any "upper class." It should be of the people.

Highway Accidents

Brockville Recorder and Times

Since 1955 there have been 1,355,000 Canadians injured in traffic accidents, at least 25,000 of them permanently disabled. This would appear to bear testimony to the need for a more stringent drive to reduce the mayhem on the highways. Weak government attitudes do little to reduce the toll.

Most new legislation pays but lip service to the problem. We wonder, for instance, how many people have actually lost their driving licences since the provincial demerit policy went into effect? Whatever the number, apparently it is not doing an effective job. The government, the courts and the police are going to have to get a lot tougher if the toll is to be reduced.

Swedes Pay For Wealth

Financial Times, London

Sweden is one of the most prosperous countries in the world, but the high cost of living puts even simple commodities like butter and beef out of the range of working-class families. To pay for the social services, taxation has reached the point at which a large portion of the electorate simply cannot take any more. The Scandinavian system of wage increases, linked to the cost-of-living index, is a persistent inflationary threat. If these pressures indeed induce the Swedes to opt out of socialism, the entire Scandinavian Socialist Movement will have to do some serious thinking.

Swim Pools

Peterborough Examiner

Without consulting Ontario's motel industry, the Department of health has introduced new regulations which could force dozens of motels to close their swimming pools. Under an amendment to the Public Health Act, motel and resort pools have been classified as public pools and a lifeguard must be in attendance when the pool is in use.

Birds and Airport Safety

Ottawa Journal

Short grass beside an airport enhances flying safety.

The Canadian Wildlife Service states, through the Indian Affairs Department annual report, that increasing aircraft traffic has emphasized the importance of reducing collisions with birds in flight.

The wildlife experts, working with other scientists, have concluded that the best approach is to make airports unattractive to birds. Garbage dumps near major airports have been closed; trees, hedges and shrubs cleared away; ditches cleaned, ponds drained and low-lying lands filled and levelled.

Where there is grass, it has been clipped to a calculated height — "too short to provide cover for field mice or rabbits which in turn attract owls and hawks, too long to provide comfortable rest and feeding for small short-legged birds."

The fight to make birds stay away from aircraft has been long and inconclusive. Now the experts are considering means of discouraging worms in land near airports. Gulls, which are often involved in air collisions, will take risks for worms. It will be one of the costs of progress if the land around airports is deprived of all birds, beasts and creepers but pilots will be happier.

Bennett Is in the Doghouse

Vancouver Sun

As the premier farthest away from the problem and least familiar with it, Mr. Bennett felt competent to lecture about it to such genuinely concerned leaders as Prime Minister Pearson and Premier Robarts and Premier Robichaud and the others who knew what they were talking about. It was all a big joke to him and he kept flashing his best toothpaste grin on television to prove it. Everybody was out of step but our Cece, he said.

If the rest of the country is appalled by the uncouth meanness of his performance, there is little that more considerate British Columbians can say to ameliorate it. Except that it was what they sadly expected of him.

She Lost 13 Inches Over 38 Years

Winnipeg Tribune

The news that Mrs. Ethel Granger, a British housewife, has managed to trim down her waist to a mere 13 inches in 38 years of unceasing effort, will no doubt in many quarters be construed as symbolic of a general trend in that country.

Britain should consider herself fortunate in having citizens as determined as this lady. Not only has she cut down on her calories but she gave the corset industry a much-needed shot in the arm.

The example of Mrs. Granger should be noted on this side of the Atlantic. Our economy too needs people who eat less and pay more for dry goods.

We call upon Canadian women to follow Mrs. Granger's example and do her one better twelve inches? eleven? ten?

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 17, 1948.

Operations of the Toronto Dredge and Dock Co., engaged in the installation of a new watermain across the Moira River just below the lower bridge have resulted in a substantial gallery of interested on-lookers during the past few weeks. The company is trenching four feet below the bed of the river and will lay an 18-inch watermain for the Belleville Public Utilities Commission.

A seasonal bowling record was set this week at the Recreation Alleys when Bob Weaver, playing for the Optical team, sent the maples toppling for a high single score of 416. Weaver bowled ten strikes out of a possible 10.

She played in vaudeville for some time before joining this company. Miss Tett is one of the several Hart House players who are in England continuing work.

Clayton W. Burr, superintendent of Bridge Street Church Sunday School, will be the guest speaker at Bloomfield United Church next Sunday.

John Wallbridge, son of Arthur Wallbridge, Queen St., and a student at Queen's University, was crowned 118 pounds intercollegiate wrestling champion at the annual assault - at - arms held at Hart House, University of Toronto. Wallbridge has been prominent in wrestling circles for some time, but his winning of the interchampionship is the crowning achievement of all.

Buddhist Sect Growing in U.S.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nichiren Shoshu, a Buddhist sect, says its ranks are growing faster than any religion in the United States.

Two years ago Nichiren Shoshu claimed 25,000 active adherents in the U.S. Now it claims between 40,000 and 50,000.

"This is not like Zen which appealed to beatniks," says Masayasu Sadanaga, chief of the joint headquarters of Nichiren Shoshu of America in Los Angeles. "These are good, common-sense people."

Sadanga says his sect has an advantage over other reliigons. It promises believers both material and spiritual happiness in this life.

People are told to pray for whatever they want to make them happy.

"And it gets results," says Sadanaga, "because people naturally work hard for the things they want that will give them security and material gains."

Other religions, Sadanaga says, promise happiness after death.

"In Buddhism,'" he says, "heaven and hell are already within you."

This chant, derived from Sanskrit and Chinese, is repeated over and over by believers. Roughly translated, it means devotion, universal phenomena, the laws of cause and effect and all living sounds or activities. It is supposed to signify the essence of the universe.

The religion was founded in 1253 by Nichiren Daishonin who is considered by sect leaders as the true Buddha.

The lay organization of Nichiren Shoshu, called the Sokagakkai, which is responsible for the speedy propogation of the sect, was formed only 40 years ago.

Vatican May Grant Faster Annulments

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)-Legal machinery in the Vatican may work faster and hasten the handling of marriage annulment cases under reforms proposed to Pope Paul.

The proposals, made at the Roman Catholic Church's first synod of bishops last October, are under study by a commission charged with revising the 1917 code of canon (church) law, a collection of rulings handed down for centuries by popes and church courts.

Intended to make church law more humane, the proposed reforms have stirred widespread interest, especially in relation to marriage annulment cases.

Several hundred thick dossiers containing applications for marriage annulment are gathering dust in the ancient offices of the sacred Roman Rota—the Vatican's chief tribunal which dates back to the 13th century.

The Rota, headed by 66-year-old Polish prelate Msgr. Boleslao Filipiak, deals with about 300 cases a year. There is a staggering backlog of work, and years often elapse before judgment is passed.

Divorce is banned by the church and Catholics can remarry only if they obtain a Vatican annulment of their previous marriage.

One of the more recent applicants for a marriage annulment was Italian film star Gina Lollobrigida, separated from her Yugoslav-born husband in 1966 after 16 years of marriage.

An annulment obtained in 1962 by Princess Lee Radziwill, younger sister of Jacqueline Kennedy, revived allegations that only the rich and influential could get an annulment.

Rota officials counter these allegations by publishing figures on the number of cases tried free each year, a privilege granted to those proving that they have no money.

During the judiciary year which ended in October, 1966, the court tried 201 marriage annulment cases, 40 per cent of them free of charge.

Annulments can be expensive, with unofficial cost estimates ranging from 300,000 lire (about $480) to several million lire.

Technically speaking, the Rota cannot and does not annul marriages. It merely declares that a marriage was not valid in the first place and gives the reasons.

These include refusal to believe at the time of the wedding in the indissolubility of the marriage tie, denial of the right to have children, mistaken identity, concealment before marriage of a physical defect such as impotence and violence or compulsion in obtaining consent.

Another ground for annulment is when the bride turns out not to be a virgin, although her bridegroom thought her to be one.

Few Jews In Poland

Two officials of the Jewish Community Association, in separate conversations, said the same thing.

Once an important 10-per-cent minority totalling 3,500,000 persons in pre-war Poland, the Jewish community now numbers perhaps 25,000.

Most of Poland's 1939 Jews died at the hands of Nazi executioners. Many survivors went to Israel, and even today some 10 families a month go there.

The number of those remaining is not known exactly. One official estimates as low as 15,000 to as high as 50,000. Jews don't bother to register with their community centres as they had to before the war.

"There is no registration, no statistics, no more Jewish weddings and no rabbi," one said.

Warsaw had a pre-war Jewish population of 350,000. Today there are an estimated 3,000.

In all of Poland there are fewer than 10 synagogues. Often basements and homes are used as places of worship. Services are poorly attended and mostly by elders, men of 60 or 70.

Before the war Warsaw had 30 synagogues. Now there is one, not far from the city centre but hemmed in by other buildings and not visible from the main street.

Observe 25th Anniversary

Charter member of the Prince Edward-Belleville ladies' club, Mrs. Percy Parliament, cuts the 25th birthday cake, while Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, secretary; Mrs. Gerald Gorsline, Mrs. Flossie Henderson, president; and Mrs. Loral Wannamaker watch with interest. Mrs. Gorsline and Mrs. Wannamaker are also charter members of the club.

Ladies' Club Marks Anniversary

The Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club marked its 25th anniversary on Wednesday afternoon with a special celebration held at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street. The event was convened by Mrs. H. Welch and Mrs. E. Morris with 30 members were present.

New president Mrs. F. Henderson opened the meeting in the usual manner after which she spoke briefly on the meaning of St. Valentine's Day. Corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. White read a letter from Mrs. E. Farnsworth and a letter from Mrs. R. Packman who is now a resident at All Bright Towers, Beamsville was read by Mrs. A. Wells. A suitable memorial prayer was read by Mrs. H. Welch, in memory of members who had passed away during the past 25 years. A reading on Valentine's Day was given by Mrs. L. Fox.

A charter member Mrs. P. Parliament dealt with the history of the Belleville Ladies' Club beginning with its inception 25 years ago on February 14, 1943 with Mrs. M. B. Weese its originator. Mrs. Weese invited a number of former Prince Edward County women to her home for afternoon tea and from this meeting the Prince Edward Ladies' Club was formed. After the choosing of officers meetings were held at the homes of the various members once a month.

The first donation on record, made by the club was a Bible to Mountain View Airport in 1944 for use in the chapel. A few years later when the base was closed, the gift was returned to the club which in turn presented it to the New Home for the Aged, Trent Road.

A room in the St. Lawrence Home for the Blind, Kingston was furnished by the club and a plaque on the door bears the name of the group. Other donations have been given to the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer fund, Retarded Children's Association and others.

Due to the popularity of the club and the many applications for membership there are many members now who are not from the Prince Edward County but are playing an important role in the work of the club.

During the year picnics, bus trips and dinners are enjoyed by members families and friends.

It was regretted that Mrs. M. B. Weese the organizer of the club has been unable to attend the meetings for sometime but she is still keenly interested in its activities even at the age of 92 years. Mrs. R. Garbutt another charter member was also unable to attend but three other charter members, Mrs. P. Parliament, Mrs. L. Wannamaker and Mrs. G. Gorsline were present.

At the close of the meeting the conveners and their group served lunch which included the birthday cake and ice cream.

AUSTRALIA — FIRST HAND

(Conclusion)

"A Sydney lady was telling me that their son and his wife who recently went to Canada are now in a place in Ontario called Kitchener — did I know it?" — Judi Linton.

* * *

About the middle of October, 1967, Judi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Linton of Belleville, became a member of the teaching staff of The Riverside Girls' High School of Sydney, Australia.

"The school," says Judi, "is built around a courtyard. Because it gets stuffy in warm weather, the class rooms have windows onto the courtyard as well as into the hall. The desks are old-fashioned flip-up seats, with each seat built for two pupils, which are not very conducive for individual work or attention.

The girls wear a uniform as all school kids in Australia do. These are a blue and white gingham shirt waist dress, gray ankle socks, black oxfords, blue beret or straw hat and a brown suitcase, almost the size of the suitcase I brought with me.

The girls are not allowed to wear any make-up. The trend is toward straight, long hair, but most of the girls have curly hair and it is still long.

Disicipline as we know it is not the same. When they want to talk to me or to their pal across the room, they just do. They were quite surprised when I asked them to put their hand up if they wanted to say something. So far, (touch wood), I get along with most of the girls. They seem like nice kids, and most of them are just putting in time until they leave at fifteen and get a job.

The teachers, she notes, "are young and half of them have degrees. One girl on the staff sails in January via Fiji, Hawaii, Panama, Florida to England, the Continent, Canada (Toronto) and the United States. She plans on being away for a year anyway. She says, seven of her college class-mates are teaching, now in Toronto. In fact, this past Saturday, in the Sydney Herald newspaper, there was one great advertisement for teachers in Toronto. They pay your way over if you sign up for five years. . ."

(Australia's state schools are free, compulsory and secular. Most of its private schools are denominational and account for 24 percent of the enrollment, and partial government support was recently offered to them, we are told. There are ten universities and three university colleges. The University at Canberra is comparable to that in Princeton for post-graduate work.)

Summer holidays begin around Christmas time and end the first of February. The week before Christmas was the last week of school which says Judi, "was a real finish."

"On Tuesday, we had an eventful day. It was 'Speech Day,' sort of like graduation; giving out prizes. The girls were herded off in buses to the nearby Boy's High School which has an auditorium. There we sat and listened to speeches from ten till noon. It got a bit warm; about 93 or so. . .

Wednesday, our head-mistress gave us morning tea in the cooking room, complete with sandwiches, cheese scones and cake with whipped cream and orange icing.

Thursday was closing day. (We didn't realize it, but a few miles away towards the shore, a tornado whirled through and ripped roofs off homes and uprooted trees for 90 seconds. We missed it by only four miles.) The top staff room had its final party. We all brought something at lunch time. Four desks were made into a banquet table complete with table cloth and flowers.

Admiring pupils piled Judi with Christmas cards, who next term will be teaching near Brisbin much to their regret.

Thus we leave Judi for the time being. We thank her sincerely for the rare, exclusive glimpse she has given our readers, of Australia, of New South Wales, the most populous state of the Commonwealth, of Sydney of over two million people, which she is so adventurously discovering — first hand.

Phillips – Wilson

Rev. Gordon Woodcock officiated at the wedding ceremony in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, on Saturday, February 10, 1968, at 12 noon, when Gail Susanne Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton E. Wilson, Belleville was united in marriage to Frederick Carl Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phillips, Belleville, R. R. 2. Church organist William Connor rendered traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist Miss Elizabeth Woodcock.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white silk velvet featuring a stand-up rolled collar and three-quarter length sleeves with rolled cuffs. The back of the dress was highlighted with a cathedral train of French lace extending from a collar at back. A four-tier tulle veil flowed from a headdress of silk flowers; and she carried a cascade bouquet of Yuletide roses.

Mrs. Garry Harrington, sister of the bridegroom as matron of honor wore a floor-length gown of red velvet styled similarly to the bride's, with a red velvet wedding ring headband with matching tulle veiling. The bridesmaids Mrs. William Jones, Mrs. Ray Finkle and Miss Cathy Wilson, sister of the bride were identically attired to the matron of honor. Each carried a white satin and lace heart shaped pillow crested with Yuletide roses.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother-in-law Garry Harrington, while the ushers were Keith Reid, Raymond Finkle and James White, cousin of the bride. Ring-bearer was Glen Harrington, nephew of the bridegroom.

For the reception in the church parlors, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a turquoise and gold imported sculptured lace suit ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of white and turquoise tinted carnations. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a two-piece dress of gold and green printed silk jersey, beige accessories and a corsage of Orange Delight roses.

Upon return the couple will reside at 29 Fraser Drive, Batawa.

Unlimited Education

SKIDEGATE, B.C. (CP)— Indian children have unlimited education opportunities today, says Mrs. Arnold Pearson, British Columbia's first Indian school trustee.

She serves the 300 residents of this Haida Indian community nestled at the southern tip of Graham Island, largest in the Queen Charlotte chain.

She says that as Canada enters its second century there is no comparison to the time when she attended an Indian day school.

"It was all right for our time," she recalled. "We learned to read and write so we could get along.

"But we could not get beyond Grade 8. There was nothing here for anyone passing the entrance exams. Some students went through Grade 8 twice because they were too young to quit school and had nowhere to take high school.

"Today, things are different. Native children have every opportunity. Under the provincial system, children are able to advance more quickly and there are constant changes and improvements.

Mrs. Pearson, 39, a recipient of a centenniall medal and mother of 11 children, says she's proud to be serving her community but points out that she "was nominated and elected by the ratepayers.

Canadian views on historical blue china were made to be sold in the United States. F. Morley and Co. printed this plate in light blue with a picture of the church at Point Levi.

Canadian Views Were Made For Stores in United States

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

"Historic blues" is the nickname collectors have given the blue printed Staffordshire wares of the nineteenth century. Many English factories made thousands of patterns of dishes decorated with blue transfer designs. Most of the blue printed Staffordshire was made from 1818 to 1848. It has been copied many times.

Collectors specialize in scenes of American buildings and landscapes for historic blues, or the rarer Canadian scenes also called "historical china."

Most of the Canadian views seem to have been made for stores in the United States. Plates with Canadian scenes were seldom featured in advertisements by Canadian firms.

The best known Canadian views found on Staffordshire wares were originally drawn by William Henry Bartlett. He sketched a series of views called Canadian Scenery. The pictures from his book were used on the dishes about 1842.

Q. Who was Angelica Kauffmann. Her name appears on my hand painted plates.

A. Angelica Kauffman lived from 1741 to 1807. Most of the painted plates with her name were long after she died.

Her pict res were painted in a classical style in England. Her paintings were so popular many contemporary engravers made prints of her works. Her furniture and porcelain designs were also in reproduced on all sorts of demand. The designs were chinawares after her death, especially from 1870 to 1900.

Some of the pictures were decals, others were actually hand painted. There were plates that were made years after Angelica Kauffman died that are signed with her name.

Q. You have written that each apostle spoon shows the apostle and his symbol. What are the symbols?

A. Jesus held an orb and cross; St. John, a cup; St. Andrew a cross; St. Peter, a key; St. Bartholomew, a flaying knife. The ace was held by St. Mattias; a staff by St. James, the greater; and a bat by St. James the less. St. Thomas had a spear; St. Philip a short cross; St. Jude the processional cross. The sword was held by St. Paul; a saw by St. Simon; and a carpenter's square or a purse by St. Matthew. Each apostle held his symbol in one hand, a prayer book in the other.

Q. Grandfather's shotgun has the name "Hopkins and Allen." Where was it made?

A. Hopkins and Allen worked from 1868 to 1915 in Norwich, Conn. They owned several rifle patents. They also made revolvers under the Merwin and Hulbert patents.

BOOK REVIEW

Canadian collectors can rejoice, the first book devoted to the china used or made in Canada is now available. Nineteenth Century Pottery and Porcelain in Canada by Elizabeth Collard (McGill University Press, Montreal, Canada $22.50) Of great interest are the chapters about Portneuf ware, historical china with Canadian scenes, and the 60 pages about early Canadian factories. A checklist of potters is included.

Social Workers React with Sense of Humor

Dear Doris: It must be depressing to read about people's troubles all the time. — Wondering.

Dear Wondering: On the contrary: no more than doctors or nurses allow themselves to be depressed. The nice thing is that nowadays we can do something about what happens to people.

Besides, social workers have a sense of humor. Witness the Mother Goose Report which is included in the Regina Welfare Council Newsletter of December 1967:

"Case No. 723:

"Jack and Jill: Two adolescents prone to accident due to substandard housing. Constanly sustain severe contusions when making daily trip up hill to fetch a pail of water. Boy falls down hill. Girl comes tumbling after.

"Necessity to climb hill for water indicates lack of adequate residential water supply. Recommend referral to Department of Housing and scheduling of daily visits by boy to outpatient clinic for treatment of broken crown."

Dear Doris: Would appreciate it if you would send me something about proper etiquette and anything else you have about getting along with people, grooming, etc.

I have one person in mind who needs help, but wouldn't hurt her feelings by talking to her. Anything in writing she will pick up and read for herself and learn by it. — A Million Thanks.

Dear Million: Planning to throw the book at her? It's a useful old dodge to just leave things around for an erring soul to trip over.

I can send a list of books on manners; an article for teens on growing up; one for the half-century on growing "Lovelier With the Years". Better tell me more about your Problem Case.

Better also be ready for failure. It takes more than an open book to make a person read, digest and put into practice a good idea.

Confidential to Auntie: Little Joe could come out of his long illness an unhappy boy. Not only has he had the spotlight all along, as the oldest boy; now he is being given every last thing he can possibly dream up — as if to persuade him to get well.

Out of all this he is likely to conclude that the world revolves around him. Younger brothers may find him demanding and insufferable. And the end result could be a poorly adjusted, immature person, riding roughshod over others, leaning on illness when other means fail to get him what he wants.

Too much indulgence is no kindness, in the long run.

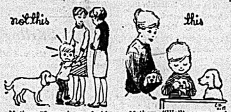
(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for ten cents and a large stamped self-addressed envelope, unless otherwise specified.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Larry is so afraid of dogs. The neighbors' big dog knocked him over last year, and he still cries if a dog comes near him."

Mother: "We'll come and see these little puppies every day and as soon as they're big enough, you may take one home. What will you name it?"

A puppy of his own may help dispel a child's fears and counteract an unpleasant experience with a large dog.

Mushroom Tricorns Made in Advance

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: It has been my experience lately that people are just plain sick and tired of pretzels, hors d'oeuvres based on crackers and the whole bit. Recently, we had company and in desperation I made lobster sandwiches with chopped onion and mayonnaise, pickles and coffee. I did not hear the usual remarks, "Oh I shouldn't"; "My diet". They just waded in and ate.

I cannot come up with too many good tasty sandwiches on the spur of the moment that men and women can wrap themselves around. These impromptu drop-ins throw me! — Elou A.

ANSWER: We all smiled here. We know all too well what you mean. Try the Tricorns below. They may be made in advance and reheated at serving time.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Main Course Bean and Bacon Soup (see Thurs.); Italian Bread Sticks and/or Cheese Croissants (see Jan. 19/68); Caesar Salad; Coconut Cream Pie (see Fri.); Coffee.

MUSHROOM TRICORNS

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 drop Tobasco
1 tablespoon flour
¼ pound washed and scrubbed and chopped mushrooms
4 tablespoons cream
1 teaspoon finely minced onion
2 wedges (1 oz. each) Gruyere cheese pastry sufficient for 2-crust pie

Melt butter; stir in chopped mushrooms and onion until coated with butter, then add Tobasco and flour. Stir in cream until thickened. Break cheese into small pieces; add. Stir over low heat until cheese melts. Remove from heat. Roll pastry to ⅛" thickness. Cut into 3" circles with cookie cutter. Spoon a small amount of mushroom mixture on each circle. Bring pastry up around filling and pinch to form a tricorn. Bake at 425 det. Fahr. for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve hot. (Pastries may be made ahead and reheated to serve.) Makes about 24 tricorns.

Because your lobster sandwiches were so popular here is another popular way to serve it to your drop-ins.

OPEN-FACE LOBSTER OBLONGS

Drain and shred one 7-oz. can of lobster, removing any bones. Add ¼ cup each finely chopped inner celery and mayonnaise, and 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Mix until it is of spreading consistency. Spread on length-wise slices of buttered sandwich bread. Cut off crusts all around. Cut crosswise into uniform oblongs or fingers about 1¼ inches wide. Garnish daintily with strips or crescents of ripe olive or slices of stuffed olvie. If to be served promptly, little strips of green pepper or tufts of parsley may be used.

Ann Landers

Mistakes of Past Recalled by Reader

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've made so many foolish mistakes in my life that I feel the one decent thing I can do now is warn other girls against throwing away their youth like I did.

ANN LANDERS

I am only 21 but I've seen more of the crummy side of people than most women who are 60. Here is my story: When I was 14 I quit school to get engaged to a serviceman who was being transferred. My mother begged me not to, but I was sure she only wanted me home so I could do her housework.

My fiance was shipped overseas and I began to run around. I fell for a man who was 10 years older than I was, divorced and a gambler. When he asked me to marry him I jumped at the chance. Eight months later I gave birth to twin girls. They were premature and died before they were two weeks old.

I thought the best way to get over the heartbreak was to have another baby right away. My little boy was born 11 months later. My husband refused to stay home. He said the baby's crying makes him nervous. On our wedding anniversary he skipped town and left me with $2.80.

I was 16 years old, had already buried two little girls and was left with an infant son to support. I won't go into the next four years because they were so horrible I'm ashamed to put the words down on paper and beside, I don't think you could print it. Somehow I survived. Now I am living with a lovely older couple. The woman takes care of my boy while I work. I am slowly getting back my self-respect and am determined to get an education and raise this son of mine to be a good citizen.

Please, Ann, keep telling your readers that youth is precious and once it is gone it can never be recaptured. Teenagers belong in school and they belong at home. I was never young and I mourn those lovely days that I missed. — ROSANNA.

DEAR ROSANNA: Your story is a sordid one but your ability to get out of the gutter and make a decent life for yourself is the real moral here. My hat is off to you, young lady.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every once in a while my husband says something that aggravates me, or maybe I say something that aggravates him. Anyway, we do have arguments occasionally, but, good Lord, what married couple doesn't?

Last night Ben came home for dinner and I noticed he didn't have his hat on. All I said was, "Where's your hat, Ben?" He replied, "I left it in the restaurant where I ate lunch." This is the third hat Ben has lost in the last 18 months and I got a little sore about it.

The next-door neighbor had come over to return my flatiron just as Ben walked in the door. She stood around to listen to the argument and before I knew it she was expressing herself as if somebody had asked her. She said, "My husband loses things, too, but I never say a word" . . . ya ta ta ta . . .

Well, Ann, the little argument got to be a big fight, something that would not have happened if the neighbor lady had kept her big nose out of it. Now I am madder at her than I am at Ben. What is your opinion of this? — LOVE THY WHAT?

DEAR LOVE: Real friends don't hang around when they see a family fight brewing. They leave. And this is what the neighbor lady would have done if she were a person of good judgment.

Job Insurance Made Welfare Scheme Is Charge

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance is being turned into another massive federal welfare scheme, Conservative MPs complained in the Commons Friday.

New Democrats also hit the government for leaving the plan open to abuse by turning it into something it wasn't meant to be.

Critics said the government is destroying credibility of the scheme by forcing those who will never benefit to pay premiums and by extending coverage to the chronically unemployed.

Health Minister MacEachen, leading off second reading of a government bill to broaden coverage and raise premiums and benefits, said the whole plan may undergo wholesale revision when the government is able to move towards a fully-integrated social security plan.

Opposition members said the plan should have been revised long ago in view of recommendations made in 1962 in the Gill commission report.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—Queens-Lunenburg) said the Gill recommendations would have kept "freeloaders" out of the plan and under welfare or other schemes.

About 400,000 more Canadians will have to pay unemployment insurance premiums if the bill is passed.

It raises the level of cumpulsory coverage to include all those earning up to $150 a week. The present level is $105 a week.

Russell Keays (PC—Gaspe) said few wage-earners making more than $6,000 a year are ever unemployed and many who would have to pay into the plan could never hope to benefit.

Howard Johnston (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke) said anyone who paid into the scheme over a long period of time without drawing anything out should have the right to benefit.

"If any private insurance company in Canada functioned like this one does, it would quickly be run out of business by government inspectors," Mr. Johnston said.

As the first change in unemployment insurance rates since 1959, the bill would raise maximum weekly benefits to $53 from $36 for married persons and to $42 from $27 for the single.

Murdo Martin (NDP—Timmins) said the government had destroyed the plan's intent by including seasonal workers such as fishermen and bush workers whose problems should be handled in other ways.

Other workers tended to feel they too should be able to work eight months and go on unemployment insurance for four months.

Speaker Fred Cass Plans Crackdown on Questions

TORONTO (CP) — A warning by Speaker Fred Cass that he will restrict the type of oral questions asked in the Ontario legislature prompted Stephen Lewis (NDP—Scarborough West) to suggest Friday that the house have a spontaneous question period.

Under house rules members planning to query a minister must send the question in writing to the Speaker's office. The Speaker has the right to edit or reject it.

Mr. Cass said that in future he will refuse questions not of immediate concern or extreme importance or which will obviously require much research or an involved reply.

He said such questions will be entered on the house order paper, permitting the minister to reply in writing at his leisure.

Mr. Cass said he had allowed all questions sent to him since he was elected Speaker Wednesday but would start cracking down Monday.

The criticism was renewed by Eddie Sargent (L—Grey-Bruce) and Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park). Dr. Shulman objected to the Speaker's action in stroking out the words "why not."

The NDP member had proposed to ask Attorney-General Arthur Wishart why an inquest had not been ordered into a fatal air crash near Downsview airport early this month. After editing, the question asked only whether the inquest had been held.

Mr. Sargent asked questions ranging from vertical integration in food processing to the expiry data for 1967 car licence plates.

Agriculture Minister William Murray Gaunt (L—Huron-Bruce) asked Mr. Stewart how Continental Casualty had been picked by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board as the firm through which milk farmers are insured against losses.

Mr. Stewart said the firm had held contracts prior to the board's formation and he knew of only one complaint against the company by a farmer.

Mr. Gaunt said a number of complaints had reached his desk and agreed to a suggestion that he discuss the matter with the minister privately.

Jack Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) asked Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough whether the government plans to implement a recommendation of a select committee in 1963 that the words "Canadian citizen" be substituted for "British subject" wherever they occur in the Municipal Act.

Mr. McKeough said the matter has been under study for some time but the solution is not as simple as it might seem, since a simple substitution would disenfranchise an estimated 184,000 Commonwealth citizens who had not taken out Canadian citizenship.

The Henderson's Sunday dinner cost $5.30.

$5.32 if you count the electricity that cooked it.

In the past sixty years, hundreds of new uses for electricity have been discovered. Yet, while almost everything else has gone up in price, the average unit cost of electricity is less now than it was then. Do you know that electricity in Ontario costs less than almost anywhere else in the world? That's why it's the biggest bargain in your family budget.
The above example is based on the average cost to Ontario municipal residential customers of 1.13¢ per kilowatt-hour.

Survivors' Benefits Become Payable This Month Under The Canada Pension Plan

Starting this month, your Canada Pension Plan pays Survivors' Benefits . . . at no extra cost to you. These include a death benefit paid in a lump sum, widows' pensions, disabled widowers' pensions and benefits for dependent children. Benefits are payable to a contributor's survivors when the required contributions to the Canada Pension Plan have been made for at least three years. However, in accordance with the legislation, Survivors' Benefits can become payable this February, provided contributions have been made for the years 1966, 1967 and for the required period in 1968. Moreover, Survivors' Benefits are subject to the same upward adjustment that applies to all benefits under the Canada Pension Plan. This will keep them in line with increases in living costs.
It's a comforting thought to know that your family can rely on the Canada Pension Plan, even if you aren't here to look after them. Especially if you have young children. IF YOU WOULD LIKE MORE INFORMATION ON SURVIVORS' BENEFITS, VISIT OR WRITE YOUR NEAREST CANADA PENSION PLAN OFFICE.

Bride or Bridesmaid? Mo-Hawks Await Collingwood Bouquet

WOODSTOCK (Special) — In large letters across the Belleville Mo-Hawk scoresheet from this centre last night were the words: "God Bless Orillia".

It must have summed up all the Mo-Hawks' feelings.

For while they were blowing their chance for OHA Senior "A" points here in a 9-4 loss to the Alcans, the tail-end Orillia Pepsi whipped Oakville Oaks 9-3 in Orillia.

The loss by Oakville means that the worst Belleville can do is wind up in an eighth-place tie with the Oaks.

Oakville completes its schedule at home to Collingwood Sunday and must win that game to gain a tie for the final playoff spot. Should this happen, the two "reluctant contenders" will meet in a sudden-death game to settle the issue.

The Mo-Hawks' loss was their fifth in succession and during that period they hava been outscored 31-16. They have completed their 40-game schedule with 13 wins, two ties and 25 defeats — but still lead the Oaks by two points.

Woodstock broke a 1-1 deadlock at 16.54 of the first period last night and led for the remainder, although the losers did rally once in the second to make it a tight 4-3 affair. A big 4-1 margin, despite being outshot 14-13, wrapped up the decision in the third period.

Alcans outshot the Mo-Hawks 39-34 and each side drew a lone minor penalty.

Right-winger Dino Leggio spearheaded the Woodstock onslaught with a four-goal performance. He netted goals in the first and second heats and two in the third, as well as assisting on another. Linemates Dan Mahony, with a goal and three assists and Gary Sharp with three assists, helped the cause. Wayne Boddy, Dick Smith, Ron Ryan and Dan McGregor also scored.

After Leggio opened game scoring at 8:32, Bob Taylor bagged the equalizer, aided by "Wiener" Brown and "Shaker" Baker, at 14:19. Boddy got the go-ahead goal at 16:54 and goals by Smith and Leggio opened up a 4-1 margin in the second minute of the middle frame.

The Mo-Hawks' final rally produced Ralph Plane's goal, with Baker and Mickey Cherevaty assisting, at 7:32 and Bob McAlpine's powerplay goal for a 4-3 score at 11:12. Plane and George Godson assisted on this one. Mahoney's tally left it 5-3 at period's end while Ryan and Leggio twice upped it to 8-3 mid-way through the third. Belleville's final goal was triggered by Baker, his third point of the night, with Godson assisting.

The end result: Some time next week, the skidding Mo-Hawks will either open a playoff series or tackle Oakville in a sudden-death match — or both.

In other games Friday, Guelph Regals defeated Kingston Aces 6-3 and Toronto Marlboros tied Collingwood 3-3.

The Marlboros hold first place in the league with 53 points, with one game remaining. Galt Hornets are next with 51 points and have two games.

Former National Hockey League player Earl Balfour scored with less than two minutes left in regulation time to earn Toronto its 3-3 tie. There was no scoring in the 10-minute overtime period.

Garl Milroy and Carl Hymers scored the other Toronto goals. Collingwood marksmen were Dave Fitter, Claire Alexander and Don Keith.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander
Staff Sportswriter

The expansion of the National Hockey League has opened the door for a good number of players who would never have made the bigtime without it.

But players are not the only hockey men benefiting from the double-up treatment.

Coaches, managers, trainers, writers and sportscasters ,scouts, referees, linesmen and team executives are among those pulling down the gravey directly from the expansion.

Pelletier was a goalie by trade but despite some fine seasons he made it up top for only nine games, six with Chicago in 1950 and three with New York in 1962. Yet they say of him "he is a big-leaguer in every way." In a Hockey World magazine article, writer Bill Libby says "Marcel dresses like one, eats like one ,spends money like one, talks like one and acts like one. The truth is, he is more like a big-leaguer than ninety per cent of the guys in the big leagues."

Marcel is a major leaguer now — a happy and active hockey businessman for the Philadelphia Flyers, the top team in the new western division of the NHL.

It's a good job for Marcel since he is one of those dedicated people who live and breathe hockey.

He turned pro after a season with the Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen, in 1949, but even before that Marcel was "known" by some of the pros, especially some of the Chicago Black Hawk veterans with which he had been given an earlier tryout.

At the Hawk camp, Marcel asked if he could sit in on the poker game played each morning after practice at the team's hotel. One of the veterans looked up from the table and said "You don't want to get in this game, kid, the actions a little too fast for you." But the French-Canadian youngster shrugged and said, I'm not afraid and I do have money." That was the magic word as far as the others were concerned so they quickly made room for the rookie, writes Libby.

Marcel won $250 that first day but the veterans figured it was just beginner's luck and asked him back the next. He only won $100 that time but came back for another $200 the third day — and suddenly the seasoned players decided the whole matter was something less than funny.

On the fourth day when Marcel arrived the table was full. "Sorry, kid," one of the veterans said, "you're too late, there's no room." It was the same the next day.

Pelletier got the idea — plus one of his own. Early the next day he called a cab company. As practice ended, he dressed quickly, climbed into his waiting taxi and hurried back to the hotel. When the others showed up, Marcel was already seated at the table, all alone and shuffling a deck of cards with the touch of a Les Vegas dealer. He gave out with a big grin, and said, "Marcel, today, he is early" and promptly proceeded to trim the fellows once again.

He had the cab waiting each day and if he lost once in a while, no one remembers. They only recall that while he didn't make the club, he did wind up the richest rookie in camp.

Marcel has retained his nimble wit, sharp tongue and his accent, adding to his color. He buys only the best and plenty of it, as his restaurant and clothes receipts would show.

Marcel, be it eating, drinking, travelling or what-have-you, says "When you go with Marcel, you go first class — and dere ain't many of us left."

Too Big, Too Costly Verdict On Games

GRENOBLE (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Friday the Winter Olympic Games are becoming too big and too costly.

"It is also contrary to the Olympic movement, when we are forced to set up five villages for the athletes, instead of one," he said at a press conference.

"The purpose of the Games is that athletes from all nations should mingle."

The current Games are reported to have cost $224,000,000. Many of the facilities, however, such as roads and buildings are permanent.

"Our desire in the beginning was to hold the Winter Games in 10 days," Brundage said. "In 1960, they went to 11, in 1964 to 12 and now they cover 13 days."

Brundage said he had appointed a special three-man committee to make a survey of the structure of the Winter Games and report to the IOC at Mexico City in October.

"Of the 123 members of the Olympic movement, less than half have any interest in winter sports whatsoever," he said, "and a very, very small proportion of the world's population has a chance to enjoy winter sports at all."

Monti Wins 2nd Gold

ALPE D'HUEZ, France (CP) — World champion Eugenio Monti of Italy won his second gold medal in the Winter Olympic Games, taking the four-man bobsled championship today by a margin of just 9-100th of a second.

Monti, nine-time world champion, capped a 13-year bobsledding career with a magnificent double after winning the two-man bobsled gold medal earlier in the week.

He drove his No. 1 Italian sled down the hard-packed 1,500-metre chute in an excellent one minute, 7.55 seconds to give him a combined time for two heats of 2:17.39.

Kings May Be One Way Players But They're Going Right Way

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles Kings are doing exceptional for a club that features one-way hockey players.

The Kings, who have the second highest goals-against average in the National Hockey League, grabbed a share of second place in the Western Division Friday night by walloping Philadelphia Flyers 7-1.

And Eddie Joyal, the man who couldn't play with Toronto Maple Leafs because he wouldn't check, was the key offensive star with two goals and two assists.

St. Louis Blues defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 3-1 to move into the fourth and last playoff spot in the West in the other scheduled game.

Joyal, a 27-year-old native of Edmonton, was a fast and impressive skater when he went to Toronto from Detroit Red Wings with Marcel Pronovost, Lowell MacDonald, Larry Jeffrey and Aut Erickson in exchange for Andy Bathgate, Billy Harris and Gary Jarrett in 1965.

But after 14 games and two assists later, manager-coach Punch Imlach said the 180-pound centre wasn't playing both ways and demoted him to Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

Joyal went to Tulsa Oilers of the Central Professional Hockey League later the same season and played with Rochester during the 1966-67 campaign.

Los Angeles obtained him in the June's expansion draft. Now he's the Kings' leading scorer. Friday night's performance gave him 16 goals and 25 assists in 55 games this season.

The Kings, who led the Western Division early in the season, are now five points behind the first-place Flyers and tied with Minnesota North Stars with 53 points.

They are idle tonight before meeting Boston Bruins in Los Angeles Sunday.

Tonight's schedule sees Pittsburgh Penguins visit Montreal Canadiens, New York Rangers travel to Toronto, Oakland Seals at home to Boston, Chicago Black Hawks visit Detroit and St. Louis travel to Minneapolis.

MacDonald, Ted Irvine, Bill Flett, Doug Robinson and Real Lemieux were the other Los Angeles marksmen. Pat Hannigan got the lone Philadelphia goal, ruining a shutout attempt by goaltender Wayne Rutledge at 16:17 of the final period.

Bathgate's 47 points leads the Western Division scorers and ties him with John McKenzie of Boston and Phil Goette of New York in 12th place in the overall scoring race.

The Penguins immediately announced that they were recalling Ted Lanyon from Baltimore of the AHL to replace McCallum in the game at Montreal tonight.

Veteran defenceman Tim Horton, sidelined with a leg injury, is not expected to play in tonight's game against the Rangers.

Canada Pins Gold Medal Hopes On Tight Forechecking

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Canada aims to wreak confusion in the enemy camp and steal goals when a chance opens in the Olympic hockey final against Russia this afternoon.

Canada needs to win to take the gold medal. A Russian victory would enable the defending champions to retain the title only if the Swedes beat or tie the Czechs in the other vital game bearing on the final top three placings.

Coach Jackie McLeod is stressing the Canadian team's two-man forechecking system which broke up the pattern-conscious Swedes Thursday night and produced the opportunities for three goals.

For the Russian game, there may be a slight refinement. McLeod may add another element of confusion by alternating one-man-up tactics with two men in the Russian zone trying to break up plays before they form.

Team captain Marsh Johnston points out that "we've picked up three-quarters of our goals from the other team's broken plays."

Johnston, playing defence this year, figures Canada will just have, to accept that the Russians will control the puck most of the game.

"I think what we'll have to do is let them get into the corners, but make sure they don't get an easy chance to pass out. With this big rink, if you miss a bodycheck in the corner, it's hard to get back front to cover up. We'll just have to let them stay in the corners but bother them enough so they can't centre. . . .'

Johnston and Fran Huck are the squad's top two pointsmen, each with eight points in six games. Johnston has two goals and six assists, Huck four goals and four assists.

Russia, Canada and Czechoslovakia go into the final day tied for first place with 10 points each. They have identical 5-1 won-lost records.

Todays schedule, times EST

4:30 a.m.—E. Germany vs. W. Germany

8 a.m.—U.S.A. vs Finland

11:30 a.m.—Sweden vs. Czechoslovakia

3 p.m.—Canada vs. Russia

Defeating the Russians wins the gold for Canada regardless of the result in the earlier Sweden-Czechoslovakia game.

Victories by Czechoslovakia and Russia would give the Czechs the gold, Russia the silver and Canada the bronze.

There are nine possible combinations of results in the two final games.

Four sets of results would produce ties in the final standing that would be broken by awarding medals to the winner of the game between the two tied teams.

Five sets of results would produce ties in the standing that would be broken by determining the highest goal spread. Goal spread is the difference between goals scored and goals allowed.

Russia leads the goal spread with 33. Canada is second-best with 18 and Czechoslovakia third with 16.

The world rivalry between Canada and Russia in hockey dates back to 1954 when Russia successfully challenged Canadian supremacy in the sport with a 7-2 victory over Toronto East York, winning the world championship for the first time.

The Russians went on to win four more world and two Olympic titles. They won seven games against Canadian teams and lost five.

In the 1964 Olympics at Innsbruck, the Nationals lost to Russia 3-2 and in last year's world championships at Vienna bowed to the Soviets 2-1 in a sizzling game.

Scores of cables from back home urged the players to do well against the Russians. The messages came from every region of Canada, even some from the Yukon and mining camps in Labrador.

Said Johnston: "The spiring of the team is fantastic."

Gerry Pinder agreed.

"Maybe it was that loss to Finland that helped. Since then we seemed to come alive."

Russia's "Imlach" Criticized By Reporters

GRENOBLE (CP) — Anatoly Tarasov, bearlike coach of the Russian Olympic hockey team, wants Sweden to beat Czechoslovakia almost as much as he wants Russia to defeat Canada.

The two key games go tonight with all the medals riding on the outcome, a whirlwind finish to the hockey competition at the 10th Winter Olympic Games.

Tarasov looked over the complicated procedure for breaking ties between teams and said through an interpreter:

Nevertheless, Tarasov said it is the Canadian game toward which the Russian team has been pointing throughout the tournament.

Canada and Russia have met 12 times in Olympic and world competition, with the Russians holding the edge, seven wins to five.

Canada's last win against the Russians was in 1961 when Trail Smoke Eaters took the world championship and beat Russia 5-1.

"We have been working up to the Canadian game and we are not changing our tactics; everything has been pointed toward this," Tarasov said.

"The Canadians are getting better every game. . . . This has not been true of the Russian team."

Tarasov was referring to the 5-4 loss his squad took from the Czechs Thursday.

Tarasov is acknowledged to be the Toe Blake or Punch Imlach of Russia and right now, like his North American counterparts, he's in trouble with the press.

A Soviet reporter, who asked his name not be used, said:

"We of the press feel he is a bad man. We do not speak to him if we can avoid it. We get most of our news from his players."

The writer explained that the Russian sports writers generally felt that Tarasov had not brought the best team possible to the Olympics—that at least five players were "third-team."

"We have been critical of the decision and our coach does not like criticism," he said.

The writer declined to name the five players he felt were second-raters.

He did name the three players he feels are the top men on the ice in the tournament—Anatoly Firsov of Russia, Fran Huck of Canada and Josef Golonka, captain of Czechoslovakia.

"Huck's style is our style," he said.

"He is clean, he has good combinations and his team-work is excellent. I saw him in his first world championship in Yugoslavia in 1965 and I voted for him as an all-star then; I shall vote for him again after this tournament."

Crowd Of 12,000 Rejects Low Placing Judges Give Canadian Figure Skater

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Hollywood couldn't have produced a better script.

The 10th Winter Olympic Games has reached its final day—one with 72 hockey players, representing four countries, ready for all-out battle to decide the winners of the three medals in that competition and France's Jean-Claude Killy making his bid to sweep the men's Alpine skiing honors.

The 24-year-old French glamor boy, winner of the downhill and the giant slalom, was the favorite to make these Games a personal gold-medal triumph by winning the slalom.

By doing it, he would write his name in Olympic history alongside Austria's Toni Sailer, who made the sweep in 1956 at Cortina, Italy.

Meanwhile the attention of millions of hockey fans was centred on the Stade de Glace, where Czechoslovakia faced Sweden (11:30 a.m. EST) and Canada went up against defending champion Russia (3 p.m.) in a pair of games on which depend placings one to four in the championship hockey round.

Finland defeated West Germany 6-4 in the lone championship game scheduled Friday. The win was the third in six starts for Finland and the loss the sixth for the West Germans.

The other final events on today's schedule were men's 10,000-metre speed skating, four-man bobsledding—won by Italy's Eugenio Monti—and the men's 50-kilometre cross-country ski race.

Wolfgang Schwarz of Austria won the gold medal in men's figure skating after having played second fiddle to a fellow-countryman, Emmerich Danzer, in every European and world championship since 1966.

Danzer placed first in Friday night's free-style competition but could not make up the marks he lost when jitters turned his compulsory school figures into a disaster earlier in the week.

The silver medal went to Tim Wood of the United States and the bronze to Patrick Pera of France, with Danzer fourth.

Two Americans, Gary Visconti and John Petkevich, were fifth and sixth.

But the man who roused the biggest spectator reaction was Jay Humphry of Toronto, son of a Vancouver policeman and a Burnaby, B.C., nurse. He placed sixth in the free skating and seventh over-all.

The near-capacity crowd in the 12,000-seat ice palace delayed the skating program with a prolonged vocal demonstration after the judges' figures went up showing only a slender reward for the Canadian in the green suit who had thrilled them with a spectacular show.

In the figure skating wrap-up, Humphry gave a dramatic display of fast spins to music by Offenbach and Johann Strauss, and finished his program without visible fault. The crowd, which had applauded in time to the music during the 19-year-old Canadian's rhythmic acrobatics, gave him loud applause.

The applause turned to a deafening howl that held up proceedings for more than two minutes after the judges rated Humphry lower than five other performers.

"It was beautiful to have the crowd behind me," said Jay. "But the marks have been given and that's that.

"It may be that the judges didn't leave enough marks for me. So many skated so well before me that they had given all their high marks away. . . .

"I'll have to talk to the judges and find out what they didn't like about my program.

"One thing, after what happened I'm bound to be recognized the next time I compete. They won't be able to dismiss me."

Jay and a number of other Canadian skaters compete in the world championships at Geneva, Switzerland, later this month.

Bobby Hull's World Of Hockey

By BOBBY HULL

We play hockey for money at the professional level, and even at the amateur level, if we overlook the under-the-table hypocrisy of the so-called simon pures.

But it isn't all work and sweat. Some fun goes with it.

I like to tell about Eddie Shack, who just happens to be on a collision course with me whenever we play him. That was especially so when he played for Toronto and we rolled in from Chicago for a game with the Maple Leafs. Now he is with Boston, and playing regularly, has become a strong factor in the resurgence of the Bruins.

One night, in the first period. Shack knocked me down in his rambunctious robust fashion.

"Geez, Eddie," I protested, "lay off that lousy rough-house stuff!"

It didn't happen again, until the second period. Then he nailed me again, a check that really rattled what I've got left of my own teeth. We crashed to the ice together.

I was peeved. "C'mon, Eddie! You said you wouldn't foul me again!"

Shack got up apologizing all over Maple Leaf Gardens. "Gee, Bob, that was a mistake. I promise it won't happen again."

Well, it didn't happen again until halfway through the third period. Then, a vigorous Hereford bull on the rampage, Shack barged into me again. We went sprawling into a corner and I'm hot.

"My gosh, Eddie, you said you'd lay off belting me tonight! Twice you promised to knock off the fouls!"

That incident, a little hilarious as I look back, illustrates the gamemanship which goes on. There isn't much fun in getting wracked up, but if you can do the wracking there is a good chance you'll needle and knock your opponents off their game.

Knudson Iron-Nerved On Greens

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — George Knudson, second round leader in the $100,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament, recalls that during his early golfing days he would cut cards for $100 a throw, to build up endurance under pressure.

"It was just one of those stupid things all of us do at times," said Knudson, who carried an 11 under par 67-64—131 and a two stroke lead into today's third round.

"I figured it would help me control putting shakes," said the 30-year-old Winnipeg native now playing out of Toronto. "When you have only $300 in your pocket, cutting cards for $100 is pressure."

He might think the card idea stupid now, but Knudson's putting during Friday's second round was nearly flawless as he one-putted nine holes and needed only 27 putts for 18 holes.

Knudson, rolled in seven birdie putts over the 6,765-yard, par-71, Phoenix Country Club course Friday, including a 45-footer.

His total of 131 was the best for 36 holes so far during the winter tour, and his round of 64 equalled the low for 18 holes.

"I've made an adjustment but I don't know what it is" said Knudson, a 155-pound tour regular.

Tommy Shaw, club pro from Golf, Ill., fired a 66 Friday and with an opening round of 67 was only two strokes behind Knudson going into today's play.

Jack Nicklaus, who will rest for almost three weeks before resuming action in the Doral Open in Florida, failed to make the 36-hole cutoff of 143 by three strokes.

"I just wasn't playing well," said Nicklaus. "My timing was off and my putting was bad."

Several players had a shot at the leader and $20,000 first prize money as play started today

Dan Sikes was three strokes back at 134, while Tommy Aaron and Jack Montgomery both stood at 135 and Sam Carmichael had 136.

Frankford Midgets Beat Tweed

TWEED — In an OMHA Midget "D" playoff game played here on Thursday, Frankford edged Tweed 5-3. The best-of-five series now stands at two games to one in Tweed's favor.

Good clutch goaltending helped give Frankford the win. With the score 4-3, Tweed pulled its goaltender for an extra attacker in the last minute of play but the strategy backfired, as Frankford scored in the open net.

The next game in this series is slated for Stirling some time next week. Scoring for Tweed were McCormick, McPherson and Genereaux.

Rangers Defeat Aces by 5-0

Rangers defeated Aces 5-0, while Bruins and Dukes battled to a 1-1 tie, in games played Friday in the novice division of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

DRUNKEN WOLVES

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Three wolves drank the jar of homemade plum brandy a moonshiner had hidden in a field near Michalovce, a town near the Soviet border. Finding the wolves a bit wobbly, the moonshiner loaded them on a cart and hurried off to collect a $165 bounty on the live animals. He got the reward but had to pay back $22.50 as a fine for his illegal distillery.

Oshawa Beats Bs In Chippy Contest

Behind only 2-1 at the end of the first period, Belleville lost its chance in the second when Oshawa snipers fired three unanswered goals behind Gig Hunt.

Only power-play goal of the game was Oshawa's final tally when Terry O'Reilly — who had opened the scoring midway through the first period — beat Hunt while Steve White was in the penalty box for slashing.

O'Reilly and Jerry Welsh were two-goal scorers for the winners. Dennis Ashton, Daryl Hudgin and Mike Keenan scored the others. Ted Schwager and Mike Healey scored the Belleville goals. Healey also drew an assist on Schwager's goal.

Orr May Be Out Longer Than Month

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, the Boston Bruins' spectacular young defenceman, may be sidelined longer than expected because of knee surgery, a surgeon reported Friday.

Orr underwent surgery for removal of the medial cartilage in his left knee Monday, and a spokesman said he probably would be lost "four or five weeks."

"I'm not that optimistic," said Dr. Robert George, chief surgical resident at nearby Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Orr, 19, was voted the National Hockey League's outstanding defenceman for the first half of the 1967-68 season after earning Rookie-of-the-Year honors last spring. He said he twisted his knee in a game at Montreal last month.

Four Countries Quit Over Olympic Ruling

GRENOBLE (AP) — South Africa is back in the Olympic movement, at least four other African states are out and the storm of criticism over the International Olympic Committee's action is growing, with Russia's powerful voice in the vanguard.

The Algerian, Uganda and Tanzania sports councils said today that Algeria and Uganda would boycott the Summer Olympics in Mexico because of the re-admission of South Africa, which had been ousted in 1963 because of its segregationist policy of apartheid.

In their actions, Algeria and Uganda joined Ethiopia, which withdrew Friday, the same day IOC President Avery Brundage announced that IOC members had voted by mail to reinstate South Africa for the Mexico Games.

Another African nation—Zambia—announced it is studying the IOC's decision before deciding on a course of action.

Other African and Asian countries possibly could be awaiting to see how the Soviet Union, an Olympic giant, will react.

So far, Russian reaction has been in the form of vehement disapproval of the IOC's action. And, a Soviet official has indicated action might be delayed until after the South African team is picked.

South Africa has given assurances, the IOC said, that it would have an integrated team.

With The Trotters

TORONTO (CP) — Two young drivers combined to set up a $25.40 daily double Friday night at Greenwood Raceway.

Bruce Shea, 18, of Bethany, Ont., scored with Fleetwood Dusty in the first race and 20-year-old Larry Walker from Owen Sound counted behind Jolly Hill in the second.

To Your Good Health

High Temperatures and Vaccination

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for a child to keep a temperature of 100 degrees and be normal? I have been trying for a year to have my daughter vaccinated against measles, but it is supposedly dangerous to take a shot if fever is present.

The pediatrician didn't find anything wrong with her, and she eats and sleeps well and has plenty of energy. — Mrs. J.

I'd like to know more about this case before offering too glib a reply. As your letter puts it, the youngster runs a continuous temperature of 100. This I am inclined to doubt, in view of evidence that she is in good health.

I assume that you are talking about temperature taken by mouth. (Rectal temperature is normally about one degree higher.)

Some modest variation is quite normal in children. It is also quite possible for excitement to raise temperature in a child. Thus if she is upset about seeing the doctor or getting a shot, this elevated temperature could be temporary.

What you should do is to take readings at different times of the day — say 10 a.m. 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.—and keep a record.

It is not at all unusual to see a gradual rise of one degree or more from morning to afternoon or evening. I would then show the record to the pediatrician. Since he has not been able to find anything wrong with the youngster's health, it may be a normal variant for her to have a temperature a bit above average. People do vary in this respect.

It is more important to have the measles vaccination — assuming her to be healthy — than to be dissuaded because of a transient variation in temperature, or a normal variant.

Dear Dr. Molner: After a physical checkup the doctor put me in the hospital for five days because I was so anemic, and I had three blood transfusions.

I have been put on a high-protein, high-calorie diet now. I am 49 and have always been underweight because of poor eating habits. How can I eat large quantities of meat and the other things I am supposed to have, after being such a picky eater for 30 years?

I panic at every meal and am filled up before I am half-finished. How can I stretch my stomach? I can't make my doctor realize how difficult it is for me. — G. H. M.

I don't know how you are going to break a bad habit of 30 years all at once, but you can do it gradually — if you try. It's your problem, not your doctor's.

You can eat between meals. You probably will have more success if you deliberately eat a little faster — get more food into you while your appetite is keen.

Choose higher calorie foods. Whatever exercise and fresh air you can manage will help perk up your appetite.

Don't expect your stomach to adjust instantly to heavier feedings. Accept the fact that it will be gradual, but that if you keep at it, you will adjust.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about the possibility of contracting disease from handling packaged goods bought in retail stores where the clerks also handle money. — Mrs. K. G. B.

No thanks — because I don't see any particular peril in that. It's an old fiction that money carries germs. This is rarely so.

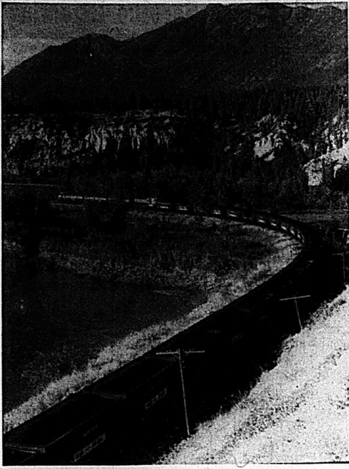
Note to Mrs. W.R.: A fall, or sometimes childbirth, can cause soreness, of the coccyx, or tailbone, but menopause doesn't.



Coal Bound for Japan

CPR freight hauls 2,200 tons of coal from Coleman Collieries Ltd., at Coleman, Alta., to the West Coast. The firm has a $160,000,000 contract to supply coal to Japan and has been shipping since August, 1967. (CP Photo)

Violence Feared in Uranium Staking

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Ambrose is a one-eyed Indian who has spent all of his 30 years in the Northern Ontario bush.

Allen is his cursing, swearing, don't give a damn boss, a youthful staking contractor who lives by h's wits.

Charlie is a middle-eged professional prospector, selling his ability and knowledge of rock formations to a major mining company because experience has taught him that it is better to join those you cannot beat.

None of them will permit use of his full name, but all share a common fear: that circumstances surrounding Monday's opening to staking of 100,000 acres of land potentially rich in uranium may lead to violence.

Exactly at noon, they will drive the northeast stake on each of the claims selected by their employers, then move south, west and north to clear a discernible path around a square that has a one-mile perimeter.

The man whose name is written on the corner stakes will then be rushed by plane, helicopter or car to either Sault Ste. Marie or Sudbury to record the claim. It is 120 miles to the Sault, about 85 to Sudbury.

"There are too many crews in there who don't know the ways of the bush," says Allen. "I have 10 of the best men available and they will respect the prospectors' code of ethics, but let one slob cross one of our staking lines and my boys won't wait for the lawyers to argue it out—and God bless them, neither will I."

"Every experienced bushworker respects the rights of others," said Charlie. "But I'm afraid that some of the city-bred crews that do the rough work around claims may follow orders and ignore the rights of other prospectors. If they do, someone is going to get hurt."

"When Ambrose draw a line, she's true," said Ambros "Some guy cut my line, I t him, 'You wrong old man, you go that way, I go this way,' and he better go."

"These boys are worried about interference with the legitimate lines that mark their claims," said Charlie. "But what happens when city-bred crews are ordered to clear a certain path and do it on the basis of to hell with everyone else."

A spokesman for a major mining company said they are just as unhappy with Ontario's first pre-arranged staking rush as are the independent prospectors.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY,

Manpower Counsellor

The employment opportunities available at the Canada Manpower Centre showed a good labor demand for qualified administrative, professional and technically trained persons, with a continuing demand for skilled tradesman and for experienced workers in the expanding services fields.

Conversely there is locally a decreased labor demand for the unskilled and semi-skilled worker.

During the past month there has been increased activity in the community's rural areas. The logging crews have been busy cutting as much timber as possible in an endeavor to make up for the time lost last autumn due to the bad weather. A number of local farmers who possess mature woodlots are finding a ready market for their cut logs, either at the local sawmills or for veneer production. In the southern portion of the community the apple orchard operators have been pruning orchards in preparation for this year's crop. Excellent soil moisture conditions are reported throughout the farming area, which augers well for the coming planting and growing season.

With spring plans now being made by many community residents, the Belleville and Dis-Campagin Committee urges that all support and participate in its program.

In the female division locally there is an opening for clerk-typists having at least two years' experience in typing and in dictaphone, adding machine and related business office equipment. An opening exists for a qualified secretary who will also be a receptionist and is capable of assuming responsibility. An industrial plant has a career opening for a university graduate who has taken courses in sociology, with preferrably some personnel experience, either in industry or in other work areas. An experienced waitress is required by a motel to work three evenings each week in its modern dining room. Other positions yet unfilled call for key punch operators, an experienced sales clerk and a stenographer who is bilingual for French and English translation.

In the male division locally, a professional engineer with a mechanical background is needed for plant maintenance responsibility. A production superintendent with a chemical background is sought, managerial staff positions are open calling for experience in the field of finance. An electrical engineer and commission salesmen is sought. Other job openings are for a products manager for a plywood processing plant and at the same plant, a working foreman for plywood lay-out. Still in demand is a machine maintenance mechanic who possesses machine shop and welding experience, and licensed automobile repair mechanics for truck repairs.

If interested in any of these positions, seeking other employment, or thinking of re-entering the labor market, contact the Canada Manpower Centre.

Markets Score Moderate Gains As Oils, Uraniums Come Back

By FRITS ROOS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's major stock markets scored moderate gains this week, interrupting a three-week-long slump in extremely light activity.

Oils and uraniums, hardest hit in the slide, paced the advance. Industrials edged up and golds slipped.

Analysts said the market could turn either way now.

They felt mixed business prospects already have been discounted and that presently the most important factor influencing the direction of the market is the international political situation, especially in Vietnam and Korea.

"The market could resume its slide quickly but if peace prospects improve we may be in for a major rally," one said.

Another researcher said oils could soon recover their steep losses—an average of 20 per cent since they hit record levels last month.

The booming enthusiasm at the start of the current winter drilling season had tapered off because of disappointing initial results and fears that U.S dollars may be withdrawn from exploration in Canada following Washington's new restrictions on direct foreign investment.

However, pressured by U.S oil companies with Canadian subsidiaries, it appears possible Washington may relax its restrictions for the oil industry, the analyst said.

Several complained that Ottawa's tabling this week of an economists' study on foreign investment, came at a "most inopportune moment."

The report's immediate effects could not be estimated, but as far as the industry itself was concerned, its future was excellent.

This winter's first encouraging results have begun to arrive and the season is only half gone, he said.

Hudson's Bay Oil headed the rise in Toronto's western oils section, jumping 3 to 37.

Consolidated West Petroleum, one of the week's most active oils, advanced 28 cents to 2.38 at the announcement that Western Decalta plans to buy 40 per cent of its shares at $2.43½. Decalta rose 36 cents to 3.15.

Another glamour group, uranium, also began to recover part of its recent losses.

Britons Put Up with Anything In Food, Even During Holidays

LONDON (CP) — The English are said to take their pleasures sadly—and that goes for holidays too.

A British food firm has just published a report on holiday eating habits in this island and what it all adds up to is that Britons will put up with almost anything.

This, often attributed to wartime and post-war conditioning, naturally makes them immensely popular with hotel-keepers from Biarritz to Bournemouth, but at home it also has the depressing effect of keeping standards low and the worldwide reputation of British cooking only too well-founded.

The investigators found the typical British holiday—last year only one in six Britons went abroad—is 10 days in a West Country boarding house, with regimented mealtimes and restricted menus. No choice of tea or coffee and only one egg for breakfast often is the rule—yet the majority of the customers meekly professed themselves "quite satisfied" and found the sparse food "more than sufficient."

Food, in fact, comes low on the Briton's list of holiday priorities. As long as the sun is shining he doesn't much mind what he eats, and is prepared to fall in with rigid meal schedules and even to describe 8 a.m. breakfast every day as "very convenient."

Of 1,000 persons questioned in the survey, only eight per cent placed any real importance on food in their vacation.

The Evening Standard, commenting editorially on the "grisly conditions" of much British tourism, says it is no accident that the French enjoy such universally superb cooking—they demand it and are prepared to spend up to a third of their income on food.

Britons, on the other hand, are reluctant to spend more than a few shillings on a meal and raise no objection when resorts close at 9 p.m., the hour most Continental spots are livening up. Thus they hand the hotelier that dreaded and familiar punch-line encountered everywhere in British life—"there's no demand for it."

Demand and supply, says The Standard tartly, are a closed circle: One stimulates the other.

Derek Cooper, author of a slashing attack on British catering called The Bad Food Guide—he had to give false names to the hotels to avoid a bundle of libel suits—writes in The Guardian that the "masochistic" way Britons accept anything thrust upon them proves "apathy is the new national virtue."

"One wonders how high the discomfort threshold is among British holidaymakers, how much they can take and still come up smiling year after year."

Had a section of the holidaymakers interviewed in the report been asked to sleep standing up in a broom cupboard, at least 20 per cent would have described that as "very convenient," snorts Cooper.

The report, he says, indicates the average Briton on vacation will "bend over backwards to avoid demanding anything that might cause trouble."

But he concedes there is a certain realism about Britons' attitude: They are getting what they pay for, and boardinghouse owners can't and won't provide three-star hotel amenities for rock-bottom prices.

Many owners of small hotels run the place virtually single-handed or with their wives, playing an exhausting multitude of roles from potato peeler to waiter, errand boy to reception clerk.

They are not going to bother about niceties like a choice of tea or coffee—"I serve coffee and that's it," said one.

"Tea, indeed, they'll be wanting the spoon unchained next!"

Twins Boost Population

When Mr. and Mrs. Burton Boyd brought their newborn identical twins home to Coniston, Ont., from Sudbury General Hospital they were greeted by a slightly altered sign announcing the village's population. The sign, shown in a photograph being held by the twins, had a tag attached so that it read: "Coniston, population 2,600, plus 2 Boyds." A co-worker of Mr. Boyd is believed responsible for the alteration. (CP Photo)

Hal Banks Asks Rusk To Block Extradition

Banks, 59-year-old former head of the Canadian Seafarers' International Union, was ordered deported in hearings in New York last October before U.S. Commissioner S. T. Abruzzo. The extradition proceedings were launched by the Province of Ontario because Banks faces a perjury charge in Ottawa.

Appealing in Bank's behalf Friday was Abram Chayes, once a state department legal adviser under Rusk. Chayes now is a professor at Harvard law school.

Dentist Fees Listed

Belleville area dentists have received a new fee schedule which rates each of their procedures on the basis of how much knowledge, judgment, skill and time are involved.

The schedule is for dentists in general practice throughout the province.

An extraction of a single tooth will cost $8. as compared with $7. before. An office hours emergency will cost $8. rather than the previous $5. fee.

The fee for upper and lower dentures has changed to $185. plus laboratory costs as opposed to the old cost of $200. including laboratory costs.

A periodic check-up with scaling and polishing of teeth will now be $7. where it was previously $6.

A partial crown which previously cost $50. to $60. will now cost $78. plus laboratory costs.

Quick Action By Firemen Saves Store

PICTON — Picton firemen this morning prevented what could have been a nasty fire.

At 10:15 a.m. an alarm sent firefighters to a one-storey frame structure housing an automatic car wash and a used furniture store.

Located on Lake St. near the CNR tracks the building is owned by the Fennell brothers of Picton and the furniture business was operated by Keith McKee.

When fire-fighters arrived the fire had a good start but fast action soon saw the blaze under control. Much, if not all, of the used furniture was saved and carried outside by helpful citizens and firemen.

Most of the structure has been saved as well. Firemen were still at the scene at 11:30 this morning and it is not known whether the contents were insured. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

Many Scouting Groups Sponsored by Churches

By Rev. C. H. Savage
Chaplin, Belleville District
Boy Scouts

Scouting has found its way into many of our churches. In fact out of 4,477 Groups in Canada, 3,500 are sponsored by churches. We may ask why? How does it fit into the long range spiritual purpose of God's Church?

Churches have found that the Boy Scouts of Canada supplies a well rounded program suitable for the boys of today. Not only does Scouting provide the church with a program, leadership, training, materials and organization, but also may help to deeply impress the Great Teachings of the church through thought, word and deed. It provides a place and interest for boys from eight years to their twenties. Scouting may be moulded to fit the desires and the aims of a particular church. Men and women of the church are in command. They may select their own leaders and choose their own policy and emphasis. Surely with such latitude and appeal, one can understand why the church has welcomed the Boy Scout movement into its activities.

Perhaps more important is the fact that the Boy Scout program under good and dedicated leadership, does fit into the long range spiritual purpose of his church. With its emphasis on Duty to God; Duty to Others; and Duty to Self, it helps boys to become "Doers of the Word and not "Hearers" only". Its promise and laws are a part of the Christian way of life. Many who have worked with the movement continuously have had satisfying results. The results have convinced them that God has blessed the program and that faith has been strengthened because of the partnership of Scouting and the church.

May those in command continue to see the need and importance of the church in its organization; and may the church give due recognition and respect so that the boyhood of Canada may be better 'prepared' to face "The strange road before you, E'er your Journey's end."

Garrison Wants CIA Testimony

Garrison's office accompanied the subpoena with a statement that "elements of the CIA" participated in the slaying of president Kennedy at Dallas, Tex., in 1963.

Further, Garrison said he needs Dulles, who was a member of the Warren commission, and a long-time fugitive witness named Gordon Novel to testify about CIA activities in the New Orleans area.

In Washington, Dulles said: "I have not been served with a subpoena." I have not seen the statement."

A simultaneous subpoena was issued for Novel, a 29-year-old former New Orleans tavern owner who took refuge in Columbus, Ohio, last year when Garrison first sought his testimony.

Garrison said Novel admitted working with the late David W. Ferrie as a CIA operative.

Ferrie, a one-time airline pilot who died last February, participated in operations during the CIA-backed Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in 1961.

WE'VE BEEN ASKED TO EXPLAIN!

WE'VE BEEN ASKED TO EXPLAIN JUST EXACTLY WHAT WE MEAN BY A CUSTOM BUILT HOME THAT DOESN'T COST ANY MORE THAN A READY-BUILT HOME. WELL, LET'S TAKE THE HOME ILLUSTRATED AT THE LEFT, THE "FOREST PLACE". NOW POSSIBLY YOU MAY PREFER THE EXTERIOR CHANGED AS FOLLOWS: INSTEAD OF THE FOUR PILLARS AND BALCONY, SAY, A HANDSOMELY SHINGLED MANSARD ROOF THAT CONTINUES DOWN TO THE FIRST FLOOR CEILING. THE UPSTAIRS WINDOWS WOULD THEN JUT OUT FROM THE ROOF IN THEIR FRAME SHELLS GIVING THE HOME THE CHARACTER OF AN ENGLISH COTTAGE. OR, PERHAPS THE SAME ROOF WITHOUT THE BALCONY AND FOUR ATTRACTIVE GRECIAN PILLARS CREATING A FORMAL AND STATELY EFFECT. INSTEAD OF A SINGLE FRONT DOOR YOU COULD HAVE DOUBLE DOORS ADDING TO THE HOME'S REGAL THEME.

THE "FOREST PLACE" PICTURED HERE HAS FOUR BEDROOMS UPSTAIRS. WELL, MAYBE YOU'D LIKE ONE VERY LARGE BEDROOM AND TWO SMALLER ONES, THIS IS FINE. THE HOME HAS ONE COMPLETE BATHROOM AND TWO HALF BATHROOMS — WE'LL PUT THEM ANYWHERE YOU CHOOSE.

WE COULD GO ON ALMOST INDEFINITELY, THE POSSIBILITIES ARE MANY INDEED. HOWEVER, WE HOPE THIS WILL GIVE YOU SOME IDEA OF WHAT WE MEAN BY A CUSTOM BUILT HOME. IF YOU WERE TO LEAF THROUGH OUR CATALOGUE OF HOMES YOU WOULD PROBABLY FIND PRETTY MUCH WHAT YOU'RE LOOKING FOR. BUT, IF YOU DIDN'T, THEN TELL US WHAT YOU WOULD LIKE, OR DRAW A PICTURE. YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE AN ARTIST OR AN ARCHITECT. WE HAVE ARTISTS AND ARCHITECTS AT YOUR DISPOSAL, AND, AT NO COST TO YOU WHATEVER! AS WE SAID BEFORE, A CUSTOM BUILT HOME WILL COST YOU NO MORE THAN ANY ROLLINS HOME THAT IS STANDING RIGHT NOW. AND, AS WE HOPE YOU KNOW, ROLLINS HOMES COST LESS THAN OTHER HOMES!

WHEN YOU COME IN, ASK FOR MR. JAMES CATHCART, HE'LL BE HAPPY TO SEE YOU!

U.S. Will Shell Reds in Cities

HUE (AP) — The U.S. command has decided to use all the firepower needed to root Communist forces from South Vietnam's cities and accept the bad publicity for property destruction as an unavoidable by-product.

The pounding now being given to Communist-occupied parts of Hue is evidence of that policy.

"We could not permit them to believe that they could seize populated areas and escape our firepower," one American official said.

This firepower has included heavy bombs, aircraft rockets, naval gunfire, napalm, tear gas, and all the usual ground weapons from eight-inch howitzers to tank guns.

The U.S. decision has been approved by President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

U. S. Planes Stray

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The United States admitted today that two U.S planes strayed over North Korea briefly Sunday and expressed regret, with assurance that efforts would be made to prevent any more such incidents.

It was one of the few times in recent years that the United States has admitted a North Korean charge that it had violated the Korean armistice.

Rear-Admiral John V. Smith, the United Nations command's senior delegate to the armistice commission, said the planes were on a navigational flight originating outside Korea Sunday afternoon. He said they violated North Korean air space because of bad weather, the pilots' unfamiliarity with the terrain and a failure of navigational equipment.

There was no indication that the North Koreans fired on the planes.

North Korea called the commission meeting. The senior North Korean delegate, Maj.-Gen. Pak Chung Kook, charged that "a formation of American military airplanes" intruded into North Korean air space north of Panmunjom for four minutes and engaged in "hostile acts and reconnaissance."

Pak said that UN forces had committed 36 other armistice violations between Feb. 13 and Feb. 18, but Smith denied all these.

U. S. Says Apology Faked

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The U.S. Sunday accused North Korea of making up a letter of apology by the 82 surviving crew members of the captured U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo.

The state department also repeated that it would regard any attempt by North Korea to punish the crew as a "deliberate aggravation of an already serious situation."

North Korea two days ago broadcast that the crew of the Pueblo—seized Jan. 23—apologized for violating its territorial waters and asked for leniency.

The official North Korean news agency said the admission of guilt and plea for mercy were made in a joint letter to authorities.

A state department spokesman said: "From both the substance and language of the statement, it is clear that these are the words of the North Korean authorities, not of the crew of the Pueblo."

Secretary Says JFK Intended To Drop Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The personal secretary to President John F. Kennedy writes that he told her, just before his assassination, that he planned to drop Lyndon B. Johnson as his vice-presidential partner in the 1964 election. Senator Robert F. Kennedy denies the report.

Evelyn Lincoln, in a book titled Kennedy and Johnson, writes that on Nov. 19, 1963—three days before his death—she asked him: "Who is your choice as a running mate?"

Mrs. Lincoln continues:

"He looked straight ahead, and without hesitating he replied: 'At this time I am thinking about Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina. But it will not be Lyndon.' "

Planes Are Forced Down In Elliot Lake Rush

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Three planes made forced landings and another, reported missing earlier today, arrived safely hours before the search for wealth in the giant claims rush started today.

The Canadian Forces Base Trenton called off a search for a Piper Super-Cub piloted by Norman Grenon of La Sarre, Que., when he flew into Elliot Lake at 10:45 a.m. today, 18 hours late on a flight from Chapleau, Ont.

Provincial police at Sault Ste. Marie said Mr. Grenon experienced mechanical difficulty during his pre-rush flight and made a forced landing on a frozen lake 40 miles north of here to make repairs.

Another Piper Super-Cub at first believed to be Grenon's was down on Rosemary Lake, 25 miles northeast of Elliot Lake, after making an emergency landing believed to have been forced by engine trouble.

Other planes reported to have made emergency landings were a Cessna 180 which came down at Alona Bay, on the shore of Lake Superior 65 miles northwest of Sault Ste. Marie, and a Beaver which landed near the provincial police office at Sault Ste. Marie Pilot of the Beaver Walter Zuschke of Moosonee, and a passenger, John Evelegh of Timmins, were unhurt as the plane was brought down without difficulty in a 10 acre field.

A Beaver aircraft was reported held up at Parry Sound, on the eastern shore of Georgian Bay, by icy runways.

Mines department inspectors and police patrolled the staking areas Sunday.

Mines department inspectors and police patrolled the staking areas Sunday.

Complaints of violations of rules set down by the department increased in the 24 hours before the opening. All were checked by the half-dozen inspectors policing the rush. Most proved to be misunderstandings and were easily resolved.

Elliot Lake's two hotels, so crowded throughout the week that beds were provided in the town's museum and in the school for continuing education, began emptying Sunday night.

Ontario's new mines minister, A. F Lawrence, was to arrive at 1 p.m. for a two-hour visit to the area where prospectors will claim land that may contain deposits of uranium, copper and thorium ores.

Rann of Kutch Dispute Settled

GENEVA (AP) — An international tribunal announced today a compromise solution to the India-Pakistan dispute over the Rann of Kutch. It awarded approximately 90 per cent of the territory to India and 10 per cent to Pakistan.

The decision was announced after two years of negotiations involving more than 10,000 pages of evidence and the study of 350 maps. But India's representative on the tribunal, Judge Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia, announced his dissent at its findings and backed India's claim to the entire territory.

The Rann of Kutch, 8,400 square miles of earthquake-prone mud and salt marshes, is sandwiched between West Pakistan and the district of Kutch, in Gujerat State, India.

India said it owns all the land, while Pakistan claimed 3,500 square miles of it.

The two countries fought over the area three years ago. A ceasefire was signed in June, 1965, and the two nations agreed to submit the dispute to arbitration by an international tribunal.

THE TEMPERATURES

Marines Advancing Behind Hue Barrage

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. marines, moving behind a protective umbrella of artillery, pushed 400 yards through the rubbled ruins of Hue's citadel today to the brink of one of the last insurgent strongholds in Vietnam's old capital.

Elsewhere, the Viet Cong slammed more rockets and mortars into Saigon and a few other cities today, but the Viet Cong's "second-wave" offensive appeared to be easing off considerably in its second day. One rocket hit a passenger terminal at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport, killing one U.S. serviceman and wounding 21 as they waited for planes home after a year in Vietnam.

The battle for Hue is the only fighting still persisting from the Viet Cong's lunar new year offensive. But in the "second wave," the Viet Cong shelled 47 cities, towns and military installations Sunday and made grounds attacks on several.

The biggest ground attack in Sunday's renewed fighting came at Phan Thiet, a provincial capital 90 miles east of Saigon. About 500 guerrillas seized one-fifth of the town, including the provincial hospital, and freed 500 prisoners from the jail.

The air force said U.S. casualties at Tanh Son Nhut Airport since the shelling began at 1 a.m. Sunday were six killed and 131 wounded, of whom 67 were in hospital. The base includes the headquarters of Gen. William C. Westmoreland. He was at the U.S. command nerve centre, which was not hit.

Viet Cong gunners also fired 15 mortar rounds on Saigon's municipal police headquarters Sunday. Seven policemen were killed and 34 injured, a spokesman said.

Deaths Blamed On Storm

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winds of up to 50 miles an hour, snow storms and cold weather swept across Ontario during the weekend, causing two deaths, snarling traffic and stopping mail delivery in Sault Ste. Marie.

A man was killed Saturday when struck by a car while walking in a blinding snowstorm at Penetanguishene. In Toronto, police said a woman found dead outdoors Saturday died of exposure.

Visibility was reduced to zero by winds ranging from 20 to 50 miles an hour in various parts of the province.

The department of highways ordered snow plows off the road in the Sault Ste. Marie area because the operators could not see. More than 69 accidents in 36 hours were reported in the region.

Provincial police cars in the area were ordered off the roads Saturday afternoon.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — North Vietnam has told Secretary-General U Thant it is willing to make military de-escalation an item on the agenda of any opening peace talks with the United States, diplomatic sources here say.

North Vietnamese representatives informed Thant of that position - his recent trip abroad, the informants said Saturday. Presumably Thant will discuss it with President Johnson when he sees him in Washington Wednesday.

Russians Urge U. S. To Talk

MOSCOW (Reuters) — In new speeches reported here, the two top Russian leaders have urged the United States to agree to an offer of talks by Hanoi to end the Vietnamese war.

Both Leonid Brezhnev, Communist party chief, speaking in Leningrad, and Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin, addressing a meeting in Minsk, laid stress on talks as a way out of the present impasse. The speeches were last week.

At a Leningrad party conference, Brezhnev called on the U.S. to end its bombing of North Vietnam "and realistically consider Hanoi's proposals for talks."

Kosygin told Minsk party members it is "untrue" North Vietnam is not ready for talks and added that it is not clear if the U.S. is ready for a political solution.

He said North Vietnam declared its readiness for talks after a halt in U.S. bombing and other acts of war against its territory.

North Vietnam was ready to talk "on questions connected with a regulation in Vietnam on the basis of the 1954 Geneva agreements and also on other questions which might be raised

Air Canada Orders Giant Jets

The main cabin area in the new jetliners will extend right to the nose of the plane and at 20 feet in width will be seven feet wider than in present jets. It will be divided into five separate sections by galley and washroom facilities.

Viet Cong Flags Wave in West Berlin

WEST BERLIN (CP) — Viet Cong flags and red banners flapped in the breeze here Sunday as thousands of youths marched in a leftist-inspired protest of U.S. military engagement in Vietnam. Pro-U.S. youths staged a counter demonstration.

Police estimated that up to 10,000 persons took part but there seemed to be no outpouring of sympathy for the marchers from other West Berliners.

There were smaller demonstrations in Rome and London.

In Rome hundreds of police fought off demonstrators, whose number was estimated as high as 3,000, who tried to march on the U.S. embassy shouting anti-American and pro-Viet Cong slogans.

In London more than 400 women demonstrated silently for peace.

In West Berlin at one point, bypassers seized Viet Cong flags and banners and burned them. On two occasions motorists sped their cars toward assembling groups of demonstrators and a truck roared past bearing a sign saying: Berlin Supports the Americans.

Father-Daughter Dinner Sponsored by Knights

The Knights of Columbus Council 1008 sponsored a Father-Drughter breakfast in their hall on Sunday following the ten o'clock Mass. Edward Buckley chaired the gathering. Following the blessing and the toast to the Queen by Rev. D. Cummings, Algert Kroetch, convener, introduced the guest speaker, Sister Mary Alda, Superior of St. Peter's Convent, Trenton.

In her address, Sister stressed the values of home joys and the reasons why happiness results when freedom, security and love have their rightful places. The speaker expanded on the happiness and peace which pervades the home when there is fostered a mutual love and respect for each other, when there is established a sense of law and order and when there is inculated a sense of each one's duty in maintaining peace and harmony.

Sister stressed the spiritual values which are necessary for true happiness in the home and elaborated on ways and means to inculcate same in daily family living. "A virtuous family is a happy family despite life's problems," the speaker stated.

John Farrell expressed the gratitude of the 150 guests who responded with a standing ovation for Sister's masterful exposition on the key to a happy, holy and peaceful home life.

A suitable closing to this event was a vocal solo by Michael Reed, entitled "Daddy's Little Girl." Sister Mary Bibiana recited the Thanksgiving prayer.

Students Hear Columnist

"A man who dies at about age 25 and is buried at about age 65," was the description Richard Needham, columnist for the Globe and Mail, gave of a Canadian while speaking to students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

Addressing two assemblies at the school Mr. Needham's controversial comments brought "ridiculous" as well as "he's an anarchist" and "he's a genius" from the students.

Complaining that Canadians are too meek to protest he stressed the need for experimentation and the making of mistakes. To spur nationalism and the development of Canada he called for an increase in immigration to 1,000,000 people a year, the exchange of students from province to province for one year's study and $10 railway passes for students, good for one year.

He recommended the lowering of the legal age for school leaving to 14 years "to help rid the school system of unwilling students" and he advocated that all students leave school for one year and get a "real education."

Community Pasture Suggested

PICTON (Staff). — Prince Edward county council's agricultural committee will investigate the suggestion of a community pasture as an ARDA (Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act) project.

The suggestion came from Warden Gordon Demore, Reeve of Athol Township, who thought a suitable area might be carved out of the vast stretch of land along the south shore of Prince Edward County now owned by the department of national defence.

He doesn't think the department requires quite so much now for military purposes. Size of the area is estimated to be up to 1,800 acres or even more lying partly in South Marysburgh and partly in Athol Townships. The warden originally made the suggestion at the annual chamber of commerce banquet and brought it up again last week. "The land isn't much use for farming, he said, but it would provide good pasture for cattle."

Welfare Role Climbs in PE

PICTON (Staff) — The total number of people on welfare in Prince Edward County has risen by 31 per cent it was announced last week. County home and welfare chairman Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg estimated his committee would be over its budget by $4,000 to $5,000.

Not all of this however would be county funds, he said, as a portion of it would be financed by provincial grants. He said the increase occurred between January of 1967 and January of this year and is "a direct reflection of unemployment in the Bay of Quinte area".

Large Diversified Milk Plant Suggested for Quinte District

Quinte district milk producers should be thinking in terms of a large diversified milk plant to handle production from many counties.

This was the advice of Alan Ketcheson of Madoc township, area representative on the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, who spoke recently at a joint meeting of the Prince Edward county milk committee and county cheese factory directors.

Such a milk plant, according to Mr. Ketcheson could switch production from cheese to other milk products according to consumer demand.

Also addressing the meeting was Arnold Johnson, representing the cheese exchange at Belleville, who talked on several problems affecting the cheese industry.

Among the topics touched on were devaluation of the British pound and its effects on Canadian cheese; the American market for Canadian cheese, winter cheese production, cheese manufacturing costs, cheese packaging and the federal subsidy on industrial milk.

Mr. Johnson said devaluation of British pounds had increased the cost of Canadian cheese by five and half to six cents per pound for importers.

As result sales of cheese to the United Kingdom were at a standstill and exports to that country would be down unless the export subsidy is increased or the export price is reduced.

If the export price is reduced Mr. Johnson said this would likely be reflected in the price the farmer receives for his milk.

Mr. Johnson said there was little possibility of selling additional cheese in the United States because of their quota policy.

There is no market for surplus fodder cheese and this is the reason for the milk committee's milk diversion program aimed at reducing the manufacture of winter cheese.

Increased manufacturing costs are making it increasingly difficult for small plants, especially small cheese factories, to pay the minimum price for industrial milk, it was stated.

Mr. Ketcheson will bring producers up to date on provincial matters relating to the Ontario Milk Marketing Board. A new county milk committee will be elected at the meeting.

Glen Cole of Bewdley, another member of the OMMB has been elected president of the Dairy Farmers of Canada to succeed G. B. McLaughlin. This organization is the national body of dairy farmers and speaks for milk and cream producers at the federal level.

At the annual meeting of the Dairy Farmers held last month, the position of the OMMB on the price for industrial milk for the 1968-69 dairy year was supported.

The federal government is being requested to provide the Canadian Dairy Commission with sufficient funds to (a) ensure a return of $5.00 per cwt. f.o.b. factory for shipper of manufacturing milk on the basis of 3.5 per cent butterfat, and (b) provide, in addition, for price support and for orderly surplus removal of butter, cheese, skim milk powder and casein products in Canada.

Two Industries Plan Campbellford Location

Campbellford will be the location for the erection of two manufacturing plants, according to the latest report from the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council.

At present located in Toronto, Yacht Equipment Ltd. has announced it will build a 10,000 square foot plant this spring to manufacture marine equipment. Another Toronto firm, Golden Gate Industries, has indicated it will construct a 15,000 square feet plant on a 14 acre industrial site in the town. No mention of the nature of the business was made.

In the industrial opportunity folder which was announced last fall to provide assistance to new or expanding industry, qualifying communities are Belleville, Brighton, Colborne, Deseronto, Madoc, Marmora, Napanee, Picton, Trenton and Tweed the council reported.

It was also noted by the LOBDC that the number of border crossings made last year by foreign vehicles numbered 12,371,407, an increase of 13.4 per cent.

Although much of the increase was attributed to Expo '67 and other events it is expected that the announced U.S. policy of curbing vacation spending abroad with the exceptions of Canada and Mexico will help maintain the increase.

Winds Ground Flights Using Trenton Base

TRENTON — Winds gusting up to 67 mph grounded all flights at Canadian Forces Base Saturday, is what an air force spokesman described as a "very unusual occurrence."

The last aircraft from the base departed before daylight Saturday before a 24-hour flight dela was declared at the station. The regular weekend service flight to CFB Shearwater, N.S. and back to the west coast via Trenton was delayed 24 hours because of the high wind conditions.

The air force spokesman said all local flying — including training flights — was also postponed. In effect, all daylight flights regularly scheduled for Saturday were grounded.

By the time the single truck from Warkworth's fire department could travel the 10 miles to the Pearson home east of Highway 30 the building had been levelled.

Damage is estimated at $6,000.

Donald Cameron — a neighbor who is organizing an appeal for assistance to the Pearsons — said the home was rented but none of the contents was insured.

Mr. Cameron said Mr. Pearson is temporarily employed. Nothing could be saved from the burning home except the kitchen table and chairs, he said. Donations of bedding, clothing or funiture are being received by Mr. Cameron for the Pearson family at 475-0205.

Life Saving Ribbon Given Boy Scout at Church Service

A young Foxboro boy scout whose quick thinking last summer was instrumental in saving a playmate from drowning in the Moira River has received a life saving ribbon and will later be presented with a medal from Governor General Roland Michener.

The ribbon was presented Sunday to Rodney Blakely, 11, by District Scout Commissioner Joseph Irish during the morning service at Foxboro United Church.

Uniformed Cub and Scout troop members from throughout the Moira Valley Scout District attended the service in a body marking the commencement of Boy Scout Week in Canada.

The presentation of the life saving ribbon and medal is in recognition of the Blakely boy's action last July in helping to save the life of a six-year-old companion.

The Blakely boy and Perry John Countryman were playing at the river when the younger lad got beyond his depth and disappeared. Rodney twice attempted to save his playmate but could not bring him ashore.

He then ran to spread the alarm and neighbor 32-year-old Clarence Jaynes dove in and brought the unconscious boy to safety. Jaynes then applied artificial respiration.

The Countryman boy and his parents have since moved to the Port Hope area.

CBC Costs

A sum of $7.70 a head is not too great a sum to have to pay for year-round radio and television programming. That is the cost per capita of the $154,200,000 it will take to operate the CBC during the 1968-69 fiscal year.

For a sum of under $10 a radio and TV network could hardly miss. Unfortunately, there are occasions enough when Canadians wish they had their $7.70 for other purposes, such is the banality and tastelessness of the programming.

And speaking of programming, what about the lack of it? An Ottawa report says the figures for 1968-69 includes the cost of operating the CBC international service. The report says it beams shortwave programs to Europe, Latin America and into the Arctic.

Note that — "into the Arctic." But a recent letter to a newspaper from a Whitehorse resident, and reprinted on this page, complained of the CBC's service to northern residents. The writer said Ottawa had failed to provide a sufficiently powerful transmitter and claimed he got better service from Alaska — and of all places, Radio Moscow.

Ever wonder why the West lags when it comes to the propaganda war?

Student Image

Academic freedom is a burning subject on university campuses these days — for instance in Saskatchewan where the Government seeks financial control of the university, and at Simon Fraser, Burnaby, B.C., where faculty members have been branded as troublemakers by the administration.

Certainly one wonders at times if universities are concerned more with political agitation than with preparing students for the various skills of professional life.

The setting was interesting and so too were the students — in a decadent sort of way.

The setting — latter day Roman, the balcony-fringed mall of the modernistic university campus. The students were sitting — or rather lounging — in varying positions in the mall area. If they had been waiting for the dancing girls or the Christians to be thrown to the lions they could not have looked more bored.

Some propped up the balcony pillars, others sat on the balcony itself, feet dangling and head on knees like so many South American Indians at siesta. A chic looking girl (in contrast to most of her audience), with long dark hair, was addressing the students. The picture caption said they were soaking up sun (in B.C.'s early spring) and speeches. To judge by the picture the sun had induced a state of somnolence.

And it makes one wonder too, why must students (university students for the most part) loaf around looking as if they had been shot from a cannon? What is so wrong with looking alert — and above all well-groomed? Jeans and zip-jackets were the garb of many in the picture, coupled with a general air of disinterest.

Maybe it is as an assistant professor said of the academic freedom issue. Criticizing both the provincial government and the university administration, he said: "B.C. is now at the edge of the world. It is nowhere at all."

"Nowhere man," as the casual and rather sleepy-looking students at the mall teach-in might chorus in reply.

Icy Highways

Life and death on the highway in winter may depend on prompt sanding of ice-covered road surfaces.

A recent Burlington, Ont. inquest was revealing. Evidence was given that a sanding truck was en route to an icy section of the Queen Elizabeth Way at the time a two-car accident occurred killing three persons. The fatality took place after one car went out of control on a 500-ft. long ice sheet and crossed the median.

From the public's point of view it is encouraging to note a Department of Highway official's statement at the inquest that all calls for sand trucks are answered. And this despite the fact that such journeys may turn into "wild goose chases."

Sand trucks should be dispatched as a matter of routine after a storm. Police and private citizens can assist greatly by reporting icy stretches. That a department driver may find his journey has been unnecessary is beside the point. He could find other stretches in need. One thing is certain, there is no greater hazard to safe driving than icy highways.

Budapest Parley May Expose Schisms in Communist Ranks

By PETER BUCKLEY

MOSCOW (CP)—This month's scheduled conference of world Communist representatives in Budapest is beginning to look, from Moscow, like that "sea of troubles" which faced Hamlet.

Many observers here believe that the closer the Feb. 26 starting date for the conference in the Hungarian capital approaches, the more the Soviet party could regret having insisted on a meeting at all.

The conference is supposed to advance the cause of world Communist unity. Instead, it now seems likely to spotlight the dissent which has plagued international communism in recent years.

Now there is speculation that a spectacular failure to unite the dissident factions in Budapest will reflect on the prestige and and position of Leonid Brezhnev, powerful first secretary of the Soviet Communist party and the man reported to be the Kremlin's most ardent advocate of a conference at this time.

The Soviets have been watching the "separatist" movement in international communism with increasing dismay. Supporters of the Budapest conference contend that the national parties abroad must be reminded in detail that the common enemy—capitalism—is still active in the world and that it must be met by a united front.

Brezhnev pressed hard for a conference when he met visiting Communist delegations here last fall during celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

But there has been no significant shift in opinion among the various national parties since autumn. If Communist China has failed to win any new adherents to the thoughts of Mao Tse-Tung in the meanwhile, there is still no sign of a rallying of dissidents around the Soviet party.

The intervening months have, if anything, only emphasized the strains which were subdued for the November celebrations.

Cuba has recently imprisoned a group of allegedly pro-Soviet officials, further aggravating its already tenuous relations with Moscow. Any slender possibility that the Cubans would go to Budapest has disappeared.

Romania, another blithe spirit in the Communist camp has agreed to attend, but it might only be there to present its case for allowing the ruling Communist parties to have complete flexibility in foreign relations.

The rest of Moscow's traditional supporters in Eastern Europe — as well as the non-ruling parties in Canada, the U.S., France and other Western countries—have backed the Budapest meeting although each probably has some different ideas on what it's meant to achieve. But the situation elsewhere in the world is anything but secure.

One Western diplomat, for example, has seen a "note of desperation" in the face that a high-level Soviet delegation went to Japan to encourage a pro-Soviet stance among leaders of the occasionally hostile Japanese Communist party.

Although the Japanese party is not considered to carry much weight in the international movement, Moscow sent its chief ideologist, Mikhail Suslov at the head of a strong delegation. The trip was apparently unprofitable.

Since North Vietnam and North Korea are unlikely to go to Budapest, the probable absence of Japan as well leaves glaring gaps in Asian representation at the conference.

Despite the diplomatic friendliness of several Arab and African states, the Communist parties in these countries are often harrassed or banned.

And the failure of Che Guevara's revolution in Bolivia as well as the Cuban-Soviet split over revolutionary tactics have cast a shadow across many of the small Communist movements in Latin America.

The Budapest conference is officially supposed to be only a preliminary meeting to decide whether a full-scale conference on world unity should be held at a later date.

Like a similar preliminary conference in Moscow three years ago, this one may end up with patchy attendance, a vaguely worded communique and a postponement of major decisions.

Expensive Armaments

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Each year, Canada wastes many millions on armaments that are never used. Yet there never seems to be enough cash in the federal treasury for a meaningful boost to foreign aid programs.

The ill-fated Avro Arrow program cost some $300 million. The army Bobcat, a Canadian personnel carrier, went through 10 years of testing at a cost of $10 million before being scrapped. A Canadian anti-submarine hydrofoil project, which so far has cost taxpayers $50 million, looks as if it will be abandoned.

Last year, more than $80 million worth of obsolete National Defence equipment was sold for less than $3 million. Writers on military affairs complain that of some $11,000 million budgeted for the Canadian armed forces since 1960, about $9,500 million has gone toward maintaining the status quo without improving Canada's defence position greatly. Heedless waste of national wealth on weapons is always wrong, but particularly so in a world where nations are crying out for development funds. Canada's foreign aid commitments are still around the $300 million a year mark. This is only a little better than twice the 1960 aid figure, and still a long way below the stated goal of one per cent of our Gross National Product.

Economic Puzzle

Why Are Americans on Thrift Binge?

Christian Science Monitor

The other day the Monitor's Washington Bureau sent an intriguing story. It showed that the American people (despite inflation, the blandishments of advertising, many still unfulfilled wishes and ambitions) are saving a larger part of their so-called "disposable" income than in recent years. Whereas the average figure for the years 1959-64 was 5.5 per cent, by 1967 it had risen steadily to 7.1 per cent.

As the story pointed out, this has the economists scratching their heads in perplexity, but nodding them delightedly. For, while recognizing that such saving (instead of spending helps reduce inflation's head of steam, economists are never quite sure why such changes in habits come about. Is it anxiety over things in general (Vietnam racial tension, inflation, election uncertainties, etc.)?

Perhaps. But may it not — for the moment at least — be something other? May it not be that great numbers of Americans, having done so well economically for so many years, have seen so many of their needs (and wishes) filled, no longer feel the same pressure to spend? While not scorning one economic theory which says that the wish to spend grows with spending, may there not be some practical sensible, thrifty limit to this? We think so.

Actually, spending has continued to grow (notwithstanding the jump in savings) among all levels of the American population, but most particularly at the lower. Thus not even the wildest of interpretations could look upon the rise in savings as an indication of either deep anxiety or an economic slowdown.

This question of how much one needs to spend reminds one of another discussion that rises over and over again, but which there is much misunderstanding. As is well known, the American steel production capacity still far outweighs that of the Soviet Union. Yet, from time to time, there are periods, or even individual years, when Russian steel output momentarily equals or surpasses American output. Invariably, this raises a cry of alarm. Yet such alarms ignore a major fact. This is that today America's steel capacity is so huge that not all of it is needed all the time.

In this it is like America's arm output and, it would now appear, the earning capacity of its citizens. These are signs of well-being, not of economic difficulty.

Home Costs Too High for Most

Peterborough Examiner

The factors against building low - cost housing today are known to be cost of land, materials, and mortgages plus the reluctance of municipalities to permit their construction. The largest increase in costs over the past ten years are those of materials and mortgages. The rise in material costs would not be quite so marked if the Canadian government removed the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials. Mortgages, on the other hand, rise with the growing demand for credit — this has pushed up the cost of borrowing so that payments for a home have doubled in ten years.

Municipalities, for their part, are reluctant to accept the National Building Code residential standards because low-cost housing does not raise enough in taxes to pay for schools and services. Municipal building and zoning regulations generally prevent the construction of anything but expensive homes. These, in turn, force up cost of land, cost of construction and cost of mortgages.

Direct Ontario government loans as rumoured, for lower-priced homes for people with smaller incomes than those now able to carry the present payments (less than $8,000 per annum) would go well with the province's present Home program which makes land-leasing or purchase easier. Certainly, any such government program would meet with warm approval from the Ontario public which is finding it increasingly difficult to own homes. Whatever lingering doubts there might be about the government's desire to come to terms with the housing problem would be dispelled.

Drug Costs in Spotlight

Peterborough Examiner

After three exhaustive investigations and increasing restiveness among Canadians, the Canadian government, through Consumer Affairs Minister John Turner, Monday moved to reduce Canadian drug prices from among the highest in the world. Amendments to the Patent Act and Trade Mark Act, accompanied by government action, are aimed at bringing the cost of drugs to reasonable limits without threatening the Canadian drug industry.

The federal government has alrady taken some action by removing the 13 per cent tax on drugs last September. Th abolition of the sales tax on the wholesale price of drugs has only partially been passed on to the public. Despite the decrease in some drugs, Canadian prices are substantially higher than the lowest prices available elsewhere. A survey by the Peterborough branch of the Consumers Association of Canada at the beginning of the month indicates that less than half of the tax is being passed on to the consumer. Mr. Turner's new measures are aimed at aiding the consumer.

The results which Mr. Turner hopes to bring about are: stimulation of competition among sellers of patented drugs by reducing competition against imports; provision of objective information to the medical profession about the property and prices of available drugs so that prescribing physicians will be aware of the price differences between competing drug products of demonstrated quality, safety and effectiveness; and strengthening of the small sector of the industry that manufactures and sells lower priced prescription drugs. Consultation with the provinces is planned to tackle the problem of reducing the cost of retail distribution of drugs since this falls primarily within provincial jurisdiction.

The argument raised by the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada that the new changes will mean more competition and a serious threat to the Canadian industry holds little water since 95 per cent of the patents are foreign owned, as are the manufacturing companies. Furthermore, PMAC submitted evidence to the House of Commons special committee to show that virtually the same amount was spent by the industry on sales promotion as on manufacturing the product — hardly indicative of an industry which will not adjust to the proposed changes.

Mr. Turner best summed up the situation when he said: '. . . in this particular case the immediate welfare and interest of the general public is paramount and private interests of the industry . . . are to be subordinated to the public interest.'

Bobby Hull Backs "Y" Project

An enthusiastic supporter of the YMCA, hockey star Bobby Hull has written the following letter to Belleville "Y" president William Holway.

Mr. Wm. A. Holway,
President, YMCA,
Belleville, Ontario

It gives me great personal pleasure to write to you in reference to the fund-raising campaign for a new YMCA building.

As a former member, I can tell you that the activities at the "Y" had a tremendous influence on me, and I will always enthusiastically give my full support to a project that means as much to the young people of any community, as does the YMCA!

Therefore I appreciate this opportunity to urge everyone I know to get out and support your campaign. I hope too, that each person will seriously consider the constructive influence a bigger and better "Y" can have on the lives of so many young lads in the years to come.

Surely, in these troubled times, those of us who hope for the best from our youth, should do everything we can to assure the best for our youth.

Good luck to you and all of your fine group in this big and important campaign. I sincerely hope that you all "break the record" this year!

BOBBY HULL.

BC Ferry Strikers Consider Gaglardi Ultimatum

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia ferry strikers have scheduled membership meetings today to consider an ultimatum from Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi—work or no job.

Mr. Gaglardi issued the ultimatum after a four-hour meeting Sunday with representatives of more than 1,000 employees of the government's ferry service who walked off their jobs Friday and Saturday.

"I've already issued a statement asking them to return for the first sailing Tuesday morning," Mr. Gaglardi said after the meeting. "If they don't appear, that will be accepted as their resignation. Then I ll have to hire men to take their places —and I will."

The walkout tied up the 20-ship coastal fleet, all but paralysing vehicle traffic between Vancouver Island and Vancouver.

Only a CPR ferry making three trips daily between Vancouver and Nanaimo connected Vancouver Island directly with the Canadian mainland. Other traffic was using two Black Ball Lines Ltd. routes from Vancouver Island to Washington state.

Air Canada added 11 extra flights to its daily eight-flight service to Victoria, but even that service was cancelled by bad weather Sunday night.

Mr. Gaglardi took control of the ferry situation Friday night after the B.C. legislature passed a bill abolishing a Crown corporation for the fleet, turning the ferries over to the highways department.

Spokesmen for the strikers said Sunday night their position was unchanged: They will remain off work until their problems are settled.

Sparked by a layoff of 160 employees, the walkout developed into demands for full collective bargaining rights for 800 unlicensed deck and shore workers, members of the marine branch of the B.C Government Employees' Association. The Canadian Merchant Service Guild, representing 250 masters, mates and engineers, joined the walkout early Saturday.

All are classed as civil servants under B C. law. Attorney-General Robert Bonner classified th walkout as illegal.

1,200 Petition for Removal

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A woman involved in a campaign to have Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi removed from office said Sunday petitions demanding his resignation have been signed by more than 1,200 persons.

Mr. Gaglardi has represented Kamloops since first being elected to the British Columbia legislature in 1952. The campaign calling for his resignation started last week following disclosure of highway access land deals involving Mr. Gaglardi's sons Bob and Bill.

Verna Wessel said in an interview that all those who signed the petition live in Mr. Gaglardi's Kamloops constituency. A total of 36 petitions are circulating through the riding.

Mrs. Wessel, one of nine persons who organized the petition campaign, said Mr. Gaglardi's position is "inconsistent with parliamentary tradition imposed upon ministers of the Crown."

She said the petitions will be presented to Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

This Troop is going in for winter camping. Eighteen boys spent a very enjoyable weekend at Camp Sagonaska recently, where Scouting tests were practiced and camp cooking and fire-lighting tests passed. A long hike and a toboggan slide were features of the weekend.

Harold Gray Loses Home Near Marmora

MARMORA — A family of five is without a home today following a fire Saturday afternoon which charred the inside of their house.

The home, one quarter of a mile north of Marmora, was blackened on the inside more from extreme heat than from flame.

The house was owned by Harold Gray who fled the building with his wife and three children. No one was injured.

A spokesman for the Marmora Fire Department blamed the high winds Saturday for the fire and explosion.

It was explained that the winds blew the flame out in an oil space heater. The oil kept leaking out and finally exploded.

Foxboro Area Without Power For Two Hours

Gusting winds which dropped a tree limb across hydro wires north of Belleville shut off power in the Foxboro area around noon yesterday, resulting in an enforced switch from organ to piano during the morning service at Foxboro United Church.

Officials at the Frankford hydro office which serves the Foxboro area said the power break came a few minutes before 12 o'clock. Service was restored two hours later.

At the Foxboro church the hydro cut-off put the organ out of commission and the organist had to fall back on the piano to provide music for the last hymn.

District scout commissioner seeks room to pin Queen's badge on tunic of David Lott, 17, of 6th Belleville troop. It's the highest honor awarded him in 10 years as cub and scout. Scoutmaster George Barnett joined occasion last night at Tabernacle United Church.

Scout Receives Award

Friday, February 16, 1968 will always be remembered not only by David Lott and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lott, but by the many relatives, friends, Scoutmasters, and District Commissioner when they gathered together to witness the Queen Scout investiture. This is the highest honor a Scout can obtain and takes many years of hard work, determination and tears.

David started in Cubs in 1959 under the leadership of Jim McCallister and later Milt Akey and as the years went on set for his goal the Queen Scout badge and "never regretted one minute of it." He is convinced that any Cub or Scout would feel a great deal of self satisfaction in reaching this high honor.

Bill Smith, chairman of the 6th Belleville Group Committee welcomed everyone and read a letter of congratulations from David's former Scoutmaster, William Hutchinson. Also a telegram of congratulations from Rev. M. McFarlane, former minister

Mac MacLelland gave a brief resume of David's achievements and made special mention of scoutmasters who helped David through the years. They were John Babiak, Wilman Hutchinson, Doug Shaw, Cec Matier, Alex Savage and present scoutmaster George Barnett. He received his religion and life award under the leadership and guidance of A. D. Archibald and Rev. McFarlane. Mr. McLelland also told of David's trip last summer to the World's Scout Jamboree held in Idaho.

David was presented with the badge by scoutmaster George Barnett and District Commissioner Bud Bateman. David will also receive a parchment written and signed by the Chief Scout of Canada and this will be presented at a later date.

Bill Smith presented on behalf a ring half of 6th Belleville Group Committee a ring with the Queen's Scout Insignia on it. Prayer was led by Rev. R. Crooks. Golden Quill Akey led in a sing-song accompanied by Jack Winstanley at the piano

Mrs. Jack Winstanley was convener for the event and with the help of the Mothers' Auxiliary served refreshments.

Bylaws Passed At Township Council Meet

TWEED — At the recent council meeting of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe townships, reeve Kenneth Smith presided.

It was decided that a lease be drawn up with the Queensboro Women's Institute for the Queensboro school. Also that the offer of Mrs. Spitzer for purchase of lot 50, North Range, Village of Actinolite be accepted. A bylaw was passed to establish polling subdivision No. 4, which will consist of all of the Township of Grimsthorpe. Votes will be cast at poll No. 2 in Queensboro.

The E.M.O. committee was appointed and are as follows: Kenneth Smith, E. Alexander and K. Cassidy. It was also passed that D. H. O. be petitioned for the balance of 1967 road subsidy.

It was passed that Township equipment used for snowplowing lanes be charged at the rate of $10 per hour, with a minimum charge of $5 per lane. This work is to be done only after Township roads are clear and at the discretion of the road superintendent.

The county road committee will be asked to improve the county road along the river in Queensboro to eliminate hazardous driving conditions which have been the cause of several recent accidents.

Council adjourned until March 4th, at 8 p.m.

Prince Edward Scouters Plan Week of Activities

On Wednesday two Picton troops will hold father and son banquets, 2nd Picton at the Presbyterian Church and the 3rd Picton Troop at Picton United Church. In Picton Lipson's store has donated the use of one of its windows for a scout display and this year the uniforms of venturers, rangers, scouts, cubs, brownies and guides will be displayed.

A skidoo party for cubs, which had to be postponed because of lack of snow recently, will be coming up again when weather permits.

District Commissioner for Scouting in Prince Edward County, Joe Webb, said Saturday that the week's activities will wind up on Sunday with a Founder's Day service at Picton United Church at 3 p.m. This is a service carried out by scouters themselves and is interdenominational. Heavy Damage Results From Car Mishaps

PICTON (Staff) — Three accidents were reported by OPP of the Picton detachment this weekend. No injuries were sustained in any of them but heavy damage was a result. About 6.50 p.m. Friday a one car accident on Highway 33 just south of Carrying Place involved Robert William Mills age 57 of Mill Street Consecon. Following another vehicle he was forced to apply the brakes of his car quickly, lost control and ended up in a ditch.

At 12.10 a.m. Sunday on Gilead Road east of county road 2, James Gifford 48 of Main Street Wellington, failed to negotiate a curve and struck a telephone pole causing severe damage to the front of his auto. The pole was knocked down, and the wires lay loose across the road. Following shortly after (at 2.20 a.m.) was John Matthie age 41 of R.R. 2 Bloomfield whose car struck the wires and became enmeshed. Wires struck the windshield breaking it and wires also damaged the headlights and front fender of the 1963 Ford driven by Matthie. Provincial Police investigated both of these accidents at the same time finding some confusion in recreating the cause of the accidents.

New York baby-sitters normally cost a minimum of $1.25 an hour in the afternoon.

The newly - established childcare centre, known as the Creche, is designed for children aged from six months to three years. Its aim is to allow the mothers to have one free afternoon a week for shopping or sightseeing.

MAY BE FIRST WOMAN MINISTER — Anne Wightman, a 22-year-old farm girl from Belgrave, Ont., could become the first woman minister in the Presbyterian Church in Canada. She has been considering the idea of going into the ministry since she was in high school, and now is taking a theology course at Knox College, Toronto. Miss Wightman says she believes women ministers should marry and have families. (CP Photo)

Farm Girl Could Become First Presbyterian Minister in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — "Why is he a girl, Mommy?"

The question came from a small boy in a Presbyterian church. He was confused at seeing a girl where he had only seen men before, in the minister's place in the procession.

The girl was student minister Anne Wightman, who could become the first woman minister in the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Miss Wightman, 22, a farm girl from Belgrave, Ont., says she does not suppose she would be the same kind of minister a man would be, and doesn't see why she should be. She says she believes women ministers should marry and have families.

She has been considering the idea of going into the ministry since she was in high school. At that time the church did not ordain women ministers but there were signs of the change that came in 1966.

Miss Wightman says she would probably just have taken another route if the change had not been made.

"I felt that if I couldn't be ordained by the time I had finished, I might go into Christian education or social work, something along that line.

"I really was aiming for the ministry but I wasn't going to campaign for it. There are enough other areas in the church where trained people are needed that I didn't need to be ordained.

"Sometimes I sound like a suffragette but I don't mean to. A lot of things women feel they have to campaign for are not worth it. They should just accept that they already have a lot of these things."

Several women have taken the three - year theology course at Knox College, Toronto, where Miss Wightman is studying. None has been ordained. Another girl student, now in her final year, says she is not certain she wants ordination.

Miss Wightman says she had little difficulty getting accepted on a summer mission field at Tolland, Alta., last summer.

"At the end of the summer one of the women told me to tell the mission board to send out another woman next year because they hadn't had so many men out to church in years.

"The congregation were very accepting of it. Country congregations are much more willing to accept women clergy than city ones."

Miss Wightman says she does not have to approach the job as a man would.

"I find if I go about it like a man I get nowhere. But if I go about it like a woman I can get all sorts of things done"

Miss Wightman hopes to go into a parish ministry and says she sees no reason why this should prevent her marrying and having children.

"I think it's possible that a woman minister can be married. I can see some difficulty when she has to ask for a sabbatical to have a baby. Marriage would need serious consideration. You would need to have a special kind of husband, though I don't think he would have to be a minister.

"It is rather ridiculous to think that women couldn't be married just because they are in the ministry. . .

"I enjoy preaching, young people, teaching and visitation. The ministry is a good way to have all of it."

Contact Club Host At Fellowship Party

A most rewarding afternoon took place at Christ Church recently when the Contact Club members were hosts to approximately 75 members of the new "Family Life Dep't" of the Anglican Church.

A short service in the church was conducted by Rev. Allan Lauder, assisted by youngsters Don Middleton, Michael Wright, Chris Ford and Kevin Stafford. Miss Nancy Weatherstone and Miss Carol Grills received at the church entrance.

A reception in the parish hall followed with Mrs. Jackie Gilbert, convener of the party, receiving at the door. Guests were registered by Mrs. Lillian Middleton, president of the Contact Club.

President Middleton spoke briefly, welcoming all to the new activities of this children's group. She explained how the former "Little Helpers" organization was being initiated into the new "Family Life Department" of the Anglican Church. It was indeed gratifying to see so many fathers present.

Mrs. Middleton also introduced Miss Iris Foster, secretary of this group, Mrs. Jackie Gilbert, Rev. Allan Lauder and Canon R. B. De Blois Wright. Canon Wright spoke briefly to the guests hoping to see all the children through the years grow with the life of the church and become part of such a notable family.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Orval Thornton, cartoons were shown followed by refreshments served by the Junior Girls of Christ Church under the leadership of Miss Pam Bratt.

Mrs. Betty Normington, nursery convenor, entertained the smaller children in the nursery with stories and games.

Mrs. Edith Pringle was kitchen convener.

A most enjoyable afternoon was brought to a close.

Another get-together such as this will be held in May.

Woman Lay Delegate Describes Synod

Mrs. William Rynasko, a lay delegate for the Diocese of Ontario to the 23rd General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada, spoke to the Dioceson Board meeting of the Anglican Church Women in St. Thomas' Church, Kingston, Feb. 5.

Mrs. Rynasko, a well-known community worker and women's editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, presented her impressions and some of the deliberations of the sessions presided over by the Most Reverend Howard Clark, Primate of all Canada. She said holiness mission and the unity were stressed throughout in a spirit of evangelism and rededication so that the church may be made relevant to the needs of today.

The speaker was impressed by the diversified nature of the Anglican Church in Canada. Regional differences have their effect on the life of the church and therefore decisions cannot be made for the whole on the basis of the desires of one area.

The Eskimo and Indian delegates made the delegates aware of the riches of the church. They urged members to stop thinking in terms of their own dioceses or parishes and consider the nutual responsibility and interdependence of each. As mission is the whole purpose of being, each parish should examine the amount of the vestry budget set aside for missionary purposes.

Youth was represented and made an invaluable contribution, Mrs. Rynasko said. She urged the inclusion of young people on church boards.

Mrs. Rynasko urged the use of all the new means of communication to promote unity within the Diocese and the church and with other churches. Being a woman delegate to a male dominated Synod seemed to present no more problems than being a woman in any other responsible position.

The next board meeting will be held in St. Paul's, Brockville, March 4. Rev. Canon F. Payne, chairman of the Diocesan Board of Religious Education, will be the speaker.

A workshop will be conducted in April for women and clergy of the Diocese for the purpose of studying the ACW program.

The Diocesan annual will be at Christ Church, Belleville, May 7 and 8.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

ALBURY JUNIORETES

The first meeting of this project "Cottons May Be Smart" was held at the home of Mrs. Jean Bedford at 7.00 p.m. on February 13, 1968. There were 15 girls present.

The discussion included an outline of this project, check sheets, record of achievement, record books and the requirements for a sewing box. The leader Barb Peck, gave an outline of the type of cotton to buy.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Barbara J. Peck on February 20 at 7.00 p.m.

Horticulturists Honor Capt. Jack Buchanan

"African violets are the most popular houseplants in North America," declared Mrs. Jean Hamilton at the Belleville Horticultural Society meeting at Tabernacle United Church.

Mrs. Hamilton, one of only two qualified African Violet judges in Toronto, directed her remarks to home growers, and outlined violet culture.

She advised using loose, coarse soil. Some people like to add a little charcoal, perlite or Vermiculite. Humidity of 40 to 45 per cent is very important. Temperature of the room in which the violets are grown should not fall below 60 degrees, the leaves should never touch a cold window pane or be placed in a draft.

Never use cold water on violets. Water from the top or bottom, but if used to watering from the bottom, change about once a month and water from the top. To root, pull out a good leaf from the second row from the centre, cut the stem at an angle and root in water or Vermiculite.

East or north windows provide the correct amount of light, although dark varieties can stand more light than others. Turn the plant once or twice a day, a quarter turn each time. If the neck of the plant becomes long, lower the plant in the soil, or if crooked, cut off the top and re-root.

Mrs. Hamilton donated plants, leaves and cuttings for door prizes.

A special ceremony took place when Capt. Jack Buchanan was presented with the Horticultural Service Diploma for meritorious service to horticulture.

In making the presentation, Allan Gardiner said, "We pay tribute to a man who helped guide this organization during difficult times and was always present to help with the running of meetings, often introducing or thanking a speaker on short notice. He served on committees and the executive of the Belleville society for several years. His contribution in helping the junior branch should deserve our highest praise."'

Winners of the rose bushes, drawn by the 108 members who renewed their membership before Jan. 1 were: Mrs. C. W. Coombs, Roy Valleau, Walter Yateman, Mrs. L. Churchill, Thomas Van-Cott, H. Pigden, Mrs. Eric Penny, Reg. Barber, Mrs. J. Yates and J. Manship.

Members are looking forward to Rose Festival 68, tours to the Royal Botanical Gardens in Hamilton, Jackson Perkins Rose Gardens in Newark, N.Y., and the Royal Winter Fair.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

An Easy Recipe for Daughter

By MARY MOORE

This week's cooking lesson is "I remember".

I remember my mother sitting at the sewing machine when we came in from school and asking my sister Peady to make a cake for supper: "Remember there are 3 wet and 3 dry ingredients: shortening, egg, milk; flour, sugar, baking powder". (The vanilla and salt were added too but were not basic.)

Mothers I implore you to need (not needle) your daughters to bake for you. Give them this recipe. Take milk and eggs from refrigerator to warm to room temperature. Take down from shelves the dry ingredients. Tell them where the pans are and, leave the kitchen.

TWO-EGG BASIC CAKE

Preheat oven to 350 deg. Fahr. Line bottoms only of two 8" x 8" layer cake pans with buttered wax (or brown) paper. Or better still use buttered Teflon pans for easy removal from pans.

I am assuming you have an electric beater. If not this may be beaten by hand.

one-third cup shortening
1 cup fine granulated sugar
2 eggs - divided (room temperature)
½ teaspoon vanilla
two-thirds cup milk (room temperature)
1¾ cups sifted cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

In large beater bowl beat together until very creamy and light the shortening and sugar. Separate eggs — adding yolks to beater bowl and putting whites in a smaller bowl. Beat yolks and vanilla into sugar-shortening mixture until very light. Remove beaters. Sift and measure cake flour. Put sifter over a bowl and add sifted flour to it along with baking powder and salt. Sift. Add it alternately with milk, ¼ of each at a time, to creamed mixture and fold in with spoon or spatula just until flour is incorporated. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in until blended. Turn into prepared pans, smooth tops and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 30 to 40 minutes or until delicately browned and slightly shrunken from sides of pan. Let stand in pans for 10 minutes before turning out onto cake racks to cool.

VARIATION: Pour half of the batter into one cake pan as above. Make Cherry Batter Pudding with remainder by tipping one can fruit pie filling — cherry, apple or blueberry — into a large baking dish and heating the fruit to boiling in the oven. Pour remaining half of batter over hot fruit filling and bake both cake and pudding at 350 deg. Fahr. Pudding requires at least 50 minutes because it is deep.

NOTE: You can buy red pitted cherries unsweetened for pies in 14-oz. cans. If you want to use them for the pudding, add one-third cup sugar, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon almond extract and stir; heat before covering with half of cake batter and bake as above.

Thus, mothers, you have a pudding for the current dessert and a cake to be iced.

Icing for one cake layer: in beater bowl beat together 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup icing sugar, 2 tablespoons milk, ¼ teaspoon vanilla, 2 teaspoons cocoa and shake of salt until of spreading consistency.

Dinner Menu

Cabbage Rolls; Sweet Sour Sauce; Frenched Green Beans; Celery Sticks; Plum Pie; Tea.

Ann Landers

Compulsive Workers Not Courting Death

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My daddy reads your column every day. I want to tell him something very important but I don't think he will listen to me. If he reads it in the newspaper he will have to listen. Here is my message. Please tell daddy not to work so hard. I am afraid he will have a heart attack and die. If anything ever happened to him I couldn't go on.

My daddy makes a very good living for us but we would be satisfied with less if it meant more rest and a longer life for him.

Please, Ann Landers, fix it so he will see this letter in the paper. — WORRIED GIRL.

DEAR WORRIED: There are bound to be a few million daddies around the country who will swear this letter was meant for them.

To all you daughters out there who are worried about your daddies I'd like to say this — and I am asking the newspaper to print this in large type so your daddies will see it. HARD WORK NEVER KILLED ANYBODY.

If you want your daddy to live longer don't ask him not to work so hard. Ask him to stop smoking cigarettes, to stop eating too much and to stop drinking too much. Suggest that he get some exercise every day and have a complete physical examination every year.

Most daddies who work very hard do so because of an inner drive to excel and achieve. If these compulsive workers take care of themselves they can go on and on and on.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This might sound like a stupid request, or perhaps I am asking for an oversimplification of the toughest question of all — how to tackle the everyday problems that arise from the business of living. Can you put together a few helpful hints — sort of Ann Landers Do-It-Yourself-Kit? — GROPING.

* * *

DEAR GROPING: Your request is not stupid, in fact I wonder why no one else has ever asked.

Many people are beset by fears and anxieties they can't define. So the first step is to isolate your major problem, separate it from the other problems and write it down on a piece of paper.

List the possible courses of action that might remedy the situation, then go to work on the most logical and practical solution. If it provess ineffective, try the second approach, then the third.

The person who makes an effort to analyze and resolve his problems will discover that his feelings of futility and frustration will gradually fade away. He will experience (probably for the first time) a sense of balance and confidence. Remember . . . the longest walk in the world begins with a single step.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Who gave you the power and authority to say this is right and that is wrong? Your rigidity and uncompromising statements make me sick.

One of your pet theories is that no house is big enough for two families. Well, listen to this: "My husband died two months ago. I have a large home staffed with three servants. My son and his wife and child are moving in next Monday. My widowed sister and her teen-age daughter are moving in the following Saturday. We are all civilized people and there's no reason we can't live together in peace and harmony. Everyone is thrilled. How do you like that? — MEMPHIS.

DEAR MEM.: It doesn't matter whether or not I like it. It's your house, Lady. Write to me in a year and let me know if everyone is still thrilled.

Church Groups

ST. MICHAEL'S CWL

St. Michael's CWL held the February meeting on Monday evening in the junior school.

Reports on the Valentine Ball were read showing a successful event. Mrs. Morey and Mrs. Whalen thanked everyone for the splendid co-operation they received.

Members were asked to keep in mind "The World's Day of Prayer" to be held at St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Church on March 1st at 2.00 p.m. and at Wesleyan Methodist Church at 8.00 p.m. The first annual general meeting of the United Community Services was also announced.

A highlight of the evening was a panel discussion by four members of St. Michael's Credit Union. They outlined the functions of the Credit Union and urged that more members of the parish take advantage of the services offered.

Following the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. T. Duggan and committee.

Club Activities

ARTS AND CRAFT CLUB

Members and friends of the Belleville Arts and Craft Club spent an enjoyable evening at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street, Wednesday evening, February 14, arranged by the Weavers Guild.

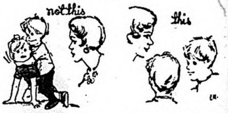
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Teddy drives me wild with his dawdling in the morning. I'm always frantic for fear he'll be late for school. Sometimes I almost think he's poking along on purpose just to upset me."

Mother: "It's foolish of me to keep nagging you about getting up and getting ready for school in the morning, just as if you're a little boy. You set your alarm and I'll have breakfast ready at 7:30."

An annoying habit can be changed, but it's up to the mother to instigate the change. Teddy's dawdling actually may be a protest against his mother's too-close supervision.

Should One Serve Guest's Treat?

Dear Doris: When friends bring a treat, should one serve it at the meal given to them or do you keep their treat and serve your own preparations? — Hung-Up Hostess

Dear Hung-Up: Is it ice cream? Candy? Her own secret dessert recipe made up special? Is it perishable?

Use a little judgment. If you can serve it, do so. Whatever you do, make a fuss. Sample it; ask about it. If it is candy, pass it after the meal. If you have made a perishable delectable lemon meringue pie, and the guest has brought fruit cake, I'd say don't substitute.

I well remember visiting an aunt who took the box of candies my father offered on our arrival, and we never saw box nor contents; nor heard a thank-you. As kids, this was well-nigh disaster.

• • •

Dear Doris: I went out with a guy from another city a few times and got to like him a lot. One afternoon he broke a date, and I got a letter from his friend explaining. He said that this other guy liked me and would be over again. Two months have gone past and I haven't heard a word.

While listening to the radio I have heard songs dedicated to him and me. The last song seemed to fit perfectly with us. I was beginning to think that he didn't care but now I don't know.

DORIS CLARK

I keep comparing other dates with him and wishing they were him. Would it be proper to write him or his friend? — Broken Hearted

Dear Broken: If his only communication in two months is by means of remote control radio, he is not for writing to, but writing off. Take yourself in hand and begin enjoying the others. They are there, in flesh and blood.

• • •

Dear Doris: When in church and sitting on the outside seat of the pew, other peolpe come in. Do you move over? Or do you get up and let the others pass? Or just sit?

I don't like to sit near the wall. I get too hot and feel I'm going to smother, so why should I move? — Perplexed

Dear Perplexed: Sit just as small as you can and let them pass in. No one wants you to smother.

Canada's Ties Grow With West Indies

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters) — Prime Minister Pearson says the relationship between Canada and the West Indies is becoming closer every year.

Pearson was giving the convocation address Saturday at the University of the West Indies, where he was awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree.

He said the "special relationship' 'between Canada and the West Indies is expressing itself in terms of trade, investment, development assistance, economic co-operation, tourism and migration.

Pearson said a major step in expanding these relations had occurred in Ottawa in a meeting between Canadian and West Indian leaders in July, 1966.

"There we opened the door by reviewing our long-standing trade relations, by creating machinery for continued co-operation and by looking frankly at some economic problem areas."

Last Dry Ontario City Split by Liquor Vote

OWEN SOUND (CP) — The drys and the wets have this last dry city in Ontario in the throes of its sixth liquor plebiscite in 19 years.

The disputes in a city that has been dry for 61 years have pitted friend against friend, husband against wife, split church congregations and broken the population of 18,000 into bitter factions.

As the Saturday vote approaches on the question of approving dining and cocktail lounges, there are charges of mass hypocrisy and of condoning open and illegal drinking.

Owen Sound is not completely dry—it has retail liquor and beer outlets won in a 1961 vote. However, dining and cocktail lounges failed to gain the necessary 60 per cent vote in 1961 and 1964.

For the first time since the city went dry the Chamber of Commerce has taken a stand in favor of a 'yes' vote. Mayor Robert Rutherford also has become the first mayor to carry a campaign in favor of a 'yes' vote on to a public platform.

'Men Only' Fishing Licence Proposal Is Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — A recommendation calling for a $3.25 resident fishing licence for Ontario has hooked some snags.

Rene Brunelle, Ontario minister of lands and forests, has asked the treasury board to make the licence compulsory for all males over 17.

Mr. Brunelle, attending the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, said women and children would be exempted unless they wanted to catch their own limit.

The federation's president, Dr. R. D. Longmore of Sudbury, told a wind-up session of the three-day conference Sunday the fishing licence should be charged to women as well as men, the same as hunting licences.

"We have to know more about his proposals. We have backed the idea of a fishing licence for more than 30 years and now that it is going to the treasury board we would like to know if it affects senior citizens; if there will be a family licence and whether or not fishing licences for provincial parks will be waived."

"But we need better fish management. The department needs qualified technicians and . . . the best people go to other government departments because they get more money."

Some delegates wanted the $3,000,000 that would come from the licences earmarked for the department.

However, it was explained that all revenue goes to the general fund of the provincial treasury.

Dr. Longmore said the licence would help determine the number of fishermen in the province, believed to be about 1,500,000.

Hospital for Controversial Respirin Treatment Remains Open

TORONTO (CP) — Unusually successful results in tests of a controversial treatment for respiratory ailments have led to extension of government permission for the operation of a private hospital in Toronto.

Respirin Hospital, due to close Feb. 29, has been given permission to continue in operation until the middle of March by Health Minister Matthew Dymond.

The hospital is operated by David Fingard, who treats respiratory patients with his controversial respirin inhalation treatment, developed by himself and his uncle 30 years ago.

The treatment has never been generally accepted by the medical profession, but Mr. Fingard hopes the results of a research project conducted at the Ontario Hospital in Orillia last year will help him to persuade two general hospitals in Metropolitan Toronto to adopt the treatment temporarily.

Dr. Dymond said the extension of operating time for the hospital will give Mr. Fingard additional time to try to enlist the hospitals' support.

The research project was conducted on 20 mentally-retarded patients, aged 11 to 23, at the Orillia hospital. They slept each night in a cottage unit where they breathed respirin fumes to see whether the treatment would help their sinus conditions.

Dr. C. A. Galloway, who conducted the project, reported to the Ontario health department that the sinus problems cleared up in [illegible]6 of the patients and there were a number of beneficial side effects.

1. Nine of 15 of the patients, assessed by psychologists before and after the treatment, showed a higher IQ rating at the end of the five months. One advanced from an IQ rating of 64 to a rating of 86 and another from 50 to 68.

2. Four patients with severe acne which had not responded to conventional treatment, had clear skins at the end of the test period.

3. A patient whose hair was falling out in patches had a full head of hair at the end of the test.

4. Two patients suffering from severe respiratory infections no longer had the infections after 12 hours in the respirin unit. They were given no antibiotics or other treatment.

5. All 20 patients were considered more alert and responsive at the end of the five-month project than before the treatment.

Respirin, composed of creosote, phenol, iodine, alcohol, glycerine, oil of garlic, oil of camphor, olive oil and eucalyptus, has been causing medical debate since Mr. Fingard, a chemist, brought the formula to Canada 30 years ago.

Car Sales Boost Aim By Britain

LONDON (AP) — A British assault on world auto markets gets under way next week when Sir Donald Stokes, chief executive of British Leyland Motor Corp., flies out on a survey of overseas marketing areas.

Sir Donald, 53, is expected to be away for about three weeks on a mission which could be the prelude to a drive to reshape, realign and revitalize Britain's important auto industry.

British Leyland Motor Corp., formed last month by the merger of Leylands Motors and British Motor Holdings, the two remaining all-British auto groups, was aimed at rivalling the might of Detroit in competition for foreign sales.

Sir Donald has the job of ensuring that the marriage works.

Chief stop-overs on his 15,000-mile swing will be in Africa, India, Australasia and Japan. British Leyland has operations in all those areas and Stokes will seek ways of streamlining and integrating the separate operations of the partners to the merger to trim running costs and thus pave the way for the onslaught on world markets.

Killy's Grand Slam

Killy Wins Grand Slam in Disputed Race; Norway Tops Olympic Medal Listings

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — The 10th Winter Olympic Games, which closed Sunday night with all the traditional ceremonies, will long be remembered for Jean-Claude Killy's grand slam in Alpine skiing and for an unending stream of discord.

At these Games little Norway displaced giant Russia at the top of the medal and team-points standings for the first time since the Soviet Union became a Winter Olympics participant in 1956.

Helped by five victories in Nordic skiing, Norway gathered in six gold medals to five for Russia, which had earned 11 in 1964 at Innsbruck, Austria. Norway also had six silver and two bronze to five silver and three bronze for the Russians.

In team points, which Olympic officials neither recognize nor encourage, Norway outscored the Soviet Union 122½ to 107.

Canada's 72-athlete entry won three medals—a gold and a silver by Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C., for her exploits in Alpine skiing and a bronze for the national hockey team, which finished third, behind Russia and Czechoslovakia.

The Games' 12 days were dominated once again by the Europeans, who took 33 of the 35 gold medals. In 1964 they had won 32 of 34.

The two golds that escaped European clutches went to Miss Greene for her smashing giant slalom victory and figure skater Peggy Fleming of the United States.

The closing ceremonies, with which Grenoble bade a wistful farewell to the Games, were held in the new Stade de Glace, with Premier Georges Pompidou representing the French government. Thirteen thousand people packed the ice palace.

The Olympic flame was doused, to be lit again in October at the Summer Games in Mexico City—an event already menaced by a growing string of boycott notices from African countries irate at the announcement South Africa will be allowed to compete there.

The 1972 Winter Games have been alloted to Sapporo in northern Japan.

Canada's three medals earned 19 points and a tie for 14th place with Poland in the team totals.

Fifteen of those points were earned by Miss Greene, who also won the International Ski Federation's world Alpine combined title for her giant slalom win, her second in slalom and her 10th place in downhill.

Canada's hockey team, beaten 5-0 by Russia in Saturday's climactic, medal-deciding game, added the other four points.

The best the remainder of the Canadian squad could do was to seventh placings in figure skating. Karen Magnussen, 15, of North Vancouver, and Vancouver-born Jay Humphry, 19, of Toronto, earned those places on the strength of good free-skating displays and will go on to Geneva, Switzerland, to compete in the world championships this month.

Host France put on a spectacular show in Alpine skiing, thanks to Killy's sweep of the men's events and Marielle Goitschel's victory in the women's slalom.

Killy said he intends to quit competitive skiing after the World Cup events and go to work—but didn't say in what field.

The Flying Frenchman's triumph in Saturday's slalom stirred up the biggest fuss of these rhubarb-filled Games. The debate—delayed disqualification of Austria's Karl Schranz, who bettered Killy's time when allowed to make a controversial second start, had French and Austrian officials screaming at one another all weekend.

Schranz was permitted to restart his second heat down the fog-shrouded course after he stopped during his first attempt and reported an unidentified person had been in his path near gate 22 of the 69-gate run. He then produced a brilliant 49.53-second time, which made his two-run total 1:39.22 to Killy's 1:39.73. But after two meetings, the ski jury ruled that Schranz had missed two gates before stopping on the course; his fast run would not count.

The Austrians, who said they would carry their protest to the International Ski Federation, held a press conference Sunday at which Schranz denounced the jury's decision as "unjust" and Austrian officials carried on a shouting match with French reporters.

"These are not the Winter Games, but the Scandal Games of Grenoble," screamed a headline in a Vienna newspaper reporting the whole affair.

Canadas loss to Russia and Czechoslovakia's 2-2 tie with Sweden settled the hockey medals Saturday. The other medal winners during the weekend were:

—Norway's Ole Ellefsaeter in 50-kilometre cross-country skiing;

—Sweden's Johnny Hoeglin in 10,000-metre men's speed skating, in an Olympic and world record time of 15:23.6;

—Eugenio Monti's four-man bobsled team from Italy, with the event decided on two instead of four heats following postponements because of mild weather;

—East Germany's luge doubles team of Klaus Bonsack and Thomas Koehler. The event, three times postponed because of weather-softened courses, was run Sunday.

There were five double gold-winners here:

—Ellefsaeter and Harald Groenningen of Norway took individual cross-country ski events and were members of their country's winning 40-kilometre relay team.

—Monti and his brakeman, Luciano de Paolis, won the two-man bobsled event as well as being on Italy's winning four-man sled.

—Toini Gustaffson of Sweden took the women's five- and 10-kilometre Nordic ski races, and picked up a silver as a member of the second-place 15-kilometre ski relay team.

The clouds of controversy weren't the only ones that hung over Grenoble for the games' 12 days. The overcast skies and mild temperatures caused delays and curtailments in the bobsled and luge programs and wiped out men's Alpine qualification runs which officials had planned for Friday.

Games Boycott Mushrooms

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While Mexico watched the mushrooming boycott of the Summer Olympics with mounting concern Sunday, South Africa insisted there is no chance it would withdraw to save the Games from collapse.

There were indications the Soviet Union may hold the key to the success or failure of the Games, which begin in Mexico City, Oct. 12.

The boycott, ignited by South Africa's readmission to the Olympics, continued to expand Sunday when the Somali Republic and Guinea brought to nine the number of African nations to announce they would withdraw from the Games if South Africa participates.

And the prime minister of Malaysia said his country is bound to withdraw in view of the decision of the International Olympic Committee to let South Africa back in.

In Johannesburg, Frank Braun, president of the South African Olympic Association, dismissed speculation that his country might withdraw voluntarily.

"There is not a ghost of a chance of us withdrawing," he said.

Amateur Status A Problem

Alpine Skiing Future Dim

CHAMROUSSE, France (AP) — What is the future for Alpine ski racing after the 1968 Olympic Winter Games?

The outlook is not too bright.

Stars are quitting, there is trouble ahead over the amateur status of others, and there may be no more world championships after those at Val Gardena, Italy, in 1970.

But skiing as a sport cannot be killed. Slopes around the world are crowded. Skiing as a participation sport is expanding tremendously. As a competitive sport it will have to undergo modifications to avoid head-on clashes.

There are hawks and doves, too, in Alpine skiing.

The hawks are those members of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), headed by IOC president Avery Brundage, who want Alpine skiers to be amateurs in the purest sense of the word.

The doves are the coaches of the top teams, who say that modern sport cannot follow outdated concepts.

In the middle are the leaders of the International Skiing Federation (FIS), headed by Marc Holder of Switzerland, who want to avoid commercialization without lowering the standard of the sport.

It will be a herculian task to find a common ground for these varying points of view.

Skiers and officials have been toying with the idea of doing away with the world championships every four years. Why should a racer who happens to win one race be a world champion and another who has been a consistent winner throughout the season go without recognition?

The answer seems to be the World Cup, the award given since last year to the best skier of one season. France's Jean-Claude Killy and Canada's Nancy Greene won in 1967.

Killy announced after winning his first gold medal here he would quit after the season. His compatriot, Marielle Goitschel, winner of the Olympic girls' slalom, also said she would retire.

This is a hard blow to the French team, which won an unprecedented four gold medals in the 1968 Games. Without Jean-Claude and Marielle, the French would have won only one, a silver by Guy Perillat in the men's downhill.

The Alpine races in The Olympics ended on a note of discord Saturday when Austria's Karl Schranz, after having established the best unofficial time in the two slalom heats, was disqualified and Killy declared the winner.

The controversy was expected to go on for some time since the Austrians said they would carry their protest to the FIS. But it did not affect the friendship between Killy and Schranz.

"I don't like to win by disqualification," Killy said. "If I had been beaten, it would have been a true champion."

Schranz said, "Killy is the greatest skier we have."

Russians, Czechs To Play in Canada

GRENOBLE (CP) — Russia and Czechoslovakia, winners of the gold and silver hockey medals at the Winter Olympics here, have agreed to play in a New Year hockey tournament at Winnipeg next year against Canada and the United States, Canadian hockey official Gordon Juckes said Saturday.

"The details are not completed," said Juckes, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, "but the Russians and Czechs have agreed to come to Canada and also take part in the usual Christmas-week tournament at Colorado Springs."

Canada will send a national team to Europe in late October and early November for games in Czechoslovakia, Finland and Russia.

Jukes said his idea for a regular world league of national teams from Canada, Russia, Czechoslovakia and the United States will be postponed until the 1969-70 season.

"Russia and Czechoslovakia have shown great interest and we are going to correspond on details in the coming months," Juckes said.

Person Congratulates Canadian Team

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson has congratulated the Canadian hockey team for its showing in the Olympics tournament.

Mr. Pearson is in Kingston, Jamaica, to receive an honorary degree but his office said he was kept informed of the Saturday game in which Russia blanked Canada 5-0 to win the gold medal.

Mr. Pearson's telegram, addressed to coach Jackie MacLeod:

"Please convey my sincere congratulations to members of the Canadian hockey team for their efforts and determination in the Olympic hockey tournament.

"While I share your disappointment in missing the gold medal, all of Canada is honored by the team's courageous performance."

Canada finished third in the tournament to win the bronze medal.

Russia Smothers Canada To Win Hockey Title

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Five Canadian national teams have failed to overthrow the Russians in hockey and now the soul-searching begins.

Rev. David Bauer, special adviser to the Canadian squad who fathered the national team concept, feels its development has been successful to a point.

It brought Canada an Olympic hockey bronze medal, but the championship gold remains firmly in Russian hands. The Russians showed they aren't about to give it up easily when they smothered Canada 5-0 Saturday.

The four-year plan to bring Canada the Olympic hockey first prize ended on the ice of Stade de Glace with the Russians tossing their victorious goalie, Victor-Konovalenko, into the air and hugging and pounding him as he landed.

Now a new program will have to be set up for the challenge four years hence at the Winter Games in Sapporo, Japan.

Fresh money will be needed to keep the two-team national concept going, Father Bauer says, in order that youngsters can be brought along to the main team.

Business and industry will have to help by pitching in with jobs and a future for players when they are finished. The pros haven't overlooked top players such as Fran Huck, who is property of Montreal Canadiens.

The Nationals went to their first international competition in 1964 at the Innsbruck Olympic Games and wound up fourth. Russia beat them 3-2.

The Nationals were fourth again in the 1965 world tournament, losing to Russia 4-1. The Nationals won third-place bronze medals in the 1966 and 1967 world tournaments, losing to Russia 3-0 and 2-1.

The Russians and Canadians have met 13 times in world or Olympic competition, the Russians winning eight and losing five.

The Russians ran up a string of 38 games in Olympic and world competition without a defeat before Czechoslovakia upset them here 5-4. In that span they won four world and one Olympic title.

Now they have added their third Olympic hockey crown in four tries.

The Czechs blew their chance for the gold medal when they were hard-pressed to earn a 2-2 tie with Sweden in the next-to-last game of the 12-day tournament.

Jan Hrbaty tied up the game in the third period and Czechoslovakia ended with a second-place silver medal instead of gold. If the Czechs had defeated Sweden they would have won the championship since they already had beaten the Russians.

Anatoly Firsov, voted the best forward by sports writers, scored his 11th and 12th goals of the tournament against Canada before 13,000 fans jammed into the Stade de Glace to take scoring honors. Left winger Firsov was picked for the all-star Olympic selections along with Huck at centre and Fran Sevcik of Czechoslovakia at right wing.

Broderick Makes All Star Team

GRENOBLE (CP) — Centre Fran Huck and goalie Ken Broderick were elected to the Olympic hockey all-star team chosen by 50 sports writers Sunday night.

Broderick, 25, won by a wide margin — 28 votes to seven — over runner-up Upro Ylonen of Finland.

Huck was picked for centre with Anatoly Firsov of Russia, the tournament's top scorer with 12 goals, and Frantisek Sevcik of Czechoslovakia on the wings.

Two rushing defencemen were named all-star rearguards — Jan Suchy of Czechoslovakia and Lennard Svedberg of Sweden.

Crothers, Hoffman Set Records in Moscow

MOSCOW (CP) — Canadian runners won two solid victories in three weekend events as they finished an eight-day Soviet tour Sunday by participating in the international invitational indoor track meet at Moscow's Sports Palace.

But the tour ended on an uncharacteristic note when Dave Bailey of Toronto finished third in the 1,500-metre race—the only time the Canadians failed to finish first in 13 races in the tour through Leningrad, the Baltic cities of Tallin and Riga and finally in Moscow.

Bailey's time was three minutes, 49.2 seconds.

American ace John Mason sprinted ahead in the last lap and crossed the tape in 3:47.5.

Minutes earlier, Miss Hoffman resisted strong pressure from the Soviet runners and finished with a burst that put her five feet ahead of runner-rup Anna Zimina.

Her winning time was 2:09.6, which Abby said later was "my fastest time this season."

Miss Hoffman hung back in fifth place among the field of six runners for two laps and then worked ahead, taking the lead on the final turn and giving a strong stretch run.

The Canadians were weary after a heavy schedule of travel competition. They plan to return to Canada on a Soviet Aeroflot plane today.

On Saturday night, Crothers overcame a surprise challenge from American Martin McGrady to win the 800 metres.

Crothers knocked 3.2 seconds off the track record as he won in 1:55. With another track record of 1:55.1 set a week earlier at the Leningrad meet, Crothers now holds two of the most important marks in the Soviet Union.

"I could have run it two seconds faster if I had been in shape," Crothers said later, but a week of running "hasn't helped, I guess."

Disputed Goal Irks Imlach

Hawks Blast Wings -- Twice; New York Defeats Toronto 3-2

By DAVID MILLER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

No one can blame Sid Abel if he starts thinking about golf instead of hockey.

The way Detroit Red Wings have been going in the National Hockey League, it appears manager-coach Abel can get the clubs out early in April and concentrate on putting rather than scoring during the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Abel suffered through a home-and-home series with Chicago Black Hawks during the weekend and a 14-5 total-points score. The Hawks blasted the Wings 7-4 in Detroit Saturday and came back before a national television audience Sunday to bomb them 7-1.

All this adds up to last place in the NHL's Eastern Division for Abel's Wings and only a thin chance to make the playoff starting April 4.

But some of his misery today is shared by manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs who had to endure a game of button-button with New York Rangers Saturday night.

The Rangers won the game 3-2 but not before a disputed call in the final seconds of the third period. Bob Pulford of Toronto appeared to blast in the tying goal and the light went on—the green, which signifies game over.

But the red light followed it, signifying a score. Referee Bill Friday ruled no goal and gave the victory to the Rangers, dropping Toronto even farther behind in their bid for a playoff spot.

"We got beat because he (the goal judge) doesn't get his hand on the button in time," said Imlach. "These kind of breaks aren't going to go against us forever. If we have to make the playoffs in the final week of the season, we will. We'll beat everyone to do it — ourselves, referee, the other teams and goal judges."

In other games, New York made it 14 straight Sunday games at home without a loss and opened the new Madison Square Gardens by downing Philadelphia Flyers 3-1. On the coast, Boston Bruins defeated Los Angeles Kings of the Western Divison 6-5 in an interlocking contest.

Saturday, Dick Duff scored three goals to lead Montreal Canadiens to a 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh Penguins, Oakland Seals surprised Boston 3-1 and Minnesota North Stars and St. Louis Blues played to a 2-2 tie.

In the West, Philadelphia leads with 58 points, four more than Minnesota. Los Angeles is third with 53, followed by St. Louis with 51, Pittsburgh 49 and Oakland 37.

Stan Mikita and Ken Wharram led Chicago Sunday with three goals apiece. Bobby Hull got the other—his 40th of the year. Gordie Howe scored for Detroit.

Defenceman Gary Bergman scored two for the Red Wings and Floyd Smith and rookie Peter Mahovlich got one apiece. Mahovlich, brother of Toronto's Frank, now has three goals in four games with the Wings.

New York's one-two punch of Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle provided all the Ranger scoring Saturday. Gilbert scored twice and Ratelle once while George Armstrong and Larry Hillman scored the the Leafs.

Sunday, before a crowd of 17,250 in the new Gardens, Bob Nevin, Donnie Marshall and Orland Kurtenbach all scored in the second period to lead the Rangers to victory. Wayne Hicks gave the Flyers a 1-0 lead in the first period.

Philadelphia goaltender Doug Favell and Ranger forward Reg Fleming engaged in the new arena's first fight. Both drew minor and major penalties.

Glen Sather scored the winning Boston goal Sunday with a minute to play. The victory spoiled an uphill battle by the Kings who came from behind three times to tie the score.

Ken Hodge, Tom Williams, Ted Green, Phil Esposito and Johnny Bucyk scored the other Boston goals. Bill White and Terry Gray scored two goals apiece for the Kings and Dave Amadio got the other.

Saturday was a big day for the Seals as they set attendance and winning records. Their 3-1 defeat of Boston gave them their third consecutive victory —longest winning streak of the season—and it was achieved before a record hometown crowd of 11,201.

The Canadiens victory Saturday was their sixth consecutive and 18th in 19 games. They have only lost once in 23 games since Christmas when they were last in the East.

Claude Provost scored the other Montreal goal and Gene Ubriaco picked up two for the Penguins. Bob Rivard scored the final Pittsburgh goal in the third period.

Spencer Leading Figure In Centre Hastings

Glen Spencer was the leading figure in the Centre Hastings Hocky League over the weekend. He scored five goals in two games to pace the Stirling Rebels to a pair of victories.

The first Stirling victory came Saturday night in Stirling as the Rebels whipped the Wallbridge Warriors, 8-4 behind a four-goal performance by Spencer.

Also on Saturday night two three-goal performances by Ralph Francis and Dale Benson, led Ivanhoe Knights to a 12-5 win over the Coyne Blazers. The other Saturday contest saw the Frankford Shoemen turn back the Foxboro Merchants, 10-5.

The second Stirling victory was a Sunday night return match with Wallbridge. Glen Spencer's fifth goal of the weekend broke a third period tie to give the Rebels a 3-2 decision. Don McCrory and Gary Mason scored the other Stirling goals. Reid Mallory collected both Wallbridge tallies.

The other semi-final series is tied at one game apiece. The Comets evened it up Sunday with a 4-1 win over the Bear Cats.

Paul Ford, Lee Bolte, Charley Reynolds and Mark Acquefreddo scored for the Crazy Legs in their win. Kevin Allen, Rick Rosebush and Claude Carr scored for Crawf's Terrors. The Crazy Legs take the series, two games to nil.

Cobourg Dumps Junior B's 7-4

Cobourg turned in a four-goal second period to turn the tide and hand the Belleville Junior "B's" a 7-4 defeat at the Memorial Arena yesterday.

The only goal of the first period went to Belleville, with Mike Healey scoring. The "B's" were also given a penalty shot, but failed to score on this opportunity.

Steve White scored the second goal for Belleville early in the second period, but Dan Gadbois had already scored for Cobourg, and the visitors came back after the Belleville tally to pour in three goals. Gord Kelly scored two of them and Gus Bambridge the other.

Ron Fuller and Ray Summers fired two more Belleville goals in the third period, but Cobourg scored three times to cement the victory. Gord Brooks, Bill Ryan and Paul Gutteridge scored the three Cobourg goals.

Despite the final score, the "B's" outshot the visiting club by 38-25. Cobourg took nine of the 13 penalties handed out.

Mo-Hawks--Oakville Fight for Final Playoff Spot in Tonight's Game at Toronto

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Belleville Mo-Hawks and Oakville Oaks wouldn't like to think they've been playing hockey all season for nothing, but that's the way it looks.

The two Ontario Hockey Association Senior A teams meet at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto tonight in a sudden-death game to decide who gets the league's eighth and final playoff position.

They have battled through the league's 40-game schedule to end up with 28 points each. Oakville has 14 wins while the Mo-Hawks have 13 wins and two ties.

Oakville grabbed a piece of eighth place on home ice Sunday night by defeating third-place Collingwood Kings 7-5. Dave McComb of Collingwood wrapped up the league scoring title by collecting three assists for a total of 74 points.

Toronto Marlboros, meanwhile, won the league pennant because they have a better goals for and against record than Galt Hornets. Both teams have 55 points.

Toronto whipped Woodstock Alcans 8-1 Saturday while Galt pulled even with the Marlboros in points by defeating Barrie Hornets 5-2 Saturday and Kingston Aces 4-2 Sunday. In the other game Sunday, Barrie Flyers whipped Orillia 9-4.

Doug Hillman led Oakville with three goals while Terry Holmes, Obie O'Brien, Bob Bishop and Ron Shuker got one each. Dave Fitter and Bill Abbot each scored twice for Collingwood with Fern St. Onge adding the other.

Galt got its goals against Barrie from Eddie Burr, Ted Power, Fern Belanger, Pete Brennan and Bill Hway. Ray Gariepy and Ron Vermette scored for Barrie.

Apathy Disgusting

Crawford Angry--Players Miss Workout

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

Floyd Crawford, anger dripping from every word, ripped into the Belleville Mo-Hawks yesterday for what he called "one of the most disgusting displays of apathy I have ever witnessed."

Crawford, coach of the Mo-Hawks, blew his cool after only three players turned out for what was to be a two-hour practice.

"Bob Taylor, Eddie Marineau and Lionel Botly were the only three that showed up at 8 a.m. It has been pretty much the same on two damn many occasions to ignore. These three, along with Minnie, (Menard) have attended every workout possible all year. Only work or serious illness has kept them away.

"Wiener Brown came in at quarter to 10 and said he had been called in to work at the paint, but I don't know And Ralph Plane showed up at 10 and said he thought that was when we were to practice.

"The only one I know has a legitimate excuse is Bob McAlpine. He called to say that he was on duty and could not make it." McAlpine recently joined the Belleville Police Department.

Crawford continued: "There is no excuse as far as a time mixup goes. After Friday's game I told them the day and time and said I wanted 'all of you there as long as it does not interfere with your social schedule'. I guess some of them were home practicing their bridge game this morning. They got the message alright.

"How much of a practice can you have with three players? And neither goalie turned up. Mickey Cherevaty has taken the trouble to come down from Toronto for about one practice this season — and it shows in his conditioning. And of course our "all-stars" didn't bother. It's the same with Bernie Gould and he should know he needs the work because I have made that clear.

"Would anyone believe this is a club that has lost five games in a row and likely will have to win a sudden-death game to even get in the playoffs?

"It looks to me like some of them just don't care. We had better turnouts last season and guys like Gary Darling were to drive down from Peterborough for one-hour workouts starting at 11 o'clock at night.

"The fans deserve better than this. People pay good money to see these guys play hockey and it is about time they knew the score. A little extra effort goes a long way, even if it hurts a bit, but we haven't been getting it from some. This practice is a good example of their attitude."

The irate coach also said he did not know when or if centre Hec Lalonde would be playing again He has dressed but did not play in Kingston and Woodstock last week because of an injury to the upper arm.

"I am going to ask Jack Devine (OHA president) if there is any possibility of re-activating myself as a replacement for Menard.

"Even if I ujst sit on the end of the bench it will be as much effort as others are giving and that would mean one of the other players would not be able to collect a game salary for doing nothing."

Three Stroke Victory

Knudson Takes Home Bacon in $20,000 Win

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP) — "I can't remember wanting to win a golf tournament as much as I did this one."

Knudson, a 30-year-old tour regular from Toronto, carded an even-par 71 in Sunday's final round for a 12-under-par 272 and a three-stroke victory over three challengers.

Oddly, it was a four-foot putt on the 210-yard, par-three 15th hole which Knudson considered the spark that led to his first triumph since the 1967 New Orleans Open and his fifth tour win.

"I showed my colors there," said the chain-smoking Knudson of the putt which managed to keep him even with charging Sam Carmichael, after he had put his tee shot in a lake in front of the green.

Carmichael, who parred the 15th, held a share of the lead only briefly and fell two strokes behind after going one over par on the next two holes. He was only one of two challengers who caught Knudson during the final round over the 6,765-yard, par-71 Phoenix Country Club Course.

"Nothing I did was too easy," said Knudson. "I spent all day watching what the others were doing. It wasn't until the 18th hole that I was able to take my first big swing of the day.

Knudson carried a two-stroke lead into the final hole and then holed out a three-foot birdie putt to put him three-up on Carmichael, from Martinsville, Ind., who finished with even-par 71.

Defending champion Julius Boros finished in a tie with Carmichael and young Jack Montgomery of Fort Worth, Tex., for second place. Each had a nine-under 275 after Boros missed a shot that would have put him all alone in the runner-up spot.

Second place was worth $8,166 to each of the three players.

Tommy Shaw, 26, of Golf, Ill., after two early birdies passed Knudson on the sixth hole.

But from that point on, Shaw's game collapsed. He went one over on the eighth and ninth holes, two over on the 11th, and one over par again on the 12th, 13th and 14th holes, dropping from 13 to six under par.

Finishing in a tie for third place, each at eight-under 276, were Frank Beard and Bert Yancey. Each won $4,050.

First-round leader Frank Boynton, veteran Gene Littler and Shaw each pocketed $3,100 fourth-place money at seven-under 277.

Blunt answers to questions about borrowing from Pacific Finance

Q. What happens when I come in for a loan?
A. A few questions in private—like where do you work, where do you live, and why you want the money. Our business is making loans, not refusing them.
Q. How fast can I get my money?
A. If you call first, it's not unusual to have your money within 20 minutes after you walk in. Same day service is standard.
Q. How much can I get?
A. Usually, you're a shoo-in for all you need. As a rule of thumb, you are probably good for a loan equal to three times your monthly salary. Over half of the people who come to us for loans qualify for more than they ask for.
Q. What happens if I don't make a payment?
A. Pacific Finance is easy to talk to at times like this. We know you can get trapped by bad luck. If you need more money, tell us. If you want to take longer and make the payments smaller, we can probably work that out for you too.
Q. Are you a fly-by-night outfit?
A. We have over 600 offices throughout the United States and Canada. We've been in business since 1920. Right now over a million people have loans with Pacific Finance totaling over a half billion dollars. And Pacific Finance is part of the Transamerica Corporation that also owns other companies such as Occidental Life and United Artists. No matter what amount you need, stop by your nearest Pacific Finance office. Better yet, give us a call.

Junior Farmers List Officers

NAPANEE — Larry Wannamaker will head the Lennox and Addington County Junior Farmers in 1968. First and second vice-presidents are Hugh Sharpe and Elwood Hughes, respectively. Secretary-treasurer is Marion Myers and Marion Knight is program convener. Barton MacLean and Neil Denison are the representatives to the Federation of Agriculture, and provincial director is Wayne Parks.

The annual meeting was well attended.

The leadership school to be held in Campbellford next Saturday came up for discussion, and about half those present will try to make arrangements to attend. Attention was drawn to the Provincial annual meeting and convention March 15 and 16, and four members believed they could attend.

Plans were fairly well completed for a dance which the organization is sponsoring in the Legion Hall in Deseronto on March 2.

There was no program of recreation. The Junior Farmers had fun sampling the delectable assortment brought for the dessert party.

Valentine Tea Held by St. Mark's ACW

DESERONTO — In spite of a snowstorm which always seems to accompany St. Valentine"s Day, the tea given by the Evening Branch of the ACW of St. Mark's Church was fairly well patronized.

The rectory was attractively decorated with the symbols of the day, hearts and cupids. Red and white carnations centred the tea table.

Pouring tea were: Mrs. M. I. Lyons, Mrs. Charles Gray, and Mrs. Bert Coles. Arranging plates and making tea in the kitchen, or serving the guests were other members of the group.

The baked goods table was well filled with tempting delicacies, and, as always, was soon emptied. Mrs. Harold Toppings and Mrs. John Glen were the busy conveners.

Pupils Raise Money for Jr. Red Cross

TYENDINAGA — The coffers of the Junior Red Cross Society were richer by a nice sum this week when a classroom of the Tyendinaga Public School put the theory of teaching into the everyday practice of life.

The grade one pupils had been learning about money, the relative value of Canadian coins, and how to make change. Their teacher, Mrs. Ralph Lawler, suggested having a small sale of some kind among themselves so that they could do some buying and selling in reality and the little folk suggested a candy sale and said that maybe they could find some white elephants. The mothers co-operated so well that the sale, which began in the classroom, spread afterwards through the school, and the little ones had plenty of experience in active trading.

The next amount realized cannot be disclosed, but the teacher confesses that it was at least three times what they had hoped.

To Your Good Health

Aspirin Seldom Dangerous to Adults

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I realize that aspirin is a serious poison potential when used indiscriminately. However I have two questions:

1 — Does poisoning occur from the system building up a toxic amount over a prolonged time? Does the body store it?

2 — Repeated use for headaches or pain seems to build up a tolerance, so the recommended dosage of two aspirins is no longer effective. Can an occasional dose of three, or perhaps taking two and following with two more two hours later, result in poisoning? — J. S.

Nothing in your letter indicates any cause for alarm.

The dangerous poisoning from aspirin is essentially among children, when a bottle is left within reach, when they think they'll "take a pill the way mommy does," when they think it's candy, and when they haven't been told to leave things alone. (Best, always, is to keep such things out of reach, and never to pretend that medicine is "candy" or "tastes good" or "will make you big and strong.")

A 20-pound toddler can tolerate only one-eighth as much of a toxic substance as a 160-pound adult, so a grubby handful of aspirin tablets, even the "baby aspirins," can poison a child.

Now for your specific questions. Aspirin and other salicylates have a wide margin of safety for adults and any ordinary dose is unlikely to cause symptoms of poisoning.

Further, an adult, even one sensitive to aspirin will notice other symptoms before serious poisoning occurs. (There is a wide variation among individuals as to the amount which will cause distress.)

Only a susceptible person would have any trouble with a dose of one or two tablets (5 to 10 grains). Ordinary doses do their job and are eliminated. Aspirin poisoning usually occurs only when large amounts are taken in a short space of time.

However, salicylate intoxication can occur in persons taking large amounts over an extended time. This can affect the nervous system (ringing in the ears); increased breathing (hyperventilation); mental confusion; derangement in the blood. There can be alkalosis at first, finally an acidosis. Some persons develop a skin rash.

(I should point out that this sort of thing results from long and heavy use — not ordinary use, or the amount often prescribed for arthritis.)

Second question: Yes, repeated use may develop a tolerance to the average dose. However, if aspirin alone does not give relief from pain, often a compound (as one containing caffeine along with aspirin) will be more effective, especially for headaches.

It is mighty rare that an occasional dose of two or three tablets will bother any but the most sensitive person. And anyway, stomach irritation is pretty likely to develop first, giving a gentle warning.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it permissible for a person, now 40, who had polio 18 years ago and was completely cured, to contribute blood to the blood bank? — N. M.

I see no objection, but to be sure I checked with the Red Cross blood bank and they agreed: Yes, such a person can give blood. And will be welcomed.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: In reference to underarm odor in men, I have been using shaving lotion for 20 years, but I go one better. I shave under my arms. Women do this and it works for them; why not for men? It sure helps me.—F. J.

I've suggested exactly that in this column, because shaving is an excellent way, along with others, of controlling the problem. Your letter may convince some doubters that it is, indeed, an important part of "treatment" for this.

• • •

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Vocal Artistry Warms Audience at Don Pasquale

By EUGENE LANG

The warm and intimate confines of the auditorium of Centennial Secondary School were a fitting foil to the biting February gusts which howled outside on Saturday evening for the hundreds who were in attendance for the Canadian Opera Company's production of Gaetano Donizetti's opera-buffa "Don Pasquale".

Of the over 70 operas which poured forth from this early 19th Century Italian's pen this the 69th of his output, is one of only five of his that lives on today in the repertoires of opera companies the world over.

Premiered in Paris in 1843 it demonstrates this composer's creative powers at their zenith and remains a masterpiece in the genre of comic opera comparable with Rossini's Barber of Seville and Mozart's Marriage of Figaro. In lightness of touch, bubbling humor, sprightliness and pace it remains a model of what true opera-buffa should be.

Set in Rome during the early 19th Century, the story revolves around the wealthy bachelor Don Pasquale who is led into a hoax marriage with the young widow Norina who is in reality in love with his nephew. The family physician, Dr. Malatesta through his chicanery involves everyone into a merry mixup that is finally disentangled when the old Don is made aware of his having been the scapegoat of a planned plot. The moral of the story is that he who marries late in life will find nothing but trouble awaiting him.

Using one set of stage properties that could be modified to represent any one of three different locales where the action is to take place, the desired result was obtained with a minimum of change artfully conceived with attractive settings bolstered by colorful lighting effects.

Sung in English to a translated version by Phyllis Mead, the opera gained in assimilation to its audience what it lost in the smooth language of the original Italian in regards its syllablism and meter phrasing. Four leading vocal parts make up the body of the entire opera and to each of these was entrusted the singing attributes of a quartet of the Canadian Opera Company's best talents.

Jan Rubes impersonated the crochety old bachelor Don Pasquale with bumptious buffoonery in his acting and richness of resonant resoundings in his singing. The handling of his role was of sterling quality at all times, a difficult part to fully convey to any audience, and he succeeded with adept finish and polish.

The lovely Sheila Piercey was as delightful to behold as her voice was to hear. Her portrayal of the flighty young widow Norina was carried off with charm and impish frivolity. She revelled in her coloratura spirallings with apparent ease so that her mellow voice wafted and welled up in careening vocal splendor.

John Arab's tenor voice was more tailored to his role than his acting, although his offstage aria in the last act was one of tenderness and sensitive appeal.

Phil Stark in his brief appearance of the Notary was farcical both in action and tone — a necessity to this part that he carried off admirably. On singing comics Elsie Sawchuk and Donald Young bantered around with bucolic bounce during their short appearance on stage.

The orchestra of 14 pieces, under the direction of John Fenwick added immeasurably to the completed production, although at times scoring seemed a bit weak and flaccid. Portions of the opera that stood out in stellar array were the duet for soprano and baritone in Act I, the tenor aria from the second act, the Pasquale and Malatesta duet in Act III and the nocturne for Soprano and bass from the same act. Examples of fast patter singing came through remarkably well, even though the English version hasn't the smoothness of the Italian.

All in all it was a most enjoyable performance with fast paced action combined with excellent vocal artistry, colorful costuming and well chosen settings. The programs could have been more explicit in at least typifying the various voices of the singers.

Loyalist College and the Quinte Arts Council have done a decided cultural service to this area by bringing the Canadian Opera Company here in which we hope will be an annual affair to be anticipated in future years.

Snowmobile Cruises Popular

AMELIASBURG — The several thousand acres of poor agricultural land and unproductive swamps in the township would become useful as a major winter sports playground if interest in snowmobile cruises west of Onderdonk's hill follows this year's growth pattern.

Some beautiful scenery has been made available to the enthusiasts of the area by several of the landowners who opened up remote sections of the big swamp between the first and second concession. Trails winding for miles through woods and bogs only accessible after the freeze-up have been established so far. Moonlight cruises have become very popular although most of the activity takes place in daylight when light is required to blaze trail and explore for new routes.

An example of the growing interest in expanding activities accompanied the gathering of 22 people with their powered snow sleds on Friday night. They collected at Ed Barrick's place after dark, spent the early part of the evening following a leader snaking around the challenging course. The group concluded the meeting roasting wieners over a bonfire.

Interest so far has prompted a move to form a snowmobile club with headquarters in the Albury - Carrying Place area. There will be an inaugural meeting and election of officers at the Barrick residence on Thursday, February 22 at 8.00 p.m.

Senior Curling Title

Westerners to Present Strongest Challenge

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The West once again will mount the strongest challenge in the Canadian men's curling championships March 4-9 at Kelowna, B.C.

A strong Prairies contingent is led by Ron Northcott of Calgary who will represent Alberta for the fifth time since 1963. Former world and Canadian champion, Northcott earned the Kelowna trip Saturday by downing Al Delmage of Fort Smith, N.W.T., 9-7 in 12 ends.

Saskatchewan also has a strong entry in the Bob Pickering rink from Avonlea. Provincial winner in 1966, Pickering qualified Saturday with an 8-7 victory in 13 ends over Merv Mann of Saskatoon.

In Manitoba, for the first time in 15 years, a rural rink will carry the provincial banner into the dominion finals.

Burke Parker, a 36-year-old farmer from Gilbert Plains, won the Manitoba crown Saturday with a 12-5 victory over Ralph Wilson of Dauphin. It was the first visit for Parker to the provincial finals since 1958 when he lost in a semi-final to Terry Braunstein of Winnipeg.

This year, the unflappable Parker, playing in the same sweater he has worn since he began curling 20 years ago, ousted Braunstein in the semi-finals.

Rinks decided earlier include Robert McCubbin of Richmond, B.C. It is the first crack at a Canadian championship for McCubbin but he has been curling competitively for 20 years.

A new rink will represent southern Ontario, but it will be out to follow the Alf Phillips Jr. rink of Toronto, 1967 Canadian champion.

Dr. Don Gilbert and his St. Thomas rink qualified last week by eliminating Eldon Coombe of Ottawa in a best-of-three final.

Northern Ontario, meanwhile, will be represented by Herb Pile of Geraldton, who is making his first trip to the dominion championships.

Veteran Bill Tracy of Bagotville will represent Quebec and Allan Smith of Charlottetown, P.E.I., is the skip of the strongest Maritime rink.

Smith has been to the dominion finals three times, but all as third for Doug Cameron and Art Burke.

Other Maritime rinks are skipped by Jim Ayer of Fredericton, N.B., Don Fleming of Halifax's Mayflower curling club and Bill Piercey of St. John's, Nfld.

Schoolboy Curling

Trenton Rink Set for Championships

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (CP) — More than 80 mini-skirted high school girls provided the color today at opening ceremonies of the 22nd annual schoolboys' curling championship.

The girls, eight for each rink entered in the week-long, round-robin event, acted as cheerleaders as the rinks were introduced at the Port Arthur Curling and Athletic Club.

The 11 rinks, one representing each province, except for Ontario which also has a northern entry, are playing for the Pepsi-Cola Trophy, won the last two years by Alberta.

Alberta again has a strong contender in Ron Kelly of Calgary and his Edmonton teammates, but no one is ready to predict the outcome of a showdown which is materializing between the Alberta four and an experienced Manitoba rink.

Three members of the Manitoba crew were in last year's schoolboy bonspiel and finished in a tie for second place with British Columbia. The 1967 squad was skipped by the brother of this year's leader, Ken Clapham of Winnipeg. Also on the 1967 entry were Jim Sproule, and Tom Will, who is throwing second rocks. The only newcomer is lead Wayne Ardron.

But Alberta has some advantage in that it has drawn its four opening games against supposedly weaker Eastern rinks—Ontario's William Hope of Trenton, Northern Ontario's Al Viehbeck of Fort Frances, Prince Edward Island's Peter Johnston of Charlottetown and New Brunswick's Bruce Forster of Moncton.

There are two draws today, Tuesday and Wednesday at 2:30 and 8 p.m. with a full day Thursday when games start at 9:30 a.m., 2:30 and 8 p.m. Draws on Friday are at 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Rick Folk of Saskatoon, an ardent and able golfer during the summer months, is Saskatchewan's hope for a 10th national championship.

The wheat province has won the title a record nine times since 1947. Alberta has won it five times, Manitoba, Northern Ontario and Ontario have won it twice each and British Columbia has taken it once.

Quebec and the Atlantic provinces have yet to get their names on the coveted trophy.

Newfoundland this year is hoping Marty Dalton's foursome from St. John's can bring home its first championship.

Quebec is putting its hopes with Doug Johnston's rink from Schefferville. They have played as a unit for the last two years and each member has had no fewer than four years of competitive play.

Mark Ottem of Kamloops, whose interests extend to hockey, baseball, Lacrosse and boating, will try to improve on British Columbia's second place tie last year.

A darkhorse may be Nova Scotia's Ferguson Robert Little of Halifax. Last year's provincial champion, skipped by Charles Rafause of Uxbridge, came in fourth.

A member of the P.E.I. rink was the first to go on sick parade. Don Vickerson, who plays second, battled a minor cold and sore throat Saturday and Sunday but was expected to be alright for the rink's first game.

Manitoba vs. Prince Edward Island, Alberta vs. Ontario, British Columbia vs. Saskatchewan, Newfoundland vs. Quebec and Northern Ontario vs. Nova Scotia.

Saskatchewan vs. Quebec, Northern Ontario vs. Alberta, Prince Edward Island vs. Nova Scotia, Manitoba vs. New Brunswick and British Columbia vs. Ontario.

Former Pro Football Great, Jim Brown, Is Fine Actor

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Until recently, ambitious Negro actors were saying, "Sidney Poitier can't play ALL the roles." Now they're amending that statement to include Jim Brown.

Within one year, Brown has joined Poitier as a star of undeniable importance. In his sixth film, the former pro football great receives top billing, and he is scheduled for two more starring movies, The Riot, from the best-selling prison novel, and 100 Rifles, a western.

His current film is The Split, in which he masterminds the robbery of $600,000 in receipts from a National Football League playoff game. Also in the film is Oscar winner Ernest Borgnine, who appeared with Brown in The Dirty Dozen and Ice Station Zebra.

"Jim is coming along fine," reports Borgnine, who has counselled the newcomer on acting technique. "He's got the physical attributes to be a star, God knows.

"But he's learning that there is more to acting than the physical aspects and speaking the lines. He is finding out that the face tells more than words."

"I'm still learning," Brown says. "Some actors stay away from the daily rushes because they think they might get self-conscious.

"Me, I go every day. I figure that's the only way I can improve, to watch myself on the screen and see if it came out the way I intended."

Jim Brown is calm and confident, as might be expected of a man who scored 126 touchdowns in his nine years as fullback for Cleveland Browns. He continues to marvel at luck —or timing— that has propelled his acting career with such speed.

The timing was of his own choosing, and many of his fellow players thought he was foolish to quit football when he was at the peak of his powers.

"But if I hadn't quit when I did, I wouldn't have had The Dirty Dozen," he points out. "If I had remained in football, I would just now be getting out and looking for acting jobs."

Brown added that his timing was fortunate in another respect:

"I happened to come along in a period when those who run the film industry realize that it is possible to have leading performers of different ethnic groups."

Brown has been getting roles in which his color is of little if any concern.

Brown now has three unreleased films, Ice Station Zebra, Dark of the Sun, filmed in the Caribbean, and Year of the Cricket, made in India. Together with The Split, they represent an investment by MGM of more than $12,000,000.

MGM executives are confident that their investment in Brown will pay off. Said one of them: "the big guy got the same thing that Clark Gable had—star quality."

UFO Premier Half Century Ago, E.C. Drury, 90, Dies at Barrie

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — A legend in Ontario politics, Ernest Charles Drury, died Saturday at the age of 90.

But he never forgot the land.

And when his political fortunes failed, he went back to the farm, fighting for his beliefs when he could and preparing the land for his children as his father and grandfather had done before him.

When he died, in the Royal Victoria Hospital in Barrie, he was just a few miles from the old Drury homestead in Crown Hill, where he was born Jan. 22, 1878.

Politician, prohibitionist, free-trader, writer and farmer, E. C. Drury was a man of another era. He presided over a provincial government of amateurs —farmers turned politicians— who enacted some of Canada's earliest welfare legislation and began a provincial highway system.

During his full life Mr. Drury operated his farm, led various farmers' organizations and wrote three books. Two lifelong causes were free trade and prohibition.

Elected the first president of the United Farmers of Ontario in 1914, he actively campaigned in the 1919 Ontario election for candidates grouped under the banner of the UFO.

The UFO capitalized on animosity towards the federal Union government, a wartime Conservative-Liberal coalition —and elected 43 farmer candidates.

At dissolution Sir William Hearst's Conservatives had held 76 seats to 29 for the Liberals and three for the UFO.

Among those defeated was Sir William himself and his party's strength was reduced to 25.

Without a leader, the UFO was asked to form a government.

"I felt that we were not ready," wrote Mr. Drury years later.

The new legislature members convened in Toronto and offered the leadership to two men. The offers were turned down.

"As a last resort they turned to me," wrote Mr. Drury, with typical modesty.

Supported by 12 Labor representatives, he managed to form a government with a total of 55.

His government was distinguished by its disunity and its amateurism.

"Defeat was imminent on every division," he recalled later. But "we did things— more, possibly, than we would have done if we had been able to take our time.'

Innovations were brought in, such as the then-radical measures of allowances for widows with children, a minimum wage law for women and a standard adoption procedures act.

He set up a department of welfare, was instrumental in launching the municipal-provincial reforestation program and started a department of highways which began establishing a network of provincial roads.

Premier Drury's government set up two agricultural schools and appointed a royal commission which recommended the development of the University of Western Ontario.

Separatist Party Faces Split

QUEBEC (CP) — The central council of Quebec's biggest separatist political party has called a special meeting in Montreal next month to try to resolve its internal crisis.

The council of le Rassemblement pour l'independance nationale decided Saturday to hold a special conference March 30-31 after being called together as a result of a dispute between Pierre Bourgault, its chairman, and Andree Ferretti, its vice-chairman.

Mr. Bourgault, a 34-year-old Montreal bachelor and party leader since 1964, is trying to have Mrs. Ferretti, an attractive 33-year-old Montreal mother of two, ousted from the RIN—but appears to be fighting a losing battle.

Mrs. Ferretti succeeded Saturday in rallying the majority of the 22-member council behind her in an apparent victory over Mr. Bourgault, who seems eager to join Rene Levesque's Quebec sovereignty movement.

But Mr. Bourgault said he intends to press his struggle for control of the group before the membership at large, adding he will lead a list of candidates against the forces of Mrs. Ferretti in an election to be held at the Montreal meeting.

Mrs. Ferretti described Mr. Bourgault as being "anti-democratic and on the verge of becoming a demagogue" who is trying to impose one-man rule on the RIN.

The separatist party was founded in 1961. It entered the political field in Quebec's last provincial general election in June, 1966, but failed to win any seats in the legislature.

Mrs. Ferretti told a press conference, as Mr. Bourgault headed back for Montreal, that the chairman suffered "big personal defeats" within the central council.

She said he failed to place the question of Mrs. Ferretti's expulsion on the agenda of the forthcoming meeting by a 14-to-8 vote.

The group backing Mrs. Ferretti considers itself socialist while describing the Bourgault forces as being inspired by electoralism rather than political ideology.

Mr. Levesque, welfare minister in the former Liberal government in Quebec, is seeking "sovereign state" status for Quebec in an economic association with the rest of Canada.

End of Church Schools In Newfoundland Urged

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Education, expected to gobble up 28 per cent of Newfoundland government expenditure in the current fiscal year, appears certain to dominate discussion in the 1968 legislature session opening Wednesday.

Government plans for dealing with the highly-controversial royal commission report on education and youth have been a closely-guarded secret so far. They are expected to be disclosed in the throne speech to be read by Lt.-Gov. Fabian O'Dea at the opening of the second session of the 34th general assembly.

Premier Joseph Smallwood was asked Sunday in an interview if the issue contained the meat for a provincial election.

"Yes," he replied.

Muted controversy has been heard for about a year since Dr. P. J. Warren, Memorial University educationist, tabled the first of two volumes of his report. He recommended what is widely interpreted as abolition of Newfoundland's denominational educational system.

The report's crucial section urges the department of education be reorganized along functional rather than denominational lines.

Other recommendations would remove from the department the policy-making council of education and end the veto powers exercised by each of the five church representatives who sit on the council with the education minister and his deputy.

The church's role in education would be reduced to that of an advisory one. Existing practice —apparently a mixture of legalities and tradition—require unanimous consent of the Roman Catholic, Anglican, United Church, Salvation Army and Pentecostal council members, although the statutes say the minister can overrule its decisions.

The commission pictures the current system as awkward, inefficient and "divisive," claiming it makes for "weak" decisions and fragmented policy.

Three of the five denominations on the council have indicated agreement with the ideas recommended, but the Roman Catholics and the Pentecostal assemblies have not done so.

The opposition Conservatives, whose four members face 33 Liberals under Premier Smallwood in the 42-seat house, last week issued a party policy statement backing the royal commission on abolition of the veto power for the churches, but calling for retention of a "Christian orientation" in Newfoundland education.

Premier Smallwood has emphasized that "the churches very definitely have constitutional rights under the terms of union" but the government would not indicate its feelings while talks with the churches were in progress.

It is generally expected the contentious proposal will receive considerable support, especially from the younger members of the house. The premier said Sunday there would be a united government stand and no free vote.

Other recommendations of the Warren report's first volume, as well as the second volume turned in late last year, have received relatively little attention amid the debate on this major recommendation.

Education in Newfoundland has grown in the 19 years since Confederation from a $4,000.000 government investment annually—$10 per capita—to the most costly item in the 1967-68 budget with an expected outlay of $81,500,000, or about $154 for each Newfoundland resident.

False Analogy Exposed

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A few weeks ago, in a column about "false analogy," I mentioned the fantastic mental contortions that people go through to "prove a point."

That same day, I saw a marvelous example in a newspaper.

A reader had written to the TV columnist: "I object to censorship by anyone for any reason." And the columnist replied: "Then why obey stop signs and red lights? They are a form of censorship. . .since they interfere with one's freedom of movement which, I understand, is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution."

This is the kind of shabby "reasoning" that most people use to nail down an argument, but a moment's reflection would show us that there is absolutely no analogy between censorship of films or books and traffic regulations. In fact, they are directly opposed to one another.

Stop signs and red lights do not "interfere" with anyone's freedom; they make it possible to move freely and safely in any direction one wants to go. Without them, there would be chaos and carnage all over the streets. We have "freedom of movement" only when the same regulations are operable for everyone.

Censorship of books or plays, however, is not a regulation for freedom of (intellectual) movement, but a restriction upon some to satisfy the moral standards of others. It is, in a sense, class legislation, permitting one group to decide what others shall read or hear or see.

A true nalogy to traffic rules would be this: if all the people who owned Fords and Chevvies decided that the minority who own Imperials or Lincolns could not make a right turn where the Fords or Chevvies could; or if the Lincoln owners had to wait through two red lights while Ford and Chevvie owners only had to wait through one.

This would be discriminatory legislation, and would violate the constitutional guarantee of freedom. But a fair system of stop signs and red lights violates no "freedom," for it simply facilitates the right of everyone to drive where he pleases, in orderly fashion. In fact, without order there can be no freedom; the two are not contrary, but interwoven.

Censorship, however, does not impose order; it imposes the standards of one group upon another, not for the common good, but for the moral group. Prohibition, of course, is the classic and devastating example of censorship run amok. For, alas, the nature of censorship is to run amok, where it can.

Water:--Is Sea Best Source for Future Needs?

TORONTO (CP) — Varied views about Canada's water resources were expressed Sunday by speakers at the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

Peter White, manager of the Brome County Rural Development Association and former executive assistant to Maurice Sauve, federal forestry minister, said plans to divert or store water for export would soon be obsolete.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the world's water is in the ocean and that is where we should be looking for any additional water we need," he said.

James Walker, Liberal member of Parliament for York Centre, said the federal government's water policy is, first, to get an accurate measure of Canada's supply.

"We are not ready to sell water until we know just how much we need in the future."

A. C. R. Albery, a consulting engineer who studied the Peace and Columbia River projects for the British Columbia energy projects, said plans to recycle water from James Bay to the Great Lakes or for a 500-mile long reservoir in the Rocky Mountains, would cost United States too much.

However, he added it may be economical to divert water by the 21st century, when the United States would need it for irrigation..

Ducks:--750,000 Killed by Poisoning from Pellets

TORONTO (CP) — D. A. Munro, chief of Canadian Wildlife Service, said Sunday lead poisoning from shotgun pellets kills nearly 750,000 ducks in North America annually.

He told delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters that a substitute for lead shot should be found.

He said ducks mistake the pellets for seeds and swallow them.

"The grinding action of a duck's gizzard is powrful enough to reduce lead shot to fine particles that are absorbed into the blood stream and cause lead poisoning.

"Paralysis of its digestive tract by lead poisoning of the bird causes starvation and death."

Five-day Week Is Not Used For 'Culture'

MOSCOW (AP) — When the Soviet Union switched to the five-day work week last year, newspapers said it would give workers an extra day for culture. But polls claimed Sunday the extra day means "drinking and hooliganism" and disappointment for working wives.

The polls were conducted by the Soviet Institute of the International Working Movement and the Scientific Research Institute of Labor.

Russians went from working five seven-hour shifts and one six-hour shift to working five shifts of eight hours and 12 minutes each.

There was to be more time for "culture," a term used here to cover going to the movies, watching television, and other forms of recreation, although the main aim was to provide working wives more time for themselves and their families.

The polls revealed that only about half the married women have found any noticeable improvement.

New Mirror Eliminates Blind Spots

By RAY STAPLEY

Many much-needed safety devices have been built into our modern chariots, but it's strange that little has been done to eliminate the hazardous blind spots caused by the skimpy inside rear view mirror found in most cars.

Oddly enough, many motorists have uncomplainingly written them off as a dead loss and rely on the outside mirror to tell them what goes on behind, and even this method picks up only part of the picture These 'mousetrap" sized inside mirrors would lead one to believe that glass is both expensive and rationed.

Harold Bond of the Fullview Mirror Company recently asked me to examine and test a newly-styled inside mirror which they are assembling in Scarborough. At first glance I was shocked by its size and design — a cluster of five glare-proof mirrors mounted on a plastic base 2½ inches high, with an overall length of — would you believe 34 inches? Too cumbersome, too awkward, I thought. After the initial shock, however, Mr. Bond removed the existing mirror and bracket and within 15 minutes the new unit was snugly fitted to my car, the matching color of which blended well with the interior trim. He then stood in various positions at the rear of the car and crouched down along side the rear fenders to demonstrate the blind spots.

He was not visible as I turned my head and looked to the rear, but a glance in the new mirror showed him clearly in all positions. Still not completely convinced, I headed for the highway. On the Macdonald-Cartier 401 it picked up everything three feet to the rear of the driver's seat on both sides of the car including all lanes of traffic, shoulders, guard rails and even part of the fields.

It took a while to adjust to this panoramic almost 180 degree rear picture, but I soon gained confidence, and for the first time ever stopped turning my head to check for possible hidden motorbikes or low slung sports cars that might be lurking up from behind. Backing out of my driveway I can now see all the action on about 200 feet of the sidewalk across the road, plus four neighbors' driveways. Nevertheless, the driver's side mirror, especially with tall people, still serves a useful purpose in picking up a small blind spot that may result from the image of the driver's head on the left side of this new mirror.

Police, car manufacturers, professional race track drivers and others are showing keen interest in this accessory which clearly records what even the human eye sometime cannot see. They are available at service stations and accessory stores and retail for $19.95.

I imagine this type of safety device will soon be built in on the assembly line, but in the meantime there's one thing certain — from now on it is going to be standard equipment on my car.

Twenty Million Needed For Libraries

HAMILTON (CP) — Frank Rose, a trustee of the nearby Burlington public library, says it would cost Ontario's municipal taxpayers $20,000,000 to bring public libraries in the province up to standards set in 1956.

A survey made by Mr. Rose shows that Ontario's public library facilities on a per-capita basis are the second worst in Canada, next to Quebec.

Mr. Rose's survey was presented Sunday to a conference of the South Central Regional Library System, one of 14 branches of the Ontario Library Association. The system serves Brant, Halton and Wentworth counties.

The survey also showed it would take $65,000,000 to provide for Ontario's library needs for the next 10 years if the 1956 standards were followed. The standards were set by the Canadian Library Association in cooperation with the American Library Association.

'Bloody Nonsense' Allard's Retort To Spy Ship Tale

OTTAWA (CP) — Gen. Jean Victor Allard Sunday night denied telling a United States congressman last week that two Soviet spy ships had been apprehended in Canadian territorial waters off St. Anthony, Nfld.

"What absolute bloody nonsense," Gen. Allard, chief of Canada's defence staff, said in an interview when told of a report quoting Representative Lester Wolff of New York.

Gen. Allard said that what appeared to be two Russian trawlers had been sighted by patrolling Canadian aircraft 90 miles off the Newfoundland shore Feb. 9 or Feb. 11.

A defence department spokesman said Saturday two Soviet intelligence ships were sighted Feb. 11 by Argus aircraft from the Greenwood, N.S., base in international waters 90 miles off St. Anthony.

"I don't think we said spy ships," Gen. Allard, telephoned at his home Sunday night, said. "These ships were on the high seas. We spot them quite often.

"They looked like trawlers to us."

Mr. Wolff was quoted in the Long Island Press Saturday as saying he spoke to Gen. Allard last Wednesday in Ottawa and the defence chief seemed "anxious" to report the incident to him.

Mr. Wolff was quoted as saying Gen. Allard reported that the ships were apprehended within Canadian territorial waters "as defined by North Korean standards."

"What a miserable story," Gen. Allard said Sunday. "He's trying to tie it to the Pueblo.

"There was no connection whatever with anything that could be called an international incident."

Quotas Would Push Prices Up

WASHINGTON (CP) — Higher domestic prices in Canada and the U.S. would be one result of approval for even a small portion of the import quotas placed before Congress late last year, a Canada-U.S. study says.

Other "predictable consequences" are listed as "possible run-away retaliation," retaliation by use of equivalent trade-restricting devices, a loss in U.S. prestige and influence and awkward, inefficient U.S. administration of the quota device.

The study is by the Canada-U.S. Committee, sponsored by the Private Planning Association of Canada and the National Planning Association of the U.S.

The committee comprises 78 representatives from North American business, labor, agriculture and the professions.

The committee proposes a three-part answer to the challenge of import-quota legislation—several hundred bills—which would restrict U.S. imports from lead and zinc to potash, steel and fish. So far none has passed.

Step 1 would determine if foreign competition is indeed threatening U.S. industries. Step 2 would revise the compensation procedure of the 1962 Trade Expansion Act for industries proving hardship from foreign competition.

Little if any compensation has been harvested under the existing requirements; more flexibility, as in the compensatory provisos of the Canada-U.S. auto production agreement, would be sought.

The U.S. government is said to be willing to move in that direction.

Finally, the committee suggests development of a "code of competition" to deal with unfair trade practices on an international basis.

Britain Has Begun Nuclear Phase-out

LONDON (AP) — The Labor government has begun quietly phasing out Britain's role as one of the world's five nuclear powers.

The process seems to have started virtually unnoticed by the press, Parliament and people.

Recent decisions recasting major sectors of Britain's defence program carry some unmistakable implications. They point to ultimate abandonment of both nuclear bombers and battlefield H-weapons.

Now British ministers are bracing to face the most explosive issue of all—a decision on building four nuclear-powered submarines, each armed with 16 American-supplied Polaris missiles carrying British nuclear warheads.

The cost of building, developing, maintaining and deploying the four submarines will require about $12,900,000,000 in the 10 years ending 1977. This Britain, in its current economic plight, simply cannot afford, say some of Prime Minister Wilson's advisers.

The addition of Britain's 64 Polaris missiles to the deterrent power of the Americans will be no more than marginal, they add.

But Defence Secretary Denis Healey, backed by key service chiefs, has publicly stated his belief that Britain's deterrent capacity is extremely powerful and should be preserved.

Fourth Child Dies of Wounds

TORONTO (CP) — Ten-year-old Nancy Kidd, critically injured in a shooting incident which claimed the lives of her three brothers Friday, died in hospital Sunday.

The children's mother, Jeanne Kidd, 47, was charged Friday with non-capital murder in connection with the deaths.

The boys, David, 13, Douglas, 12, and Joseph, 11, died when they were shot after coming home from school for lunch. Nancy was taken to hospital for an operation during which a shattered bullet was removed from her stomach. She died 46 hours after the shooting.

Canadians Should All Sing Same Anthem--Plea

QUEBEC (CP) — Writer Jo Ouellet Sunday appealed to "Canadians who wish to sing their love for their country in a common voice" to rally in support of her bilingual version of O Canada.

She said in an interview the parliamentary committee report on O Canada tabled in the Commons Friday recommends not one national anthem, but "two anthems for two Canadas."

The committee recommended one slightly changed verse of the English version of O Canada plus an unchanged verse of the French version.

She said:

"The two verions are completely unrelated in sentiment. The lyrics don't say the same thing. The recommendation doesn't solve the problem of Canadians who wish to sing their love for their country in a common voice."

Mrs. Ouellet, a bilingual Canadian of Irish origin inspired by "good old-fashioned honest-to-goodness patriotism," tackled the language barrier by alternating English and French phrases in a single verse.

Her version, which she recommends as "one anthem for one Canada," goes.

O Canada: Our home—notre pays;
La feuille d'erable; one flag from sea to sea;
Sol de liberte, sol d'egalite
Where freedom's banner flies;
Chantons tous la gloire d'une riche histoire
Our home 'neath northern skies.
O Canada: O ma patrie:
Hold high the maple leaf o'er land and sea.
O Canada: My country—mon pays.

Considerable support has built up for her bilingual version, sung before the committee by the choir of Ottawa's Napean high school Nov. 30.

Among MPs Mrs. Ouellet named as supporters are Murdo Martin, NDP member for Timmins, John Matheson, Liberal from Leeds and E. Davie Fulton, Conservative from Kamloops.

Pearson Flies Home To Handle Crisis

Liberal Voice Late and Faint

OTTAWA (CP) — Two little words uttered too late may have brought down Prime Minister Pearson's government — in his absence.

The words: "Next sitting."

The Commons on Monday evening had just completed clause-by-clause study of bill C193 to slap a five-per-cent surcharge on personal income tax.

Deputy Speaker Herman Batten then asked when the bill should be read a third and final time. This is the last Common stage before a bill becomes law.

"Now," chorused some Conservatives.

"Next sitting," said some Liberals—after a pause.

These Liberals were obviously aware of the danger. A one-day postponement of the vote on third reading would have given them more time to get their MPs to Ottawa for the vote.

But their cry of "next sitting" was belated and faint.

Mr. Batten went ahead and called for third reading.

Michael Starr, Conservative floor leader, also saw in a flash the sword of Damocles dangling over the Liberal benches.

He was on his feet demanding a rcorded vote immediately.

Grills Thinks Election Likely

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

OTTAWA — As Parliament Hill awaits the Liberal government's decision to dilemma, one Quinte - district MP believes a general election seems likely.

"It sounds as though an election is quite possible — quite probable — at the moment," surmised Lee Grills, Conservative MP Hastings South.

"But," he added, "nobody knows what's going to take place yet."

His personal opinion came at noon — little more than two hours away from a Cabinet conference on the crisis caused by last night's tax - bill overthrow in the Commons.

Parliament Hill today was in ferment, said Mr. Grills.

Top figures in all political parties were holding meetings and the Conservative caucus was scheduled to meet at 1.30 p.m.

Mr. Grills admitted the 82-84 vote which sent the government down to defeat was "a bit of a surprise" although we opposed the bill."

The MP said Conservative leader Robert Stanfield today doesn't see "any alternative" to an election.

"I think it'll have to come to that anyway," reiterated Mr. Grills. "It seems to me the government has lost touch with the people to a certain extent."

The Conservatives opposed the tax bill because it was inflationary, he said. Inflation and the general state of economy would be prime election issues, Mr. Grills believed.

He said he expected to contest the next nomination convention in his riding.

All District MPs Present for Vote

OTTAWA — All MPs in the Quinte - Kingston area participated in last night's income tax bill vote that brought crisis to the Commons.

The threat to the Liberal government was precipitated as only 166 MPs answered the vote call to defeat the bill 84-82.

Taking part in the Opposition vote were Lee Grills, Hastings South; George Hees, Northumberland; Douglas Alkenbrack, Prince Edward - Lennox and Rod Webb, Hastings-Frontenac. All are Conservatives.

Voting with the government were Liberal caucus chairman Russell Honey, Durahm, and Treasury Board president Edgar Benson, Kingston.

TaxIncrease Is Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The fate of the minority Liberal government hung in doubt today after a stunning and humiliating Commons defeat on its tax bill Monday night.

The two-vote upset led to immediate Conservative demands for resignation of the government.

Prime Minister Pearson, only a few weeks away from retirement, cut short a Jamaica holiday and was flying home to meet his cabinet and decide what the government will do.

Decision Today

He was expected to arrive about 1 p.m. EST, meet the cabinet and announce its decision at the 2.30 p.m. opening of the Commons sitting.

The combined opposition rallied 84 votes to crush Finance Minister Sharp's tax bill, implementing a five-per-cent temporary increase in income taxes and speeding up collection of corporation taxes.

The decision threw the Commons into turmoil and led to a quick adjournment followed by an emergency cabinet session in the office of Trade Minister Winters, acting prime minister.

Uranium Staking Rush Irks Almost Everybody

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Monday's staking of 100,000 acres 20 miles north of here was an exercise in futility for hundreds of independent prospectors.

For dozens of mine development companies it was a lesson in the frustration of spending thousands of dollars to achieve what they were almost certain of getting anyway.

The major loser was the Ontario department of mines, which was responsible for opening to prospectors the area a few miles north of Elliot Lake's uranium-bearing geological formations. The department made friends neither with the old time prospector trying to work a claim on his own, nor with the company which used gangs of men and every modern means of transportation to get what it wanted.

Most of the old timers got nothing of what they came here hoping to claim. The companies got what they wanted, but at a price they seemed reluctant to pay.

At noon Monday an area 25 miles wide and 12 miles dep, restricted to Crown ownership since 1961, was opened to claims-staking.

Publicity given to the opening, plus renewed interest in a search for new uranium mines, brought more than 700 prospectors to this Northern Ontario community.

They were seeking 2,500 claims for which more than 6,000 mining licences had been issued.

Police said Miss Bell and Miss McLeod were passengers in the car driven by Mr. Dumais.

Townson Resignation Spotlights Problems in School Act Changes

The sudden resignation of a member of the Belleville public school board last night may have repercussions throughout the province.

William Townson resigned his seat to comply with recent amendments to the schools administration act. The changes prohibit trustees from doing business with the board.

Prior to Jan. 1, 1968, when the amended act became law, trustees were required to disqualify themselves from voting on issues in which they had a pecuniary interest.

The changes specifically prohibit an officer of a company from sitting on the board if his firm either directly or indirectly supplies goods or services to the board.

Mr. Townson's problem is one which is shared by many sitting members of school boards throughout the province. His firm, Foley Supply and Machine Co., does various small jobs for the schools. "I don't want to jeopardize my own position or the position of the board so I'm resigning," he said last night.

As general manager of Foley's, Mr. Townson would be operating contrary to the new act if his company provided a service to the schools. He is also a director of the firm.

Mr. Townson, a member of the board for nine years, said he feels the changes may have a lot of merit in a metro area but should be broken down for the smaller communities

The act does not apply to a person with a business interest unless he is a director, manager, secretary, treasurer, secretary-treasurer or agent or has a controlling interest in the firm.

The end result of a member sitting on the board and doing business at the same time would be his or her expulsion from the group.

The acts permits the county court judge to declare the seat vacant if, on the complaint of two ratepayers, he finds justification for the charge.

Disqualification

More Members May Quit

A rash of resignations from school boards may be forthcoming if reaction to changes in the school act is as strong in other parts of the province as it is in Belleville.

Public school trustee Gerry Brennan said last night as many as six of the eight board members could be disqualified. High school chairman said today five or six of the 19 secondary trustees could be involved.

The cause of the concern is a change in the schools administration act on Jan. 1 of this year prohibiting trustees from sitting on the board if their firm does business with the schools.

Previously the trustee could indicate his pecuniary interest in the matter and refrain from discussion and voting on the issue.

Mr. Clarke said he feels the amendments will cause disruptions of all kinds throughout the province. "If the act is interpreted fully it could have far reaching effects on municipal government."

"The trustees concerned with the problem will hold a meeting this afternoon to decide on what action we should take," he said.

The public school board agreed last night to send a protest to the department of education on the amendments.

While the problem is the same with all school boards it differs for municipal bodies. The municipal act condones the same action if the councillor refrains from voting on the bill.

A department of education official said this morning he wouldn't expect any changes unless there is a demand for new legislation.

"The act was changed to clarify the status of board members. It was previously rather ambiguous," he said.

Mr. Brennan said the amendment could mean the exclusion of almost any businessman from the board.

Trustee Mrs. Miriam Graham said she's afraid publicity will cause a rash of resignations."

"We're losing a valuable asset due to a stupid regulation," Mr. Brennan said.

Plan Preparations for Urban Renewal Scheme Authorized

City council will make application to the Department of Municipal Affairs for approval of plan preparations for an urban renewal scheme for downtown Belleville and Foster Ward.

The cost of plans for the urban renewal scheme will be $87,100 of which the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation would pay $43,550 and the Ontario Government $21,775.

The city's share of $21,775 or 25 per cent of the cost of plans, will be further reduced to approximately $12,000 through services from the local planning department.

Proctor, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon, consulting engineers and planners will do the urban renewal scheme plans and will be asked to use a local realty firm for certain phases of the work if this is deemed feasible.

Council gave unanimous approval to the preparation of urban renewal plans with Alderman Arthur Keegan stating the work should have been started years ago.

Acting Mayor Boyle said the city's net cost for scheme plans had been reduced from an original $18,000 to $12,000 through the use of data from the local planning department.

He said that an "excellent report" from Planning Director P. J. Beavis, had been mainly instrumental for the "considerable saving" to the city.

There was considerable discussion as to whether Proctor and Redfern should be asked to employ a local realty firm for some of the research work required for the urban renewal planning. The council recommendation called for a Toronto firm to do some phases of the work and this was amended to permit a local firm to be retained if possible.

Earlier in the meeting Stan Albert, president of the Belleville downtown businessmen's association, urged council to approve the necessary expenditure for the urban renewal plans.

He said that over the past four year period the net commercial assessment in the city's downtown area had decreased.

Only through urban renewal would the city's downtown assessment picture be improved, he said.

"Urban renewal, along with industry and recreational facilities, should be high on the city's priority list," Mr. Albert said.

Council to Pay $5,000 To Community Services

The Belleville United Community Services is asking for a grant of $15,000 from city council this year.

Last year the organization asked for a grant of $10,000 which was reduced to $5,000. Council was told the community services operated in the red.

Yesterday council approved a resolution asking for $5,000 to be provided in the year's budget on behalf of last year's operations of the community services and that consideration be given for a further grant of $10,000 for 1968.

Yesterday's resolution also called for improvement in communications and liaison between council and the United Community Services.

Alderman Donald Williams took exception to the request for improvement in communications, claiming that council was always made aware of information.

Alderman E. A. Orr assured that no criticism of the community services organization was intended.

Tax on Cablevue Firm To Be Discussed March 4

Belleville city council at its March 4 meeting will be asked to rescind its petition to the Ontario Legislature for a private bill to allow the municipality to tax Cablevue (Belleville) Ltd. on its local operation.

The request for the private bill is scheduled to be introduced to the Legislature some time early in March. Normally private bills are introduced by the member representing the riding, in this case Dr. R. T. Potter.

At the same time, however, Dr. Potter says he is not in favor of the city's request for the private bill and will speak against it.

Dr. Potter said he had been asked by Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle to present the request for the private bill.

"But I am not in favor of it . . . I think it is a dangerous piece of legislation and I will speak against it," Dr. Potter told The Intelligencer.

"I am hoping that the city will reconsider its request." Dr. Potter said.

Alderman Gerald Joyce at city council yesterday attempted to have the city's petition for the private bill withdrawn.

But the motion to withdraw the application was not on the day's agenda and the necessary two thirds majority for waiving of the procedural rules was not obtained. The vote was six for waiving the rules and three against.

Failing to get his motion on the day's agenda, Ald. Joyce brought it in as a notice of motion for discussion at the next council meeting.

Earlier at yesterday's meeting, Frank Murray, Cablevue executive, told council that, any tax imposed on the company by council would, in effect, be a double tax, as the firm was already paying a special tax as well as the usual city business tax.

He said the company has a special tax agreement with Bell Telephone providing for a percentage of that company's gross revenue to be paid to the municipality in lieu of taxes for right-of-ways, aerial and underground space.

Mr. Murray said the Cablevue cable strung along Belleville streets was owned by Bell even though his company had paid the entire capital cost. The telephone company then leases this cable to Cablevue at a substantial monthly charge, this leasing fee being included in the telephone company's revenue on which municipal tax is paid.

The Cablevue spokesman said it seemed incongruous that council would seek to restrain development of a new industry by the imposition of a special tax.

"We submit there is no reason for imposing such a tax any more than there would be a reason for imposing a special tax on any other industry," Mr. Murray said.

He said the tax proposal was felt unfair and was without precedence in the province.

Mr. Murray said any tax imposed would have to be passed on to Cablevue customers.

Acting Mayor Boyle said council's decision to ask for the private bill to allow taxing of Cablevue had been motivated primarily because of the need for additional tax revenue.

"There was no ulterior motive—the city just has to find additional revenue to meet overwhelming expenditures," he said.

He said he was aware that the Quinte riding member, Dr. Potter, was not in favor of the private bill.

Cablevue would have the opportunity of speaking against the bill, he assured.

Recreation programs were the topic under discussion at a meeting in Sophiasburg last night. Here Ernest Way, D. Maddock and Sophiasburg Reeve George Foster look over plans provided by the department of education.

Recreation Activities Outlined

PICTON (Staff) — Speaking at a special meeting at Sophiasburgh Central School last night D. W. Maddocks, of the community programs branch of the Ontario department of education outlined the programs which are supported by the department, in municipal recreational activities.

"The Department," he said "will advise and assist communities in planning their programs for recreation" and he pointed out the many supplies and publications that are available to communities. These consisted of books, films, and loan services.

Mr. Maddocks outlined the plan set up at Minister's Conference at Toronto's Royal York Hotel a year ago which recommended; 1. Closer working relationships between school boards and recreation committees, 2. An enlarged conception of recreation, 3. Co-operation among all recreation agencies - (closer co - operation between YMCA's night schools, and school boards etc). These should all work together he said, to obtain the same goal, 4. Research in recreation - we have increased leisure time due to automation, nothing however has been documented or worked on and we need research badly, 5. Combining of legislation in Ontario.

Mr. Maddocks also outlined the general purpose of the Community Programs Division and spoke at some length on grants. He explained that grants under the program were broken down to two parts. The grants available to help support a recreation leader and secondly the costs of setting up playground programs or recreational buildings or areas.

The visit of Mr. Maddocks was a result of area councils being presented with an opportunity to buy abandoned churches and schools for use as museums and halls, they investigated the plan and arranged the meeting, to obtain further information.

Education Resolution Causes Heated Debate in Council

TRENTON — A southern Ontario resolution condemning the provincial government's handling of educational reorganization last night temporarily revived what many thought was a settled issue locally.

At a special meeting with department of education officials last week, Trenton school trustees appeared to accept the verdict that county-size area school boards were inevitable, and that Trenton would have representation on the Hastings County body.

Then a three-page indictment against the "arbitrary impositions of civil servants", signed by municipal councils of Oxford, Perth, Waterloo, and Perth Counties touched off an explosive debate by Trenton councillors.

The resolution seeking support from other municipal councils and school boards across Ontario, hints at "hidden motives' 'behind the proposed integration of more than 1,000 school boards into 100 area bodies.

Expressing "deep displeasure" over the "rapidity of implementation" of the government scheme, the resolution criticizes the "placing of more power into the hands of paid civil servants" as a tendency towards "ever-increasing bureaucratic regional government."

"We would therefore strongly urge and exhort you to make vehement and determined representation to your elected Member of the Legislature, suggesting to him that this proposed legislation be amended or tabled until it receives further consideration by school boards, municipal council, teachers and other interested people.

"It is abundantly clear that our municipal councils will be the next body to vanish. . ." the resolution concludes.

"I don't quarrel with the government's objectives, but the whole reorganization of education has been mishandled — and I disagree with the legislature in arbitrarily changing this aspect of local government.

"I don't buy the government's attitude, at all.

"We've been faced with it in welfare ,health, and planning. I'm not opposed to area government . . . but it's got to be on an area where people exist — not county lines drawn up in 1840 by Lord Baldwin."

Councillor Tripp, who openly opposes Trenton connection with Hastings County area schemes, said the province is "burying its head in the sand" on too many important issues.

Ready acceptance of area schemes was "the quickest way for municipal governments to phase themselves out of existence."

Councillor E. M. "Ted" Parker, who resigned as chairman of the local Board of Education after five years' service to be a candidate in the Dec. 4 municipal elections, defended the department of education's proposals.

"It's a little incongruous when we object to government taking over too much, and then turn around and expect them to spend more money.

"We're delighted if they take over the cost of our courts, and ask them to pay up to 75 per cent of our snow removal."

(Mr. Parker was referring to a City of Ottawa resolution endorsed by council last night requesting the province to increase their subsidy for snow and ice removal from streets to 75 per cent from 33 1/3 per cent.)

'The provincial government is now paying up to 75 per cent of our educational costs. How much further do you expect them to go without exerting some direct control over how their dollars are spent?"

"Our noses are out of joint because the department of education wouldn't listen to our position that Trenton might be better off on a Northumberland County board of education.

"There'll be bugs in the plan . . . but they're surmountable. Sitting down with 1,260 individual school boards, as this resolution suggests, is not the answer.

"We can't even agree about it ourselves."

"Well, you're entitled to your opinion," snorted Councillor Tripp.

"That's very good of you," retorted Councillor Parker.

Will Put Electric Units In Day Care Nursery

The Belleville Day Care Nursery is to be made more comfortable for the children attending classes.

Yesterday city council voted to spend $1,430 for the installation of electric cabinet convector units at the day nursery. The installation will be done by Belleville Acme Electric Ltd.

Reginald Tucker, city director of welfare, said the day nursery was at present heated with overhead unit heaters which failed to provide enough warmth at the floor level.

The day nursery is situated in rented quarters formerly used as warehouse space. The present heating was ample for the original use but not for use as a nursery.

Alderman Arthur Keegan noted the city had already spent $8,000 on renovation at the nursery.

"Maybe it would have been cheaper to provide our own building," he said.

Council was assured that if the day nursery was moved the electric heaters could be taken out.

TREAT ALCOHOLICS

An initial $60,000 will be spent this year on a 15-bed ward for the treatment of hard-core alcoholics in Winnipeg.

Trenton Businessmen Provide...

Factory Shells for Industrial Development

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — W. Douglas Whitley today predicted formation of a company composed of "about 15 or 20 young Trenton businessmen" to build factory shells as an inducement to prospective industries.

Mr. Whitley, one of three principals of "Future Factories Ltd.", made the prediction after town council last night approved sale of two acres of Sidney St. land to his firm at the $100-per-acre industrial price.

Future Factories Ltd. are embarking on their second enterprise, Mr. Whitley said, the construction of a factory shell adjacent to north Sidney Street's Canadian Flight plant.

The firm's first undertaking involved financing of a concrete block structure several hundred yards to the north, which later this year will become home for part of Vagden Mills of Belleville's operations.

"This shell is being built 'on spec'," Mr. Whitley said, adding "but we have two prospects, — one quite lively. We think the building will be spoken for before the summer's out."

"But we (Mr. Whitley, brother Warren, and insurance firm partner Neil Robertson) can only do something small in the way of financing — say, lok after a 15,000 square foot shell.

"For anything larger than that, we need a larger group." Mr. Whitley then gave notice of what may become the first industrial development corporation in the Quinte area.

"It would take 15 or 20 persons to back the type of building to suit the firms rumored to be interested in Trenton.

"I think you'll find such a group will be organized in the near future."

Mr. Whitley hinted Future Factories' interests in industrial promotion would probably be absorbed into the new, larger corporation.

Civic officials in both Trenton and Belleville have sounded the need for similar organizations for industrial investment.

As long ago as 1966, Belleville Mayor Jack Ellis told a men's club each businessman must consider himself a miniature industrial commissioner, and urged the construction of factory shells with private capital to provide a home for industry prospects.

A year-end report by former Trenton councillor D. R. Fraser, then chairman of council's Finance Committee, recommended setting up a community industrial development corporation Construction of factory shells would be only one facet of the non-profit public supported body's job.

And Mayor D. James MacDonald told the Trenton and District Real Estate Board in January there was ample opportunity for private venture to gain returns on their money, while at the same time help establish new industry in their community.

Future Factories Ltd. is leasing their first shell to Vagden Mills, but Mr. Whitley anticipates future structures will be bought by industrial concerns.

"The new Equalization of Industrial Opportunity grants should make purchase of shells very appealing to industry prospects," he said.

"We expect that our new building on Sidney St. will be bought outright so the company can take advantage of provincial grants."

The new legislation provides, among other things, for forgiveness on one-third of the first $200,000 capital expenditure by a firm establishing in a designated area.

Mr. Whitley said his firm's second shell would be a high-ceiling, box-like structure.

"We won't fix the floor, won't install service hook-ups inside, and may leave one end open to allow a buyer to expand the building, if he wishes.

"It's best to see what any particular industry's needs are. But the shell will be designed to be made usable within a month."

For town fathers, possibility of privately-induced industrial prospects recalls the efforts of former Mayor Kenneth Couch, who financed a handful of buildings to assist local firms and bring new industry into Trenton.

Fire Chief Wants More Men

TRENTON — In his annual report to town council, Fire Chief Cecil Ellis has again asked for authority to hire more firemen.

"The only protection I am able to offer the citizens of Trenton consists of two men at any given time, regardless of how large or small a fire may be," read the annual report.

At present, the fire department consists of nine professional firefighters (including Chief Ellis) and 18 volunteers.

"But all our volunteers are working and are unable to leave their jobs," the report adds.

"When an alarm is received, both men on duty have to respond. This leaves our station empty until an off-duty man can be located and report to the station.

"There have been many occasions that we have been unable to locate an off-duty man, and the hall must remain empty until the on-duty men return from the alarm."

Chief Ellis' report also shows local firemen responded to 399 alarms during 1967, the highest in at least the last 10 years.

"I recommend that the strength of the department be increased by one or more men . . . each year we have more responsibility — the town is growing steadily and covers a much greater area.

The town has annexed more than 200 acres in the past five years assessment department records show.)

The fire chief said there has also been an increase in the number of alarms Trenton firemen have responded to in Murray and Ameliasburg Townships, which have protection agreements with the town.

During 1967, the local department answered 26 calls in the two outlying areas.

"It should be made department policy that on all calls in the business section, at the hospital, and at schools, the aerial truck respond with the usual equipment. Under our present set-up, we do not have a man available to respond with this equipment."

"I have only one relief man and 75 per cent of his time is taken up relieving for holidays," the fire chief noted.

"This is not allowing for his own sickness or injury. And durng the holiday period if he became ill or was injured, I would not have a man available for relief work."

Fire Chief Ellis' report concluded that the cost of hiring and training additional men could possibly be covered by the money realized from alarms answered outside town limits under the protection agreements.

Alderman Must Stand To Address Council

There is to be no slackening in the maintenance of proper decorum at city council meetings.

In other words, the requirement will continue to be for councillors to stand while addressing council — even if the session has already been underway for several hours.

Yesterday was a long day for city aldermen who convened at 1 p.m. for afternoon caucus sessions before the regular meeting at 4 o'clock.

When the regular session got underway Alderman Enos David as committee of the whole chairman suggested that aldermen be permitted to remain seated while addressing council.

But City Manager J. C. Reynolds said that under procedural rules aldermen were required to stand while addressing council. He said that the committee chairman had no authority to rule otherwise without a recommendation.

Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle felt that any deviation from the rules would detract from the decorum of council.

Car Skids Into Path Of Ore Train

Miss Avis Turner, of Deloro, was en route to school on Rawdon township's 12th concession, when the 60 - car freight train struck the rear of her automobile.

The train, travelling slowly on an uphill grade, was en route to Marmoraton Mining mines north of here.

Provincial police said there was only minor damage.

Marina Plan

Business to Rent Dock

TRENTON — A local business will rent the town dock space as a Trent River entrance marina for $3,000 a year.

The offer was made through the Chamber of Commerce by Eben James, president of Trenton Cold Storage, a vegetable-processing plant at the mouth of the river.

The firm erected a dock wall on the south side of the premises during 1967, and now proposes to build "finger" docks to accommodate boating traffic.

The $3,000 annual rental would cover the cost of constructing the finger docks, Mr. James told council.

There would be no charge during the first year of the marina's operation, if the proposal was approved, he said.

Mr. James said a petroleum firm has expressed interest in providing fuelling services at the marina.

Town council now has provided for an $80,000 expenditure in its capital budget as the town's share to create an elaborate marina complex at the mouth of the Trent on the shoreline of the new Centennial Park.

Council's Industrial and Economic Development Committee under chairman Paul Tripp, will study Mr. James' proposal and undisclosed recommendations of the Chamber of Commerce.

Planning Board: No Objection to Plaza

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board will have no objection to the proposed new shopping plaza for the North Front Street area providing technical requirements for parking and traffic movement are met.

This is the gist of a planning board recommendation to city council regarding the application for a zoning change to allow construction of the plaza.

The application is from local realtor Douglas Grant to rezone 18 acres of the H. C. Cooney property from M2 to M1 industrial.

The board resolution is for the tentative layout plan to be approved as the basis for further discussion regarding site coverage, means of access and car parking standards.

Today P. J. Beavis, planning director, said that if the above requirements can be met a special 18 - acre zoning change will be recommended to allow the plaza construction.

Mr. Beavis said the planning board would meet with the Department of Highways representatives, city police traffic officials and the public utilities commission to discuss the required changes.

He said that traffic control signals might eventually be required for the North Front Street area.

"This is the type of problem we have with plaza development," he said.

Mr. Beavis expected that a board rezoning recommendation to allow the plaza project might be ready for council about the middle of March.

The plaza proposal calls for 166,000 feet of floor space and parking for 1280 cars.

Hillcrest Rezoning Issue

The proposed rezoning of the Hillcrest area from M2 and M3 to an R5 zone to allow addition to residential properties has drawn objection from some property owners and a public hearing is likely before the amending bylaw is approved by the Municipal Board.

Council was told last night that seven objections to the proposed zoning change had been received.

The amending bylaw was given two readings by council some time ago and will now be forwarded to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

After council heard the objections, Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle noted that council had been prevailed upon to change the zoning.

"It just shows that council cannot please all the people all the time," he said.

He said he felt the bylaw dealt as fairly as possible with the area as a whole.

Smuggle Books

SINGAPORE (AP) — Bootlegging of books and badges carrying quotations from Red China's Chairman Mao Tse-tung is a source of trouble in some Far Eastern ports, shipping company sources report. They noted that seamen pick up Mao souvenirs in Chinese ports and find ready markets for them elsewhere, but in some places they are seized as contraband.

Mr. Trudeau

Pierre Trudeau, federal Minister of Justice and somewhat reluctant candidate for the Liberal leadership, is like the central character in the spy story "The Man Who Never Was."

Viewed another way, he is a classic example of the "dark horse" candidate. He is a man in the background, yet up-and-coming. A bachelor who has a penchant for sporty clothes and fast cars. A man of some eccentricity who nevertheless has filled the justice portfolio with distinction. A man who weighs his words so carefully as to be almost vague.

Mr. Trudeau is a candidate for all that. And a strong one. No one quite knows how he got there. It was certainly not Mr. Trudeau's conscious doing. He went to a meeting of Ontario Liberals in Toronto and there he was lionized and hailed as a sort of messiah.

However, Mr. Trudeau will have to come up with something more substantial in the way of qualifications for leadership than a certain degree of glamor and legend. The minister himself has credited the Press with promoting his candidacy, that it started out "as a huge joke on the Liberal party . . . and has now blown up in your faces and mine."

"People," he said, "began to take the idea seriously."

In any event, speaking of Mr. Trudeau, what ever became of that issue of Mr. Justice Landreville's pension? The justice minister left the matter hanging some months ago, but undertook to give a decision later. We do not recall any such final decision being made.

As a dark horse, and one with this aura of vagueness, Mr. Trudeau resembles one Robert Stanfield. And he became leader of the Conservative party. But there the similarity ends. The leadership of the Liberal party is still an open race.

Chinese Puzzle

From a reading of the letter on this page today we are reminded that the human species, rather than the currently much-maligned animal kingdom, are responsible for most of the disasters in this world.

But the bit about the Chinese getting rid of all cats and dogs in their country, for reasons of hygiene and health (as stated on a recent radio program), the way we heard it was rather different.

It was some years ago during party chairman Mao tse-Tung's heyday — "a million flowers shall bloom," and all that — and there was a great outpouring of national fervor and unity. It was in the days before the rise of the Red Guard movement and the national climate was filled with patriotism.

And it was during this period that the Chinese embarked on a massive campaign to promote health, hygiene and cleanliness. The idea mainly was to rid the country of the dread disease of cholera. To effect this the entire adult population, all 700 million of them save small infants, were exhorted to kill every fly that intruded its nasty presence.

This was done. The country was rid of flies and very largely of cholera and other diseases. As for the dogs and cats, they may well have been included in the decimation of the insect population, but if that is so — it is news to us.

Group Counselling

Group therapy is a recognized form of treatment for people with psychological problems. It can also be good for people at large. "Talking it out" and sharing difficulties and perplexities is good medicine.

The same principle was at work in Port Hope recently when a new concept in school counselling was adopted. Some 400 Grade 12 and 13 students attended what was called "university night."

Taking part were 20 counsellors who took turns answering questions from students and parents. It was something like the "careers night" held in Belleville schools when professional men advise the students on job prospects.

Some counsellors — and students too — prefer the principle of individual rather than mass counselling. Doubtless there is room for both — as well as tremendous scope for channelling young people into occupations that give the fullest expression to their personalities and capabilities.

As Mrs. Norma Grant, guidance director at Quinte Secondary, pointed out in a recent address, there are 2,870,000 people in Canada between the ages of 15 to 19. That is as much as the population of some countries — and what better illustration is there of young people's potential than that?

Ottawa Offbeat

Quebec's Gifted Premier Boosts Province on Three Fronts

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — What a truly gifted political sleight-of-hand artist, that smashingly-handsome, exquisitely - groomed Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec!'

Such triple-tongued talent!

Able to talk — and so convincingly — to Ottawa, New York and Paris, all at the same time.

Watch him . . . and listen to him . . . in Ottawa.

Charming and disarming.

Altogether so sweetly reasonable.

Even accommodating.

Does it all with such an appealing touch of melancholy, with a sad little smile that seems to soften all but the hardest of hearts in understanding and sympathy.

Separate?

The very thought brings him to the brink of tears.

And so everybody — or almost everybody — some against their own better judgment — bends over backwards, straining to see, and even perhaps do things a little more his way.

That Quebec may be "special" remains open to question — but there is no doubt its premier is super-special.

He was down there just three months ago, giving the bankers the business.

He went to Wall Street to reassure international financier David Rockefeller, the mighty Chase Manhattan Bank — and through that consortium of money-men convince Washington which controls foreign investment — that their funds were secure in Quebec.

They had heard talk about separatism, and Quebec was finding itself having to pay higher interest than Canada's other provinces for funds borrowed in New York.

So how did he handle this financially sticky situation?

He suggested they had it all wrong.

If there was any worry about the stability of American investment in Canada, it should be not with Quebec but with the "rest" of the country, as he put it.

For Quebec was doing all the economically correct things calculated to keep American investment secure.

Things like cutting government spending and increasing taxes, imposing wage guidelines to face down Quebec public service strike threats, and curbing runaway social security costs by rejecting medicare.

All of it true. All of it good and reassuring.

But Daniel Johnson went a bit further.

It was not Quebec, he went on but again Ottawa that was fussing about the "morality" of the war in the Far East. For Quebec, if not Ottawa, "appreciates what the U. S. is doing in discharging its world responsibilities in halting the march of Communism," as he chose to phrase it.

That was Daniel Johnson in New York, saying all the right things and being every bit as quietly and courteously reassuring as he had been in Ottawa.

That was Daniel Johnson, the "trilingual" ultimate political salesman.

"Trilingual?"

Indeed.

For there is another, and quite different Daniel Johnson.

He is the one you read about in those despatches from Associated Press, Agence France-Presse, Reuters and United Press International in Paris.

Statements such as that "Quebec will become anemic within 10 to 15 years if French Canada is not linked with France."

But what about those 100 years of confederation with English Canada?

"If only," he sorrowed, "Quebec could make the rest of Canada abandon its damned conqueror complex that this is OUR country."

And perhaps most of all that statement — in the form of a message to General Charles de Gaulle — that Daniel Johnson just the other day sent to Paris.

It was an expression of appreciation, a word of thanks to Le Grand Charles from the prime minister of Quebec for his march of triumph across French Canada last summer that so awaked Les Quebecois to their "true heritage."

Now really!

Will the real Daniel Johnson, the premier of the Canadian province of Quebec, please stand up?

Throne Speech

Housing, Drugs, Highways

Ottawa Journal

The Throne Speech is disappointingly vague on fresh efforts to relieve Ontario's housing shortage, though it expresses some good intentions. A plan of action here would be far more welcome than the news that Ontario will participate in Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan.

The government promises to take action in reducing the cost of drugs used in hospitals. While lower drug prices would be welcome, these savings would have only an infinitesimal effect in lowering the over-all costs of hospital care.

The pledge to start the new highway connecting Ottawa with the Quebec freeway will be more significant when something more is known of the construction schedule. The reference to this highway shows however that some of the complaints heard during the election campaign about the neglect of Eastern Ontario hit home.

All in all, it is a satisfying Throne Speech, showing that the government is alert to major needs of the province. Yet it is a prudent speech which does not commit Ontario to vast new programs which, however desirable, it simply cannot afford.

Airports and the Future

Montreal Gazette

Premier Johnson is understandably upset by an Ottawa announcement of plans to expand and improve Toronto International Airport, when no plans for Montreal International Airport have yet been proposed.

In fact the last news from Ottawa about the Montreal airport was the decision in December that the building of a new runway here would be deferred as part of the Government's austerity measures. An initial $3 million to begin the Toronto project, expected to cost about $8 million, was included in the spending estimates published this week.

The Department of Transport explains that the Montreal situation is complex and the Toronto situation simple.

At Toronto, enlarged terminal facilities are needed soon — and at Malton there is plenty of room to build a satellite terminal building, which is what is being planned.

The Montreal terminal building is considered adequate for some time to come. It is the airport itself that is going to need expansion and it is surrounded by highways, light industry and housing developments. The cost of expanding it would be enormous.

The new runway, for instance which was planned in order to reduce jet noise over inhabited areas, was to cost $6 million. The land which has already been expropriated for it has also cost $6 million.

The alternative, which would follow the example of many other major cities, would be to build another major Montreal airport, especially designed for the use of the next generation of jets, the 400-passenger "jumbos" and the 1,400-to-1,800 miles an hour supersonics.

St. Hubert would be an excellent location for such a port but Transport Minister Hellyer says it is to remain military. A location near Ste. Therese has been suggested and other sites on the South Shore proposed. But no final decision is expected for months yet.

The Department of Transport declares that its planning studies for Canada's major airports are projections over the next 20 years. But Toronto is already competing with Montreal in the number of flights handled each year. The difference of a year or two in preparing for the future could be very important.

More Money for Research

Ottawa Journal

Although 1968-69 is to be a year for economy, the Government has wisely decided to invest in the future by increasing assistance to research.

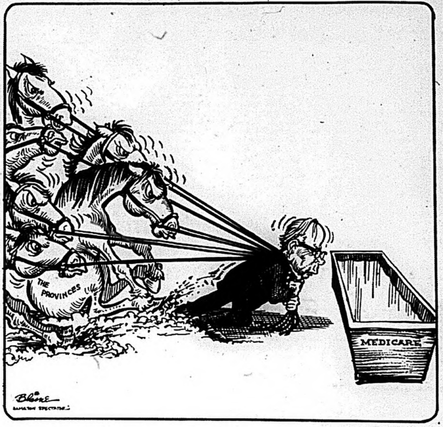
The National Research Council and the Medical Research Council together will receive $22,000,000 more than in 1967-68 for their research grants and scholarships, raising the total to $88,000,000. Other agencies, such as Atomic Energy of Canada, also benefit from increases.

The Government program should be matched by a similar effort by industry which is helped by tax incentives and assistance programs for research introduced by the Conservative Government in 1962.

In a recent speech, Industry Ministry Drury said that the research investment of U.S. industry exceeded that of Canadian industry by 4.6 times in machinery, three times in electrical products, and 2.6 times in chemicals and petroleum. The research effort of industry is greater in countries such as Britain and Sweden than in Canada.

A complicating factor in Canada has been that 60 per cent of the manufacturing firms are subsidiaries of foreign parents. They have benefited from the technological and financial support of their parents but, as Drury said, they are sometimes inhibited in the exploitation of foreign markets and in making innovations in Canadian plants.

The new factor which demands an increase in Canadian research activity is the conclusion of the Kennedy Round agreements to reduce tariffs. Unless Canadian plants keep up to date and specialize in forms of production, their ability to hold markets at home and sell goods abroad will be dangerously reduced. Enlarged research programs of governments and industry have become vital to economic well-being.



A Pox on Homo Sapiens!

Animal Kingdom States Its Case

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Reports from representatives of the feline and canine divisions of our animal kingdom, particularly from the area of Belleville recently received have indicated a growing malevolence of the two-footed animal race against the four-footed animal race.

On the "Why not Call" program of CJBQ on Friday, February 16, one lady, according to a report of the conversation, indicated that all cats and dogs have been "eliminated" in China, thereby eliminating filth and flies completely.

The only good news recently as to co-operation between our kingdom and yours has been the recent substantial fine of a man in Texas for shooting a whooping crane.

The animal kingdom would most respectfully in the matters of filth, etc., desire to point out to the two-footed animal species that we have been most patient for several million years with the species of homo sapiens who have managed to destroy completely many of our species with violence, and have managed to chop down and destroy most of the woods and ruin the rivers and marshes which formed our natural homes and habitats and have continue to spread all over the various continents where we once very much enjoyed ourselves.

In the realm of "filth" to which the lady objected we would respectfully point out that we have done nothing to pollute and ruin the streams and rivers and lakes and we have done nothing to pollute the atmosphere.

We have in our files also record of some fantastic explosions which destroyed a great many of our people at Hiroshima, Dresden, London; and in the course of a great many savage wars in which we regret the two - foot - in which we regret the two-footed species did not manage to exterminate itself completely, many of our people were also destroyed or their homes ruined.

Homo sapiens of course should realize that we have tolerated your misdoings for a great many centuries, but this latest suggestion that you "eliminate" all dogs and cats in Belleville approaches the last straw.

You should realize of course that if we desire to put our forces in motion we can immediately destroy all your food supplies and destroy you utterly in a great many ways.

Because of our good nature we have so far refrained.

It has always been our hope that homo sapiens might eventually evolve a decent philosophy of live and let live such as we animals developed long ago, killing only when necessary to survive either for food or self defence and doing nothing to pollute or destroy our natural habitat.

If your final balance of sanity is destroyed and you propose to eliminate all dogs and cats we will leave Belleville and its surrounding area an empty shell!

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM
By its solicitor, ad hoc,
Kenneth G. M. Ross, Q.C.

P.S. We do not have any General De Gaulle or President Johnson, either!

The newly elected president, Norman Garbutt presided. The president welcomed the guest speaker, the Rev. Rural Dean W. J. Robinson, Rector of St. James' Church, Tweed, and the Rev. Mini Craze Spreads Far And Wide

Montreal Gazette

A writer in New York recently marvelled at the way the word "mini" has been adapted to use in diplomacy and government economics, agriculture, sports, even medicine, since the British first introduced it to describe a skirt.

The British, of course, were the first to realize the possibilities of their new word. After devaluation, they called their money mini-pounds. And what they could afford with them they named mini-holidays and minitellys. The people responsible they called mini-brains.

The fad for mini-words hasn't had much of a vogue here. A minimum, in fact. Canadians did use one last fall to describe Mr. Sharp's budget. But the fun left the game when the mini-budget produced mini-paychecks.

Boy Scout Week Opened with Special Program

The Belleville District Boy Scouts started off Boy Scout Week celebrations on Monday night with their "Annual Get-Together" at the Masonic Hall. Over 250 persons, comprising Scouters, District, Council, Group committees and their wives, husbands and friends enjoyed an evening of singing, dancing and good entertainment.

A delicious turkey dinner, with plenty of food variety, was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Melrose. Following dinner a "sing-song", to put the gathering in a festive mood, was conducted by Asst. District Commissioner Ted Yaeger.

Tables were beautifully decorated in a Scouty manner. The head table having Scout Candlesticks and emblems, while other tables were decorated in a "woodsy outdoor" effect with decorations made by Cubmaster-Miss Marion Gelthorpe (8th Pack). These consisted of Indian Teepees surrounded by "Indians" with place cards resembling "rockets", symbolizing the future of Scouting.

Special guests at the head table were Mrs. Robin Jeffrey, representing the Mayor of Belleville, Dr. Peter Scott, who spoke briefly on Scouting and the youth of today. Asst. Provincial Commissioner L. R. Griffiths; Provincial Field Commissioner J. Pettifer (Quinte Region); John Wieberdink, Treasurer representing President L. R. Andrews, District Council, District Commissioner Bud Bateman, 2nd Asst. District Commissioner Ted Yaeger, Stan Terry and Arnold Welch.

A special ceremony of presentations, in which Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Pettifer and D. C. Bateman took part was an interesting part of the program. Two 10-year service medals were presented to Asst. District Commissioner Arnold Welch and Mrs. Helen Welch (ACM-9th Pack) "for long and faithful service to Scouting". Gilwell Wood Badge neckerchiefs, parchments, and "thongs" were presented to Asst. Cubmaster Ron Eaton (17th Pack).

Cubmaster Mrs. Sheila Wright (3rd Pack); Scoutmaster C. H. Coops (1st Troop) and Scoutmaster Jim Hopper (3rd Troop) These awards represented long study and practical work in Scouting practices.

Part 2 Wood Badge certificates awarded to Scoutmasters Ron Shettell, First Avondale and Ron Shanmmerhorn and Cubmaster Mrs. Dorothy Shanmmerhorn 14th Lions Club.

The Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Jackson, then took over the evening program. Singing by "The Quinte Belles" was much enjoyed and considerable enthusiasm shown. Music was provided for dancing, which included the ever popular "square dances" as well as novelty and modern dancing. Prizes were given to the best dancers in several categories. Door prizes drawn from tickets at door was a feature of the evening.

Great credit is due to chairman Hugh Beach and Bruce Thompson of committee who did a splendid job and Mrs. Fort for her untiring efforts.

This Get-Together, held each year during Boy Scout Week is a fitting tribute to the Founder of Scouting, Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell, and is a recognition of the voluntary services of several hundred workers, both men and women, in the Belleville District, who give their time and talents towards the training of the Boy Scouts of Belleville to be "Fit For Citizenship".

$104,000 for Unused Rooms

OTTAWA (CP) — If Ottawa's top civil servants didn't get a copy of it thrust in their lap for free, Maxwell Henderson's new 75-cent paperback book might be the capital's annual best seller.

His 263-page report to Parliament as the auditor-general of Canada was tabled in the Commons Monday and will likely be referred next session to the public accounts committee.

Some of its juicier items:

The CBC rented rooms and suites in three Montreal hotels during Expo as spare rooms for its extra staff. It finally let some of the rooms go, at the cost of breaking lease contracts, because the rooms weren't being used. Cost of the unoccupied accommodation was $104,000.

Servicemen still are not required to show proof they used their own automobiles for travelling on duty, when they submitted expense accounts.

Chauffeurs are still being provided top military and civilian officers for their use without a clear-cut policy statement and control over unnecessary travel.

A total of 494 servicemen have received special benefits because they were being released prematurely from the armed forces, and at the same time paid bonuses totalling $28,500 for re-engaging.

But there are also cases cited involving millions of dollars in public expenditure, which cabinet ministers and department heads are likely to be called onto the public accounts committee mat.

Pearson Now Faces Difficult Choices

OTTAWA (CP) — What now, Mr. Pearson?

The prime minister, expecting a quiet retirement after the Liberals April 6 choice of his successor, now faces the possible prospect of a general election concurrent with the leadership race.

Mr. Pearson was flying back today from a brief vacation in Jamaica shortened by his minority government's stunning Commons defeat Monday night on a crucial bill imposing a five-per-cent surcharge on personal income tax.

The very danger he warned of only weeks before had come home to roost. Time and again, Mr. Pearson had told the seven leadership candidates in his cabinet to stick strictly to parliamentary business as long as the Commons was in session.

Three of them—External Affairs Minister Martin, Consumer Affairs Minister Turner and Agriculture Minister Greene—were absent when the Liberals lost 84 to 82 on third and final reading of the tax bill.

Several choices are open to Mr. Pearson in this critical situation:

He can dissolve Commons and call a general election.

If so, the likely election date would be Monday, April 22—five years to the day from when Mr. Pearson's government took office.

John Diefenbaker, former Conservative prime minister, recalled in the Commons Monday night that he dissolved Parliament the day after his government was defeated Feb. 5, 1963.

Mr. Pearson could ask Gov.-Gen. Michener to call on a member of his cabinet to form a government.

This choice would seem to be ruled out on the grounds that Mr. Pearson has said he will show no public favoritism in the choice of a new Liberal leader.

The prime minister could recommend to the Governor-General that Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield form a government.

Mr. Pearson might seek Mr. Stanfield's agreement to allow the Commons to complete any necessary business before dissolution and an election.

The prime minister might demand a vote of confidence in the Commons when it convenes at 2:30 p.m. today.

They say they do not see how the other opposition groups can go back on their Monday night decision to defeat the administration on a tax measure by turning around the next day and voting confidence in the government.

Moreover, Mr. Pearson may be embarrassed by his January, 1958, motion, when he was Opposition leader, that the then Conservative government resign and turn over the reins of office to the Liberals without an election.

"The government should resign," Mr. Stanfield said Monday night.

The income tax surcharge has been collected since Jan. 1 this year after being imposed in Finance Minister Sharp's budget of last Nov. 30.

The surcharge now has no basis in law and could not until a new session of Parliament approved it.

Will there be tax refunds? If so, when?

Even if the government won a vote of confidence, this would not restore the killed tax surcharge.

Present Commons standing is Liberals 130, Conservatives 95, New Democratic Party 22, Creditistes 8, Social Credit 4, independents 3, vacant 3—total 265.

15 New Members in Legion

On Saturday afternoon a special meeting of Belleville Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion was held at the Legion Hall. This meeting was called for the purpose of initiating 15 new members to the membership, also for the special presentation of a framed picture in color. This was the only official picture taken on Remembrance Day November 11, 1967 when Lt.-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks laid the Wreath on the new Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Memorial on the Armories lawn. Col. Willcocks will be retiring as Commanding officer of the Regiment at a change of Command Parade this coming week end. Lt.-Col. F. R. Allan will be the new Commanding officer. Representatives of the Regiment present at this presentation were Lt. Col. K. D. H. Willcocks, Lt.-Col. F. R. Allan, Regimental Sergeant Major Howard Kokesh, W.O.I., and Sergeant R. M. McLuskie.

The presentation was made by Comrade Dick Kirby, past president of the branch. Col. Willcocks in a few well chosen words replied thanking Comrade Ed. F. Smith, branch president and the members of Branch 99 for their thoughtfulness in remembering the Regiment on his retirement as commanding officer.

At the mass initiation ceremony there were two special guests who took part in the initiation, namely Comrade J. W. (Scotty) Broughton, past regional vice president of the Ontario Command and presiding Zone Commander for F-3, Comrade Earl Brant. Comrade Ed Smith turned the meeting over to Comrade Brant to preside at the initiation and he was assisted by Comrade Jack Rashotte, immediate Past Zone Commander F-3, Comrade Ed. Smith and Comrade Roy Madden, past president.

Comrade Earl Brant addressed the newly-initiated comrades, explaining what the Legion stands for in Canada and that they are now members of a great organization who have a membership of over a quarter million members with over 2000 branches across Canada. Scotty Broughton also spoke briefly, giving some good advice to the new members. The meeting was closed by the President, Comrade Ed. Smith, and directed the Color Party to march off the Colors and the singing of God Save Our Queen.

Pearson Flies Home to Crisis

One possibility under discussion was that the government would call for a formal vote of confidence. But Opposition Leader Stanfield made clear his party will oppose any such attempt.

The earliest a general election could be held would be in the second half of April. Mr. Pearson's successor as Liberal leader is to be chosen at a national convention April 4-6.

Former Conservative leader John Diefenbaker, who suffered a similar defeat just over five years ago, was stronger than Mr. Stanfield in his demands that the government should go.

"They are out—they know it," he told reporters jubilantly. "Constitutionally they can't make any more appointments. The thing is over."

NDP Leader Douglas, however, spoke of a new confidence vote as one possible avenue for the government to take.

Mr. Winters noted the tax bill had received approval in principle on second reading, however, and said third reading is "normally regarded as relatively routine."

The vote came on a Monday when most MPs are not normally in Ottawa.

Mr. Winters refrained from assessing any blame for the defeat.

But Finance Minister Sharp, who made the crucial move to let the vote go ahead although the party had not expected it, said he had protested to his colleagues before doing so.

He said he was "assured we had enough members" to carry the vote and "that was the accident."

The climactic vote grew out of a confused sequence of events started when Deputy Speaker Herman M. Batten called what appeared to be a routine third reading.

He asked whether the bill should be read a third time immediately and some members agreed while others, according to the record, called out: "Next sitting."

House Leader MacEachen rose to head off the vote on the grounds that the motion had not been seconded, but opposition members insisted that the voting process had begun and must go ahead.

Conservative House Leader Michael Starr, who engineered the defeat of the government last fall on a less-crucial bill to raise postal rates, again led the attack, insisting that the vote had to proceed.

Mr. Sharp said he had not moved the motion "and I am sorry if Your Honor misunderstood—I was trying to catch your eye."

But he then went on to seal the fate of the bill—and possibly the government—with the words:

"If it is the wish of the House, I am perfectly happy to have third reading."

Division bells calling in members for the vote clanged for 75 minutes—normally, they ring only for 15 minutes—as party whips rounded up all available voters.

Clerk Alistair Fraser read the result to an absolutely soundless chamber: "Yes 82, Nays 84," and pandemonium broke lose.

Conservative Robert Coates (Cumberland) grabbed all available pieces of paper and tossed them in the air while his colleagues banged their desks and shouted: "Resign, resign."

The combination that brought about the defeat was comprised of 60 Conservatives, 15 New Democrats, five Creditistes, three Social Credit MPs and Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe).

When the vote was completed, Mr. Batten attempted to go on to the next item but Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) moved that further business should be suspended.

The motion was adopted 79 to 78 with Mr. Winters, in a moment of confusion, nearly voting against the government.

Mr. MacEachen tried to continue the House business but was thundered down by Mr. Diefenbaker.

After repeated calls for order another attempt to continue was blocked by Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South).

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) said it would be a hollow mockery of democratic government if the government had the arrogance to try to go on.

Treasury Board President Benson made one last effort to resume work but was shouted down and Speaker Lucien Lamoureux proposed adjournment.

The defeat left a confused series of questions in its wake, including the possibility of an early election hard on the heels of the Liberal convention with a new and untested leader.

There also were questions about how the government could proceed without part of the increased revenues provided for in Mr. Sharp's mini-budget.

Measures to implement increased taxes on liquor, beer and tobacco had already been passed.

But the defeat cut off, for this session, authorization of the speedup in corporation tax collections and the five-per-cent surcharge on income tax.

The surcharge was actually imposed at the start of the year and there were doubts about its legality.

Mr. Winters, asked whether taxes already collected might have to be paid back, said the government would consult its legal experts.

The trade minister's office of the Commons lobby, became the centre of confusion as ministers ducked in and out of the emergency cabinet session through a blockade of reporters.

External Affairs Minister Martin, acting prime minister with Mr. Pearson out of the country, flew in from Trois-Rivieres and entered the meeting grim-faced.

He was one of three leadership candidates from the cabinet who were absent for the vote, along with Agriculture Minister Green and Consumer Affairs Minister Turner.

Liberal Voice Too Faint

Robichaud began a vain rear-guard action.

But Finance Minister Sharp then spoke the possibly fatal words: "I have no objection to third reading."

The vote was called. The Liberals held it up for 75 minutes as they frantically tried to get more of their MPs to the chamber.

But on the roll-call vote, 84 opposition MPs teamed up to defeat Mr. Sharp's tax bill 84 to 82.

There was plenty of warning from the Conservatives they were out to oust the government.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield had even stated that the Liberals had so mismanaged the economy it would be a "patriotic duty" to turn the government out of office.

"We had the horses," a Conservative backroom man said. "And we didn't make any secret that we were determined to make a good showing on the vote on this bill."

Despite their defeat on a tax bill, the Liberals tried to press ahead with other finance matters.

Davie Fulton, former Conservative justice minister, put a motion that further finance matters could not be pursued.

His motion won, 79 to 78.

Mr. MacEachen then tried to bring on a housing bill.

It was at this point that John Diefenbaker, former Conservative prime minister, had a supreme moment of rvenge.

"It is a long road that has no ashcans," he said to thunderous opposition cheers and desk-banging. He added:

"I remember so well Feb. 5, 1963, when the decision was made that the government was out. These were the people opposite (the Liberals) who said that.

"Now let them live by their own words."

Committee Will Review Child Adoption Process

TORONTO (CP) — Appointment of an advisory committee on adoption and foster care was announced in the legislature Monday by John Yaremko, Ontario social and family services minister.

Mr. Yaremko said the five-member committee, appointed by a cabinet order, will be headed by Stanley Mullins, president of Laurential University, Sudbury.

The committee also will review practices and policies of organizations "in respect to the placement for adoption of children resident in Ontario in other provinces and in other countries."

A third field of study would be policies and practices on placement and maintenance of children in foster care "and particularly the relation between foster care and subsequent adoption."

Reports Given At V.O.N. Annual Meet

The annual general meeting of the V.O.N. Board was held at the YMCA last Monday evening.

Taylor Franklin welcomed all present and thanked the Trenton Branch representatives for coming.

Reports from the secretary and treasurer were read. News was received of the marriage of Miss Olive Price, one time member of the local staff to Edward Buchanan.

Mrs. H. McLacklan, and Mrs. B. Kuglin conveyed thanks to the two new nurses on all their hard work since coming to Belleville.

The meeting adjourned and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

Dinner Held In Closing Of Centennial

The final meeting of Tyendinaga's Centennial Committee was held last Wednesday in the township hall at Melrose when some thirty members along with those of council, husbands and wives enjoyed a delightful social evening.

Committee chairman, Charles Bates, thanked all members for their work in organizing and carrying out a highly successful program of events last year and in particular mentioned the untiring assistance so willingly given at all times by Mrs. K. R. McMechan and Mrs. Roy McLaren. A number of colored slides and movies of the various events were shown to the enjoyment of all.

On behalf of the people of the township, Reeve Delbert Harvey, presented the Chairman with an appropriately engraved shield in appreciation of his leadership in such an important project. Another presentaton was that of a Centennial medal to William J. Walsh, the township's clerk-treasurer. In presenting this award, Deputy Reeve Gibson highlighted the pleasing manner in which Mr. Walsh conducted his various duties that in turn created excellent public relations not only in the township but also beyond its boundaries.

A tasty fried chicken buffet supper arranged by ladies of the committee brought the evening to a close.

Eastern Star Chapter Marks 49th Anniversary

A memorable event took place on Friday evening in the Masonic Temple on Foster Ave., when Belleville Chapter No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star, were hosts to the Grand Officers of the Grand Chapter of Ontario as they celebrated the 49th anniversary of the institution of the Chapter.

The large auditorium was filled to capacity for the occasion, and guests were graciously welcomed by the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Lois Chaplin, and the Worthy Patron George Brickwood.

A large number of distinguished guests were present along with several PDDGM's; also 19 presiding WM's and WP's from other Chapters throughout the District; and 39 PM's, and PP's of Belleville 55, as well as three charter members, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson and Evan Barlow.

All distinguished guests were presented with corsages for the women and boutonnieres for the men.

A special feature of the evening was the presentation of honorary memberships, to the WGM Mrs. Gwen L. Clarke by the Worthy Matron Mrs. Lois Chaplin; to the WGP, Mr. Don Rusling, by the WP, Mr. George Brickwood; to PGM Mrs. Evelynne Little, G.Sec., by PM, Mrs. Wynne Tomlinson; and to PGP Gordon Murray, by PP, Herbert Tomlinson.

Gifts were presented to the Worthy Grand Matron and the Worthy Grand Patron, by Mrs. Wanda Clare, Assc. M. and Orley Glass, Assc. P.

A violet ceremony took place, violets being the Worthy Grand Matron's chosen flowers for the year. She was given an old fashioned nosegay of violets and escorted to the 5-Star Point Officers, who, each in turn, after reciting a verse about violets, tucked into heart-shaped pockets, that were suspended by streamers from the nosegay, a small bouquet of violets, whose stems were wrapped in dollar bills. This was a donation to the W.G.M. for her favorite charity, the Cancer Fund.

The highlight of the evening was when a large and beautifully decorated birthday cake was brought in and the colored candles lighted. The cake was cut by the Worthy Grand Matron and the Worthy Matron.

The evening was brought to a close with a bountiful smorgasbord lunch, served under the convenership of Sisters Clare Rushton, Merle Simpson and their groups.

Mass Marriage Vows At 15 Cents A Couple

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Harassed fathers struggling with the expenses of their daughters' wedding might take a tip from an Indian religious sect which conducts mass marriage ceremonies at 15 cents a couple.

For this sum, a bridegroom of the Namdhari sect of the Sikhs weds his bride at a mass ceremony along with up to 50 other couples.

The Namdharis, formed in 1857, live mainly in northern India, but have large groups in Thailand, Malaysia, East Africa and Britain.

They are deeply religious, simple-living people who abstain from meat, alcohol and tobacco and preach non-violence. Their marriage ceremonies are devoid of dowries, feating and the flaunting of wealth or status.

To ensure adherence to the rules, the community allows no Namdhari to marry individually. Mass ceremonies are held several times a year at different places.

To house up to 50 couples, and hundreds of spectators, an improvised village is built for the early morning marriage ritual.

The couples, dressed in white robes with garlands of white beads, sit on rows of straw mats spread on the ground around a holy fire.

They slowly sip holy water sweetened with brown sugar while priests pour melted butter on the fire to keep it burning.

In the final stage of the ceremony, long white scarves worn by the bride and groom are tied together to symbolize the union. The marriage fee is tied inside the scarf knot.

The sect allows a man to pay up to 13 rupees (about $1.68) for the ceremony if he wishes, but this is the maximum to avoid any display of ostentation.

At the end of the ceremony the priests untie the knots and take the money to pay for a simple community meal served to everyone present.

Wealthy Widow Not Upset Over Proposed Travel Tax

WASHINGTON CP— Washington's jet set is adopting a stiff upper lip about the U.S. restrictions being imposed on travel outside the Western Hemisphere.

But it isn't easy.

"There's nothing to see in this country," complains Mrs. Robert McCormack, widow of the late Col. McCormack, owner of the Chicago Tribune and a noted Anglophobe.

Mrs. Arthur Gardner, with homes here, in Palm Beach, Fla., and New York, may take two or three weeks in Britain this next summer, adding cryptically: "It's not that I'm afraid of going abroad, because that's not where the war is."

Mrs. Morris Cafritz sees no personal impact from a proposed tax on travel tickets abroad, plus taxes of 15 to 30 per cent on spending in excess of $7 daily.

"I never really go anywhere anyway," says the wealthy widow with easy access to the White House and a social standing underlined by the number of times her Washington home is burgled.

"If I go to Europe for two weeks, that's not worth talking about. I could do what I did in the last war — go to White Sulphur Springs and play golf."

"It's just about crushed me" says Rose Saul Zalles, who spends about half the year on the move.

"I'm not going to worry about it now.

"My compass is set for South America, which is just lucky because it's exempt. I'm going to Easter Island for Easter. I'll worry when June rolls around. I'm planning to go to Scotland in June and to Kashmir. I'll be very much tempted to go anyway."

Mrs. Sidney Zlotnick, who plans to go to North Africa for the summer with her husband if the tax bill is rejected, asks "Where can you go for $10 a day?"

If the taxes are approved, they'll settle for Latin America instead.

"If the worst comes to the worst, I could still stay with my daughter in England. They're not going to get me to stop drinking French wine — tried to drink American wine and I can't.

"My hotels never send me bills until I get home anyway so I'm not spending money there."

Church Groups

ST. COLUMBA PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN

The Presbyterian Women of St. Columba Church met Monday evening in the church basement, with Mrs. A. Dunsmore, president, in charge.

Questions answered by a panel of experts on the politics, education, industry and economics of the Japanese people, and the church working among Koreans in Japan, led to a gain in knowledge of the subject.

The Presbyterian Church has worked among the Koreans in Japan since 1927. There are now 35 churches with 28 pastors and three missionaries. These people work at their church affiliation, attending Wednesday evening prayer services, home Bible study groups Friday evenings and regular Sunday services. A Korean Christian always takes time for silent prayer as he enters a house or business.

Panel members were Mrs. J. Smit, Mrs. J. Albertson, Mrs. R. Buskard, Mrs. D. Macpherson and Mrs. R. Lowry.

Miss Hae Sook Kim, a Korean nurse now working at Belleville General Hospital, was a guest.

Mrs. R. Brain read a letter from a Japanese pen pal. Mrs. Fred Lyon read an article from the missionary magazine, The Glad Tidings, stressing the importance of visiting.

Mrs. R. Brain and Mrs. R. Blachford played a piano duet.

Mrs. B. Hackett and Mrs. J. Smit, conveners, reported on the Valentine coffee party.

Planned for the future are a quilting bee in March, a rummage sale May 18, catering to a wedding in June, and a bazaar in October.

Mrs. A. Dunsmore explained the National Development Fund of the Presbyterian Church, telling how it may help in research and education.

Mom Whyte Aids Needy Children in Nigeria

VICTORIA (CP) — Bertha Mom Whyte is doing for Nigerians what she once did for needy children in Ontario and what she wanted to do for children in British Columbia.

Mrs. Whyte, a vigorous 51-year-old, operates a combined farm, orphanage and training centre at the lonely outpost of Aiyetoro in Nigeria's Kappa province.

Seventy orphan babies are being cared for, 25 youths are being trained as farmers and 45 more are being taught to make furniture in a large workshop conducted by Mrs. Whyte's son, Ronald.

"We built all this out of nothing," she said, "but God has been with us all the way. He has performed miracles to help us help others."

Mrs. Whyte has been visiting her second son, Lloyd, and his family in Victoria. She planned to return to Nigeria after visiting friends and supporters in the United States.

Mrs. Whyyte, born and raised on a farm in Saskatchewan, says she is still first and foremost a farmer.

For 11 years, she operated Whytehaven, a home for needy and unwanted children, on her farm at Bowmanville, Ont. The Ontario government closed down the home in 1959.

"By then," said Mrs. Whyte, "we had nearly 150 children in our care. The government said this was at least three times too many under provincial regulations."

The Whytes moved to British Columbia and were offered 25 acres of land near Nelson to establish a children's home. But the government refused to grant a licence.

Mrs. Whyte and her husband moved to Nigeria and began developing jungle land donated by the Nigerian government. Despite heavy rain and blight, they raised enough vegetables, cocoa and pineapple to feed hundreds of children.

Later, they established what is known as the Kappa Youth Training Centre, operated in conjunction with the orphanage and farm.

B and P Women Hear Talk on BC Indians

On Saturday evening the Belleville Business and Professional Women entertained guests for an International Night, at the Sun Valley Motel, in the form of a dinner meeting.

Belleville's "Citizen of the Year," Jack Ellis attended with his wife, and spoke briefly to the gathering.

A most impressive candle-lighting ceremony informed those attending of the vast coverage and fine work of Business and Professional Women throughout the world.

Miss Marilyn Brown of this city, who is currently teaching in Toronto, gave a most interesting address on the Indians of British Columbia. She taught for two years at Kitimat B.C. and has unlimited knowledge on this subject.

Two Montreal Single Women Given Permission to Adopt Child

MONTREAL (CP) — Ghita Sundberg and Victoria Megalos are among the few single Montreal women who have been allowed to adopt a child through the Children's Service Centre.

Does the advent of a child in the life of a single woman cause a great upheaval?

"No," says Miss Megalos, 38, a violinist with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra. "The greatest change is within myself.

"Linda (her daughter) has heightened my sense of awareness. . . . I'm more aware of every little thing. When I first got Linda I lay awake nights feeling her presence in the next room."

Both women had been thinking about adoption for a long time.

Miss Sundberg, 35, who works in the payroll department of a life insurance company, says she had a "vague ambition of adopting a child for quite a while, but never did anything about it."

"Then one day last winter I came home from work with a cold. On the radio was a show about single parent adoptions. I said 'That's for me' and next day called the agency."

Miss Megalos had tried several years ago to adopt a homeless Vietnamese war orphan who was being relocated in Switzerland.

"The man in charge wrote me and said 'Send money instead'."

Patting her daughter on the head, she added:

"There is a certain satisfaction in supporting children abroad, but nothing like this."

"On the contrary," said Miss Megalos. "Within a week of my daughter's arrival I had three proposals of marriage.

"I'm going to take my time though, just as I did with the adoption.

"I want to be sure I am doing what is best for both of us."

Ann Landers

Student Trespassers Rouse Gardener's Ire

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I live near an elementary school. We have always taken pride in our lawn and garden. The grass is like a velvet carpet and the flowers are so beautiful people come from other parts of the city just to look.

ANN LANDERS

We are not mean people, Ann, and we do love children, but it is maddening the way some of the elementary school youngsters run across our lawn and trample on the flowers.

Last week I telephoned the school and asked to speak to the principal. I was told on two occasions that the principal was out of his office but would return my call. The call was not returned.

On the third try I heard the principal's secretary say, "This nut has called twice before and I managed to get rid of her but you'd better take the call this time because she's the type who won't give up."

When the principal got on the phone he was very courteous and promised to speak to the students about trespassing on our property.

My question is this: Why is a person who calls to ask for the school's co-operation considered a "nut?" Was I crazy to make this request? Thank you for your answer—FT. WORTH.

DEAR FT. WORTH: A person who telephones to complain about anything is immediately on the spot because most folks don't like criticism. For this reason, the complainer fares better if he doesn't come on too strong with his complaint, particularly to an intermediary.

The secretary was not only rude but unbelievingly stupid. I wouldn't want that knucklehead in my office!

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A relative of mine is doing something which I feel goes beyond "foolish." It is, in my judgment harmful to her child. This is the story:

Melanie is a middle-aged divorcee who has a sweet little daughter. Melanie's natural hair color is dark brown but apparently she didn't think it was flashy enough to get a fourth husband, so last year she dyed her hair platinum blonde. In order to make herself appear more authentic she dyed her young daughter's hair the same color. By the way, Melanie does the dye jobs herself and they look it.

The little girl is now five years of age and her hair is getting very thin on top. I'm afraid the child will be bald by the time she is eight if her mother doesn't stop this nonsense.

Melanie is my niece. What can I do? — COMMITTEE OF ONE TO SAVE A CHILD.

DEAR COMMITTEE: It is best that this subject be broached by someone of authority outside the family. Ask the child's teacher to talk to the mother. There's a good chance that the teacher has also noticed the little girl's hair is falling out. A mother who would exploit her child in such a way is utrly brainless.

Confidential to SO IN LOVE: You can call it love if you want to, but I have another name for it. Make up and smell the coffee. He hangs around because the price is right and he has nothing to lose, Dummy.

Successful Living

Babysitter Objects to Having Hair in Curlers

Dear Doris: I'm 16 and baby sit quite regularly for neighbors. They are never very late, but my mother insists I set my hair while I'm there.

I feel quite uncomfortable confronting them with my hair in curlers, and I wouldn't mind a bit the extra 15 minutes it takes me when I get home. They sometimes bring friends and this makes my embarrassment worse.

Dear Baby Sitter: I'm with you in this, although your mother's wish to get you to bed quickly is understandable. Do you suppose it would seem different to her to expose herself to the neighbors in curlers?

The only place for hair to be in curlers is a beauty salon or a girl's own bedroom. Just as much of a must as wearing shoes or having a clean face.

Mom trains you to be a well-groomed lady; then lets you both down.

• • •

Dear Doris: I have been married a year to a wonderful and considerate fellow, but as yet have not learned to enjoy the physical expression of marriage.

Would you kindly send me some information on books I can get on the subject? — Still Hoping.

Dear Hoping: You'll get there. The marriage mate I despair of is the one who professes to know all there is to know, even to the point of refusing to find out. And this at a time when the loving wife—or husband—would give their eye teeth for a relationship more satisfying.

DORIS CLARK

My list of recommended books on Sex and Marriage is on its way. (Available to others for ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

• • •

Dear Doris: I would like to be a missionary but how do I go about it? Do I have to have some kind of training? Could I go to a foreign land? —Childhood Ambition.

Dear Ambition: Missionaries come in all clothes and creeds and careers. A nurse, social worker, teacher, dietitian, may take her skill to a foreign land, provided she is good enough at it. If she is appointed by a mission board or a government (or a U.N. organization) she will get special briefing and training for where she's going.

To Hairy Carey: Relax. Having a beard like Santa Claus — if you don't shave — isn't the worst thing in the world. And if you did have a long stay in hospital, no self-respecting nurse would let it grow.

My skin specialist recommends the commercial hair removers as being safe, easy to use and softening to the hair and skin. Try one.

Chicken or Turkey Croquettes

By MARY MOORE

Croquettes lift leftovers from common to company status.

It is eight years since I gave you the method for making chicken or turkey croquettes and with fowl in such good supply at reasonable prices it is time I made them again. I did. But I did not want to deep-fry them so I baked them.

CHICKEN (or Turkey) CROQUETTES — BAKED

- 2 cups ground chicken (or turkey) well packed
- 1 tbsp. green celery, including some tops
- 1 tbsp. green onion
- 3 tbsps. butter
- 2 tbps. flour
- ¾ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. curry powder (optional)
- ¼ tsp. Accent
- ¾ cup hot milk (see below)
- ¼ cup hot cereal cream (see below)
- 1 egg yolk
- 1 to 1½ cups fine breadcrumbs (preferably soft)
- 1 large egg
- 1 tbsp. water
- ¼ cup butter

Put chicken through food grinder and follow it through with the celery and onion. Heat milk and cream (NOTE: If desired 1 cup hot milk may be used instead of ¾ cup milk and ¼ cup cream.) In large saucepan melt the butter and stir in flour, salt, curry powder (if used) and Accent until blended. Stir in hot milk and cream until thick. Remove from heat and stir in egg yolk and ground chicken and vegetables. Chill in refrigerator by spreading out on large plate. When thoroughly cold this croquette mixture is easy to handle. Have ready in a shallow dish the egg beaten with the water and on a large shallow dish the crumbs. Also have ready a large shallow baking dish with the ¼ cup butter melted in bottom. With moistened palms shape croquette mixture into 12 logs 3½" long by 1½" in diameter. Dip each in egg, drain a little, then roll in crumbs. Transfer each to butter in baking dish, roll them over to coat with melted butter on all sides. They should not touch. Chill again to retain shape.

Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 25 to 30 min. until golden. If these do not brown well enough on top, turn on top burner for a few minutes only — watching all the time — to brown them to your liking.

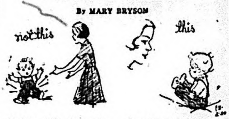
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Oh, baby, be careful, you'll fall. Oh, dear, did you hurt yourself? Let me help you so the bad floor won't bump you again."

Be calm while your little one is learning to walk. Toddlers take falls and minor bumps in stride if Mother doesn't get excited.

Quietly give a helping hand or a bit of comforting if it's needed — but don't make a fuss over every little tumble.

WEDDING

MAY — WOOD

Rev. J. W. Lamb officiated at the wedding ceremony in Holloway Street United Church, on Saturday, February 10, 1968, when Donna Marie Wood, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wood, Belleville became the bride of Richard Lawrence May, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton May of Rossmore. Church organist A. Macleod played traditional wedding music throughout the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a short white lace A - line dress enhanced with long sleeves. Her headdress was encrusted with seed pearls from which flowed a tulle veil. She carried a nosegay of pink baby roses and white carnations.

The bride's only attendant was Mrs. Stephen Beare who wore a toast brown suit with matching accessories and a nosegay of yellow roses and white carnations.

Stephen Beare was groomsman, while the ushers were William Hibbard, and Chris Benn, cousin of the bridegroom.

For the reception at the Parkdale Community Centre, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a powder blue lace ensemble of matching coat and dress, powder blue accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a two - piece mauve and silver dress with mauve accessories and a corsage of mauve baby 'mums.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip for points east, the bride donned a two - piece forest green suit with matching shoes and purse.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

A meeting was held in the Moose Hall with Nell Shandraw presiding. One new member was brought into the defending circle. Plans were made for the mid-winter conference to be held in Lindsay in March. Co-workers were asked to bring donations for rummage sale to be held in the Moose Hall at a later date. A dance is planned for February 24 for members and friends with no admission charge. The hospital chairman Helen Keller gave a report on the sick and stated that Gladys Ritch was still in Belleville Hospital.

The meeting was brought to a close, a bake sale was held and hot dogs served after the meeting.

There is to be a euchre at the Moose Hall later this month.

Crush Alberta, B.C.

Trenton Foursome Tied for Lead in Canadian Championships

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (CP) — Alberta's hopes of retaining the Canadian schoolboy curling championship nosedived Monday when the Ron Kelly-skipped foursome took two crushing defeats in the first two draws.

In fact, the fortunes of the usually strong entries from Western Canada suffered in the first day of the 11-team round robin event when Eastern rinks scored victories in four of five meetings with the West.

The success of Eastern entries early in the bonspiel is evident from the standings that show Ontario, skipped by William Hope of Trenton, the Ferguson Robert Little foursome from Halifax representing Nova Scotia and Doug Johnston's Schefferville, Que., rink tied in first place with 2-0, won-lost records.

Saskatoon's Rick Folk, Saskatchewan's skip, the Northern Ontario rink of Al Viehbeck of Fort Frances and Ken Clapham's Manitoba foursome from Winnipeg were 1-1 after the second draw.

Yet to win a game were Marty Dalton's St. John's, Nfld., rink -(0-1), Alberta (0-2) and British Columbia, skipped by Mark Ottem of Kamloops (0-2).

The third round was to get under way at 2:30 p.m. EST today as Nova Scotia vs New Brunswick, British Columbia vs Northern Ontario, Quebec vs Ontario, Saskatchewan vs Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island vs Alberta. Manitoba gets the bye.

In the first round Manitoba defeated Prince Edward Island 10-6, Ontario defeated Alberta 9-2 in eight ends, Saskatchewan defeated British Columbia 9-5, Quebec defeated Newfoundland 10-8, and Nova Scotia edged Northern Ontario 7-4.

In the second round, Quebec upset Saskatchewan 7-5, Northern Ontario walloped Alberta 11-5 in nine ends, Nova Scotia beat Prince Edward Island 9-6, New Brunswick shaded Manitoba 11-10 in an extra end, and Ontario defeated British Columbia 12-7.

The highlight of the day during the Manitoba-New Brunswick clash saw Clapham rally for three in the ninth and steal one in the 10th to extend the game.

With his last rock, Clapham was partially hidden behind a New Brunswick guard. Forster was narrow when he tried to follow that route but got lucky when he knocked the guard onto Clapham's rock, removing it from shot.

In the 8 p.m. fourth round, it's Ontario vs Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island vs British Columbia, New Brunswick vs Alberta, Nova Scotia vs Manitoba, Quebec vs Northern Ontario. Saskatchewan will have the bye.

Hull, Mikita Hold Lead In NHL Scoring Race

MONTREAL (CP) — Just when it appears some interloper is about to intrude on the private war of Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull for individual scoring honors in the National Hockey League, the pair blow up a storm.

Such was the case last week when Chicago Black Hawks scored 17 goals with Mikita and Hull accounting for six goals and 11 assists between them.

Mikita, the smooth, playmaking centre, had an individual total of nine points, including four goals, and boosted his season points total to 70. Hull collected eight points, including two goals. Hull now has a league-leading 40 goals to Mikita's 34.

Moving into third-place was right winger Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers. Gilbert, with six goals and 10 assists in his team's last seven games, has 62 points. His 38 assists ties him with Alex Delvecchio of Detroit Red Wings and Ken Wharram of Chicago for the league lead in the assists department.

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins slipped to fourth place with 61 points. Esposito's total is two more than veteran Gordie Howe of Detroit and Jean Ratelle, Gilbert's linemate.

Wharram is seventh with 58 points, three more than Delvecchio. Two Bruins—left winger Johnny Bucyk and centre Fred Stanfield—share ninth place, each with 53 points.

Montreal centre Jean Beliveau, although he missed 15 games early in the season because of injuries, has 52 points on 24 goals and 28 assists.

Andy Bathgate, Pittsburgh Penguins veteran right winger, heads the expansion division scorers with 47 points, 15th in the over-all list.

Canadiens Rogatien Vachon and Lorne Worsley lead the goaltenders' race for the Vezina Trophy with a combined goals-against average of 2.09, compared to the 2.35 figure compiled by runners-up Johnny Bower and Bruce Gamble of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Les Binkley of Pittsburgh, Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars and New York's Ed Giacomin have each recorded five shutouts to lead the league. However, the Vachon-Worsley combination has a total of eight, each goaltender accounting for four.

Ted Green of Boston leads the individual penalty parade, with 115 minutes, but right behind are team-mate Don Awrey and New York's Reg Fleming, each with 114 minutes. The Bruins continue as team leaders with 803 minutes.

CAHA to Re-assess National Hockey Team

TORONTO (CP) — A thorough re-assessment of the Canadian national hockey team is to be undertaken by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Gordon Juckes, executive director of the CAHA, said the re-assessment was a normal procedure and not caused by their third-place finish behind Russia and Czechoslovakia.

He said Monday after arriving with the team from Europe that the CAHA undertook the National team program on a four-year basis prior to the 1964 Olympics and it is time to take a hard look at what the program had produced.

"There are some real problems that have to be faced if we are to continue.

"International competition is getting to be big business and the CAHA has to decide if we can afford to stay in it. We have many other commitments and can't put all our eggs in one basket."

He said getting players could be a problem, but the Ottawa-based Eastern National team has helped in this regard.

He expected no more than a normal turnover of players from the club this year.

Marshall Johnson, a forward converted to defence for the Olympics, is the only player who has announced his intention of trying to turn professional—with Minnesota North Stars of the National League. But Juckes said he has heard nothing about future plans from others on the team.

He said one problem was having only 20 players to fill 20 positions.

"There's no suggestion that any of the players hasn't given full effort, but I'd prefer to see maybe 40 players trying for those 20 positions."

Admitting he could lose coaches of both national teams—Jack McLeod of the Winnipeg-based club and Jack Bownass of the Ottawa team—he said he had heard nothing of it from either of them.

"All we've been able to offer Jackie is a year-to-year contract and he may well feel there is a better opportunity elsewhere."

There have been reports McLeod has received an offer from New York Rangers of the NHL, but he denied it Monday. He said he hadn't talked with the Rangers and has no idea what his future plans might be.

Bownass is on a leave of absence from the company for which he works but Juckes had heard nothing from the Ottawa coach.

Hundreds Welcome Nationals; MacLeod May Quit Team

WINNIPEG (CP) — The welcome Monday night took some of the sting out of the misfortunes that dogged Canada's national hockey team since Saturday.

Hundreds of Winnipeg fans along with provincial and municipal officials waited for hours to welcome the club that lost a gold medal to Russia in the Winter Olympics and then lost their airplane to mechanical failure on the way home.

The mechanical problem delayed their departure from Toronto for more than three hours, but the welcome mat was still out when their aircraft touched down at Winnipeg.

Labor Minister Obie Baizley told the team: "All Manitoba is proud of you. You're our team when you win and you're our team when you lose.

"We hope you continue to make your home in Winnipeg and we, the citizens of Manitoba, will do everything to help."

"I think we have enough business firms in the area to take one player and sponsor him in the true sense of the word. The Canadian team is truly amateur and that's more than I can say for the gold medal winners."

Canada was defeated 5-0 by Russia in the Olympic final and had to settle for third place behind Czechoslovakia.

Defenceman Marshal Johnson summed it up: "I don't think anyone really expected to beat the Russians. Getting shut out is most disappointing."

He is one of nine nationals on the negotiation list of Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League. Johnson said he plans to discuss terms with Minnesota manager-coach Wren Blair.

Coach Jackie McLeod said he would make no decision on his future with the Nationals until he discusses the situation with the team adviser, Rev. David Bauer.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander
Staff Sportswriter

Apparently the Montreal Canadiens don't believe in doing things half way.

When they were the doormats of the National Hockey League up until Christmas, every other club in both divisions took turns in beating the Habs.

Now none of the clubs can do it.

From the time Chicago Black Hawks trimmed Canadiens on Christmas night, 3-1, through this past weekend, "Toe" Blake's flying Frenchmen had lost but one game in 23.

The tremendous charge carried Canadiens from last place on January 7 to a healthy 8-point lead in the Eastern division. And that, by the way, was the biggest lead held in the division this season.

The lone loss came a couple weeks back, to the Rangers in New York by a 3-0 count, but the Habs bounced right back to win seven more in succession.

It would appear now that nothing short of a miracle or a disaster, depending on your viewpoint, will stop Montreal from grabbing another NHL championship and Prince of Wales Trophy.

Right after Christmas, something happened to Canadien players who had suffered through the earlier months. The goaltending of veteran Lorne "Gump" Worsley and young Rogatien Vachon was one of the few bright spots on the club during the trying times.

But even the goalies improved when the rest of the squad started to click. Veterans such as Dickie Duff, Jean Beliveau and Claude Provost picked up momentum; the defence jelled; rookie Jacques Lemaire continued his fine play and every man was skating all out.

In short, the feared Canadiens were once more a hockey club.

Meanwhile, the poor Detroit Red Wings (yea, I know I picked them for fourth place) can't keep the puck out of their net short of turning it around backward.

They are getting closer to elimination with each loss and this despite another terrific year by the ageless great, Gordie Howe. Actually, Howe is not "ageless", he just plays like it. Gordie will be 40 next month and is in his 22nd season. He had 27 goals through last Sunday's play and is very close to the league lead in points.

This is nothing new for Howe, of course, since he already owns six individual point championships and has gone something like 18 years without finishing below the league's top ten.

Outside of Howe and occasional sprints by defenceman Gary Bergman and Gordie's fellow veterans, Alex Delvecchio and Norm Ullman, there is little to cheer about in Detroit. Delvecchio and Ullman are up among the point leaders but it doesn't help much to score five goals if you give up six.

Boston Bruins, who threatened a first-place finish earlier, look now as if they may have a fight on their hands to get a playoff spot. The scoring slump by Johnny Bucyk, up and down goalkeeping and most important, the last and most serious of four injuries suffered by the one and only Bobby Orr is the story here.

If the Bruins do "make it," all things point to a failure to do so by the defending Stanley Cup champion Toronto Maple Leafs. New York Rangers have again caught fire, paced by their scoring twins, Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle.

Rangers fought Canadiens for the cellar for a while and coach Emile Francis let it be known that "until Gilbert starts to score, we are in trouble." He started and along with Ratelle and the comeback veteran, Camille "The Eel" Henry, has New York up near the second place Black Hawks.

Chicago is having an in and out season, going from one extreme to the other and back on TV at least, the play of Dennis DeJordy has been one of the reasons. DeJordy was expected to take over in fine style from Glenn Hall but has not held up. And personally, we don't rate Dave Dryden as a first-rate NHL netminder.

As for the Leafs, we are almost afraid to say anything about them "missing the playoff boat." In the past, whenever anyone had such audacity, "Punch" Imlach has always been able to pull an exact turnabout with his crew, even to the point of winning another Stanley Cup.

Needs 10 in 16 Games

Bobby Looking for 50

CHICAGO (CP) — Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks is worried about his golf, while team-mate Bobby Hull aims for his fourth 50-goal season in the National Hockey League.

Hull said this season's 50-goal mark is in sight after he scored his 40th of the season during the Hawks 7-1 victory over Detroit Red Wings Sunday.

But it wasn't hockey that had Mikita's adrenalin flowing.

"Make it quick, boys," said Mikita. "Gotta get going. Gotta date with the big man. I'm meeting him down at Tucson for a round Tuesday.

"Who? Arnold Palmer, of course," said Mikita. "Playing with him Tuesday. Gotta go. You know, you can't keep him waiting for a round of golf.

"No. I've never played with him before," said Mikita, who has no difficulty shooting in the low 70s.

With Mikita gone, talk reverted to hockey and the double weekend triumph over Detroit Red Wings in which the Hawks scored 14 goals, including another hat trick by Kenny Wharram Sunday. Hull's 40th goal of the season had the Hawks talking of a regular-season championship.

Despite the double triumph, the Hawks still trail Montreal Canadiens by six points in the Eastern Divison, but they aren't ready to throw in the sponge.

"We'd be crazy if we did," said Hull.

"It's within reach again," said Hull about the possibility of 50 goals.

"The first time I got it in 1962 I needed 10 in 10 games. This time I need 10 in 16 games. It can be done."

Mo-Hawks Blanked 4-0 in Playoff Game
Senior Hockey Over for Another Year

Oakville rang the curtain down on a dismal season for the Mo-Hawks with a 4-0 whitewash in a sudden-death game to decide the eighth and final playoff position in the OHA Senior "A" division.

The loss was Belleville's sixth in succession, a streak that dropped the Mo-Hawks out of a good shot at sixth place two weeks ago into oblivion last night.

All the scoring came in the first period of a game that saw the losers experience unbelievably bad luck around the Oaks' net from the opening minute of play to the last.

Gaining the shutout for Oakville was former Mo-Hawk Ludger Doucet, making his first start against his ex-mates. Ludger and Lady Luck went steady all night, from the opening minute when George Godson broke in umolested — and shot wide of the net.

Later in the same period, "Shaker" Baker's shot beat Doucet and bounced out off a goalpost. In the second heat, Bob Taylor couldn't tip home Wayne McConnell's goalmouth pass and Dave Jones broke away from an Oaks' powerplay only to shoot over the net.

In the final seconds of the period, Jones ran into impossible luck after Doucet raced well out to try and clear a puck. The Mo-Hawk winger got behind the goalie and flipped the disc toward the open net — and watched in wonderment as it took a high hop completely over the empty cage. Pressing in the third, Greg Marchen and Ralph Plane missed by inches while Jack Wilton and Jim "Obie" O'Brien met the same fate at the other end.

O'Brien, Jackie Price, Don Cossburn and Jerry Maney scored the Oakville goals in that order, the final coming in the period's dying seconds off a Mo-Hawk powerplay. The original Oak shot was knocked down and right onto Maney's stick while another marker was deflected in from mid-air off a Mo-Hawk stick.

Bob Bishop set O'Brien up perfectly on a pretty two-on-one break to open the scoring in the penalty - riddled first period.

In all, referee Bob Nadin dished out 18 minor penalties. The clubs split them evenly, ten coming in the opening stanza.

Doucet and Larry Holmes, who got the nod in the Belleville nets for this one, turned back numerous scoring bids throughout, with the former aided greatly by defenceman Don Curry's excellent play.

Mo-Hawk centre Hec Lalonde, while dressed, was confined to the bench with an arm inury for the third consecutive game. His play-making and Minnie Menard's finishing punch were sorely missed in the stretch drive.

Said one observer: "The Mo-Hawks didn't look sharp at all in the first period but they outplayed the Oaks after that and just couldn't get one decent bounce. Oakville played well enough to win."

The club is likely to play once more before calling it a season if plans jell for a Minnie Menard benefit game in Belleville.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Lawyers Argue Clay Case In Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A three-judge federal court studied today former heavyweight champion Cassius Clay's appeal of a five-year prison sentence and neither the defence or the government would speculate when the court would rule.

The three judges heard 70 minutes of arguments Monday and then took under advisement Clay's appeal of the sentence he received for refusing to enter the armed forces.

The defence, headed by Charles Morgan Jr., an Atlanta lawyer for the Civil Liberties Union, argued that Clay was sincere in a contention he should be exempt from military service because he is a conscientious objector.

Although neither side would speculate when a ruling would be handed down, Susman called it a "preferred case" and said it will be moved up.

Clay refused to be inducted into the army last April 28 and was convicted June 20. He was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000. He has been free on a $5,000 appeal bond.

Domestic groups have stripped him of his heavyweight title.

Clay was not required to be in court and he did not appear.

Morgan asked court to rule Clay's constitutional rights had been violated by a systematic exclusion of Negroes from draft boards. He also called for a ruling that the justice department had erred in rejecting a recommendation Clay be classified as a conscientious objector because of having a Black Muslim minister.

Carl Walker Jr., assistant U.S attorney and himself a Negro, argued Clay had been treated fairly although he agreed there is room for improvement on the racial balance of governmental panels and agencies.

Judge James P. Coleman interrupted at one point in the arguments as he asked Morgan: "What is in the record to indicate he (Clay) would have escaped military service had he been of the white race?

"I can't see anything to indicate the outcome would have been different if he had been your son or mine," Coleman added.

"If a Negro had been on the draft board I think the Negro would have given him a fairer hearing," Morgan replied. "We have a racially excluded system."

Susman argued that Clay never did raise the ministry or conscientious objector questions until he had been classified 1-A on Feb. 17, 1966.

Seven in Football Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch and Charlie Trippi, who ran to glory in the open field, and Marion Motley, who made it with power, are among the seven newest members of professional football's Hall of Fame.

They will be inducted formally at ceremonies in Canton sometime next summer.

Hirsch, now assistant to president Dan Reeves of Los Angeles Rams, starred at halfback for Wisconsin and Michigan, and, then as an end, led the NFL in scoring and pass receptions with the Rams in 1951. He had pro career total of 6,293 yards and 53 touchdowns with the old Chicago Rockets and the Rams.

Trippi rode high as a pro as a member of the Dream Backfield of Chicago Cardinals, now St. Louis.

Moira and Quinte Wrestlers Tune Up for Ontario Finals

Moira and Quinte placed high at the COSSA wrestling championships at Peterborough this weekend, but not high enough to win. Anderson Secondary School of Whitby won the meet, and the Dunlop Trophy, for the second consecutive year.

The final team standings were: Anderson, 97; Moira 75; Quinte, 63; Pickering, 59. Other local teams in the meet were: Centre Hastings, who placed 11th with 26 points; Trenton, 12th with 21 points; and BCI, 19th with 2 points.

The meet, held at newly-opened Thomas A. Stewart Secondary School in Peterborough, attracted 150 wrestlers from 20 schools.

Those who qualified at this meet now move on to the Ontario Championships, sponsored by the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations. The meet will be held this Friday and Saturday, at Centennial Secondary School, Belleville. This provincial championship is expected to be the biggest on record, attracting some 500 wrestlers from 14 athletic associations and 100 schools.

Three Moira and two Quinte wrestlers took firsts in their weight class at the COSSA meet. For Moira, B. Hinchey won the 90 pound class, A. McLuskie the 98 pound class, and W. Morris the 123 pound class. Quinte's T. Brant took the 115 pound class, and Harold Townsend won the 183 pound division.

Second place finishers from local area schools included S. McDonald of Trenton, in the 90 pound class, D. Storey of Quinte, at 136 pounds, and D. Finch of Centre Hastings, at 141 pounds.

Thirds went to P. Turgeon of Trenton in the 115 pound class, D. Casselman of Quinte, at 123, D. Asseltine of Centre Hastings, at 148, and H. Brant of Moira in the unlimited class.

With The Trotters

TORONTO (CP) —Carman Hie of Cobourg, Ont., picked up his eighth victory of the season Monday at Greenwood Raceway by steering Mindy M. home first in the fifth race.

Mindy M., third most of the race, powered through the final few yards to edge Fancy Knight by a head at the wire.

The victory raised the 23-year-old Hie's winnings this year to over $10,000—a plateau reached by only eight other drivers here this year.

Letters and Picketing Keep Star Trek in NBC's Schedule

NEW YORK (AP)—Star Trek fans, who have been writing letters and picketing network headquarters to keep the show from being cancelled, now may relax. The program has definitely been included in NBC's 1968-69 schedule and, providing sponsors can be found, will be among the survivors next September.

The three networks are deep in plans for next season, going through the annual February rite called "locking in" their schedules.

While the sponsors are interested in putting their money on shows likely to win the Nielsen rating races seven or more months hence, the viewers are more interested in the fate of favorite programs at the end of this season.

CBS has officially dropped the axe on four Lost in Space, Good Morning World, He and She and Cimarron Strip.

NBC is still working on its schedule, but Run for Your Life and the Danny Thomas Show are among the casualties and so are, unless there is a last-minute reprieve, The Monkees and I Dream of Jeannie. Tarzan and I Spy may not survive.

ABC, which trailed the other two networks all season in the ratings but improved its position with midseason replacements, is still making its decisions. Off to See the Wizard is definitely dead, and among other likely candidates for oblivion are Cowboy in Africa, Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, Rat Patrol, Felony Squad and The Invaders. The Second Hundred Years still has a chance to survive if its ratings improve when it replaces Batman at the head of ABC's Thursday night schedule.

It is probable that The Avengers will continue as a regular series. It Takes a Thief and Operation: Entertainment are both midseason additions likely to be around in September.

Andy Griffith will retire from CBS in Mayberry R.F.D., with Ken Berry taking over the lead. Berry, last seen in F Troop will be introduced into the Griffith show March 11 for four episodes, and Andy will help out next season by appearing in several of the new shows.

L and A Hospital Auxiliary Sponsors Valentine Ball

NAPANEE — The St. Valentine's Day Ball sponsored by the Auxiliary of the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital was the highlight of the social season for the area. The gymnasium of the Prince Charles School was transformed into an elegant ballroom, dimly-lighted, capturing all the romance connected with the day. The long corridors were changed into softly lit rooms where refreshments were there for the taking. Cleverly arranged decorations concealed the length of hall beyond.

The traditional colors for the day were used everywhere in the decorations, red, white and silver, with cupids, hearts and red roses carrying out the theme. The height of the gymnasium was cut down by using mobiles suspended from the ceiling, a huge circular one at the centre, with its ribbons, honeycomb hearts and cupids, and smaller ones at each light. On the stage was a huge picture frame through which burst Cupid, complete with wings and bow and arrow.

Small tables arranged along the walls had alternate red or white covers, each centred by a candle in the contrasting color. The lighting came only from the candles and from the stage lights.

The co-conveners of the event, Mrs. Denis Rodrigues and Mrs. A. E. T. Thomsen, were responsible for the decorations, with the assistance of Mrs. James Madden and Mrs. Bert Asselstine.

Tht tables for the buffet supper were narrow, of necessity, but were attractively arranged and decorated.

Mrs. Clayton Metcalfe convened the buffet table, Miss Gladys Gehen the dessert table and Mrs. E. R. Elliott the punch table, assisted by Mrs. Cora Parker, Mrs. Marion Bonham, Mrs. Margaret Gibson, Mrs. Elaine Gilbert and Mrs. Vivian Rich, as hostesses, assisted at the tables as need arose.

Accepting admission tickets were Mrs. Harold Taffs and Mrs. W. S. Phippen, Mrs. H. L. Armstrong was in charge of ticket sales.

To Your Good Health

Even A Little Nip May Harm Child

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Please discuss the effect of alcoholic beverages on children's health and well-being.

I was shocked to see a guest at my son's house feed my 10-month-old grandson Scotch and soda from his glass.

I asked my daughter-inlaw if she allowed such a thing and she said, "A few nips won't hurt." I also found out that her relatives actually believe that a few sips of beer are good for the baby. — E.M.

As a grandmother, you don't have much authority over the upbringing of this child, so I suppose the best you personally can do is hope that the baby doesn't suffer.

I share your feeling of being shocked, all the same, and I wouldn't permit a guest to do any such thing in my home.

It is utter nonsense to believe that beer is "good for a baby," and it is even worse to feed a tiny tot Scotch or other hard liquor.

It is possible that "a few sips" may not hurt, but it is a double-eyed, steel - jacketed cinch that the few sips can't do any good.

The danger is in bringing up a child from babyhood to think that sampling liquor is a proper thing to do. This might not do any damage, but it is running the risk of getting a youngster drinking years before the child has any idea of what drinking can do or how it must be kept within limits.

And worst of all, there is the risk that a child will actually acquire a taste for alcohol, and you spell that disaster.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain about hemorrhoids, how they form and how one can avoid that kind of discomfort. Does the cure have to be surgival or medicated? I am 83 and retired. — D. E.

Why don't you send for my booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids"? Send 30 cents in coin plus 6 cents for postage, also a self-addressed, unstamped envelope to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy.

Hemorrhoids are varicose veins — swollen veins in the anal (or "rectal") area. Some inborn weakness of those veins is doubtless a common factor, but avoiding both constipation and straining in the bathroom are important measures in controlling or preventing them.

When hemorrhoids, or "piles" advance to a certain stage, the only real cure is surgical removal, plus dilation afterward to prevent scar tissue from forming and making elimination difficult.

However, if the discomfort is relatively mild, and the hemorrhoids are not too advanced, medication can ease the pain, and sensible measures to avoid constipation and straining will be very helpful in not letting the trouble get any worse.

At 83 you have reason to rely on these more conservative methods unless your case is one which demands surgery, so ask your physician for his advice in deciding the answer. The booklet, meantime, will give you an understanding of the nature of the difficulty

Dear Dr. Molner: The weight of the knowledge I am inadvertently carrying, with no one to confide in or question, is driving me crazy. What could or should be done for a young man (unmarried) in his early 20's who masturbates? I am desperately awaiting your reply — W. S. N.

Don't do anything about it. It is extremely common among males with no other outlet for their young energies, and in any reasonable degree is not going to harm the young man.

Test Well Results Bring Visions of Hudson Bay Oil Field

OTTAWA (CP) — Visions of pipelines carrying oil from Hudson Bay to refineries at Montreal and Sarnia, Ont., were raised today as geologists conferred on the mineral potential of the bay and surrounding lowlands.

A series of geological and geophysical studies by federal scientists in the last four years has spurred oil exploration activities by oil companies.

Two oil groups reported encouraging signs, including a test well on shore in Manitoba near the Ontario boundary. If current studies show further indications, one group hopes to sink a test well several miles offshore in the waters of the bay in 1970.

Discussing the outlook of any sizeable oil strike, two officers of Atlantic Richfield Co. said in an interview that a pipeline from Churchill, Man., to refineries at Montreal or Sarnia, Ont., would be a natural development.

Thomas J. Hitchcock, regional exploration manager, and John Hodgkinson said Atlantic Richfield will have no final answer to the oil potential until 1970.

Atlantic Richfield holds exploration leases on 49,000,000,000 acres—an area half the size of the province of Alberta—under Hudson Bay.

Rock similar to the oil-bearing structures of Alberta and southwestern Ontario has been spotted by federal geologists and by oil companies.

The Atlantic Richfield work, done by Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd., indicates the sedimentary structures to be 8,000 feet thick. This is about 1,500 feet thicker than was reported in 1965 by George D. Hodson of the Geological Survey of Canada.

Next step is a $1,250,000 marine seismological survey this summer, using ships to tow a cable with equipment to record shock waves from dynamite explosions. This will give a clearer picture of the deapth of sediment and extent of any oil pools that may be trapped there.

The results of the on-shore test well were reported Monday to the conference, the first time they have been made public. It was drilled by Aquitaine for a nine-company group of Canadian, American and French oil interests.

Dr. Peter Hodd of the Geological Survey of Canada said the well, drilled to a depth of 2,941 feet, showed some signs of oil. He contrasted this with some 100 dry wells drilled by Imperial Oil before it brought in Alberta's rich Leduc field in 1947.

The nine-company group has commissioned a series of seismic studies along the coast between Cape Tatnam and Fort Severn which now are under way.

The exploration work in the last five years has involved some $8,000,000 by the oil companies.

Geologists also reported other mineral indications, especially in the swampy lowlands bordering the bay. They include columbium, gypsum and limestone.

Dr. A. W. Norris of the Geological Survey said the federal scientists delineated for the first time two large sedimentary basins.

One is south of Moose River in the general area of Moosonee, Ont., with a depth of 2,500 feet and another in the northwest extending from the Manitoba-Ontario shore out into Hudson Bay with a depth of about 6,000 feet.

Both bear close resemblance to the type of rock in existing oilfields which have long been sources of commercial quantities of oil and gas.

Realtor to Use Computer Service

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paper shuffling soon will be a thing of the past in one Vancouver real estate company's office, thanks to the computer age.

Ron R. Hunter, managing director of A. E. Austin and Co., is installing a computer to speed the handling of listings for salesmen and customers.

Mr. Hunter says a salesman or client can go through 1,000 listings in 60 seconds by using the computer.

As part of his new profram, the managing director is consolidating the firm's five separate offices into a new building. Mr. Hunter has a staff of about 90 employees, but expects this will be expanded to 150 when the system is in full operation.

The computer will be fed information on punch cards about houses, apartments, office space and properties.

If a client is seeking, say, a four-bedroom home with den and recreation room in Vancouver's Kerrisdale area in the $25,000 range, the computer will spew out all available listings.

The computer is rented for $600 a month.

Mr. Hunter, who considers the rental a good investment since it is less than the monthly pay of a good salesman, says the computer has values other than its speed.

He said the machine will not repeat the penchant of many salesmen to show only their favorite listings.

"The machine has no preference," he said. "It gives the customer everything that is available."

The salesman then takes the client around to the various listings for a personal inspection.

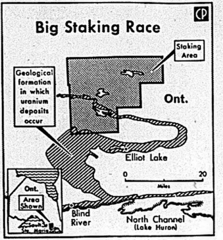
"And perhaps somebody wants to sell," says Mr. Hunter. "He's asking $50,000 for his house. We push a button and out come all the houses for sale at $50,000. He can tell whether he's asking too little or too much for his place."

Mr. Hunter also said there is a big future in referral business.

Within a year, he expects to be hooked up with dealers who have computers in other cities.

Through inter-company co-operation, dealers in the linked cities learn about proposed movements of householders. Members then send relocation manuals to possible clients, giving them details about their new cities. If they know what type of house the prospect wants, they can also notify him what is available.

Two women employees of the real estate firm are to be trained in Baltimore to run the computer before it is installed.



Ready for the Race

About 1,000 prospectors are poised in and around Elliot Lake, Ont., to stake claims on 100,000 acres being reopened by the Ontario government at noon Monday, Feb. 19. Two thousand claims are expected to be staked in the area, through which runs a geological formation in which uranium deposits occur. The manager of of Elliot Lake's three hotels, John Gautier, says the boom is expected to bring $100,000 to the town. (CP Newsmap)

Auto Companies Owe Millions Auditor-General Discloses

OTTAWA (CP) — It is essential that administration of the Canada-U.S. auto tariff agreement be tightened up, Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson said Monday in his annual report to Parliament.

It "appears" that one auto company, not identified, may owe more than $30,000,000 in duties and taxes, his report disclosed.

Since the tariff-cutting agreement began in January, 1965, "not one cent of duty has yet been collected from any company for failure to meet the conditions of the order."

The arrangement is that an auto company or parts manufacturer may import tax-free an amount equal to its exports. If imports exceed exports, duty must be paid on the difference.

Mr. Henderson says the system being followed by the revenue department is to withhold the imposition of import taxes until the company reports on its exports. But the information being supplied has been late and inadequate.

The effect has been that the government "is participating in the financing of automobile production."

He suggests that all taxes be collected at the time of import and rebates made only after the manufacturer has produced evidence of his exports.

One company found that its exports were running far behind imports because of heavy domestic sales between January, 1965, and July 31, 1965, the end of the annual accounting period under the agreement.

To overcome this, it arranged with dealers to report July auto deliveries as being made Aug. 2. This arrangement saved the company "several millions of dollars." It was accepted by the government after some study.

Land Optioned Near Bath, Port Hope For Hydro Development Says Chairman

By 1971 Ontario Hydro will be receiving more power from thermal than from water sources, according to Hydro Chairman George Gathercole.

Dr. Gathercole told Belleville Rotarians yesterday that the province is approaching the end of available hydro-electric sites. Henceforth it will depend largely on thermal sources, including both nuclear and fossil fuel.

Remaining hydro sites, he said, are confined to a number of small ones mainly in northwestern Ontario.

Dr. Gathercole said Hydro with a power capacity of some 9,000,000 kilowatts expects to almost double this figure by another 8,000,000 kilowatts over the next decade.

He estimated the cost of this development at $1,250,000,000, with an additional billion for transmission and distribution facilities.

Explaining the term "fossil", Dr. Gathercoole said it referred to coal, oil and gas sources. He did not know which would receive most favor, but at the moment coal "has the inside track as far as economics are concerned".

Listing a number of major projects being undertaken in the continuing program to keep up with Ontario's domestic and industrial needs, Dr. Gathercole added that land has been optioned at Bath, near Kingston, and Wesleyville, west of Port Hope, for power stations affording some two million kilowatts each. One would likely be a nuclear-powered operation.

"The type of station depends on many factors, but whether it is nuclear or thermal it is bound to boost the economic activity in the area of the site."

In taking an option on land, Dr. Gathercole pointed out that a seven-year period is now required from the planning stage to time of completion.

He said that despite strikes Hydro has met its winter load requirements. Nevertheless capacity and requirements occasionally are in close balance.

Noting that another 740,000 kilowatts will be provided this year, Dr. Gathercole said: "We need this just to keep even."

Explaining the fluctuations in demand for electrical energy, the Hydro chairman said it varies during the day and year. Summer time peak is about 60 per cent of the peak in winter.

Lecturer Has Three Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Teresa Harmstone, 40, says she has three jobs, not one.

She is the mother of a 12-year-old son, a homemaker, and assistant professor of Carleton University's political science department. She is also, incidentally, an author.

Born Teresa Rakowska in Poznan, Poland, she grew up during the Second World War.

"I'm lucky to be alive," she said, pausing for a short interview in her book-lined office at the university. She had just given an hour-long public lecture to about 300 people on nationalism in the U.S.S.R..

Most of her friends took part in the Warsaw uprising by the Poles against the Germans in 1944 and most were killed.

After the war she attended the Academy of Political Science in Warsaw and worked a year in the Polish ministry of foreign affairs.

"My father was in the Polish underground during the war and after the war was sent as consul-general of Poland to Montreal."

Mrs. Harmstone, who accompanied her family, began an honors course in 1948 in political science and history at McGill University, Montreal.

"I'm extremely grateful to McGill University because they made it possible for me to finish my BA."

Two years after graduation, she had added a master's degree in Soviet studies from Radcliff College, Cambridge, Mass. She immediately set to work to earn a doctorate in political science at Harvard, passing her general exams in 1953.

"I had the usual saturation of studies. Then I began working, got married and had a son. So for eight years I didn't do anything on my thesis."

She finished it, however, and got her doctorate in 1966.

At Carleton, she not only lectures but also is assistant supervisor of graduate studies in political science.

Her thesis research forms the basis of the book she is currently writing — Russia in Soviet Central Asia: The Case of Tadzhikistan.

True Bills Returned In City Food Robbery

A grand jury has returned true bills on two charges, conspiracy to commit robbery and robbery with violence, against Larry Wayne Morrison of 126 Palmer Road and Lawrence Schlaer of Montreal.

The decision followed the opening of the assizes yesterday afternoon at 2 p.m. The spring assizes of the supreme court for the County of Hastings will be before Mr. Justice Keith.

Another charge against Morrison, attempting to escape lawful custody has been adjourned to March 6th due to the illness of a defence witness said Crown Attorney Glenn Deline.

This morning a petit jury was chosen for the Morrison trial and testimony began.

Mathew William Morrison, 17, brother of the accused took the stand. He is an employee of Food City which was robbed of $12,000 on Sept. 1 of last year.

The manager of Food City was accosted, while in possession of the money, and left in a ditch at the side of the road during the robbery.

Glenn Deline is crown attorney for the case and Robert J. Carter of Toronto is acting as the defense counsel. The trial is continuing.

TORONTO STOCKS

It was the market's first and apparently cautious reaction to the defeat in Parliament Monday night of the minority Liberal government on a bill to add a five-per-cent surcharge to personal income taxes.

Brokers said they expect investors to stay on the sidelines to see what the government is going to do next.

Price changes were few and small. Industrials and oils were off fractionally, base metals posted some minor gains.

Scurry-Rainbow fell 1 to 35¾ among the oil issues.

In base metals, Patino rose ¾ to 18 while Kerr Addison declined ⅛ to 15⅛ in the golds section.

On index, industrials were down .17 to 150.99, golds 1.35 to 222.08 and oils .70 to 185.02. Base metals gained .21 to 98.90.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 621,000 shares compared with 652,000 at the same time Monday.

Vietnam War Being Prosecuted Under Old Decree of Emergency

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Johnson has questioned whether the United States, already under a 17-year-old proclamation of national emergency, has all the powers needed for the heightened hostilities in Southeast Asia.

The Vietnamese war, among other defence activities, is being prosecuted under executive powers dependent on the state of emergency proclaimed by President Harry Truman Dec. 16, 1950, after Red China's intervention in the Korean War.

The controversial Gulf of Tonkin resolution approved by Congress Aug. 7, 1964, is cited by Johnson as the legal source of his authority to wage war in Vietnam, but it provides none of the extraordinary presidential powers under which the war is being prosecuted.

If the Tonkin resolution were repealed, as some U.S senators have proposed, the United States might pull out of Vietnam but the emergency powers would continue.

Many of those special powers—at least 134 of them—are in effect or available for use if needed because of the Truman proclamation.

Under them, the president can control the movement of aliens into and out of the country, send military help to other countries, streamline buying procedures for military items, impose stern security rules and take other measures not normally available to the executive branch.

Other laws—notably the Defence Production Act, under which basic metals are allocated to munitions producers—are the source of further extraordinary powers.

But the president told senior members of the Senate and House armed services and appropriations committees recently that he may have to ask for additional powers "to meet contingencies" arising from North Korea's seizure of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo.

Johnson did not disclose what might be proposed. Later, White House press secretary George Christian said some thought was being given to empowering the president to call up individual reservists needed for special technical and other skills.

A declaration of national emergency is basically a triggering device. It brings into effect legal powers which are tolerated in times of war or danger but are not wanted in peacetime.

The powers usually are written into laws which make them effective for the duration of the emergency or for the duration plus six months. Then the laws become inoperative, although still on the books and available for the next emergency.

At no time since the Second World War has a U.S. president felt peace sufficiently assured to end the state of emergency.

Some of the extraordinary powers in the law books are not brought into effect by the declaration of an emergency but by a state of war or a state of hostilities. And the almost totalitarian powers contained in the Civil Defence Act come into play only in event of a nuclear assault on the United States.

Florida's Public School Teachers Out on Strike

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A statewide walkout by Florida public school teachers that shut more than 500,000 pupils out of class Monday went into its second day today. Spokesmen said 9,000 more teachers will join the 26,000 who have quit their jobs.

A hearing was set this afternoon before Circuit Judge Ben. C. Willis on the state's request for a permanent injunction to end the walkout.

The Florida Education Association says that in resigning their jobs, teachers are not violating an anti-strike law and cannot be ordered to work.

Several local school boards sought injunctions to halt strikes in their counties.

The association's dispute with the state is over the public education program. The association says the state has not provided enough money.

School officials in the state's 67 counties said 26,005 teachers—out of 60,844—were off the job Monday.

Strictly Personal

No Reason to Pronunciation

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of my sons, who is taking first-year Spanish, wanted to know why all the radio and TV news announcers spoke of the recent "Greek junta," and pronounced the "j" as in "jam," rather than giving it the sound of "h," as it has in the original Spanish.

But when foreign words are used in English, there is absolutely no rhyme or reason to their pronunciation, and there are not even any clear rules to go by. Nobody knows why we anglicize some of them, and try to pronounce others as they sound in their native tongue.

We pronounce such French words as "rouge" and "rendezvous" and "garage in the French way, but an equal number in the English way. (Incidentally, not many Americans know that the British pronounce "garage" to rhyme with "carriage," and have made a totally English word out of it.)

Sometimes we end up in absurdity, like the popular American pronunciation of "lingerie," which usually sounds like "lawn-juh-ray," which is neither French nor English. The French pronounce it "lanzh-ree," with a flat "a" and a long 'e" at the end. Our version is not only a bastardized pronunciation, by the way, but it also means something quite different from 'lingerie" in French.

Why is Des Moines, Iowa, pronounced in the French way, with the final "s" dropped on both words, but Des Plaines, Ilinois, pronounced the English way, with the final "s" sounded on both words? Either style could be justified, but it's irrational to have both forms prevailing.

Americans, actually, are somewhat more inclined to give the foreign sound to alien words than the British are. Most Americans will say "Don Kee-hote" and "Don Wahn" for "Don Quixote" and "Don Juan,' but the British resolutely uglify them into "Don Kwiks-ote,' and "Don Jew-ahn." British imperialism may have ended politically, but its verbal residues linger on.

What most irritates me, however, is not when a foreign word is given an approximate English pronunciation, but when it is given a pronunciation that it does not have in its own language and should not have in English. The outstanding example is "forte," meaning a person's strong point. Most Americans call it "for-tay," under the snobbishly mistaken assumption that this is the way it is pronounced in French, when it is actually pronounced like "fort."

As for "junta," there simply is no "j" sound in Spanish, but if we want to put one there we have a right to, by hingo!

How come we "quiet Canadians" are the world's talking-est telephone users?

Could be that Canadians have an eye for a bargain.

For the 14th year in succession, Canadians have led the world in telephone calls per person. Why? One reason could be this: your telephone company makes conversation inexpensive . . . and easy. In Canada, a flat residential rate covers all local calls. In most other countries, each call over a monthly maximum is charged separately. And the number of "work hours" it takes to pay for a residence telephone for one month is lower in Canada than anywhere else in the world. (In Bell Canada territory, a man employed in the manufacturing industry works an average of 2.1 "work hours" to pay for monthly telephone service as against 2.5 in the U.S.A.; 4.5 in London; 15.8 in Paris.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara says the Soviet Union may have as many land-based nuclear missiles as the United States by mid-1969.

Sources said Monday that word was passed to Congress in McNamara's annual military posture statement. The point was not included in the version publicly released in late January after heavy censoring.

It was the first time a cabinet officer has been known to set a timetable for when the Soviet Union might catch up with the United States in terms of land-launched intercontinental ballistics missiles.

McNamara's disclosure of latest intelligence projections—based largely on reconnaissance photographs—means Russia is expected to have more than 1,000 ICBMs in underground firing silos in about 18 months.

He estimated they had 720 as of last Oct. 1.

The United States has reached its planned peak of 1,054 land-based missiles. But it plans to produce new ones which will carry not one but three warheads capable of striking different targets.

In a statement Monday on the strategic situation, the defence department said the Russians "are unlikely to possess a total of land and sea-based ICBM launchers equal to ours until the latter part of the 1970s, if then."

This is because the United States currently holds a huge lead in submarine-born missiles —656 to Russia's 30.

Legislature Will Outlaw Wage Assignments

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature gave first reading Monday to bills that would outlaw wage assignments, give superior court judges an increase in pay and allow persons under 18 to enter a pool hall.

First reading also was given to bills that would:

—Set up an ombudsman;

Delete embalmers from the list of persons who may sell pre-paid funeral services;

Enable an Anglican coadjutor or suffragan bishop, in addition to a bishop, to sign conveyances, leases or mortgages;

Extend the Private Investigators and Security Guards Act to cover persons who transport valuables under guard;

Obligate a judge to send notice of his appointment of a barrister to act as his deputy to the inspector of legal offices rather than the provincial secretary.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart introduced all of the bills except the one pertaining to an ombudsman. That one was championed by Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) who had similar bills talked out during the last three years.

Opposition members thumped their desks with obvious glee when Mr. Wishart introduced the bill that would prevent workers from assigning a portion of their wages to meet debts other than those to a credit union.

"We only had to say it 50 times," Mr. Singer interjected.

"We introduced it two years ago," said Donald MacDonald, New Democratic Party leader, in reference to the act to amend the Wages Act.

Mr. Wishart said outside the House wage assignments create a lot of confusion, bookkeeping and expense for companies.

He said that without wage assignments buyers will have to be more careful about incurring debts and sellers will have to be more careful about extending credit.

The attorney-general's bill to amend the Extra-Judicial Services Act will increase the provincial compensation to supreme court Judges, for services required under Ontario legislation, to $6,000 from $4,000 a year.

His amendment to the Minor's Protection Act adopts a recommendation made last March by the legislature's select committee on youth.

If the bill receives royal assent, children of any age will be permitted to enter pool halls. The minimum age now is 18.

Shulman Says He Got Tip on Whereabouts Of Elias Rabbiah, Former President of Racan

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto-High Park, said Monday he has received a tip on the whereabouts of Elias Rabbiah, former president of Racan Photo-Copy Corp.

Rabbiah has been the subject of an intensive police search in Canada and the United States since Jan. 10, 1967, when he failed to appear in court to face charges of defrauding Racan of some $248,000.

He was the firm's founder and served as president from its incorporation in 1960 until March 31, 1964. The firm went bankrupt in 1965, shortly after the collapse of Atlantic Acceptance Corp., at which time it owed Atlantic about $1,000,000.

Dr. Shulman asked Attorney-General Wishart in the legislature Monday whether the minister knew Rabbiah's whereabouts.

Mr. Wishart replied that he didn't and that his department had notified "practically all" polic eforces in an attempt to find him.

"Interpol, the international police agency, is looking for him and is aware of our fervent desire to find him."

The reply prompted Dr. Shulman to ask a second question: "Were you aware of his whereabouts 3½ weeks ago?"

The reply again was negative. Dr. Shulman said later outside the House that he had a tip on Rabbiah's whereabouts and was "checking it out."

NORAD Pact May Depend on U.S. Halting H-Bomb Overflights

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada may ask the United States to discontinue flights of hydrogen-bomb-carrying planes over this country as part of the price of remaining in North American Air Defence Command, informants say.

The present 10-year NORAD agreement between Canada and the U.S. expires in May and negotiations on a renewal, likely for a shorter period, have begun.

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Feb. 13 that Canada has already indicated to the U.S. that it intends to continue co-operating in continental air defence. He did not specifically refer to NORAD, however.

This is the Russian view as well and the Soviet Union protested such flights after the Jan. 21 crash of an American bomber off Thule, Greenland, in which four hydrogen bombs were lost.

Officials here say the U.S. has more than enough nuclear missiles in underground silos and in submarines to destroy Russia even after a surprise Soviet strike.

They add that nuclear bomber patrols, designed originally so the nuclear strike force would not be caught on the ground by surprise, serve now only as a nervous additive to East-West relations.

The number of U.S. nuclear flights over Canada has never been disclosed but is believed to be in the hundreds each year. Canadian approval for such flights has been almost automatic.

Fisheries Minister Robichaud assured the Commons Monday there is no danger of radioactive contamination to fishing banks from the four lost bombs off Thule.

But such accidents alarm the Canadian—and world—public, officials say.

The U.S. is believed to want Canada to stay in NORAD if only for its original reason—use of Canadian air space for refence.

Continental air defence co-operation existed between Canada and the U.S. for many years before the 1958 NORAD agreement.

Mr. Pearson when external affairs minister showed no great enthusiasm for Canada joining NORAD which, in effect, put Canadian troops under U.S. command for the first time in peacetime.

Gen. Charles Foulkes, former chairman of the chiefs of staff committee, has said the Canadian military "stampeded" the Conservative government into NORAD.

Canada now has only three interceptor squadrons—48 operational planes—in NORAD and has no current plans to replace the present aircraft, the American CF-101 Voodoo.

Pearson Will Seek Confidence Motion

Threat Faces Dollar

NEW YORK (CP) — The Times says Canada will be better off if Prime Minister Pearson's Liberal government wins a vote of confidence in the House.

Commenting on the government's defeat on a major tax bill, The Times says editorially:

"It was good political fun for opposition forces to seize an unexpected opportunity to defeat the Canadian government . . . but it would be irresponsible to carry the joke any farther. A serious attempt to bring down Prime Minister Pearson at this time could plunge the country into political chaos and imperil a Canadian dollar just beginning to recover from sustained heavy pressures."

It would be "an enormous handicap for the Liberals to go into an election campaign under a lame-duck leader with 11 aspirants fighting for his job," says The Times, referring to Pearson's impending retirement.

Such an election would "be bad for Canada, and thus bad over the long run for the Conservatives, even if they won."

The government's defeat Monday night, says The Times, was the result of a "fluke."

Mountie Head Fears Hippies

OTTAWA (CP) — The lawless "beat" generation will create a mounting fear of anarchy in Canada unless it is met firmly by police with "massive public and governmental support," RCMP Commissioner M. F. A. Lindsay said Tuesday.

He said this fear now is developing in the United States. Thousands of unsettled, unhappy youngsters of the affluent generation apparently had no qualms about anti-social, criminal activities.

Speaking to the Ottawa Men's Canadian Club, Commissioner Lindsay forecast that the cost of crime generally—including organized crime—will become astronomical unless police get more co-operation from the public.

Cement Workers Return March 4

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Canada Cement Company's Point Anne plant will be back to normal operations in less than two weeks.

The company announced today it will resume production March 4, completely ending a two-month layoff that idled more than 130 workers.

Today's back-to-work confirmation from plant superintendent J. M. Legate, bore out an earlier company promise that the layoff would not last beyond early March.

Just two weeks ago the company signalled the layoff was ending when it recalled more than 60 employees to set the stage for work resumption.

Mr. Legate said the remainder of the work force will be called back in the next week or so.

Personal hardships associated with temporary industrial redundancy were blunted for Point Anne workers.

Stipends under the agreement, added to unemployment insurance, provided workers with an estimated 80 per cent of their normal take-home pay packet.

Long Debate Seems Certain

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet held another emergency meeting today on the crisis brought on by its defeat Monday night on a key tax bill.

Prime Minister Pearson emerged from the 70-minute meeting with a "no comment."

"I'm not saying anything," he told reporters.

A few minutes later, he went to a West Block caucus of Liberal MPs. The Conservative caucus was meeting in the same building.

If the prime minister had nothing to say, Michael Starr, Conservative floor leader, had plenty to say.

"If the government had any principle at all, it would resign," he said. "This is unheard of. The government can't keep reversing votes just to suit itself."

For Other Stories
See Page 7

NDP Leader Douglas has said a confidence motion was the only course open to the prime minister apart from dissolving Parliament. The New Democrats would vote against the motion.

The cabinet was understood to have considered the form of motion it will try to place before the Commons at 2:30 p.m. EST today.

It will need unanimous consent to do this—and will not get it, Mr. Starr said.

The government confidence motion did not appear on today's Commons order paper, meaning that it cannot be debated until Friday at the earliest without unanimous consent.

When unanimous consent is refused today, as expected, the government is expected to ask for another 24-hour adjournment.

Presumably, it would have to go through the same procedure Thursday.

There were indications that the government will confine itself to a simple confidence motion.

It would then try to reinstate the tax bill on which it was de-

Poisoned Animals Still Safe to Eat

CAYUGA, Ont. (CP) — Meat, milk or eggs from livestock or fowl suffering from fluoride poisoning are safe for human consumption, the Ontario pollution inquiry was told Tuesday.

Dr. Stanley Slinger, a nutritionist with the University of Guelph, told the public inquiry that fluorides are stored in the bones and little gets into the muscle tissue.

He made the remarks after a farmer told the inquiry that cattle suffering from fluorosis were sold at the Toronto stockyards.

Dr. Slinger said that a person could consume more fluoride by drinking tea or eating sea food than would be absorbed from fluoride-poisoned cattle.

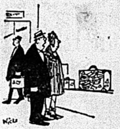
Little Expected From Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. administration courses express little optimism that United Nations Secretary-General U Thant's talks with President Johnson on Vietnam will produce any new U.S. peace move.

Thant's visit to the White House today is considered, sources said, simply an extension of his recent trips to Europe and Asia in which he sounded out North Vietnamese officials about peace talks.



"It's either U Thant's or Bob Hope's."

Fight for Hue in Fourth Week

SAIGON (AP) — Heavy gunfire and thunderous artillery shook Hue's walled citadel today, opening the fourth week of one of the Vietnam war's most savage and sustained battles.

On the outskirts of Saigon, U.S. and South Vietnamese troops reported killing 155 Viet Cong in two battles Tuesday.

Lt.-Gen. Robert Cushman Jr., commander of the U.S. marines in Vietnam, said the battle in Hue could go on for several more weeks because the defending Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops are able to send in fresh supplies and troops through tunnels and sewers.

The marines today trained a loudspeaker on the former Imperial Palace and warned the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong dug in there to surrender or die. When no white flag went up, the marines unleashed artillery barrages and tear gas.

Associated Press correspondent George McArthur reported that this touched off a heavy firefight that echoed all over the coastal city 400 miles northeast of Saigon.

Cushman told correspondents in Da Nang one marine battalion had suffered serious casualties in the fighting inside the walled fortress and would be replaced.

He estimated that the North Vietnamese had put an entire division into the Hue battle and they are committed to fight to the last man.

CNR Expansion

Special Committee to Study Recommendations of Report

A special committee composed of city and rural municipal representatives along with a CN railway official has been named to consider recommendations contained in roadway planning study report covering the city's east end district.

Appointment of the committee was made Monday following a joint meeting of city and council officials to hear the report of Damas and Smith Consulting Engineers on planning study done in connection with the proposed Haig Road extension and grade separation at the CN double tracks in the northeast end of the city.

Members of the special committee will include representatives from city council, the Belleville and Suburban Planning Committee; the Hastings county Road and Bridges Committee and representatives from Thurlow township and the CN railway.

The east end roads study done by Damas and Smith covered the Haig Road area in the east end of the city from Highway No. 2 north to the CN double tracks.

The original proposal called for an upgrading of the present Haig Road with an underpass across the CN tracks at its northern extension.

However, due to the many complexities encountered an entirely new traffic concept has been proposed.

For instance the engineers found it impossible to come up with a functional intersection at Haig Road and No. 2 Highway due to the proximity of the CPR tracks.

So, instead of attempting to plan an intersection at the present location, the proposal is for the Haig Road - No. 2 Highway intersection to be moved approximately 300 feet east.

Then instead of using the present Haig Road for its entire length a new north-south artery would be created to join Haig Road at Victoria Ave.

Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle said that the original concept of an underpass at the CN double tracks had also been scrapped with an overpass instead being proposed.

The thinking of planners is that the proposed north south express route should eventually continue north over 401 highway to meet up with Highway 37 in Thurlow township.

"There were so many changes from the original concept recommended in the report that we thought a special steering committee should be set up to investigate further," said Acting Mayor Boyle.

At Monday night's regular council meeting Alderman Arthur Keegan felt that more than just roadways should be considered in the committee investigation.

He suggested appointment of a Quinte area development committee to also consider other matters such as sewer and water services for the area.

Amalgamation of Township School Boards Is Discussed

PICTON (Staff) — Members of a number of township school boards in Prince Edward County last night heard Edwin Clark of Gananoque speak out on the amalgamation of township school boards. Mr. Clark, President of the Ontario School Trustees and Municipal Councillors Association, spoke to a meeting of the Hillier Township Liberal Association in Hillier Twp. Hall.

Many of those present felt that Prince Edward County school boards haven't yet had sufficient time to see what they can do to prove themselves. Many too were in agreement also that steps should have been taken long ago and some wanted more time by the government to investigate the problem more thoroughly. Mr. Fred Evans, Liberal leader in the county said during his introduction of Mr. Clark to the Association, that he (Mr. Evans) as a resident of Ameliasburgh Township objected along with many others of that township, to getting into a smaller school area.

Mr. Clark was sympathetic to many of the ideas presented by those present and said "My whole organization feels the same way as this group. Mr. Clark explained the breakdown of his organization illustrating that it consisted of three sections or branches; County and Municipal council section; Urban section embracing schools in villages and towns and lastly the rural and township school section.

"Back in 1966," he said, "the further amalgamation of school board was discussed for two days and the resolution sent to the department of education, it was then the unanimous decision to recommend the department of education proceed with haste to bring about the amalgamation." Mr. Clark stated "I do believe that by September we should have a Field Director that can talk to county boards and help them along.

"We must look at any legislation positively," he said, "not as it is today but rather how it may be tomorrow — although there is not much you or I can do about it. The legislation will probably remain as it is now with only a few if any changes."

Mr. Clark suggested that the old county boundary lines would probably be used. "So far" he said, "no one has come up with anything in the way of better ideas." Trustees too, he emphasized will have to be very carefully selected. They will have to be persons who will work for the good of the county as a whole, work as a team and express the thoughts of their community. Mr. Clarke thought too, that they would be quite busy in their administrative capacity and that they will have to delegate their authority to hired help, to assist.

"Lets work on it, Mr. Clarke concluded, from the standpoint that we know it's going to be with us."

A Banker Retires

Sales Tax Problems Voiced

The Canadian Association of Purchasing Agents, Eastern Ontario District, and the Society of Industrial Accountants, Kingston Chapter, met together on Thursday to hear Gordon Lee, District Manager of the Excise Tax Office in Belleville, discuss federal sales tax problems. About 80 members of the combined groups enjoyed a very informative talk and question period. Mr. Lee traced the history of the federal sales tax back to its inception in 1920 — a 1 per cent turnover tax that could be applied every time the product was resold. Since that time several ups and downs have brought it to the present 12 per cent level. This 12 per cent on all things except the necessities of life accounts for approximately 20 per cent of our national income, compared with approximately 36 per cent in France and 44 per cent in West Germany. Throughout the question period, it was noticeable that a very large percentage of taxable items could be argued through a particular use. All in all Mr. Lee's office has a difficult job to do in their audits of business firms books and records.

Mr. G. McCarthy, chairman of the Industrial Accountant group, expressed appreciation to the Purchasing Agents for their large attendance at the first joint meeting of the two groups. Mr. W. Templeton, President of the Purchasing Agents group thanked the Accountants for their kind invitation and a worthwhile and enjoyable evening.

Mental Health Association Members View Fine Film

William S. McKegney, Supervisor, Rehabilitation Services for the Ontario Hospital in Kingston spoke last night at the annual meeting of the Belleville chapter of the Ontario Mental Health Association.

Members of the organization heard of "the Road Back" by many ex-mental patients from the lips of Mr. McKegney and saw it illustrated in a film.

He mentioned that rehabilitation is the most important problem concerning ex-patients. "We like to call them clients when they leave rather than patients."

The film spoke of the importance of rehabilitation as well. "Give them a chance" was the message.

It mentioned people who do not give ex-patients or the mentally-ill a chance by classifying them as "lunatics."

The film outlined the role of community organizations and groups.

After the film Mr. McKegney elaborated a little on it, stating "our greatest single problem is social contact."

In a question and answer period persons at the meeting queried Mr. McKegney about the pros and cons of a White Cross Club, which would eventually provide the ex-patient with social contact not only with other ex-patients but with others in the community.

During the meeting reports were heard from the president, M. M. Hackett and from the various committee chairmen.

The new executive for the organization was announced, Bert Messacar, president, Linton Read, vice-president, Mrs. Jean Wylie, recording secretary, Mrs. Wanda Sine, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Sadie Reynolds, treasurer.

Senior Sailing Course To Open at Yacht Club

Interest in sailing has reached a new high in Belleville.

With a number of new, large keelboats in the harbor and a full race schedule set for the coming season, the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club is offering a five-week senior sailing course at the club house, Victoria Park.

The course will begin Feb. 23 at 8 p.m. and continue every Friday night during March. There is no charge for yacht club members; non-members will be charged $5 for the series.

While the course is designed to interest all present and potential sailors, both male and female, the directors hope to recruit some of the participants to crew racing yachts during the summer.

Jack Braidwood, one-time skipper of the schooner Yankee, will outline sail handling, racing tactics, cruising and navigation as they apply to sailing. On another evening he will return to give an illustrated talk on his trip to the Caribbean on his sloop, Jack Tar. His third lecture will be devoted to yacht design and fibreglass construction.

Ian Morch, owner of Morch Manufacturing and Marina, will present an account of his experiences on the southern ocean racing circuit, where this winter he will be sailing on a Belleville-built Corvette and the new Redline 41.

Willis Metcalfe, author of Canvas and Steam on Quinte Waters, will give an illustrated talk on the history of sailing in the area and the Mariners' Memorial at South Bay.

A club director will present an outline of the revised racing rules.

Shoreline Lots Purchased by Town Council

TRENTON — A major step in beautifying the local scene involved town purchase of all available shoreline lots along the Trent River, council decided this week.

Accordingly, council authorized $450 for purchase of two lots adjacent to the Chamber of Commerce office on Front St. on the west side of the river.

The Department of Transport gives first refusal rights of water lots to owners of adacent property, and council qualified to purchase the two lots in question.

"We intend to tell the department we are interested in all waterfront property for green belt purposes," Mayor James MacDonald said.

Rescue Boat Used 28 Times During Year

TRENTON — Local firemen got plenty of use out of their newest piece of equipment in 1967, according to Fire Chief Cecil Ellis' annual report.

Presented to the fire department following a Chamber of Commerce - sponsored fund-raising drive, the new boat, motor, and trailer unit was officially launched 28 times, including for a number of dragging operations in the Trent River.

Chief Ellis said marine rescue work does not fall in the Fire Department's normal line of duty.

"But with the amount of water and number of water accidents in the area, we feel that, regardless whose job it is, we have in the past, and will continue, to fulfill this most vital service to the town and its residents."

Top management too often pays only lip service to safety, Ontario Labor Minister Dalton Bales warned here last night.

An Ontario worker is killed or injured every minute of a working day, Mr. Bales emphasized as he prodded management to play a leadership role in reducing the toll.

"We have found that top management is too prone to pay only lip service to safety," he told the Belleville-Trenton Industrial Accident Prevention Association at the Shrine Club. "They tend to turn the problem of safety over to lower echelon executives who have the authority to make the program really work.

Total cost of an industrial accident is about four times the direct cost, he said. General production and personnel disruption caused by accidents is not reckoned in the direct cost.

"And we're not talking about peanuts. Last year, the Workmen's Compensation Board paid out nearly $98 million dollars. This bill is paid by the employers of Ontario through their assessments to the board."

In spite of safety programs and enforcement of legislation accidents are still happening, Mr. Bales warned.

In 1967 there were 433 fatalities and 374,670 on-the-job accidents in Ontario.

"That's an improvement over 1966 but . . . men and women in this province are being killed or injured at the rate of almost one per minute during the average working day."

Studies in Canada and the United States show that top management "is the vital, but too often missing, link in the total safety program."

Accident-frequency rates have always been low in the Belleville-Trenton area, compared with other districts, he said.

There were several reasons for this, including management interest in safety.

But he called on the IAPA representatives to emphasize safety to management.

"Tell top management, whenever and wherever you can that their genuine involvement is needed if our provincial safety program is to be improved," said Mr. Bales.

"Tell them the best way is the safe way—from both the financial and the humanitarian point of view."

Federation Supports Authority

BRIGHTON — The Northumberland Federation of Agriculture has supported a move for a conservation authority in the lower Trent Valley.

The federation approved formation of such a body at a meeting here last night.

Citizen groups in the area, which includes southern parts of Northumberland and Hastings counties, are seeking establishment of a conservation authority.

Council to Dicuss Plan

Regional Animal Control A Possibility

Belleville city council in the near future will discuss a proposal by the Quinte Branch of the Ontario Humane Society for setting up of a regional animal control service.

Included in the proposed regional service would be Belleville, the town of Trenton and the rural municipalities of Thurlow, Sidney and Ameliasburg.

This week, Mr. R. Whiten, acting president of the Quinte Branch of the Ontario Humane Society, waited on city council asking members to consider his organization's proposal which in addition to the provision of a regional animal control service would see the constitution of a modern type regional animal shelter.

The cost for the "package" service would be 50 cents per capita with the Humane Society attempting to raise the balance of costs by public appeals and shelter fees.

For the 50 cents per capita fee the society would provide "every humane service possible 24 hours per day and seven days a week."

Participation in the service would remove local councils from the worry and embarrassment of animal control and humane services.

In addition the Quinte Branch of the Humane Society would provide eight further services for the Quinte district.

These would include: 1, rescue of animals in distress; 2, euthanasia service (free service for unwanted litters of kittens); 3, education work with children; 4, the picking up and holding for observation of rabies suspects; 5, disposal of unwanted animals by finding homes, or humane destruction; 6, investigation of complaints under municipal by-laws (noise, destruction of property, etc.); 7, investigation of complaints of cruelty and neglect, and 8, servicing of problems connected with all miscellaneous animals such as skunks, squirrels and raccoons.

The idea of a regional animal shelter was first proposed last fall at which time neighboring municipalities were contacted suggesting a meeting for discussion of the proposal.

Several of the municipalities replied indicating that while they were prepared to attend a meeting they were satisfied with their present program for animal control.

Some Deseronto Students Asked To Leave Napanee High School

DESERONTO — A Deseronto town councillor is concerned about the number of town students dropping out of Napanee District Secondary School.

Mrs. Dorothy McCullough, only female on council, asked last month about students she said have been advised to leave school before final examination time.

Monday night she learned that the exact figures on dropouts are unavailable to anyone outside the high school board.

Council's representative on the Napanee Board, John Layfield, presented some figures. At the end of January, 123 Deseronto students were attending classes at Napanee, but the ratio of successes to failures is not given out by the school or the board, he said.

Mr. Layfield read a letter he received from principal C. S. Froud, which said: "the policy of the school and board does not sanction the preparation nor the distribution of reports which embrace only a group selected by municipalities."

The Deseronto trustee offered to give council members the examination results for grade 13 "but not for Deseronto students alone."

He said he supported the policy "as really having no significant value in pointing out the ratio of successes to failures."

"It would only be embarrassing," Mr. Layfield said. "The ratio is as good or better than some in other districts."

Fire Inspector Requested

TRENTON — For the eighth consecutive year, Fire Chief Cecil Ellis' annual report has asked town council to appoint Robert Haker as Fire Inspector for the town.

The fireman, who passed an inspector's course at the Ontario Fire College in 1959, has been a member of the local department since 1952.

". . . All previous councils have failed to see the importance of this job and that fire inspection and fire prevention saves more property and lives than fire fighting," the fire chief's report says.

Under Inspector Haker's direction, the local department's Fire Prevention Bureau conducted a total of 342 inspections in a two-week period last summer.

Every service station, warehouse, hotel, apartment building and industry, along with some private residences were checked in the fire prevention program.

The program also involved film showings and inspections and fire exit drills at each of Trenton's nine schools.

Chief Ellis also recommended that Frank Coleman, who passed an Ontario Fire College course qualifying him as an instructor in 1959, be appointed by town council to that capacity.

"The improvement and efficiency of both professional and volunteer firefighters is not just something that has happened," continued the report.

"It is the effort put forward by this man that has been responsible for the well-trained department we have today."

Triplet Calves in Demorestville

Triplet calves are not uniquely rare, but they are uncommon enough to raise a great flurry of excitement for one Prince Edward County farmer. Triplet Hereford calves were born on the farm of Burt Kotchapaw, R. R. 2 Demorestville, on Sunday. Calves are doing well as is the mother and Mr. Kotchapaw could not have been happier if he had won a sweepstake. He's even passing out cigars. Shown at right is Mr. Kotchapaw and on left his son Bill proudly showing off the triplets.

Boost For Industry

The possibility of a group of young Trenton businessmen forming a company to build factory shells as an inducement to prospective industries is an excellent idea.

Such a step has a good chance of succeeding if past experience is any guide. We have in mind the policy adopted in Britain in the postwar years of building "advance factories."

It had its beginnings in Northern Ireland whose government was anxious to attract capital from both home and overseas concerns. The results have been spectacular. With government grants and low rates of interest on loans it attracted many new firms from the United States, Germany and Holland, as well as Britain itself.

The Trenton enterprise has two structures available already and prospects for both of them. Envisaged ultimately is the building up of the Quinte area's first development corporation.

The idea was suggested in this column some time ago and discussed subsequently by industrial commission representatives in Belleville. It has been left to Trenton, however, to give the plan some practical effect.

LBJ Meets Ike

President Johnson knows as well as anyone that the statements of rivals like Bobby Kennedy, Richard Nixon and George Romney are motivated not so much by genuine concern about their country's difficulties in Viet Nam, or for the suffering Vietnamese, as by political considerations.

Kennedy and company are feathering their own nests and if they can make capital out of the United States' involvement in Asia so much the better.

However, the President is the man in the hot seat. He is the man who must make the decisions, and it is doubtful if Kennedy or anybody else placed in the same position, would pursue any substantially different course.

Meanwhile Johnson, harried as he is on all sides, was likely glad of the opportunity afforded by his recent California trip to confer with former President Eisenhower.

Any political differences between Johnson the democrat and Eisenhower the old soldier and republican must have been submerged as the two got together at the latter's resort home at Palm Springs. Here there was sun and warmth and Johnson, who earlier had bade a personal farewell to marine and paratrooper units bound for Vietnam, found time for a round of golf.

In Eisenhower, the President would have a friendly if critical ear, one who also underwent the rigors of war and long years of occupancy of the most demanding political job in the world. With Ike, he would be able to unbend, unburden himself for a few hours of the awesome responsibilities of the presidency and of the U.S. committment in Vietnam.

Of the war in Vietnam Johnson has quoted the U.S. commander there, Gen. William Westmoreland, as saying he thinks "they are going for broke . . . and that thus far it has been a hit and run thing." And so it has. The communists have been fighting a mainly guerrilla campaign and have now switched to mass assaults of infantry backed by heavy weapons and tanks.

There have been rumors that the communists are closer to agreement on holding peace talks. Whether that is so remains to be seen. One thing is sure, for the United States to back down now and withdraw from Viet Nam would be calamitous. It would mean the triumph of communism in Viet Nam and the swift fall of other countries in that area.

Hydro Power

Ontario Hydro, Belleville Rotarians were reminded the other day, is the second largest utility in North America in terms of capacity.

Its present capacity is some nine million kilowatts — a figure Hydro Chairman George Gathercole says will be doubled in the next decade.

Biggest utility is the Tennessee Valley Authority with about 16 million kilowatts, half of which feeds the Oak Ridge development.

Ontario is second to none in one respect. In this province Hydro serves the largest area in the western world.

Biggest in terms of population is the Pacific Coal Gas and Electricity utility serving California.

Galo P. Lasso of Ecuador OAS' New Secretary-General

WASHINGTON (CP)—The Organization of American States has finally chosen a new secretary-general.

He is Galo Plaza Lasso, 62, of Ecuador, who is dedicated to a "strong, dynamic, creative" organization—just what many observers of the OAS scene feel has been lacking for the membership of 19 Latin American countries, the U.S and two new members from the Caribbean, Barbados and Trinidad-Tobago.

The OAS frailties were evident in the long haul to the decision about a new leader—the voting began Nov. 17. Smaller countries from the Central Americas and the Caribbean banded together in block voting against the larger countries such as the U.S, Brazil and Argentina.

That frustrated a fast decision and inevitably there were renewals of the old Latin American complaint about U.S interference and behind-the-scenes dictation.

But, as the New York Times observes in a more amiable mood than usual about U.S foreign policy south of its border, "for once the U.S played through the role of partner of the enterprise rather than boss. . " Its diplomacy' was discreet and restrained—and its man won.

Plaza has twice been Ecuadorean president, some say the best the country ever had. He has been a United Nations mediator and observer.

But he is no unswerving devotee of U.S foreign policy.

Plaza strongly opposed the 1965 U.S intervention in the Dominican Republic and some observers say he feels the same way about the U.S in Vietnam.

He was Ecuador's representative at the founding of the UN in 1945 and has served it in Lebanon, The Congo and Cyprus.

He is U.S-born because his diplomat father was posted to the U.S at the time, and he was educated in the U.S so that he "speaks English like an American."

He has a 10-year term before him at an annual salary of $32,000 plus expenses. He succeeds Dr. Jose Antonio Mora of Uruguay, who had hoped to add Canada to the OAS.

This goal is still supported quietly by the U.S and most, if not all, the OAS members. It remains to be achieved and prospects are still cloudy.

The new secretary-general is expected to do what he can to further this cause but his main preoccupation springs from a strong belief that small countries must combine political, cultural and economic activities if problems such as increasing populations are to be met.

Central America has the beginnings of a Common Market and the outlines were laid at a summit meeting last year for the rest of the major Latin American countries, but progress is slow although the population increase is not.

Sneezes Tricky

Highway Safety News

If you drive, don't sneeze. The British Motor Corporation of Canada warns the motorist if he sneezes while driving at 70 mph he will cover 330 yards dazed and semi-blind.

If he sneezes three times in a 15 mph rush-hour traffic crawl, he will be in the same state for 220 yards.

Medical analysis found each sneeze involves about 15 seconds grimacing and snorting.

Can a sneeze be stopped? Yes, says BMC. Press a finger hard against the upper lip or slap the thigh to stop an att-shoo.

He had been imprisoned and tortured for three years for a crime of being a Roman Catholic priest. The law forbade any Englishman in Roman priesthood to stay more than 40 days in England and Southwell volunteered to defy the ban as a missionary.

Cape Croker Ojibways and The Paleface Government

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

The system was that the older men in the tribal band taught the boys what they knew about making traps, building canoes, fishing with weir or line. The boys grew up to be skilful canoemen, trappers and fishermen. By pragmatic test, the system worked well.

The 400 families in the Ojibway band on the Cape Croker reserve are entitled to ask whether the palefaces are really very smart at organizing educational systems. With white men making the decisions, three school buildings have been put up for the separate school at Cape Croker.

One is a stone building with indoor toilets but no water supply. The second is a prefabricated classroom, also with indoor toilets and no water supply. The third is an ancient frame building with water available and with ramshackle outdoor privies.

Which one are the children attending? This week they were moved, as an emergency measure, into yet a fourth building, the Indian council chamber, with outdoor privies, but some heat indoors.

If you look at the situation from the Ojibway point of view you will see that the palefaces are lacking in skill at organizing education.

One of the problems is the good old Canadian problem of division of responsibility between Ottawa and the provinces. Education is a provincial matter, and provincial only, so far as most of us are concerned with paying taxes and sending children to school. Indians, however, have the bad luck to be a federal responsibility.

In school matters that makes the Indians the rope in the federal-provincial tug-of-war.

In the Cape Croker case the Dominion government is supposed to supply the building while the provincial government responsible for the education provided in the building. Somehow in the debatable area between the two the children have been sidetracked into a building in which education is not possible.

If we just gave the Indians the money all this is costing, and told them to organize their own schools, they couldn't do worse.

Gold Traffic

Peterborough Examiner

Illicit traffic in gold is a major concern to many African and Asian countries since it could have serious effects on the stability of their various currencies. South Africa, Rhodesia, Zambia and several other countries, have stringent laws covering the buying and selling of gold — in fact the governments are the only organizations which can purchase gold. The same is true of diamonds.

Minimum Rates of Pay

Hamilton Spectator

The Ontario government has been able to quietly shelve demands for an increase in the minimum wage, which is at present $1 for men and women and $1.25 an hour for construction workers. These rates have been outpaced by rising living costs. By the middle of this year the absurdity will be increased by the federal government raising unemployment benefits.

When these new benefits come into force they will pay a maximum of $53 a week to an unemployed married man and a maximum of $42 a week to an unemployed single man. Generally, those receiving these rates will have been earning over $100 a week when employed. Even so, a single man's unemployment benefits are within whistling distance of what another man might earn for a 45-hour week of hard work.

The present minimum wages became effective in the Toronto-Hamilton area in June 1963. In the following year they were introduced in the rest of the province which was divided into two zones in which the minimum wage level was gradually increased, particularly as it applied to women workers. The whole province was covered by 1966.

No doubt the provincial government thought it had achieved something remarkable by establishing minimum wages. In a way it had because there had been nothing like it in Ontario before. Yet the government must not rest on withering laurels. People getting minimum wages feel the bite of rising living costs more than higher paid workers. Since the first introduction of minimum wages the cost of living has increased by more than 15 per cent. This is a big bite from $1 an hour.

Ontario is a prosperous province. Surely one test of that prosperity should be the minimum rates of pay. The provincial government must not delay in raising these hourly rates to a level where, in relation to unemployment benefits they reward a week's hard work.

Direct Dialing

Financial Post

There is nothing novel about inter-city, direct, private-line dialing. But when you happen to be the federal government spending $40 million a year on communications, it's little things that make the difference.

Thanks to the influence of the Glassco Royal Commission on Government Organization, Ottawa began to use private-line long distance dialing in 1965 and so far its lines extend to Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto. In 1966 this netted savings of $4 million.

Officials expect that the system will cover most major centres in the nation before 1970. They also hope that long before then the light will dawn on the one person out of five still using the commercial line instead of the private line.

Through time, this ought to be a pretty penny in savings.

The Ottawa - Montreal call which costs $3.25 at commercial, person-to-person rates and $1.55 at direct dialing rates, is only 13 cents through private-line dialing.

Canada's Economic Potential

Oshawa Times

A greater perspective may be all that is required for the gloom-and-doom Canadians to see much better days ahead. From the economic research division of the Chase Manhattan Bank, for instance, has come a rosy economic predication for Canada's future.

The leading banking institution in the U.S. sees everything coming up roses for Canadians over the next three years.

"Canada's rapidly increasing labor force," it says, "will stimulate production as well as encourage spending for housing and other consumer durables. Strong export growth and rising business investment should also strengthen overall economic activity so that, by 1969-70, the economy might well return to the 5 per-cent - 6 per-cent, real growth rate of 1961-66."

However, the bank notes that Canada must first get through 1968 in which the business outlook is for another year of restrained activity. It estimates the Canadian growth in Gross National Product this year should be around four per cent compared with an estimated real growth of 2 per cent last year.

A key influence on Canadian economic growth during the next three years as well as the decade of the seventies will be the rapidly increasing supply of labor. Major sources for this growth are the increasing number of women entering the labor market and the coming of working age of the large number of Canada's postwar babies. This will give Canada a potential for rapid production gains without inflation, says the report.

The bank also forecasts that the rate of exports will be up and the rate of imports down. The composition of exports will show a notable change with manufactured goods continuing to increase their share of the total.

Lighter Coins Too

Decimals for UK in 1971

Windsor Star

When Britain ruled the waves, a traveller with British currency knew that he could pay his way anywhere in the world, or at least anywhere in the civilized world.

In recent years, U.S currency has been the soundest medium of exchange, and the British government has had to limit the amount of sterling that travellers could take out of the country. But a pocket full of British coins still seems a solid guarantee of worth, at least until the heavy coins wear a hole in the pocket.

Now, with the pound devalued, Britain is devaluing even the weight of her coins. The penny will no longer be a big heavy coin that boldly asserts its worth by bulk alone. And some of the other familiar coins will disappear gradually as Britain swings over in three years to decimal currency.

There's some consolation, and a lot of sense, in the fact that the old names of penny and pound will continue, although in a decimal ratio. The shilling, unfortunately, is due to disappear, along with the crown, the half-crown, the already discontinued farthing, and the guinea, that unusual standard of value which was widely quoted but had no exact counterpart in coin or bill.

But these are considerations of interest mainly to the outside world. In Britain, the change should go almost unnoticed. A nation of traders will have no difficulty in mastering decimal values. As for the names, the British genius for slang long ago buried most coins in nicknames, and the new coins will undoubtedly be similarly christened before their shine wears off.

Liquor Laws' Perplexing Subtleties

Brantford Expositor

Women are not hale fellows well met in Ye Olde White Harte, a pub in Hull, England. A licence court has upheld the tavern's right to debar women.

A ruling that there is no room at the inn for females raises the pertinent question of just how public is a public house that leaves women out of the draught. In Ye Olde White Harte, time, gentlemen, obviously refers to just one sex. The dispirited Yorkshire lasses would find that men have something to froth over in Brantford Township where the glass is in the other hand. A vote on the sale of beer in the township last fall compelled men to have a female escort, though women might be admitted on their own.

A defeat in the battle of the bottle in Hull must be offset against a decision on pints in Brantford Township.

Option Agreement Contested

Robinette Pleads $2,000,000,000 Case Against Texas Gulf

TORONTO (CP) — An option agreement covering 46,000 acres of Northern Ontario land owned by the T. S. Woolings Co. Ltd. which Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. Inc. took up in February, 1964, breached an agreement Texas Gulf had signed with Leitch Gold Mines Ltd. the previous May, the Ontario Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

J. J. Robinette, counsel for Leitch, said several of the lots optioned from the Woolings Co. for $11,588 were in aerial survey regions to which Leitch had exploration and development rights.

The Leitch-Texas Gulf agreement gave Leitch aerial survey data from a number of Northern Ontario and Quebec areas flown by Texas Gulf with the provision Leitch would carry out necessary ground work in promising areas and give Texas Gulf a 10-per-cent interest in any mining property discovered.

Leitch claims Texas Gulf explored and developed a geological anomaly near Timmins known as Kidd 55—now the Kidd Creek copper-zinc-silver mine—in violation of the agreement. Texas Gulf says the Kidd orebody lay outside the area covered by the agreement.

Leitch and Mastodon-Highland Bell Mines Ltd. are claiming title to the Kidd orebody, worth an estimated $2,000,000,000. Alternatively they are suing Texas Gulf for $450,000,000 damages.

In his sixth day of summation before a three-day adjournment Tuesday, Mr. Robinette said even under Texas Gulf's interpretation of its agreement with Leitch, several of the lots optioned from the Woolings Co. lay in an area which it had agreed not to explore or develop without consulting Leitch.

Mr. Robinette devoted several hours to his proposition that Texas Gulf did not make a "vigorous, inspired attempt" to acquire rights to the property on which it had located Kidd 55 in 1960 before sinking a drill hole on the site in November, 1963.

Texas Gulf announced its discovery in April, 1964, and the mine went into production last year.

Part of the orebody lay on land held by the Royal Trust Co. for the estate of Murray Hendrie. Mr. Robinette said evidence showed that although Texas Gulf had a "fully-executed option agreement" from the Royal Trust in June, 1963, it did nothing about it until Octobr.

In February, 1964, he said, Texas Gulf made "vigorous efforts" to buy for $57,000 the 10-per-cent interest retained in the property by the Hendrie estate, but failed. Texas Gulf exercised its option to purchase the land in April.

Mr. Robinette said the evidence also showed time lags in negotiations with the Woolings Co. for another part of the Kidd property.

In his summing up of the marathon case—it has been at trial since October, 1966—Mr. Robinette centred his argument on the interpretation of the Leitch-Texas Gulf agreement, which he called "a joint adventure involving mutual trust."

Texas Gulf's position is that the agreement did not include data from flights flown in certain areas, including the one the Kidd orebody lay in. The company says the map should be treated as "definitive and unambiguous."

Summations by Mr. Robinette and J. D. Arnup, counsel for Texas Gulf, are expected to take another five weeks, with a decision from Chief Justice G. A. Gale, who is hearing the case, by early summer.

TORONTO STOCKS

It was the first significant gain since the middle of last week when investors ended a three-week-long slump with a technical rally.

Price changes, especially in the industrial list, remained small.

The industrial index rose .30 to 151.50, largely because of a 1-point gain to 110 in shares of Inco. The company announced a 20-per-cent jump in annual net profits Tuesday.

Great Canadian Oil Sands paced advancing western oils, climbing 1½ to 12. In golds, Kerr Addison rose ⅜ to 16.

Rio Algom fell 1 to 30 among base metals.

On index, golds gained 2.38 to 223.63 and oils 1.54 to 187.74. Base metals slipped .35 to 98.40.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 681,000 shares compared with 621,000 at the same time Tuesday. Advances outnumbered declines 120 to 92.

Tuesday, the exchange posted small gains in activity that was about the lightest so far this year.

The Toronto Stock Exchange posted small gains in activity that was about the lightest so far this year.

Brokers expected investors to stay on the sidelines to see what the government will do next.

Golds slipped. Giant Yellowknife and Kerr Addison were off ⅜ each to 12⅛ and 15⅝. Sigma jumped 90 cents to 7.85

Among industrials Inco gained ½ to 109, International Utilities ⅛ to 38⅛ and Neon Products ¾ to 15¼. Bow Valley Industries declined ⅜ to 12¼.

Town Bridge Will Swing 10 Times Daily

TRENTON—The town bridge will swing just as often this summer, but signs will be posted to inform motorists of the daily traffic jam schedule.

Town council has approved a Department of Transport request to post the bridge's 10 daily swing times for the benefit of both motorists and Trent River pleasure boaters.

Times remain unchanged — 7.45, 9.00, 10.00 10.45 and 11.30 a.m. and 1.15, 2.15, 3.15, 4.15 and 6.00 p.m.

A Department of Transport letter said it was decided to post time sheets after a survey was taken of boaters that regularly use the Trent system.

Opening of the new D. James MacDonald bridge upstream around May is expected to alleviate the perennial bottleneck problems created when the swing section of the 50-year-old existing town bridge opens for marine traffic.

Confidence Vote Wrangle Looms

feated 84 to 82 Monday night.

This bill provides for a five-per-cent surcharge on personal income tax, which the government has been collecting since Jan. 1 this year.

Such procedure would put the government in an awkward position because Mr. Pearson has already said its defeat was not a question of confidence.

Today's cabinet meeting was the third since Mr. Pearson flew home from an interrupted Jamaica holiday Tuesday.

Mr. Pearson said Tuesday night the government's defeat was more of an accident than anything else.

He added:

"The present situation must be cleared up.

"So we will clear it up by putting a motion on the order paper . . . which I assure you will be clearly and without doubt one of confidence or non-confidence in the government."

Pearson said the government can ask for unanimous consent to proceed with the motion as soon as it appears on the order paper "and we'll be happy to do that."

Barring unanimous consent, debate would begin 48 hours after notice of the motion was filed with the Clerk of the Commons. It had not been filed late Tuesday, meaning that without unanimous consent—which opposition MPs have indicated they will deny—debate probably won't begin before Friday.

A parliamentary expert told The Canadian Press there is no time limit on such a debate and it almost certainly would run into next week if it began Friday.

Opposition MPs tending to the view of Conservative Leader Robert L. Stanfield, who said the government has no right to present a non-confidence motion.

"The matter has been decided," Mr. Stanfield said in an interview after hearing the Pearson statement. "The government has been defeated.

"That's our position and we hold to it very strongly."

Prime Minster Pearson, hastily summoned from a Jamaica holiday, met briefly with his cabinet Tuesday both before and after a 2½-minute Commons session.

Mr. Stanfield said he agreed to a 24-hour Commons adjournment, until 2:30 p.m. EST today, to "enable the prime minister to consider the implications for the government of the defeat."

A major option open to Mr. Pearson was to dissolve Parliament and set an election date a month or so after the Liberal leadership convention in April.

Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) compared Mr. Pearson's proposal for a formal confidence vote to the recent Olympic hockey tournament.

"It's like the Canadian hockey team asking the Russians to forget their 5-0 win and play the game again."

Mr. Pearson, however, termed the defeat Monday night, when many Liberal MPs were out of town, "a hazard of minority government." He said such defeats would mean "a lot of elections" if always regarded as confidence tests.

Earlier this session, a government bill to increase postal rates was killed in a snap vote that caught the government off guard.

While this was regarded as a humiliation, defeat on the tax bill—the surtax went into effect Jan. 1 and was to bring in $25,000,000 by March 31—was described by Mr. Stanfield as "a matter of fundamental importance."

Federal officials began work Tuesday on a formula to give it back to taxpayers through revised payroll deduction rates. However, collection of the surcharge was to continue until a specific government order was given to call it off. Some informants said the government confidence motion might take the form of a bid to restore the tax.

Mr. Stanfield said he felt the government should resign. Asked whether he is ready to form a government, he replied:

"If the Governor-General calls on me to form a government, naturally I'll do my duty and see what the responsibilities are."

Farm Builders' Seminar Being Held in City

A two-day farm builders' seminar sponsored by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food and Ontario Hydro is being held today and Thursday at the provincial hydro building on East Dundas Street.

During the two-day session, farmers will hear discussions on the physical aspects of modern day farm building and what the farmer expects of a contractor.

Seminar planners have drawn heavily on local people as keynote speakers on the various topics up for discussions.

At today's morning session, the group was addressed by Lyle Vanclief who outlined what the farmer expects of a contractor, of Ontario Hydro, and of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food.

Kenneth Fisher talked on co-operative projects being carried out with the building contractor, while local insurance agent Lorne McDougall spoke on insurance and on fire prevention.

During the afternoon session John Moles, manager of farm sales for Hydro spoke on what the future holds for the farm builder. Other afternoon topics included sources of farm credit and determination of the economic feasibility of proposed farm building changes.

Tomorrow, local solicitor B. W. Hurley will speak on drawing up contracts and the legal responsibility of contractors.

This week's seminar is the third to be held in the Central Ontario area this month. Earlier seminars were held at Barrie and at Lindsay.

Exploratory Drilling Approved

TRENTON — Consumers Gas Co. has been granted permission to carry out exploratory drilling at a north Trenton site.

Town council approved the firm's request to drill a 4½-inch hole on north Sidney St industrial - designated between Highway 401 and CNR mainline.

The company will occupy the site for one week, and repair any disturbance to the area this spring.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry said geologists have been surveying the entire Trenton area in recent years, "aparently feeling the rock formations around here indicate natural gas deposits."

The firm will also conduct test drilling on a piece of private property in east Trenton, adjacent to Bain Memorial Park.

Witness Outlines Robbery Plans in Morrison Case

A primary witness for the crown in the case against Larry Morrison and Lawrence Schlaer outlined to the Supreme Court of Ontario yesterday his version of the events leading up to the Sept. 1 robbery of $10,000 from Samuel Mulholland, manager of Food City in Belleville. The case is being heard before the Honorable Mr. Justice Keith

Matthew William "Bill" Morrison, brother of the accused, and a part-time employee at Food City, gave lengthy testimony for the crown at yesterday's proceedings.

After choosing the petit jury the trial of Larry Wayne Morrison, 22, of Belleville and Lawrence Schlaer of Montreal on charges of "conspiracy to commit robbery" and "robbery with violence" got under way.

After not seeing his brother, the accused, for two years the witness testified that when he did see him on Aug. 27 of last year he was questioned extensively about Food City.

Questions like "Who is the manager?" "Who takes the money to the bank?" "Is there an escort?" "What route is used?" were reported by the witness to have been asked by his brother.

Bill Morrison also testified his brother indicated his intention to rob the managers of both Food City and of Rite-Way.

Continuing his testimony under questioning of Crown Attorney Glen Deline, Mr. Morrison stated that he drove his brother to Montreal upon request so that plans for the robbery could be discussed with friends.

According to the testimony, the friends turned out to be the accused, Lawrence Schlaer, a woman identified as Jean and a man, Phillips.

The Food City situation was explained, said the witness, and a plan formed to rob the store on Sept. 1. Morrison admitted on the stand that he had known a robbery was intended and he volunteered all of the information to the accused willingly. He also stated that Schlaer's proposal that he receive 10 per cent of the take was fully agreeable to him.

Mr. Morrison said that a plan to rob the store was decided upon and that he was asked and agreed to watch the stores and make a map of the layout — where the managers parked their cars and other details.

The information was to be relayed to his brother, Schlaer and Phillips at a rendezvous established for the A and W drive-in on Dundas St. the day of the proposed robbery, the witness testified.

Morrison's testimony for the crown ended after he told the court that the rendezvous was kept and he gave the map to the accused on Friday, Sept. 1. Mr. Morrison said he then went to work and left Food City shortly after 11 p.m., went to the A and W with friends and then home.

Defence Counsel Robert J. Carter asked the witness how he had come to have such extensive information about the banking methods of the store, as well as a knowledge of the amount of cash taken in on a busy day, the route to the bank and what the cash was carried in.

Upon direct questioning by the defence, Morrison said the police had told him he would not be charged in connection with the robbery if he co-operated.

The witness also admitted to the defence that he was prepared to lie and had lied to the police who had visited him "10 to 15 times" before he decided to co-operate.

The testimony, it was brought out yesterday, had been gone over five or six times before in its entirety by the police and Morrison. Although the witness admitted to the court that he had been told he would not be charged if he co-operated he denied that this was the reason for his testimony.

The trial continues today.

Quebec Cabinet Minister Leaves as Speech Read in English

By THE CANADAIAN PRESS

A walkout of several members, led b, a cabinet minister, protesting the English-language version of the speech from the throne Tuesday highlighted the opening of the Quebec legislature.

Jean-Noel Tremblay, cultural affairs minister, and several members of both the Union Nationale and Liberal parties walked out when Lt.-Gov. Hugues Lapointe started to read the speech in English after having read it in French.

Mr. Tremblay has long advocated making French the official and predominant language for all the province's affairs.

Meanwhile, sessions in three other legislatures were less dramatic.

The Saskatchewan government introduced eight bills and tabled a report on psychiatric services in the province.

Premier E. C. Manning told the Alberta legislature that his government will amend its oil sands policy "to encourage further growth in the total crude oil market."

In British Columbia, the government was criticized in the legislature for its actions in the B.C. ferry dispute.

Members of the Ontario legislature took the day off to attend the funeral of former premier Charles Drury, dead at 90. Mr. Drury was premier under the United Farmers of Ontario banner from 1919 to 1923.

The Newfoundland legislature opens today with the province expected to state its position on national medical-care insurance.

It will bring to six the number of legislatures sitting across Canada.

The Nova Scotia house opens Thursday.

In Quebec, the speech referred to the need for Canadian solidarity, but Premier Daniel Johnson said at a press conference:

Premier Johnson announced at the conference that his government will introduce legislation to abolish the existing legislative council and replace it with "a legislative, social and economic council."

The brief, 27-paragraph throne speech made no direct reference to the upper house of Quebec's two-house legislature, saying only:

"The time has come to reform our parliamentary institutions and make them a modern and effective instrument to serve the Quebec community."

Quebec is the only provincial legislature in Canada that has two houses.

The speech also called for the full exercise of Quebec's "exclusive rights and powers" concerning radio and television broadcasting in the field of education. It promised continued education reform, including a second French-language university at Montreal and an immigration department.

Experts' Views Differ on Whether Vote Test of Confidence

OTTAWA (CP) — One basic question came up repeatedly in a multitude of post mortems Tuesday on Monday night's Commons defeat of the government tax bill:

"Was it, or was it not a confidence vote?"

At the other end of the spectrum, former prime minister John Diefenbaker saw it as the end of the line: "They're out . . . it's over," he repeated to reporters.

In between, two ranking political scientists in the Commons took more complex views while still siding with their parties' cause.

John B. Stewart (L—Antigonish-Guysborough) former professor at Columbia and St. Francis Xavier University, said there is room for "two quite reasonable views" on the question.

The first—Mr. Diefenbaker's view—was that the government should resign.

The other, which Dr. Stewart said he himself favored, was that the 84-to-82 defeat did not represent a definite view of the Commons and that it should have a "clear opportunity" to say whether it has confidence in the government.

Dr. Stewart said the defeat was not directly parallel to the 1963 defeat of Mr. Diefenbaker's Conservatvie government for three reasons:

—The 1963 vote was on an amendment which stated specifically that the government had lost the confidence of the country;

—In the current case the tax bill had received approval in principle on second reading and each of its clauses had been approved. Approval of second reading indicated the House wanted the bill.

—The 1963 vote took place at a specific time after several days' notice so that members expressed their considered view. The current vote "had the effect of a snap vote" as shown by the fact that there were only 166 members voting compared with 253 in 1963.

He conceded there was "no clear-cut little rule" in the British constitutional structure or the British North America Act defining a confidence vote.

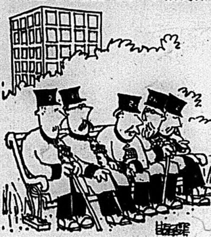
"But it would seem to me that something so fundamental as the raising of revenues—the right to tax—is as big and important a measure of confidence as anything I could think of."

Mr. Macquarrie rejected the view that the vote was less important because it came on third reading. This simply meant that "at that stage of the game" the government had lost the confidence of the House.

He also felt that it was hard to view the vote as an accident since it had taken place formally after more than an hour's ringing of the division bells.

The system is such that any vote on any matter should not alter the authority of the state, he said. The government "pretty well has to admit that the fundamental framework of its existence just isn't there."

THE PICK OF Punch



"Let's form a military junta!"

No Clear Precedent for Vote Found in Records for 100 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Law clerks and Commons procedural experts searched the records of more than 100 years of parliamentary history Tuesday for precedents for the present government crisis in the Commons.

The issues divided themselves into three questions:

1. What constitutional rights has a government to continue in office after a major piece of legislation is defeated in the Commons?

2. What procedures can be used by the government to reverse Commons decisions?

3. What, in parliamentary practice truly demonstrates that a government has lost the confidence of the House?

Certain celebrated cases were given immediate study. None was a clear precedent paralleling the present situation in all details.

Nine times in the first four years after Confederation important legislative steps proposed by Sir John A. Macdonald, the first prime minister, were upset. But the government carried on.

Five of the nine cases involved government bills. Two were on government appropriations, two were resolutions preceding introduction of bills.

In all cases, the government accepted the decisions of the House, changed its proposals, and carried on.

But some procedural experts say the early Confederation precedents carry less weight now than later decisions of the Commons and its Speakers.

The principle of cabinet responsibility to the House now is more firmly based on the concept that the cabinet must at all times have the support of a majority of MPs, or resign.

Another celebrated case occurred on Aug. 27, 1946, during the post-war decontrol period, when the government proposed dropping the wartime subsidy on milk.

Several Liberal government supporters criticized the move. The CCF, predecessor of the New Democratic Party, moved a resolution calling on the government to continue the milk subsidy. It carried. C. D. Howe, acting prime minister, declared the government's acceptance of the decision.

Ferries Stay at Docks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The waiting game continued today as British Columbia's strike-bound 20-vessel ferry fleet remained at dockside for the sixth day.

Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday night that "complete crews" have offered to run the ferries in place of striking workers. But he could not say when or if the service might be resumed.

More than 800 unlicensed ferry workers walked off the job at 5 a.m. Friday to protest the layoff of 160 men because of a schedule cutback.

They were joined that night by more than 250 licensed officers, members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, after the legislature passed an act transferring responsibility for the ferries to the highways department from the provincial ferry authority.

Six Start for Pole

Led by Ralph Plaisted, a St. Paul insurance man, the expedition of five Americans and one Canadian hopes to become the first to reach the Pole by surface since Admiral Robert Peary made it in 1909. The Canadian is Jean-Luc Bombardier, 29, of Montreal.

Peary made the trip by dogsled. Plaisted and his crew will use motorized sleds.

Plaisted failed to complete the trip last year when his expedition was forced to turn back in May after 38 days, 370 miles from the Pole.

Kiwanians Hear Story Of Scouting

PICTON (Staff) — Speaking to Picton Kiwanis Club Monday night, District Commissioner for Scouting in Prince Edward County, Joe Webb, talked on Scouting and it's aims.

Tracing a brief history of scouting for Kiwanians, Mr. Webb continued saying: "The aim of the Boy Scouts of Canada is to help boys to develop their character as resourceful and responsible members of the community by providing opportunities and guidance for their mental, physical, social and spiritual development."

Mr. Webb provided 12 colorful reasons for scouting and emphasized how the Scout movement of today is being updated and streamlined to fit today's needs. The new Scout program for 1968 contains such interesting activities as skin-diving, soaring, training in citizenship.

He ponted out the achievement badges and awards available to Pioneers, Voyageurs and Pathfinders as part of a new badge scheme. "It promotes appealing and challenging activities relating to health and fitness, community life, the out of doors and community service," he said.

In the leadership category Mr. Webb said the titles of patrol leader, assistant patrol leader, activity leader, project leader, troop scouter and scout counsellor are some of the new titles used by boys and adults in the updated program.

Closing his talk to an appreciative audience of Kiwanians Mr. Webb quoted the definition of a boy. "Boys are found everywhere — on top of, underneath, inside of, climbing on, swinging from, running around and jumping to . . . A boy is Truth with dirt on its face, Beauty with a cut on it's finger, Wisdom with bubble gum in its hair, and the Hope of the future with a frog in its pocket.

OUT OF TIME

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP — Cecil E. Blunck of Des Mones, the engineer, and Paul T. Walsh of Kansas City, conductor, say they had to stop a 156-car freight train that blocked three crossings for 1½ hours because Interstate Commerce Commission rules won't let them work more than 16 hours in a 24-hour period. After the Chicago and Great North Western train was halted in nearby Wolcott, another crew was sent out from Kansas City to bring it in.

THERE'S MORE TO THIS CARPET THAN MEETS THE FOOT

Gothique Carved Velvet luxury that defies wear!

THIS IS THE BROADLOOM YOU'VE SEEN ADVERTISED ON TV

To be Certified '501', a carpet must meet or exceed these 5 Du Pont standards of quality.

FIBRE QUALITY TEST
You could throw a birthday party on your brand new carpet. The nylon pile in a carpet Certified "501" has been specially engineered to withstand hardest wear and to spot clean easily.

FIBRE DENSITY TEST
Or hold a dinner party. The pile on a "501" Certified carpet is so deep and dense you can feel the luxury. And more expensive styles may have even deeper, denser pile.

PILL-FUZZ RESISTANCE TEST
Play golf in your living room. Golf Club locker rooms often use carpeting Certified "501". The pile yarn is securely locked in to prevent pilling or fuzzing — even from golf spikes.

COLOUR RETENTION TEST
Or invite the sun in. The colours in a carpet Certified "501" have been tested to make sure they'll resist fading. You'll have the colour you fell in love with a long time.

STABILITY TEST
Even let your teenagers whoop it up and dance all night. Every tufted carpet Certified "501" must have a secondary backing. Let them shift and shake. Your carpet won't ripple or change shape.

Most Aid Programs Help People to Help Themselves

TORONTO CP — If you sponsor a deprived child in a poor area of the world you may, with luck, find you are no longer needed after a time.

The approach now taken by most aid programs is to help people to help themselves. If someone in the child's family begins to earn enough to support the family, you will probably be told your help is needed elsewhere.

K. R. Marshall of the Canadian Save the Children Fund says sponsorship ideally is used as the key to open the door of a shack to help a whole family, not only the sponsored child.

People in Canada who want to be a sponsor can work through Cansave or the Foster Parents Plan. Both offer the opportunity to "adopt" a child, exchange pictures and letters and become personally involved.

Both work in co-operation with governments. Mr. Marshall says Cansave works through the International Union for Child Welfare and with and through other agencies, including the United Nations. It does not work as a direct service agency. Cansave was started in Great Britain in 1919 and has been in Canada since 1921.

Its adoption program now includes about 5,000 children in 24 countries. It costs the sponsor $84 a year. Mr. Marshall says the program accounts for about one-third of the fund's income, about $300,000. The rest of its money is raised in an annual direct mail appeal, branch programs penny beggar tins and Chrsitmas cards. The money goes to schools, clinics, training nurseries and food projects.

Another version costs $120 a year. An extension of the first, it will keep an older child in high school or vocational school in a country where secondary schooling is not free.

The Foster Parents Plan is currently operating in nine countries. Jack Mitchell of Montreal says Canadians are sponsoring about 9,000 children at a cost of $192 each a year.

The plan works by establishing an office in a country where there is need, then moving out when it is felt the host country can take over.

It was formally registered in Canada in 1967, though Mr. Mitchell says Canadians have been participating since it was established in 1937.

The plan also has a general fund for money from people who feel they cannot be sponsors.

Oxfam of Canada runs a small sponsorship program. Executive Director T. H. G. Fletcher says it is operated only on demand.

Mr. Fletcher and officials at CARE, the Canadian Hunger Foundation and the Unitarian Service Committee all say donations specified for children would be used that way.

All help to support projects such as training schools, school feeding programs, children's hospitals, school gardens, day care centres.

A special situation is the work of Canadian Red Cross Youth. National director Ralph Wendeborn says their emphasis now is on doing to help others do rather than on asking for donations to send as charity to needy people.

Groups are encouraged to undertake projects that will raise money to help pay for a teacher, a school or equipment. They also "adopt" a school, a community or an individual.

Redheads Can Wear Red

MONTREAL (CP) — Titian locks and red frocks were the order of the day Tuesday as an "All-Red" fashion show dispelled the popular myth that redheads can't wear reds.

Not only could the lovely redheads sport some of the zippier fashions in shades of coral or real, real red but they looked equally stunning in scarlet, shocking pink, fuchsia, and rose.

There wasn't a pale blue or pastel frock in the entire collection which was designed by Susie Kosovic of Poupee Rouge boutiques in Montreal and Toronto.

The show was presented by Clairol Inc. of Canada whose creation of six shimmering new shampoo — in haircolors to complement any outfit drew loud applause from the several hundred women who came to be convinced that red and red do mix.

One creation of Mrs. Kosovic, herself a 23-year-old petite redhead, was featured on a model sporting a heady wine or light burgundy shoulder-length hairdo.

A brilliant coral gown, it was fashioned of Indian silk and was liberally sprinkled with large gold paislies. A towering funnel collar and high, jewelled buckle belt completed the outfit.

Mrs. Kosovic, was careful to point out that accessories such as jewelry were almost non-existent in completing the total red fashion picture.

Bowling Banquet Held By Legion Auxiliary

Winning top honors was a Trenton team of Mabel Ament, Doris Briggs, Norma Fairman, Opal Ferguson, Marjorie Green and Carm Potter, with a total score of 2,998.

A Campbellford team was second with a score of 2,876 and Warkworth was third with a score of 2,819

High single for the event was Peggy Edwards of Warkworth with 356. She also won the high triple with a score of 771. Because one competitor could not receive two prizes the high single was given to Jean Leonard of Cobourg, who scored 298.

Twenty-three teams from ten Ladies' Legion Auxiliaries in the area extending from Port Hope to Trenton and from Campbellford to Bedley participated.

Following the bowling tournament 200 attended a banquet held in the new Campbellford Legion auditorium. Mrs. George Nelson, Warkworth, zone sports officer, presided.

Plans are underway to hold the provincial bowling tournament in Campbellford in the near future.

Bemersyde IODE Lists Officers

CAMPBELLFORD — Bemersyde Chapter IODE held its monthly meeting in the library of Kent St. Public School with the Regent, Mrs. G. Vandewater, in charge.

Mrs. J. Druif read the nominating committee report and Mrs. G. Vice, a former Regent, conducted the installation of officers. They are: honorary regent, Miss Kathleen Ferris; Regent, Mrs. F. M. New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Mrs. Sager conducted a quiz on foods from different countries now served in Canada.

Life Can Be Chaotic In Raising Triplets

HALIFAX CP — Raising small children is a hectic job at times for any mother, but when three of them are the same age, life can be chaotic.

For Evelina Upshaw, 41, of Halifax, whose youngest children, Deborah, Darlene and Derek, are six-year-old triplets, each year seems more difficult than the last.

"Each stage they reached, I thought this is the end. I'll never get through it. But then the next one would arrive and I would think the last one was nothing."

When the triplets were babies, each feeding time ran into the next. When they grew older, and were taken shopping, there were three small children to be fitted into a grocery cart at the supermarket. none of the earlier stages was as hard to cope with as getting three youngsters of the same age ready and off to school in time each morning.

"I always take all three books at once, praise them all equally. Then, later by myself, I look at them individually."

Mrs. Upshaw was 35 when the triplets were born and she had three older children, the youngest of whom was seven. Since then, she has separated from her husband and is raising her family on her own.

Victoria Woman Sends 500,000 Cards in Year

And more would be appreciated.

Mrs. Arnold sends used Christmas and greeting cards to persons in Taiwan, India and Bolivia where they have many uses.

"Every scrap of paper is used in these countries," she said.

Persons in leper colonies not only love the cards, but thoroughly enjoy the stamps on used envelopes, she said.

"If people still have the envelopes and send them we'll cut off the stamps."

Card-bearers were arriving in a steady stream for days following last Christmas, she said.

"I've got hundreds and hundreds of cards, and a lot of persons have brought them in boxes which can be used for mailing."

She and a neighbor work hours sorting the cards for mailing.

"We can use any greeting cards, not just Christmas cards, and we send them the year 'round."

Aquarium Club Elects Officers At Initial Meet

Various officers were nominated and elected at the initial meeting of the Belleville Aquarium Club held at the Knights of Columbus hall with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wessels welcoming the group.

Mrs. Wessels chaired the meeting and first of all expressed thanks for prizes donated by local merchants. These were won by Mrs. Jean Wylie, Miss Linda Wylie and Dave Reichert of Trenton.

Plans were made for future meetings and it was decided that the first open house for the showing of fish will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wessels, 71 Lewis Street. At the March meeting a fish contest for teenagers will be judged by Mr. Reichert. It was also suggested by Harry Nickle that each month one of the members could talk on one particular fish dealing with its origin, species and habits. For the next meeting Bill Malkin will be speaking on angel fish. Members told how they became interested in this particular hobby.

Guest speaker for the evening Mrs. Ken Duesberry, Belleville gave an interesting commentary with slides showing fish, birds and beautiful scenery in Folrida.

Lunch was served by Mrs. G. Thain and daughter Brenda and a social half hour enjoyed.

UCW Meetings

FRANKFORD UCW

FRANKFORD — Unit II of Frankford UCW met last Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. D. Keller with ten present.

The president, Mrs. E. Hewison welcomed everyone with a reading on "Friendship." The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. K. Roote. Mrs. Hewison reported on the recent Presbyterial meeting at Cobourg indicating a request for shoes and used clothing to be forwarded to Toronto.

There will be a birthday tea and bake sale in May and conveners for the event are Mrs. L. Hoyle and Mrs. G. Gilmour.

The general project this year will be "Socks" in lieu of aprons. There is still a continuous need for old nylons to be sent to Korea.

Mrs. L. Hoyle, Mrs. D. Spencer and Mrs. G. Gilmour led the worship service and study was on the theme, "Mission in Japan."

The mood for Japan was established with travel posters, brochures, leaflets, handicraft and Japanese music. The first study on Japan is to increase factual knowledge on this rapidly developing country.

Topics were discussed on Japanese people, their homes, the government, which is democratic, the astounding economy of this heavily populated country; their agriculture and fisheries; science, technology, and the arts.

Surprise New Recipe for Pancakes

By MARY MOORE

On Shrove Tuesday I think I will be with my grandchildren in Victoria making pancakes.

They are such eager pancakers that I have a surprise new recipe for them. It is mildly spiced and we served them here at home with red currant jelly.

I will give you my new recipe first and hope you will give it a fair try. For those who want to stay with my traditional recipe "All-Time Favorite Pancakes" are given, too.

GINGERBREAD PANCAKES
(12 average-size)

NOTE: These are easy to mix.

- 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ¾ tsp. baking soda
- ½ tsp. ginger
- ½ tsp. cinnamon
- ⅛ tsp. cloves
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 2 eggs (or 1 large egg)
- 2/3 cup corn syrup
- ⅞ cup (1 cup minus 2 tbsps.) water
- ¼ cup melted butter or margarine

Into large bowl sift sifted flour with baking soda, spices and salt. Make well in centre and into it measure yolks (or whole egg), corn syrup, water and melted butter or margarine. With rotary beater mix until blended and smooth. Spoon batter onto preheated griddle or electric frying pan (greased if necessary). Bake until top shows little bubbles, and bottom is golden. Turn and lightly brown other side. Serve with butter and maple syrup or red currant jelly. As a main course accompaniment provide sausages or bacon.

ALL-TIME FAVORITE PANCAKES

- 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3½ tsps. baking powder
- ¾ tsp. salt
- 2 tbsps. sugar
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1¾ cups milk
- 3 tbsps. melted butter or shortening

Sift flour once, measure, then sift again with baking powder, salt and sugar. Combine egg, milk, shortening and add to dry ingredients. Stir until smooth. Drop by spoonsful or ¼-cup measure) onto hot griddle. Cook on one side until puffed and full of bubbles. Turn and cook on other side.

NOTE: Remember that little children love midget pancakes. Make some of your batter up into "dollar" sized pancakes for the little ones. Thus they can count and boast about how many they ate.

Ann Landers

Compulsive Cleaner Drives Daughter Nuts

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was 12 my parents were divorced. I don't recall much about the divorce except that my dad said my mother was off her rocker and he wasn't going to stick around unless she went to a doctor. She refused to go and that was that.

ANN LANDERS

My mother and I moved to another city after the divorce. We weren't in the new place more than a week when Mom began to complain about a funny smell in the apartment. Nobody noticed it but her. She spent the days and nights disinfecting and sterilizing things. Finally she decided the smell was coming from inside the walls so we moved to another apartment.

Within a few days Mom insisted that the same smell had followed her. Last week she announced that the mystery was solved — it was the smell of plastic that was bothering her. So she threw out everything plastic — my raincoat, my boots, scrapbooks, my camera, my luggage, the Bible — yesterday she threw out the telephone.

I am not yet 16 so I am unable to support myself because I am too young to get a job in this state. Also I know I must graduate from high school in order to get a decent paying job when I am of age. Please tell me what to do. My mother is up half the night washing, disinfecting and spraying things. She is driving me crazy. — SQUIRREL CAGE NO. ONE.

DEAR NUMBER ONE: It's too bad your mother didn't get psychiatric help when your father gave her the ultimatum. She needs it.

Discuss this problem with your school counsellor. It is best for a teen-ager to remain with a parent if possible, but perhaps in this case the counsellor may suggest that other arrangements be made.

* * *

DEA RANN LANDERS: My husband and I went to the movies last night with another couple. Before the feature started they showed a few short subjects. One was a brief recruiting film which pictured our boys in Vietnam saluting the American flag. The narrator then said, "Ladies and gentlemen, the National Anthem."

With that my husband jumped to his feet. The fellow with us shouted in a voice that could have been heard in the neighboring county "Sit down, you idiot! "My husband yelled back, "You're supposed to stand up when the National Anthem is played." With that he pulled me out of my seat. No one else in the auditorium stood up and I felt like a fool — especially since they played only a few bars.

On the way hom my husband said he didn't care what anyone else did — that he was sure we did the right thing and those who remained seated were not only ignorant but unpatriotic.

Please tell me, Ann, is my husband correct about this? — UPSTANDING AMERICANS.

DEAR UP: Your husband is mistaken. When the National Anthem is played as background for a recruiting film it is not necessary to stand.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 22, not beautiful, but I've been told I am sexy looking. I have a new boss who is old enough to be my grandfather. He started out by giving me a good-morning squeeze. Now he pinches, paws and massages me every time I come in for dictation. I've tried to ridicule him into behaving, but it hasn't helped. If I hit him he'd land in the hospital. What do you suggest? — UPPACRICK.

DEAR UPPA: A 22-year-old girl who doesn't want to be pinched, pawed and massaged knows perfectly well how to put a stop to it. Kwitcherkiddin.

Successful Living

Stepmother Considered Harsh Word

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Although I am a stepmother I don't like the term. My husband's two married daughters call me by my first name and him by his name, "Dad". O.K., but when they introduce me what do they say?

Their mother died when the girls were in their teens — ten years ago. — Second Mother

Dear Second: Childhood fables make the worst of the wicked stepmother, more's the pity! Until she becomes an ogre to be dreaded. And the stigma carries over.

The term matters not nearly as much as the reality. Half-orphans, many of them, have been taken on with great success by this much-maligned brood.

It goes hard with some boys and girls to attach the name of "Mother" to a successor. I like the Christian name, as long as the lady is happy with this. But for formal introductions, the alternatives are: "I'd like to introduce my new mother," or, "My stepmother, who is a grand person", or "my father's new wife."

Personally I prefer the first or second.

Dear Doris: Thank you for writing me again.

It was so sweet of Miss M. G. to write in answer to my SOS. It warms up my heart to think that someone cares about an old lady's hair. I'm 66.

God bless you, dear Doris. You are doing a wonderful thing by helping so many people. May you always have good health, good fortune and good friends. — Grateful

Dear Grateful: You've put me up on cloud nine. And it always does my heart good when one reader writes in with a helpful idea for another. This happens often.

• • •

Confidential to Dad: If there were no strings attached to your promise that Jack could get a driver's licence when he became 16, is it fair to take it back until he is in grade ten?

You would still have the say as to when he could have the car — and this could be a reward for effort. He may give up trying altogether if he feels he can never make the grade — with you.

• • •

To On Edge: I don't think your situation calls for the desperate anxiety you spend on it. Try to cultivate serenity. You say you go to church; what do you get from it? I'm sending you my recommended list of Books on Prayer — and I'll challenge you to read and study them without finding some change in your approach to things — for the better.

(List available to readers for ten cents and a stamped envelope.)

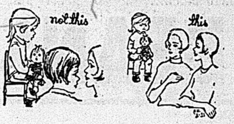
Don't just muddle along. Doris knows human behavior and can help. Write to her and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Nancy: (to doll) "You're a bad, bad, bad girl. Why do you act so bad? No mother could love you."

Mother: "Nancy is so funny. When she plays house, she is always such a tough, cross little mother."

Mother: "Nancy must think she is imitating me. I don't say such mean things to her — but maybe my voice is so cross, she thinks that's the way I feel."

Children are natural imitators. Watch them at play. Listen with your inner ear. You may be surprised at how they interpret you.

Prospectors Face Busy Week's Work

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Prospectors were expected to be busy for at least another week claiming mineral rights to the interior of a 100,000-acre piece of bushland in the back-country of Northern Ontario.

More than 250 claims to land touching on water were filed up to Tuesday after the government opened the area to prospectors at noon Monday.

Most of the 700 prospectors were working in parties, employed either by developing companies or syndicates, trying to get as many as possible of the expected 2,500 claims. More than 6,000 mining licences have been issued.

Exploration already done indicates possible presence of uranium, copper and thorium in the ruged bushland, but there are fears it may be in non-commercial pockets or of an uneconomic grade.

The professionals say no more than one or two mines are likely to be found in the nine townships involved. The new claims are north of the area in which 13 uranium mines were developed in the 1950s.

Large companies and syndicates grabbed most of the early claims by using aircraft and helicopters to rush necessary papers to Sault Ste. Marie or Sudbury to complete registration.

Officials said there will be inevitable disputes, because the same property in some places is being claimed by several groups. In these situations the claim is placed in the name of the person who first makes the registration. Disagreements are usually settled by mines department officials or by agreement among contestants.

William Arrowsmith, who has been in every major staking rush since 1947, said the Elliot Lake rush is one of the best.

He said the only problems were caused by big business interests and amateurs going into the area with snowmobiles and placing stakes without regard for claims already staked.

Thomson Defrauded

LONDON (CP)—Lord Thomson said today it is still possible that one day he may recover more than £100,000 his companies paid out for dictator Benito Mussolini's diaries which turned out to be fakes.

"We turned over this money, bit by bit, as part payment for diaries which we had hoped to serialize and distribute around the world and possibly turn into the basis for a movie," Thomson said in an interview today. The £100,000 was worth $300,000 before devaluation.

Altogether, the Thomson companies and their associates had planned to pay a total of £240,000 for the diaries but not all of that payment had been made when authorities discovered that the Italian diaries were fraudulent.

Thomson was commenting on a dispatch from Sydney, Australia, which said Interpol—the international police organization—was on the trail of a businessman involved in the deal and who may be hiding in Sydney.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are in the process of looking around to buy a used car. I have heard that it's possible to buy a used car and then have it taken from you because the former owner had not paid his bills.

How can you make sure there are no debts outstanding when you purchase the car?

ANSWER: Some provinces have a central registry for liens against cars. Ontario doesn't. The routine in this province is as follows: Send $1 to the Motor Vehicle Licence Branch, Department of Transport, Room 1618, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 2, for a five-year history of the car you wish to buy.

The department will supply a list of names and addresses of previous owners for five years back (records older than that are destroyed).

The prospective purchaser must then go to the county court house in each county where a previous owner has lived to determine if there is a chattel mortgage or conditional sales contract registered against the car.

By the time the searches have been completed the car you were looking at will have been sold to another less-careful buyer and you will have to choose again.

QUESTION: My wife and I are planning a motor trip to Miami, leaving Belleville on Feb. 29th, for a period of three weeks. Would you kindly advise us as to the type of clothing to take with us and also what type of weather to expect while we are down there, this time of year?

ANSWER: March days in Miami reach the average high of 80 degrees and a low of 61 at night. The rainfall is light. Dressy clothes are customary in the evening in the larger Miami Beach hotels — but evening clothes are not essential.

Take plenty of sportswear because it is acceptable down there all year long. Men don't wear jackets or ties except during the evening in restaurants and hotels. What you would wear at a resort town in Ontario during July and August will be fine in Miami in March. You can forget about heavy sports jackets, but bring along a sweater for odd cold evenings. A mink stole is style anytime in Miami Beach, if your wife has one.

Most travellers will find that if they are injured or take ill in a foreign country, their medical and hospital bills will be covered by their Canadian health insurance policies.

Don't expect service-to-the-letter all over the world, though. No matter what your insurance specifies, there are countries — particularly in the Middle and Far East in which semi-private means two patients per bed, not two beds per room.

Health insurance policies usually have no territorial restrictions but to be sure, check your policy before you leave home. Some policies spell out specific limits of coverage for certain types of medical attention: others pay "reasonable and customary charges."

Government insurance like that provided under the Ontario Hospital Services plan also covers the traveller outside the country. Just be sure to bring your receipted bills back: then apply to the plan for reimbursement. In Britain the National health plan covers Commonwealth visitors, though you may have to remind a doctor somewhat persistently of this fact, especially in London.

If you are taking your car abroad, you can usually have auto insurance arranged in Canada before you leave through your insurance agent. Canadian auto policies do not cover the driving outside Canada or continental U.S.

Insurance on rental cars is obtained through the rental agency.

If you are going to Mexico, be sure to buy the auto policy written by a Mexican insurance company. These can usually be arranged by your insurance agent before you leave. But be certain not to leave the policy in your room. Mexican officials make it clear that tourists without a Mexican policy who get into an auto accident will be dealt with severely.

Shannonville Station Possible Addition To Present Fixtures at Zwick's Island

By HARRY MULHALL

Staff Reporter

There's a project on the rails coupling Belleville to a colorful past.

And, if the plan builds a head of steam, an unique symbol celebrating the railroads' significance to Canada may be sited in the city.

BUT - -

Even at that, the operation is more than complex than it sounds:

The station is limestone. It must be taken down and reassembled, historic block by block as a museum on Zwick's Island.

But the civic committee shunting the project to public attention believes it can be achieved — if the public is willing.

The plan was formally unfolded yesterday in the office of acting mayor Douglas Boyle.

The meeting heard this summary:

Historic flavor is now imparted in the old structures by the fact they were assembled by Scottish masons, imported by the Grand Trunk for the job.

CNR manager Harry Fast says Belleville and Port Hope also were built in the same era by the same immigrant teams.

However, these are still in operation — Belleville's original structure now is the core of regional administrative offices.

This gives Shannonville's station an attraction already noted by historians. Organizers of the big national railroad museum near Montreal already have considered it.

"There isn't another of its type between Toronto and Montreal and they'd dearly love to get their hands on it," says Mr. Mika.

However, says former mayor Jack Ellis, the city had "too much going at the time."

Now, however, the ex-mayor is enthusiastically back in the picture, a member of the six-man committee that also includes Mr. Fast, Ald. Dick Ellis, Chamber of Commerce secretary, Brad Bradley and district adult education director E. J. Buckley.

There's more than history tied to the project, emphasizes Mr. Ellis. Railroading is a continuing fact of life for Belleville.

"Belleville is a railroad town — but we don't really have anything to underline that link," he says.

Facts speak for the assertion.

The Grand Trunk and its CNR successor have been Belleville's longest - established major industry.

Historically, the last spike on the Grand Trunk's Montreal - Toronto line was supposedly driven here—in 1857.

Belleville also was storm centre for Canada's earliest railroad unrest. In the 1870s troops had to be rushed in after rioting strikers took over the yards, and derailed trains.

The Shannonville station would be a monument to all this — envisioned as a permanent museum near the steam locomotive which was a CNR gift to the Zwick's Island Centennial Park project.

Ex-mayor Ellis sees it as a top tourist attraction, among the few of its kind in Canada.

The Scots were famed as masons. So sturdy was their craftsmanship even 100 years later the mortar cementing the limestone blocks is tough as flint.

Today, even its abandoned loneliness emphasized by wintry fields, it stands strong as ever.

However, it's not immovable — although moving it is a challenge.

"It's a job for the whole community — for organizations and individuals," says Mr. Ellis.

Vitally needed is the willingness of people wiling to labor on the job — and the more volunteers the less work for all.

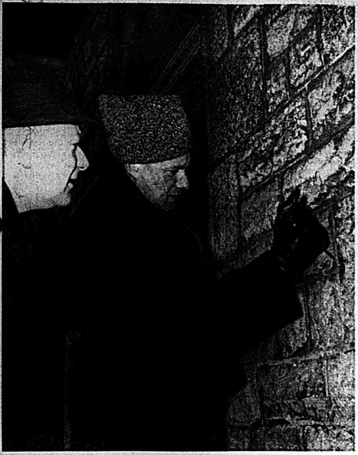
To this end the committee hopes to mobilize interest in community groups and labor organizations.

Availability of cash will be investigated at such sources as the Department of Tourism and Information and the National Historical Sites Commission.

Mr. Mika estimates total cost at $20,000.

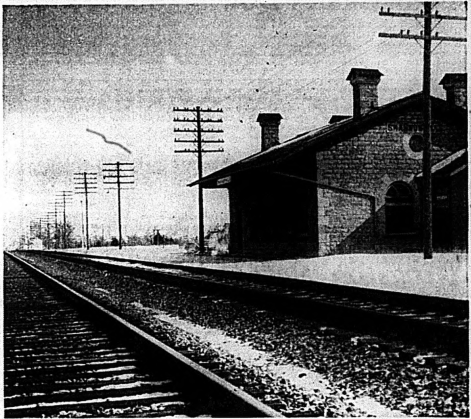
But muscle, not money, may be the essential demand on individual Bellevillians.

"It's a job for the whole community," sums up the former mayor



Strong as Ever

Mortar cementing station limestone is even stronger than the day masons first cemented building together in late 1850s' Ex-mayor Jack Ellis tests durability with Nick Mika, chairman of committee planning railway museum.



The Train Doesn't Stop Here!

Shannonville station has been vacant for years — but it looks far from derelict. Thanks to 19th-century workmanship it is sturdy as ever, good for another 100 years. Now local committee is seeking to put its unique survival to good use — as a Belleville railway museum. Moving the building block by block will cost an estimated $20,000.

Council Members Seek Immunity from Actions

Council members in the "friendly" city of Belleville want the same immunity to liability from civil actions as is now granted to members of the provincial legislature.

This week, city council endorsed a city of Toronto resolution seeking legislation, which would grant members of municipal Councils protection for anything they might say in council.

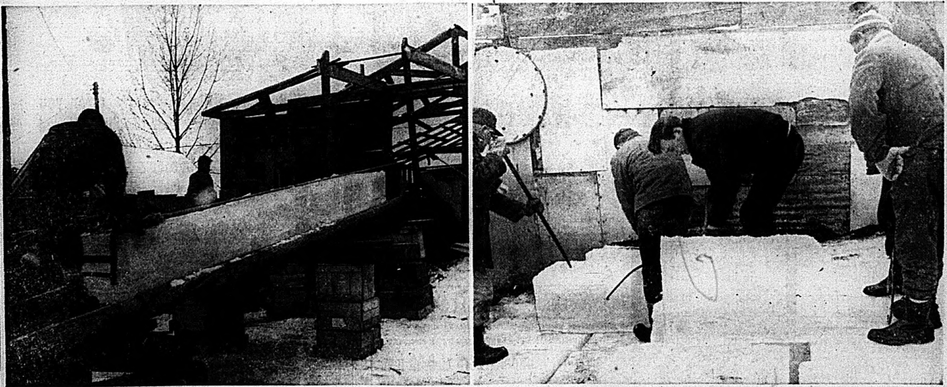
Under section 37 of the Legislative Assembly Act, Chapter 208, a member of the Assembly "is not liable to any civil action or prosecution, arrest, imprisonment or damages by reason of any matter or thing brought by him by petition, bill, resolution, motion or otherwise, or said by him before the Assembly or a committee thereof."

"We should have the same protection as members of parliament," said one alderman as council moved to concur in the resolution.

Belleville city council feels that the province of Ontario should pay a higher grant to cities to help defray the cost of snow and ice removal.

Council this week concurred in an Ottawa resolution asking the province to increase grants to cities for this purpose from the present 33 1/3 per cent to 75 per cent.

The resolution pointed out that the number of motor vehicles has been steadily increasing with more snow and ice control measures being required. At the same time increasing demands for other municipal services are reducing the amounts of funds available for winter road control.



Ice Harvest in Progress at Brighton

Anyone not convinced there has been a long, hard winter should travel to Gosport south of Brighton to watch the Quick family pack the thickest, heaviest cakes cut out of Brighton Bay in years. The ice, being stored for their summer hotel trade at Presqu'ile Point and year-round fish shipping business, is clear, blue tinted in color and measures 20 inches deep. Here in the Quinte district is one of the few remaining places in Canada where the people have defied 20th century technology and continued to harvest natural ice annually. The fresh water ice industry boomed in the earlier days until markets in the cities of Rochester and Toronto disappeared with the advent of modern refrigeration methods.

Underdog Rink

Four Games Down - - Six to Go

TRENTON — The Bill Hope curling foursome went into this week's Dominion Schoolboy Championship as underdogs, but, as the saying goes, everyone thinks so but them.

All but newcomer Dennis Gardiner — the Trenton foursome's 17-year-old lead — have carried Trenton High School colors into district competition for the past three years.

And if their success trend continues, skip Bill Hope and second Brian Domney, both 18, and third rock Bruce Lord, 17, may be the combination to dash Alberta's hopes of a third consecutive victory.

The Trenton foursome — all members of CFB Trenton families — flew from Toronto to Port Arthur Saturday with coach Hollis Morrissey and Trenton High School teacher Guy Galbraith.

They will curl against nine provincial rinks and Northern Ontario in the round-robin event to determine the 22nd winner of the Pepsi-Cola Trophy, symbolic of Canadian schoolboy curling supremacy.

The Hope rink, along with other eastern foursomes, are being placed in the underdog category by experts, who favor strong Alberta and Manitoba contenders.

Both western representatives, who finished one-two in last year's competition, return to the 1968 championship with their rinks virtually unchanged.

Trenton's Hope rink earned the right to travel to Port Arthur when they captured the Ontario schoolboy honors at Unionville in January with decisive victories over Alliston, Markham, and Brantford.

They had won district and zone playoffs before, and last year were runners-up in Ontario Tankard competition for curlers 20 and under.

The Trenton rink is literally Ontario's "hope" for a third Dominion schoolboy championship. Northern Ontario has also won the event twice.

Saskatchewan is seeking its 10th national title, Alberta has won five times (including the last two years), Manitoba twice, and British Columbia once.

Quebec and the Atlantic provinces have yet to have their names inscribed on the Pepsi-Cola Trophy in the 22 years it has been up for curling grabs.

Highlights were to include a luncheon with Ontario Lieut.-Gov. Earl Rowe, a civic banquet staged by Port Arthur officials, and daily tours of points of interest.

Trenton's 'Hope' Leads Curlers In Canadian Championships

The record has boosted the confidence of Trenton skip Bill Hope who said after his club bombed winless Newfoundland 14-3 Tuesday night:

"We haven't had much chance to see many of the other clubs play, but I'm not particularly worried as long as the guys continue to play the way they have been.

"We're playing as a good unit."

Northern Ontario's Al Veihbeck of Fort rances, 3-1; Bruce Forster of Moncton, N.B, Rick Folk of Saskatoon, and Ken Clapham of Winnipeg, each at 2-1;

Quebec's Doug Johnston of Schefferville, Robert Little of Halifax and Rod Kelly of Calgary are 2-2; Peter Johnston of Charlottetown, P.EI, 1-3; Newfoundland's Marty Dalton of St. John's 0-3 and Mark Ottem of Kamloops, B.C, 0-4.

In other fourth round games, Alberta edged New Brunswick 6-5, Manitoba clubbed Nova Scotia 12-6, Northern Ontario whipped Quebec 12-6, and Prince Edward Island edged British Columbia 8-7. Saskatchewan had the bye.

In the afternoon third round, New Brunswick edged Nova Scotia 9-8, Northern Ontario beat B.C 7-5, Ontario edged Quebec 8-7, Saskatchewan beat Newfoundland 10-3, Alberta defeated Prince Edward Island 9-5 and Manitoba had the bye.

The fifth round, at 2:30 p.m EST today, matches Alberta with Manitoba, Quebec against Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland against Northern Ontario, Ontario against Saskatchewan, New Brunswick against B.C with Nova Scotia getting the bye.

Kelly, who has won his last two games after losing the first two, feels that his club is coming on now and has a good chance of grabbing the championship and taking it to Alberta for the third consecutive year.

"We just didn't curl good in the first two games," he said. "The front end fell down a bit today but the whole team was to blame Monday. If we can pull the next six games out we'll at least get a tie for first place. I think we can do it."

In third round action, a 3½ hour marathon between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick provided some excitement when Little brought his team to the brink of a comeback victory.

Trailing 9-5 coming home, Little filled the house with stones and was laying four when Forster threw his last rock. Forster knocked one of Nova Scotia's four counters out of play and all Little had to do was draw to the eight foot to force an extra end. He was light.

Ontario was pressed to an extra end in the third round by Quebec but Hope had last rock in a test of draw accuracy and was up to the challenge.

The fourth round was a disappointing one for British Columbia; which blew its game to Prince Edward Island.

Ottem was narrow when he tried to skirt the guard and knocked it onto another P.EI stone, raising it to lay shot.

In tonight's sixth round, starting at 8 p.m, it's Northern Ontario playing Saskatchewan, New Brunswick against Quebec, Manitoba against B.C, Alberta taking on Nova Scotia, Newfoundland playing Prince Edward Island and Ontario with the bye.

Record 95 Teams in Tournament

QUEBEC (CP) — Tournament President Gerard Bolduc says teams from across Canada will participate in the 1968 international peewee hockey championships.

Mr. Bolduc took one of the peewee teams—participating in the ninth annual tournament now under way—on a snowmobile ride Tuesday and said "next year we'll have special snowmobile events with races between the games and prizes for the winners."

"We also expect to have Mexico back with us again next year, and we will have a team from each province in the country."

A record 95 teams were entered in this year's 10-day tournament which began last Thursday. Most of the players-ranging in age from nine to 12—came from Quebec and Ontario, with a few from the Maritimes and the United States.

Youngsters from the Ottawa suburb of Rockcliffe and from Amos, Que., reached the semifinals in Class C after Rockcliffe downed Toronto West Rouge 5-2 and Amos beat Thornhill, Ont., 6-1.

Kingston Defeats Picton 7-5

Kingston withstood a five-goal onslaught by Picton in the third period to win a 7-5 victory in an OHA Intermediate "B" contest in Picton last night.

Kingston got off to a flyign start with a three-goal first-period. W. Travis, G. Lavallee and L. Lavallee scored for the visitors. Picton failed to reply.

Picon was held scoreless in the second period as well. Kingston's Brian Roe scored the only goal of the period.

B. Hopkins scored three times for the home team in the final period. P. Asseltine and C. Steacy scored a goal apiece to round out the Picton scoring. But Kingston came up with three goals to nullify the Picton effort. B. Bruce, T. Landow and W. Travis were the Kingston goal-scorers.

Black Hawks Put on Drive to Catch High Flying Canadiens

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Billy Reay may have to fly in the face of nature and turn his flock of Hawks into migratory birds if he hopes to win the National Hockey League championship a second straight year.

Extended road trips fall against every team some time during each season but Reay, coach of Chicago Black Hawks, probably is wishing it wasn't happening to his club right now.

Road trips haven't been the most successful ventures this season. Toronto Maple Leafs still can't get untracked after winning only one of seven away games early this month.

The Hawks won't be away that long, but starting tonight in Oakland against the Seals they'll be on the road for their next five games before being at home to Boston Bruins Wednesday, March 6.

As if that wasn't enough, the Hawks have six points to catch up on Montreal Canadiens, leaders of the NHL's Eastern Division, and only 16 league games left in which to do it.

So far this season, the odds have to be against them even holding their ground during the period since the best they've managed in 26 travelling games is a bare split.

While winning 18 and tying five of their 32 home games so far, the Hawks have managed just nine wins, nine losses and eight ties on the road.

The slight but potent centre, who has a league-leading 70 points on 34 goals and 36 assists, underwent treatment Tuesday in Chicago for a shoulder that was badly bruised against Detroit Red Wings Sunday.

The Hawks won the game 7-1 with Mikita scoring three goals, but it could prove to have been an expensive victory for the team.

In tonight's other games, Montreal will be making its first visit to the new Madison Square Garden in New York to play the Rangers while St. Louis Blues are in Toronto, Boston Bruins are in Minnesota against the North Stars and Philadelphia Flyers are in Pittsburgh to play the Penguins.

Philadelphia and Minnesota are locked in a battle for the Western Division leadership with the Flyers holding a slim four-point edge.

The Maple Leafs got some good news Tuesday with defenceman Tim Horton reported ready for action tonight. This sends fill-in Andre Hinse back to Tulsa Oilers of the Central League.

The Leafs also are expected to give Gary Unger, up from Rochester of the American League, another shot at left wing. He came to camp on an injured knee, but so impressed assistant coach King Clancy with his hustle that Clancy decided to use him against the Blues.

Any help the Leafs can get will be welcome since they have only 19 games left in the 74-game schedule to catch Boston Bruins and win the fourth and last playoff spot in the east.

Under coach Punch Imlach, the Leafs have made the playoffs every year since he joined them from Springfield in 1958. But this year it could go right down to the final game of the schedule when Toronto is in Boston March 31 for the decision.

The Leafs now trail Boston by nine points and even if the Bruins only split their 17 remaining games, they still couldn't be caught.

Thursday, St. Louis is in Montreal, Boston is in Detroit and Minnesota is in Philadelphia.

Saturday the Hawks are in Los Angeles against the Kings. Terry Sawchuk still is expected to play goal for the Kings, despite suffering a broken finger on his right hand Monday in practice.

A metal cast on the finger will enable him to play without undue difficulty.

Pinch Hitting

The 1968 Winter Olympics are over in Grenoble, France, and aside from our darling of the skis, 24-year-old Nancy Greene, it could not exactly be termed a "roaring success" from a Canadian viewpoint.

Miss Greene proved her right to stand among the world's truely great female skiers with her spectacular victory in the giant slalom. Her fine winning time of 1:51.97 left no doubt as to the event winner and outside French idol Jean-Claude Killy's triple gold, was the outstanding feat of the large ski program.

True, she failed to impress with a 10th-place finish in the first of her three skiing events but from there out, she met the pressure head on. It was the pressure that gave way.

She won the first medal for Canada with a fine comeback in the slalom, her second event, finishing second to gain the silver.

There was only one way to go after the 10th and she was determined the climb would be all the way to the top. She said before the giant slalom and again after that it was "all or fail."

Canada can be mighty proud of Miss Greene and her gold and silver medals. May she long thrill the skiing world, Canadian and international, with the grace and skills of the fine athlete she is.

Turning to the hockey part of the Olympics, we find a Canadian team to be proud of on effort alone.

The Nats started the tournament weakly and finished it the same way before the Russian powerhouse.

But in between, against the Czecks and Swedes, the Canadians played well enough to force even their strongest doubters to believe that the Russian stranglehold on World and Olympic hockey crowns might end on Saturday. The players themselves believed it and gave their best.

It was not to be. The Russians had built up for the final game against Canada and the fact that Sweden had tied Czechoslovakia earlier in the day making it possible for the defending champs to retain their title, served as added incentive.

The 5-0 defeat Russia handed Canada dropped Jackie McLeod's Winnipeg crew into third place and a bronze medal.

It may also have accomplished a great deal more than that.

The Nationals were formed for the 1964 Olympics, when they were not expected to win, with the idea that by 1968 a winning team would have jelled by way of playing together for four years. Many of the players committed themselves to the club to that end. In the meantime, some have developed into strong NHL candidates, especially since the expansion, and are expected to sign pro contracts shortly.

McLeod, Father Bauer and others behind the formation of the Nats realized that this was the "final shot" for the club as it is. A "seconds" team was formed last fall in the Ottawa-Hull district, with the thought in mind that it would serve as a "feeder" system to the Nationals.

It would appear now that this system will not work, at least not on a short term basis. And how long can we keep players such as Morris Mott, Fran Huck or Bill Dineen in our so-called "amateur" ranks? Not long enough, or with enough other good amateurs added, to build another world championship team.

The fact that the 1968 tournament proved perhaps one of the most exciting and interesting only points out that the other countries are quickly improving their brand of hockey. Finland's win over Canada, the Czech's upset of Russia, the tie between Sweden and the Czech's and the overall picture of closer, lower-scoring games point toward a rough future for Canadians in international hockey.

The Russians, best of the overseas teams, may not improve much more without professional competition — and we think that is coming soon.

But they are good enough to lick what we send now — and they are providing the stiff competition along with the Canadians that is building the other European teams into contenders.

The Canadian hockey picture has to change or else we must be content to congratulate our teams for just "giving their best" in a losing cause.

Oakland Must Reorganize Finances

NHL Brass: More Interlocking Games

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League bill of fare next year will feature more interlocking games between East and West Divisions, the NHL board of governors decided Tuesday.

Each team will play eight games with each of the others in its division and six with each squad in the opposition division. The present ratio is 10 within the division and four outside.

The governors also changed the format for selecting its all-star teams—next year's game will be Jan. 21 between the East and West Divisions—and voted down a proposal to put the players' names on the backs of their jerseys.

The clubs decided to open training camps no more than 28 days in advance of the season's first game. This fall the date will be Sept. 14.

NHL president Clarence Campbell, telling the press of these decisions, said the six long-established teams had not been damaged financially by interlocking games with the six new clubs and were willing to increase them a year earlier than he had anticipated.

He said no thought had been given to shuffling the divisions, now separated into established and expansionist sections.

The setting of training-camp dates arose from criticism of Toronto Maple Leafs' action last September in asking their players to report a week earlier than other teams.

In what is regarded by hockey observers as an enlightened move, the governors decided that the Stanley Cup playoffs this year will open in the West-Division city—and close there, too, if the series goes seven games.

If the cities which emerge as East and West champions are close enough geographically to allow overnight trips, the cup series will follow the usual format of two games in one city, two games in the other, and alternating single games until a decision is reached.

If the cities are far apart such as Montreal and Los Angeles, two games will be played in the west city, three in the east city and the series will be fought to a conclusion in the West.

The NHL also ruled that players who want to wear hockey helmets must wear white ones on the road and helmets in a team color at home.

The governors devoted much time to the affairs of Oakland Seals, West Division last-place club which has had a shortage of working capital.

"The Oakland Seals owners are hopeful of meeting their May 15 deadline for financial reorganization," said Campbell. He said the present partnership setup, with more than 50 part owners, is unwieldy, since 60 days must be allowed in making a call for additional capital.

He said he is satisfied Oakland is a good hockey town, despite some low attendance figures.

If Oakland fails to reorganize effectively, Campbell hinted that someone else will have to be found to operate the franchise.

Campbell said that teams for the all-star clash next January will be picked by vote of hockey writers and commentators in each division shortly before the contest. The team that wins the Stanley Cup will have the option of representing its division.

No longer will the all-star selections made each year by the league's coaches have anything to do with the all-star game roster—the coaches' selections will be for individual awards only.

The governors decided to co-operate with the NHL Writers' Association in the presentation of a Bill Masterton Memorial Trophy each year to a player who "best exemlifies the qualities of perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey."

The trophy will honor the Winnipeg-born Minnesota North Star player who died Jan. 15 of a head injury, the NHL's first such death in 51 year.

The governors wound up their day by attending the annual Lester Patrick Award dinner. Thomas F. Lockart of New York, president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States since 1937 and president of the Eastern Hockey League since 1934, received the award, for outstanding contribution to hockey in the United States.

Posthumous awards also were presented to Walter A. Brown of Boston and Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick of New York, both former NHL governors and members of the Hockey Hall of Fame.

The award was established by New York Rangers in honor of their great coach and executive in the 1926-1951 era. Patrick, born in Victoria, B.C., died in 1960.

Lockhart, 75, just back from executive duties in Grenoble with the U.S. hockey team which finished sixth in the Olympics tournament, received a telegram of good wishes from the Soviet hockey club which took the gold medal.

Is a Used CADILLAC a Smart Buy?

Trudeau's Answer Your Questions...

IS A USED CADILLAC EXPENSIVE? It has been proved that Cadillac maintains its value over the years better than any other car. This is partly because many options on other cars — power brakes, power steering, Hydramatic Drive — are standard equipment on 1961 through 1967 Cadillacs.

ARE MAINTENANCE COSTS HIGH? The average maintenance cost on a used Cadillac has been proved to be less than on most medium priced cars.

ARE USED CADILLACS DEPENDABLE? Cadillacs are engineered to last through many more thousands miles than other cars. Cadillacs which Trudeau's take in trade are given the same pre-delivery preparation as our new cars.

DO USED CADILLACS BECOME DATED? Cadillac styling changes are subtle from year to year. Whether your Cadillac is one year old or several, it will give you more luxury, pride and distinction than most new cars.

DO TRUDEAU'S HAVE A LARGE SELECTION OF USED CADILLACS? At this time we can offer you an excellent choice of used Cadillacs. Listed below are some outstanding examples. Because these cars were originally purchased from Trudeau's, we can supply the complete service history of the car in which you are interested. See these cars on our premises, or call and we'll be pleased to have one brought to your door for inspection and demonstration.

Canadians Predict Losses For Russian Track Team

TORONTO (CP) — Three Canadian athletes fresh from a tour of the Soviet Union predict that Russian control of track events could slip during the Olympic Games in Mexico.

Abby Hoffman, Dave Bailey and Bill Crothers participated in a recent series of indoor meets in Russia. They won 12 of 13 events and finished third in the other.

In an interview Tuesday, Miss Hoffman, one of Canada's top middle-distance runners, suggested that the Russians "are between peaks."

"I got the impression that if they had a dual track meet with the United States, Russia would lose by quite a margin.

"They are still very strong in certain events, mostly field. They're tops in the triple jump and javelin, but over-all? No. Frankly, I was surprised at the calibre of opposition we got."

The Canadian track stars participated in events in Riga, Tallin, Leningrad and Moscow. Crothers, a Markham, Ont., pharmacist and Canada's top middle-distance runner, said he was astonished at the lack of track facilities outside Moscow.

"Their system gives everything to the elite group," he said.

Miss Hoffman suggested poor track development in the Russian provinces could be a reason for the athletic "peaking" this year.

"They get so much from the top ones—they compete till they're 30-35—that one group of athletes carried them through several years of international competition. So there has to be a gap."

But the three Canadians believe they did not run against Russia's best athletes. Most of those are already in high-altitude training camps, preparing for Mexico City.

The only loss was registered by Bailey, a Toronto miler. He finished third in the 1,500 metres in Moscow to American John Masor

Ticket Manager Contests Vancouver Arena Claim

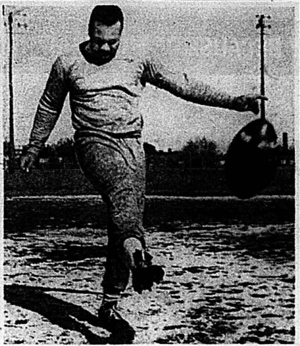
QUEBEC (CP) — Arthur Roy, ticket manager at the Quebec Coliseum, said Tuesday a claim by Vancouver's new Pacific Arena to the largest crowd in Canadian hockey history is incorrect.

Last Sunday night 16,511 spectators jammed the Vancouver rink to watch an oldtimers game in which the Montreal group beat the Western entry by a 3-1 score. After the game it was claimed an attendance record had been set.

However, Roy said the record is 16,806, established in this city's rink April 26, 1951, for a junior playoff game in which Quebec Citadels beat Barrie Flyers of the Ontario Junior A Series 5-2.

The highest National Hockey League attendance figure for a Canadian arena in past years was set at Maple Lef Gardens in Toronto where crowd of 16,318 watched the Leafs beat Montreal Canadiens 3-0 Saturday, Nov. 16, 1946.

The all-time high in NHL attendance occurred at Chicago Stadium, Feb. 23, 1947, when 20,004 watched Boston Bruins beat the hometown Hawks 9-4.



Mann for All Seasons

Dave Mann of Toronto Argonauts was top punter in the Canadian Football League last season with a 46.8-yard average but he's not resting on his laurels. He's out in the snow several times a week practising place-kicking, a job he took over in 1967 with fair success. The 36-year-old athlete also runs miles, takes special leg exercises and plays basketball when he's not working as men's wear boss of a Toronto department store.

South African Boycott

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The president of the South African Olympic Games Committee will personally ask all the countries boycotting the summer Olympics because of his country's participation to reconsider.

Frank Braun said Tuesday night: "I am going to approach these nations on a personal basis in order to emphasize to them they will be participating in an historic event by supporting South Africa.

"It will be the first time a team representing all races of South Africa will be competing.'

So far, 14 countries have pulled out of the Mexico City Games because of South Africa's admission to them. Kenya, Sudan and Iraq were the latest to withdraw, taking action Tuesday.

In addition, three Scandinavian politicians have urged Norway, Sweden and Denmark to ask for a reconsideration of the decision to let South Africa compete.

Pro Golf Boosted By Announcement

TORONTO (CP) — Professional golf in Canada got a big boost Tuesday with the announcement that 10 major tournaments in 1968 will be co-ordinated into a $100,000 national tour.

Canadian golf officials announced the new tour will be made up of nine provincial championships from June to mid-September culminating in a $15,000 Canadian professional tour championship in the fall.

Carling Breweries Ltd. will put up $78,000 and sponsor eight of the provincial tournaments plus the professional championship. The 10th, the Willow Park pro-am and open in Calgary, will be sponsored by E. V. Keitch, a Calgary businessman.

All tournaments will be 54-hole medal play. Two events, the Ontario - Millar championship and the tour final, will be open to Canadian golfers only.

Two new events have been added to make the tour coast to coast. They are the professional final and a $5,000 Atlantic Open Aug. 23-25 in Moncton, N.B

The richest event on the new tour is the $20,000 Willow Open Aug. 2-4. Next are the Ontario and Quebec opens, worth $12,000 each and the $10,000 British Columbia Open.

The tour kicks off June 6 with the Ontario Open in Woodbridge.

In the second game, Philadelphia 76ers crushed Seattle SuperSonics 140-108 after outscoring them 30-2 in the fourth period.

Minor Hockey

Three games were played in BMHA Novice Division last night.

The most convincing decision went to the Leafs, who whipped the Americans 6-2. M. Bennett, T. Bennett, Fahey, Belanger, Mafino and Male scored for the winners. Pearson and Burke scored for the Americans.

The Aces turned back the Canadiens, 4-2. B. Couglan led the Aces with a pair of goals. J. Hocksley and B. Walmsley scored the other Aces goals. Sullivan and Maloney scored for the Canadiens.

The Hornets pulled out the closest win of the night with a 3-2 victory over the Bruins. McIvoy, Masterson and Matthews scored for the Hornets. K. Pope scored both Bruin goals.

HANS ITADLMAIR

Munich Group Coming

Another exciting musical event is in store for Belleville next week. On Monday, Feb. 26 the local Community Concert Association presents the Munich Chamber Orchestra under the leadership of Hans Itadlmair.

Subsidized by its own city of Munich, the orchestra has been [illegible] permanent organization since [illegible] founding n 1950 and enjoys a sold-out subscription series all year round.

The orchestra has also performed thousands of concerts outside of Germany in such places as Argentina, Brazil, Rhodesia and Greece as well as many of the big cities in North America.

Consisting of 15 virtuoso strings plus a harpsichord, the orchestra has aroused considerable interest in its use of authentic instrumentation. Wherever the Munich Chamber Orchestra has played, it has been particularly acclaimed for its sensitivity, musical purity and tenderness of tone.

The local executive is confident that this will prove to be a very delightful second concert of the series.

Carol Channing Special Will Get Airing on Leap Year Day

Miss Channing will believe it when she actually sees her face beaming on the tube. Her show, Carol Channing and 101 Men, has been to the starting gate before.

The special was in preparation last summer, and Miss Channing underwent six weeks of rehearsals with guest stars Walter Matthaw, George Burns, Jimmy Dean and The Association. Also scheduled to appear for the Oct. 1 taping was the Air Force Academy cadet chorale. The cadets flew down from Colorado Springs the day before.

Then it happened. The broadcasting union, NABET, went on strike against ABC. The taping remained on the schedule, since it was to be done in the color studios of NBC, which wasn't on strike. Miss Channing continues the story from there in her own breathless style:

"Oh, we had everything ready, all my makeup and wigs, and the cadets had arrived, and four-star generals and everyone. So I went to NBC the day of the taping and to my utter surprise it was surrounded by pickets. Well! That wouldn't do at all.

"Then this lovely man who is the head of NBC here—what is his name? Oh, yes, Tom Sarnoff. A lovely man, and he's married to a girl who went to Bennington College, as I did. He came out of the building and asked me not to go on with the show. He said if I did, he feared there would be a strike against NBC, too.

"My goodness, it was a problem! — mean, we had all those cadets here, and we had to feed them every two hours. Those boys just eat like crazy, and if they went without a meal for more than two hours, they became dispirited. Also, we had our guest stars to think of. If we had to postpone, Walter Matthaw might be making a picture someplace far away.

"But heavens—we couldn't close down all of NBC for one little television show. I couldn't do that to such a nice man, especially since he was married to a Bennington girl."

The cadets were sent back to the academy, and the show was cancelled. ABC managed to reschedule the taping for Oct. 15 after an agreement with NABET that the special would not be broadcast until after the strike was settled. Miss Channing managed to retain her entire cast except for Dean, who suggested Eddy Arnold as a substitute.

The special was scheduled to appear Nov. 16, and Carol appeared on the Joey Bishop Show to plug it. But the strike wasn't settled, and she went on with Joey again to announce that the show would go on Nov. 30. But even though the strike ended Nov. 21, ABC didn't have enough time to promote the special, and it was postponed until Feb. 29.

Miss Channing will be among the most anxious viewers on that date.

"I want to make sure it gets on," she said.

Tone of Satire Has Become More Strident, Attacks Bitter

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Item 1: "Support Our Boys in Canada."

The reference to Americans who cross the border to avoid the draft appears not in a peace march, but on a network television show, Laugh-in. It is flashed on the screen so rapidly that most viewers couldn't read it.

Item 2:

On the Smothers Brothers Show, Tom and Dick are discussing the offering of London Bridge for sale. Tom says he would like to buy it, and Dick asks what he would do with the bridge.

Tom: I'd give it to President Johnson.

Dick: What for?

Tom: To bridge his credibility gap.

Item 3:

Pat Paulsen, avowed non-candidate for president on the Smothers Brothers Show, comments: "As a comedian, I think I could be just as effective as President Johnson." Cut by the CBS censors was his following line: "But I don't think I could run the countrp as funny."

Item 4:

Tommy Smothers, by a curious pattern of cross-pollination, appears on the Rowan and Martin Laugh-in and delivers the one-line blackout: "Let's all get behind President Johnson—and push!"

In recent times the tone of satire has become more strident, the attacks more bitter. They range from the anti-establishment humor of The Smothers Brothers Show and Laugh-in to the sledge-hammer blows of the off-Broadway play, MacBird.

The remarkable aspect of the new dissent is the availability of mass media. When Harry Belafonte took over the Tonight show in place of Johnny Carson this month, he not only sang calypso songs; he also used the NBC program as a forum for his views on Vietnam.

In interviewing Dr. Martin Luther King, Belafonte declared: "All of us here feel very strongly on the war, and we oppose it."

Comics Dan Rowan and Dick Martin of Laugh-in acknowledge that they are doves on Vietnam and they wear peace emblems on their jackets as proof. They say they think most of the people in the U.S. are for peace.

Dissent from the administration's Vietnam policies is being expressed in film theatres as well. United Artists is releasing Live for Living, in which Claude Lelouche inveighs against the American position in Vietnam.

Another American distributor, the Walter Reade Organization, is releasing "Tell Me Lies," a film version of Peter Brooke's London stage play attacking the Vietnam war. The movie features members of the Royal Shakespeare Company, as well as comments by Stokely Carmichael, and clips of the self-immolation of a Buddhist monk.

On the American entertainment scene, the issue of the Vietnam war has brought the kinds of dissent that celebrities haven't dared for almost 20 years.

During the Depression and war years, show business personalities often lent their names and financial support to causes that were at variance with majority opinion. The ascent of Senator Joseph McCarthy changed that. Many actors, writers and directors found they were unemployable because their names had been linked by congressional committees or private organizations to causes that proved to be unpopular.

The result was a long period in which entertainment figures refused to engage in any political activity.

In recent years they have been slowly returning to the political arena.

The Vietnam war has prompted many performers to speak out in a manner they would not have dared a few years ago.

"I'm just not a political fellow," says actor-director Carl Reiner, "and I've never been politically active before.

"But now I'm taking a position. I'm too disturbed about what might happen in Vietnam to stand by and do nothing."

Last month Reiner acted as emcee for a Broadway for Peace benefit at Lincoln Centre's Philharmonic Hall in New York City.

Socialist Separatist

Andree Ferretti, vice-president of le Rassemblement pour l'independence nationale, Quebec's largest separatist party, carries one of her children on a picket line last year, protesting the trial of separatists Pierre Vallieres and Charles Gagnon. The two men were charged in the bomb death of Therese Morin. Mrs. Ferretti believes in a separate Quebec based on a socialist revolution, and describes herself as one of the most militant mothers in the RIN. (CP Photo)

Two Important Issues Discussed by Council

DESERONTO — A letter received by the Deseronto Town council at its meeting Monday evening put into written words the general opinion of the citizens regarding the decision to concur with the proposal of the OWRC and install sewers in the town.

The decision was made at the meeting two weeks earlier, and involves the installation of a sewer system by the OWRC at a cost of $1,400,000, to be paid for by the town on a rental basis over 40 years.

No official figures are yet available regarding the annual cost to either residents or industry. The rate for industry was set with the aid of the OWRC and will be submitted, but will not be made public until after agreement has been reached.

A letter from the OWRC drew attention to the poor water supply in the town, which has been under a boil order for years. The Commission is wondering what Deseronto is going to do to ensure a safe water supply for its citizens.

The council authorized the $250,000 addition to its school, and is applying to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval. If and when this approval is given, debentures will be issued on a 20-year basis.

The council will ask their engineers, Hiser and Barrington, to make an official inspection of the water tower, and their report will be submitted to the OWRC for approval. Once this is receivd, the next step is to ask for the approval of the OMB. Two tenders have been received, and the engineers will be asked to consider these and give their opinion to the council and to the Public Utilities Commission. The present water tower is beyond further repair, and is leaking badly.

Jack Layfield, council's representative on the Board of the Napanee and Distrtrict Collegiate Institute, submitted his report, and also gave a brief summary of the White Paper issued recently by the Ontario Government, which does away with present school boards and sets up others on a county basis. Deseronto's position is still in question.

Council authorized the purchase of radio equipment for its police cruiser. This will put the cruiser in touch with other police cars, as well as with the Deseronto Police Department headquarters.

Activities Mark Boy Scout Week

NAPANEE — Rangers, Guides and Brownies have full programs for Boy Scout week. Earlier, Sunday, Feb. 11 those of Protestant denominations, together with the First Napanee Scouts and Cubs, held a church parade in St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church. All Roman Catholic Guides, Rangers, Brownies, Scouts and Cubs paraded to St. Patrick's church the following Sunday.

Last week, also, Rangers, Guides and Brownies held dessert parties for mothers and daughters. Both were in Trinity United Church. Both the First and Third Napanee Guide groups combined in each case.

Miss Kay Camp of Picton was a guest at the dessert party given by the Guides and Rangers Monday evening. During the evening Division Camp Adviser Mrs. Millie Morden was presented with the tree for her camper's warrant. Mrs. Morden now has her full warrant, and is qualified to supervise a camp alone.

The following evening saw the Brownies' dessert party, with presentations made to Mrs. Muriel Cockburn, who is moving out of town. She has been Brown Owl, and international representative for the district. The Brownies presented her with a Brownie coffee spoon and a brooch, and, also, from the district she received a "Thanks" badge. Her daughter Judy, who has been a Packie, was also presented with a gift. Presentations in all cases were made by Mrs. Alice Poole, Napanee District commissioner.

Tuesday evening a mother and daughter banquet was held by the Newburgh Rangers, Guides and Brownies.

Thursday all Guiders will gather at the home of Mrs. Poole for a division meeting. The division takes in Deseronto and Tyendinaga as well. Activities in these two communities are normally held later in the year.

Division commissioner is Mrs. Joyce VanVlack.

36 Boys Join Sea Scout Group

DESERONTO — All 36 of the boys who came to the initial meeting of the Sea Scouts turned up at the second meeting to enrol. The age limits are 11 and 14. Two of the boys are under that age, and several are more than 14. But no boy is being turned away. The two who are under age will go with the Cubs under Mrs. Grace Martin until fall, when they will be 11. The older ones will be allowed to remain with the Sea Scouts until fall, when they will become Venturers. The leaders, David Saunders and Rev. William Hendry, say there is no limit as to numbers.

Three young men have come forward already as volunteer leaders, Wayne Keech, John Fox, and Jim Caron. Since only nautical terms are used, Mr. Saunders is skipper, Mr. Hendry is first mate, and Jim Caron is the boatswain. The others are officers, rank still undecided.

At the last meeting six patrol leaders were chosen, mostly by the boys themselves, and an assistant for each was selected. The patrols will bear the names of types of boats: Dinghy, Tender, Sloop, Yawl, Ketch and Schooner.

The uniforms are of distinctive types, also — blue shirt, navy and white neckerchief and navy bellbottomed trousers. For active games the boys will wear white shirt, navy jeans and running shoes.

The Legion and the Lions Club are joint sponsors of the Sea Scouts. Meetings are held in the Legion Hall.

Failing Heart Can Be Helped Do Job

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: What is congestive heart disease? What are the symptoms? — M. J.

Congestive heart disease, also commonly called congestive heart failure, is what happens when the heart muscle fails to produce a sufficient flow of blood.

"Failure" is a perfectly accurate word because the heart muscle is, indeed, failing in its effort to pump adequately.

Yet the expression "Heart failure" has taken on a deceptive meaning in the minds of a great many people, i.e., when one is startled, one says, "You almost gave me heart failure."

Congestive heart failure is not a sudden or complete stoppage of the heart. It is, in a word, a weakened heart.

Symptoms are cough, shortness of breath, tightness in the chest, and swelling of tissues, ankles, abdomen or elsewhere.

The somewhat slowed circulation means that less than normal oxygen is being carried through the body. The lungs react by trying to "work harder," yet there is nothing the lungs, by themselves, can do about it. Hence the patient feels a "shortness of breath," which is not actually any shortage of breath but is the consequence of a lack of oxygen being carried throughout the body. Lung tissues also may accumulate more fluid than they should and — simplifying things to a considerable extent — we can say the cough results.

Edema, or "dropsy," or accumulation of fluid elsewhere in the body, usually the lower parts, is another result of lack of sufficiently brisk circulation.

In most cases the condition is readily correctible — the lagging heart muscle cannot, of course, be made as good as new, but the heart still can be helped to do its job and the patient becomes much more comfortable and active.

Among the very useful aids to the heart with such a condition are digitalis, to strengthen the heartbeat, diuretics, or "water pills" to promote elimination of excess fluids, and sometimes occasional use of oxygen to promote breathing, thus providing a greater transfer of oxygen for each given passage of blood through the lungs.

Given proper help, a "failing heart" can continue to give its possessor good service for years to come.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has what the doctor called coronary artery disease or "coronary insufficiency." He has always been a heavy smoker and drank a lot of beer.

He takes medication and when he feels good he drinks a lot and smokes a lot. Then he has a setback and gets pains, but he never blames the smoking and drinking for his setback. — Mrs. F. B.

Coronary insufficiency means that the arteries carrying blood to the heart muscle are somewhat clogged so the muscle doesn't get its full not unlike the condition discussed in the preceding letter — the heart cannot do its full share of work.

A bit of whisky or brandy may be helpful, and often is in cases like your husband's, but note that I said a "bit," not a snootful.

Beer and cigarettes are out — both are entirely too harmful.

Mississippi Police Wound Three in Mob

LORMAN, Miss. (AP) — Highway patrolmen returned the fire of a noisy crowd at all-Negro Alcorn A. and M. College here today, wounding three persons, the patrol said.

A patrol spokesman said the patrolmen fired after bullets and shotgun pellets began hitting trees around them about 1:15 a.m. He said the shots came from a cursing crowd of 200 persons, mostly male students who had been forced out of a dormitory by tear gas to keep it from destruction.

The spokesman said no patrolmen were among the wounded.

The patrol gave this account:

Tuesday afternoon, three students who had been expelled earlier returned to the campus and seized control of an assembly meeting, denouncing President J. D. Boyd and accusing him of not allowing political freedom.

At 9:30 p.m., bottles and bricks were thrown at campus police officers from a men's dormitory. At the time, two highway patrolmen were on the campus assisting Sheriff Dan S. McCay, and the call was put out for help.

Soon after the bottles began flying, about 100 men came out of the dormitory, and the crowd soon grew to 200 and began cursing and throwing bottles and bricks at officers. Scattered gunfire began coming from the crowd.

The group began tearing up Academic Hall, a men's dormitory, destroying some of the furniture and breaking almost every window.

At 1 a.m. a detachment of patrolmen went into Academic Hall and told the group to leave. When the students refused, the patrolmen used tear gas to evacuate the building.

At 1:15 a.m., a crowd of 200 persons gathered at Veterans No. 1 dormitory, cursing officers, throwing bricks and bottles and firing guns. It was then that the patrol returned the fire.

About 1:30 a.m. today the amount of gunfire increased, and was said to be coming from at least one semi-automatic weapon, one shotgun and several small-calibre weapons.

The crowd's fire stopped when patrolmen fired back, but resumed shortly afterward from the cover of another building.

Mercenaries Eager to Fight

JOHANNESBURG (AP)-The men sipping drinks at the bar don't look like killers—or saviors. Their conversation drifts from the South African stock market to business deals to the number of dead they left at Stanleyville.

Impeccably dressed, some are highly respected businessget back to The Congo and their swashbuckling days as soldiers for hire.

Three years ago, they and associates rescued hundreds of whites from possible death, killed thousands of blacks, and left a trail of empty banks and looted shops.

Moise Tshombe, the one-time president of breakaway Katanga, hired white mercenaries in 1960. Together with Katangan troops, they held at bay for months the Congolese Army and the United Nations.

Tshombe was later named premier of The Congo. His faithful white mercenaries followed him, spearheading the reluctant Congo Army in its fight against a rebel uprising which plunged The Congo into chaos and bloodshed.

Tshombe's reign was short-lived. Joseph D Mobutu, a former army sergeant, named himself president and ousted the white soldiers of fortune.

Some returned to their homes, mostly in white-ruled Rhodesia and South Africa. A handful had amassed fortunes in looted foreign currency, diamonds and gold but others had little to show except a few battle scars.

Many mercenaries readily admit that commuting to the office doesn't really satisfy them. They miss the excitement of jungle battles, the whine of bullets and the prospect of a well-stocked bank waiting to be opened.

"The smell of cordite is like perfume to me," said one ex-mercenary, now an advertising executive trying to promote toothpaste.

South Africa has hundreds of would-be white volunteers of all nationalities and ages, ready to sell their services any time, any place—providing the pay is good enough.

Many have offered to fight for pay in Vietnam, Yemen and Nigeria, but with little success.

Some are listed by the Organization of African Unity as war criminals and warned that they will be tried if they are found in black states.

South Africa, hoping to stem the enthusiasm of mercenaries and end criticism from black states, seeks to keep white mercenaries from leaving the country.

The white soldiers of fortune are an international mixture of get-rich-quick adventurers with little regard for politics.

One says: "Given a choice, we will always fight on the side of the underdog. There's nothing political about it. After all, when you're on the losing side you expect higher pay."

Lawlessness Sinks from Top

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What is "lawlessness"?

Is it a 14-year-old Negro boy stealing a radio through a smashed store window during a riot?

Is it college students marching around a public building to protest the Vietnam war, or blocking a doorway and forcing the police to carry them away?

Is it high public officials in a town in Long Island, rezoning land, rigging prices, and making illicit fortunes out of crooked real estate deals?

Is it policemen in Chicago stealing and hiding a truckload of tires for resale later, or other policemen in the same city shaking down a poor motorist for $500 because he was driving with a revoked license?

Is it three of the largest pharmaceutical firms in the U.S. being prosecuted for conspiring to inflate the price of a certain medical drug a thousandfold beyond its cost?

All of these are "lawlessness" — in one way or another, to one degree or another. And does one kind excuse any other kinds? No, of course not.

But — and this is a most important but — one kind leads to the other kinds, one kind seems to make the other kinds, if not permissible, at least excusable and understandable.

It is immorality and illegality at the top levels of society that filter down their dubious ethnic and set the tone for attitude and action in the lower strata of society. It has alwasy been this way, and always will be. What the king does — whoever the king may be — gives the commoners their cue for conduct, both privately and publicly.

When elected officials are flagrantly crooked, when police are venal or responsive to political pressures, when large corporations grossly violate laws against conspiracy or price-fixing, then the general public turns sour and cynical and opportunistic and amoral.

When the worst people seem able to hire the best lawyers, when the voice of the medical profession seems to care more about doctors than patients, when power and profit and prestige (none of them bad in itself) seem to be the ruling criteria of worth in a society — then why take it all out on the looters, the demonstrators, the protestors, the frustrated, fearful, angry people who get a shafting whichever way they turn?

"Lawlessness"? It sinks down from the top, it doesn't seep up from the bottom. Like children, people imitate what they look up to.

Hopes for Gold

MARMANDE, France (AP) — A professional diver, Jean-Louis Cagniac, believes a wreck he discovered on the Vigo harbor floor in western Spain is one of the gold-bearing Spanish galleons sunk by the Dutch in 1707. He found it while holiday skin-diving last October and plans to explore it further in April. He said the galleon hulk so far has yielded cannons, cannonballs and a trunk.

Youth Missing After Blaze

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — A man and his wife were in hospital with burns today, as police sought their teenage son, missing in a pre-dawn fire near here.

The search for 18-year-old Daniel Halloran centred on the ruins of the family home, two miles east of Highway 14, on the Scoharie Road.

In Prince Edward County Hospital at Picton were William Halloran, 58, and his wife, Mayetta, 52.

Both were reported suffering face and hand burns and in shock.

The couple were injured fleeing to safety in early-morning below-zero temperatures, clad in night attire.

Cause of the fire, which destroyed their comfortable two-storey brick home, is being investigated.

However, immediate official concern was to explain the disappearance of Daniel Halloran, student at Picton's Prince Edward Collegiate, where his father is a building maintenance worker.

Police and firemen waited for the ruins to cool before sifting the debris later this morning.

Earlier, Mr. Halloran told a neighbor he had pushed his son through a window of the burning building. But, police noted it was immediately after the couple had fled the fire and the father appeared in shock.

The blaze erupted shortly after 5 a.m., the time confirmed by a neighbor, 72-year-old

Dief Defies Chair

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament went into its third day of crisis today with the government still seeking a test of its authority to govern and the Opposition insisting that it has no right to stay in office.

Wednesday, the second day of turmoil after defeat of the government's tax bill Monday night, was highlighted by a half-hour Commons session during which Prime Minister Pearson was blocked in a bid for immediate debate on a confidence motion.

It was another day of uncertainty and high drama as former Conservative leader John Diefenbaker defied a ruling of the Speaker to charge that Parliament was being "throttled" and to raise the spectre of the 1956 pipeline debate.

Today, the House was to meet at its regular 2:30 p.m. hour and almost anything was possible.

Separatist Says His Vote Is Key

OTTAWA (CP) — When the House of Commons adjourned yesterday members streamed into a chaotic temporary television studio complete with lights, cameras and cables.

Cabinet ministers and opposition front-benchers repeated their arguments at a half-dozen floating press conferences and even Gilles Gregoire (Ind.—Lapointe), the only separatist in the House, got into the act.

He said he holds the balance of power in the House, divided between 130 Liberals and 132 other members.

And if the government does not move fast, he said, he will kick it out.

PCs Deny Pairs

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Conservative MPs broke pairing arrangements Monday night when they voted against the government on the income tax bill, Liberal Whip Bernard Pilon said Wednesday.

But both Conservatives immediately denied this.

Mr. Pilon said he understood three members of his party had paired for Monday night—an arrangement whereby an MP agrees not to vote in the House of Commons while his "pair" in the other party is away.

Rosaire Gendron, the mayor of Riviere-du-Loup, Que., said he had a permanent arrangement with Martial Asselin, Conservative MP for Charlevoix, for Monday nights—the night his city council meets.

Mr. Pilon said Georges Valade, Conservative MP for Montreal Ste. Marie, was paired with Georges Lachance, Liberal

Interest Rate Increase Thwarts HOME Program

TORONTO (CP) —At least 77 families have been forced by increasing interest rates to withdraw from the Ontario government's Home Ownership Made Easy plan, the Ontario Housing Corp. said Wednesday.

An OHC spokesman said that at the end of December, 77 families had relinquished lots they had reserved in the 600-lot Bramalea development because they couldn't afford National Housing Act interest rates that rose to 8⅝ from 7¼.

The spokesman explained that the HOME plan, launched last August to help lower-middle-income families buy homes with low down payments, required that payments not exceed 27 per cent of the applicant's annual income.

Families with incomes of $7,500 a year or more were eligible under the 7¼-per-cent rate, but those with incomes near the minimum mark have found it difficult to meet the higher rates.

Alan Taylor, president of Bramalea Consolidated Developments Ltd., developers of the Bramalea project, confirmed that "quite a number" of families "couldn't qualify at the new interest rates"

Khe Sanh Is Cut Off

KHE SANH (AP) — The 40,000 North Vietnamese troops surrounding the Khe Sanh combat base in northern South Vietnam have closed their siege ring so tightly that neither withdrawal nor reinforcement of the U.S. marine garrison can be carried out except at a cost of heavy casualties, marine officers at Khe Sanh believe.

Under the cover of several days of heavy fog, the North Vietnamese troops have established bunkers and trench positions within 300 yards of marine positions.

It appears that the battle for Khe Sanh, expected to be the biggest of the war, is still some days and possibly weeks away.

Britain Is Withdrawing Brigade From Germany

LONDON (CP) — Britain now is in the process of withdrawing one of its six army brigades stationed on the Rhine in West Germany and will start switching its nuclear strategic force from aircraft to Polaris submarines later this year, Defence Minister Denis Healey announced today.

In a white paper that confirmed the government's intention to withdraw as a world military power by 1971, Healey reported, however, that because of devaluation and other factors, defence costs are still rising.

He estimated that for the new fiscal year opening in April the defence budget will rise to £2,271,000,000 (about $5,904,600,000) up from the 1967-68 estimate of £2,205,000,000 (about $5,733,000,000). However, as a percentage of the gross national product—the value of goods and services produced—defence costs will decline to six from 6.5.

Healey lauded the NATO ministerial decision last December to revise and reduce NATO's strategic concept, including the reasoning that should war break out in Europe there will be an extended period of political and other warning and perhaps a longer period of conventional warfare.

Nixon Urges Free Drugs As Medicare Substitute

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal leader Robert Nixon launched a strong attack on the government in the Ontario legislature Wednesday and was especially critical of its refusal to join the federal medical care program July 1.

Mr. Nixon told the house that the government lost about $160,000,000 in federal revenues by deciding to stayout of the federal government's medical care plan during its first year of operation.

He said there was a moral obligation to spend that money on health services such as establishing a drug program for the aged and chronically ill.

U.S. Planes Attack Hanoi Radio Station

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes for the first time in the war attacked the Hanoi radio station that beams out all propaganda from North Vietnam, the U.S. command announced today. But monitors said Radio Hanoi was still on the air.

The strike Wednesday against the station, which military spokesmen said has the most powerful transmitter in Southeast Asia, coincided with these other developments indicating a sharp escalation in both the ground and air wars:

—The number of Americans killed in combat jumped to a record high for the war last week, 543, and there were 2,547 wounded, 210 less than the record. It was a week of hard fighting in the Viet Cong's lunar new year offensive against South Vietnam's population centres.

—Official U.S. sources disclosed that a new rocket, designed and manufactured by the Chinese without any foreign help, has been used in the war for the first time.

—The same sources said elements of two insurgent divisions are still menacing Saigon, and some forces are poised within six miles of the capital city of nearly 3,000,000 persons. The sources also disclosed that intelligence had detected heavy shipments of arms coming in from Cambodia.

U.S. sources also disclosed that the North Vietnamese 324—B Division had moved across the demilitarized zone to the area of Quang Tri City, key provincial capital 34 miles north of Hue. About 50,000 insurgent troops were reported to be in or just on the fringes of South Vietnam's two northernmost provinces—Quang Tri and Thua Thien.

Irish Bartender Dons Green Pyjamas For 61-day Sojourn in 8-foot Grave

LONDON (AP) — Irish bartender Mike Mealey, 33, donned his green pyjamas, said "Farewell, lads" and climbed into his custom-built coffin Wednesday—to spend two months in a grave.

Sean, Paddy and Mick were there, and all the other lads from the Irish community in Kilburn, northern London, to wish Mike good health and send them off in the true tradition of the Irish wake.

Then they shouldered the wooden box that will be Mike's home for 61 days and bore him off to an eight-foot grave in a vacant lot nearby.

Mike, gravedigger when he lived in Ballyporeen, County Tipperary, wants to set up a world record for being buried alive.

W. C. Whitman stayed 45 days under South Carolina soil last year to establish what he claimed was a world record. But Mike believes another American stayed down 57 days "about 100 years ago."

"So I'll come up on the Queen's birthday," said Mike. That's April 21.

Butty Sugrue who says he's Mike's manager said: "We're planning the biggest parade ever known. It'll be a holiday. Half a million Irish will parade through the streets of Kilburn. He'll be famous."

Mike, married with a wife and baby son back in Ireland and another child expected in April, should be comfortable in the coffin.

It's lined with foam rubber three inches thick and has two holes, six inches in diameter, cut into the lid. One will be for the entrance for food down a shaft. The other will supply fresh air.

"I'll spend most of my time reading. I'm taking a pile of boxing books down with me," said 170-pound Mike prior to his descent.

"I'm told I'll be able to smoke while I'm in the coffin, so it won't be so bad."

After all, one Irishman said: "You couldn't bury a man when the pubs are open."

Jim Hanna, who was following an early-morning routine.

Mr. Hanna rose on the hour to phone next door and awaken his son Keith, who drives daily to work at a Napanee bread outlet.

From the phone he had a clear view of the Halloran's house but noticed nothing alarming.

He was back in bed a few minutes when he was startled by fire reflecting on his window.

Looking out, he saw his neighbor's house "pretty well blazing up" and called the phone operator to alert provincial police.

Meantime, Keith Hanna had dashed from his home to the scene. He brought the injured couple to his father's house.

"They were pretty badly upset," recalled the elder Hanna. "He (Mr. Halloran) said something about pushing the boy out the window."

"But they're not sure about that either," he added.

However, the house was blazing beyond control by the time they arrived.

OPP Corporal Gord Oliver said the firemen held off hosing down the debris because icing conditions could complicate a search later.

Ontario Fire Marshall's inspector Del Hope was later called from Belleville to probe the cause of fire.

Sea Cadet Officer Honored

Cause of their pride was the award of a centennial medal to their commanding officer, Lieut. B. T. Bevvan.

Lieut. Bevvan, who has devoted his spare time for the last four years to teaching boys to take on mens' work, was honored for his "outstanding contribution to the nation" through his efforts on behalf of city youth.

The calibre of Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte is better known in Toronto and Nova Scotia than in its home city. It's 20-member brass band, organized only a year and a half ago with Lieut. Bevvan as band master, garnered third prize at the provincial Sea Cadet competition in Toronto in the fall.

The Toronto win followed an eight week tour of duty for the band at CFB Cornwallis, where it filled the roll of ship band during centennial events. The mayor of Annapolis Royal, N.S., presented Lieut. Bevvan and his group with a Nova Scotian flag in appreciation for the way in which the cadets took over their duties. This flag is now paraded at all official functions of the Quinte Corps.

The Sea Cadet building on South Front St. at the harbor is headquarters for the 40-member Corps. In addition to their regular cadet training the boys, aged 13 to 19, learn to sail during the summer in the Corps' dinghies.

Economic Power Answer

Farmers Told Not to Rely on Politics For Solution of Agricultural Problems

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

WOOLER — One of their leading spokesmen told a group of Northumberland County farmers Wednesday not to rely on politics for the solution of Canada's agricultural ills.

Walter Miller, president of the Ontario Farmers' Union, told a small gathering in the town hall here that affiliation with a political party was not the answer to the problems confronting the nation's farmers.

"Farm organization should stay out of party politics if they want to remain effective. A farm union should stay in a position to deal with any government."

Noting that the OFU counts "staunch" Conservatives, Liberals, and New Democrats in its ranks, Mr. Miller said no single Canadian political party shows particular interest in farmers and their problems.

"Economic power is the answer. Farmers don't realize how much power they have. Using this power, you'll get government concessions, no matter which party is in office."

"Farmers gain government action by pressure — like putting tractors out to demonstrate on highways — not by politics," said Mr. Miller, referring to the 1966 OFU demonstrations to back producers' demands for higher milk prices.

Organization was the key to agricultural stability, with farmers realizing "they will have to solve problems which they have been depending on others to solve for them."

By depending on methods successfully used in other segments of the economy — like collective bargaining — farmers would not find themselves as dependent on the government.

"There isn't a party in the House of Commons that will show much interest in farmers until they become organized."

For the farm union president, "price" is at the hub of Canadian agricultural problems.

And what Mr. Miller called "Canada's cheap food policy" was making price problems more acute.

Government subsidies, like those to milk producers, represent attempts to keep food costs to the consumer at lower-than-necessary levels, he said.

And there should be provision made for protection of domestic farm produce: "The government makes it so costly to import cars and cameras but what about competing agricultural goods from abroad?"

Mr. Miller singled out sugar imports as a prime example of the government's lack of concern for the Canadian farmer.

Adequate price structures could only be brought into effect by organization of farmers into bargaining units — "direct, voluntary - membership unions."

"Farm organizations of the future will have to avoid commodity lines," Mr. Miller said. With an eye to future national and international affiliations, the Ontario Farmers' Union is composed of tobacco-growers, beef-raisers, and milk-producers, among others.

By splitting their economic power into commodity groups, Mr. Miller said farmers had destroyed most of their bargaining strength.

Also needed in the future was a quota marketing systm, rigidly adhered to by farmers in a form of "supply management," Mr. Miller said.

He preferred this method of marketing farm produce to the "supply and demand" concept often an "artificial creation of corporations."

Mr. Miller, due to address a Castleton audience last night, made a late entry at the afternoon meeting here as a result of transportation problems.

Prior to his arrival, OFU Women's President Veronica Opsitnik of Pontypool warned the Wooler listenrs of a crucial decision confronting Canadian farmers.

"Will you organize and set your own policy, or be absorbed into corporate farm units? Farmers are dealing with enterprises national and international in scope."

Mrs. Opsitnik, a tobacco-grower's wife, said giant corporations are "encroaching" into agriculture, using space-age technology to create automated, highly efficient chicken farms, or large-scale vegetable crops.

"We're not against agricultural efficiency, as such. But we are against corporate agriculture.

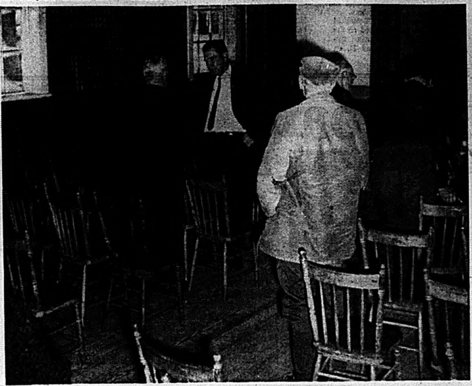
"Shouldn't the consumer be getting cheaper food from these efficient, highly-automated processes? What do you think when a handful of corporate groups control produce?

"Who ever heard of reduced competition lowering prices? Maybe at the outset, but that is all."

"Farmers don't have time for too many more Royal Commissions," the OFU representative stressed.

"They must organize into a general structure and get prices for their products that take into account their investment, as well as allow for a reasonable profit."

The 20 per cent or so of Canadian wages paid out for food indicated the fact the government has committed itself to a "cheap food policy," when the figure runs upwards of 50 per cent in some European countries.



Ontario Farmers' Union president Walter Miller made two area stopovers Wednesday, the first at Wooler's Town Hall. Mr. Miller discussed the importance of farm organizations, and stimulated Northumberland County interest in the O.F.U.

High School Board Endorses Ameliasburg Twp. Request

The Bay of Quinte High School Board last night endorsed a move by Ameliasburg to remain in the Hastings County education area when county wide boards are instituted next January.

The township, which is included in Prince Edward County, has been sending secondary school students to Belleville schools for the past 40 to 50 years. Enrolment is 399 at the present time.

New government legislation will force the amalgamation of various school boards into a county wide board by Jan. 1, of 1969.

Harmon Montgomery, Ameliasburg representative on the Bay of Quinte board, told his fellow trustees the township wanted an endorsation of a motion asking the provincial government to allow the area to remain in the Hastings County unit.

"It seems ridiculous to send our students to Picton, when we can almost see the schools in Belleville," he said. The 25-mile distance to Picton would mean a long bus ride for our children and an additional cost to the ratepayers."

"We would be in essence providing a double bus service if we sent our children to the Prince Edward County school."

Board chairman, James Clarke, said he thinks the major problem would be a lack of representation on the new board. "There is no question that you will be able to keep sending your students to Belleville but it would be on a fee basis. Apparently you would not have any representation on the board."

A copy of the motion endorsing the Ameliasburg action will be sent to the township for their use when they petition the department of education for a change in the ruling.

Mr. Montgomery said residents in Ameliasburg are stirred up over the reorganization. "I've received a lot of calls from ratepayers."

Board secretary-treasurer Roy Dulmage claimed a lot of Ameliasburg ratepayers had called the board office to get clarification on the issue.

The guidelines for the reorganization of school units on a county wide basis state: Students who are presently attending schools in other countries will be permitted to continue with this policy.

Students entering secondary schools following the reorganization will also be permitted to continue on a cost per pupil basis. This will be paid by the township, without representation, if the ruling is not changed.

That's Brotherhood!

Handclasp symbolizes occasion as Rabbi Walter Seligman, Sons of Jacob congregation meets Jesuit Rev. Irenee Beaubien at Brotherhood Week celebration in Belleville last night. The Montreal priest, distinguished for ecumenical leadership, was keynote speaker at St. Joseph's hall banquet.

Specifically Urgent

Religious Unity Vital in Modern Age

Religious unity is vital if the churches are to cope with modern social challenges, a distinguished Jesuit priest warned last night.

Unity is specifically urgent since today's youth is increasingly pressured by negative influences, said Rev. Irenee Beaubien, Quebec-area director of the Catholic National Secretariat on Ecumenism.

Father Beaubien was keynote speaker at Belleville's annual Brotherhood Week banquet which drew more than 160 men from east end Christian and Jewish communities to St. Joseph's parish hall.

"Today the younger people are under tremendous pressure. As such it's not surprising that they are no longer inclined to be influenced by religion," said Father Beaubien.

"All the influences are very, very negative. That is why religious leaders have a tremendous challenge to balance the negative mental influences they (youth) undergo.

"We all have the same problem. That's one more reason that our former misunderstandings should be overcome," he stressed.

Father Beaubien missed the banquet. His train from Montreal didn't arrive until the But the man who didn't come to dinner stayed to eloquently emphasize church unity. He tables were being cleared. was speaking to a group which yearly displays interdenominational fellowship.

For Belleville, it was the fifth such demonstration — exclusive of a gala Centennial Year event which drew hundreds of male churchgoers.

Ecumenism, warned Father Beaubien, is a word often misunderstood. Both Catholics and Protestants often fear it means being overly influenced by the other's religion.

"Ecumenism is any kind of effort made to develop understanding, charity, co - operation and unity," he explained.

The challenge of unity imposes a "great responsibility" upon Christians he added.

"If we can't unite ourselves, we can't succeed in meeting others . . . in order to better the world."

While not discussing the "pros and cons" of the struggle, "the fact is there are people suffering because of that war. We must try and do something for those people.

"But," he cautioned, "when we try to help them and we're divided ourselves what can we do?.

"We'll always be handicapped in our efforts if we are divided."

However, "grassroots" education was crucial to the success of ecumenism, said the Jesuit.

"There is certainly the danger for some people within my church to go too far and too fast — and sometimes put on the back of ecumenism things that are not properly ecumenism." he agreed.

"The danger is, you should not separate the head from the tail."

"Some people are so advanced in the field they do not take time to educate . . . for instance, the 'grassroots' people.

"I would like unity to come faster," he added. "But, I think to be realistic . . . I must try . . . and make people understand things that are true, are real."

"Many things are changing. But we have to tell them why they are changing. Otherwise many people are lost."

Among those also speaking briefly to the assembly were acting mayor Douglas Boyle and citizen of the year Jack Ellis.

Deadly Virus

P amphlets on Rabies Available

Due to the rabies situation in the Belleville and surrounding areas local veterinarians and the Canada Department of Agriculture Health of Animals Division are responsible for literature on the dreaded disease in their offices and in other localities such as the police station.

Different kinds of pamphlets, some of them geared especially to children, offer information on the fatal disease and ways to watch for it.

According to a veterinary spokesman rabies is caused by a virus which can be introduced into all warm-blooded animals.

The virus enters the body through a break in the skin and it is thought to travel along the peripheral nerves to the brain.

The location of the bite is one of the factors which affects treatment of the disease. If a bite were to the face there would be less time for treatment than to the leg or the foot.

The distance from the brain measures the length of incubation and suggests how long the virus will take to show itself.

The incubation period takes from two weeks to six months to show signs of the disease.

What are the signs?

In a dead animal signs are difficult to locate. Generally the brain is removed and sent to a laboratory to be examined.

The signs in a live animal are easier to spot and are similar among all warm-blooded animals.

The earliest clues are quite vague and not everyone is able to notice them.

There is a general irritation wherein the animal is not itself.

Usually about 24 hours later, more obvious signs begin to appear. The animal appears to have the inability to co-ordinate its body properly.

Then this condition progresses swiftly to paralysis of the hind legs. At this point the animal may take two completely different steps. It may become more active or may become quite depressed.

Next the afflicted animal starts snapping and chewing at anything, even articles like pieces of wood.

Finally the latter stages appear and it loses the ability to swallow and consequently to eat or drink. At this point saliva will drip from its mouth.

The animal is dangerous only about a week during the time the virus is carried in its saliva.

Rabies can be controlled and effectively refused entry to the nervous system of dogs.

Stray dogs are important in spreading the disease and if they are kept to a minimum the rest of the domestic animal population can remain healthy.

Vaccination is very efficient. The vaccines contain live rabies viruses and produce an act of immunity.

The viruses are grown in a laboratory alive but without the facility to effectively cause the disease. The vaccine is not quite four years old.

Scientists are still not quite sure how long immunity under this vaccination lasts but to be safe animals should be vaccinated every year.

The biggest problem with rabies is the skunk which may seem harmless to a young child. Skunks carry the virus in their saliva a lot longer than other animals.

On top of that the saliva of a skunk carries a much larger concentation of the disease making its bite very dangerous.

28 Cree Indian Children Will Visit With Mohawks

Twenty eight Cree Indian children from the Anglican Mission at Fort George, on the Quebec side of James Bay, will be week-long visitors on the Tyendinaga Indian Reservation next May.

The Indian childen's visit to the reservation near Deseronto, will be the culmination of a much looked forward to trip to see the bright lights of Toronto — their first trip to the "outside."

While in Toronto the children will be billeted with families in that city, attend school for a week and see life as it is in the big city.

At the same time the visit will be a dream come true for the children's school teacher, Miss Susan Runnells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Runnells of Barker Street in Picton.

Miss Runnells is now in her third year as teacher in the James Bay district under the Federal Department of Indian Affairs.

The Indian children's visit to Toronto is being sponsored by a number of Toronto organizations who through newspaper articles learned of Susan's "dream" of an "outside" visit for her students.

Miss Runnells says the Indian children are extremely shy and feels that if their interest in the "outside" in engendered early in life there will be less reluctance to leave home for further education.

Forced to Change Plans

This week's government crisis at Ottawa has resulted in a possible change of plans for Hon. J. J. Greene; federal minister of agriculture, who was scheduled to speak in Belleville next Monday.

Monday is the local Rotary club's annual "rural" day when Quinte district farmers are entertained at luncheon and Mr. Greene was to be the keynote speaker.

But as result of recent developments in Ottawa Mr. Greene has informed the local club he will come "if possible" but if he is unable to make the trip a deputy will speak in his stead.

The possible cancellation of Mr. Greene's visit has, however, resulted in a change of plans for a committee of city parks board and agricultural society members, who were looking forward to a private meeting with the agricultural minister in connection with an application for possible additional grants or loan to assist in building construction at the fairgrounds.

The local board's brief will now be discussed with the Central Association of Exhibitions in Toronto before being presented to Mr. Greene's department in Ottawa next month.

Ottawa's Extravagance

Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson does a good job of policing the extravagant ways of the federal government and its minions like the CBC.

But try as he may the men on Parliament Hill and in the service of the government have pretty thick skins.

The CBC is a classic example. The CBC knows how to spend public money and give minimum returns for such expenditure.

In his latest report, Mr. Henderson reveals that during Expo the CBC rented rooms and suites in three Montreal hotels as spare rooms for its extra staff. It finally let some of the rooms go, at the cost of breaking lease contracts, because the rooms were not being used.

The cost of this unoccupied accommodation was $104,000.

This is just one item. The report cites other cases involving millions of dollars in public expenditure. One tells of 494 servicemen who have received special benefits because they were being released prematurely from the armed services, and at the same time paid bonuses totalling $28,500 for re-engaging.

Mr. Henderson's report traditionally makes scandalous reading. It is a chronicle of extravagance that would hasten the bankruptcy of any privately-operated business. Yet because it is government . . . and yes the good old public is paying, it is tolerated.

But what is the use of having an auditor-general if his revelations and recommendations are not acted upon. Ottawa will have to pull up its socks in this regard.

Government's Responsibility?

Governments get blamed for many things. They also get saddled with responsibility for many of the country's social and material ills.

Recently Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing was confronted with such a situation when he met a deputation of Indians led by the outspoken Kahn - Tineta Horn.

Miss Horn, a 25-year-old Montreal model raised on the Caughnawaga reserve, complained to Mr. Laing of the "terrible scandal" of Vancouver prostitution.

The young Mohawk charged that the Indian Affairs Department does not answer letters from Indians and has ignored a Vancouver prostitution ring that uses "hundreds" of 15 to 17-year-old Indian girls.

This is not the first time Miss Horn has made such accusations. It is true many Indians fall upon difficult times in cities like Vancouver. They do so via bad company, drugs, the bottle and skid row. Once embarked on that kind of conduct the way to ruin is swift and inexorable.

Social agencies do what they can, but skid row and erratic behavior are facts of life that can never be totally eradicated. The question then is, to what degree is a Government responsible for remedying this kind of situation?

By all accounts Mr. Laing did not give much away during the Ottawa interview. He accused Miss Horn of using "gutter" language in her letters to him on the subject. Such an attitude of course does nothing to solve the situation in Vancouver of which she had complained.

It may be outside the Indian Affairs department's province, but then is it? Indians apparently are involved. What is certain is there can never be enough in the way of social aid for Indians as well as other newcomers to cities like Vancouver. As often as not these are young people with no family or close friends to turn to in the vast loneliness of city life.

Israeli Kibbutz

Israel is an example of a nation where there is real pride of race and a desire to work together for the good of the country.

This is in large part due to the trials the Jewish people have endured over many centuries. Israel itself is a State of comparatively recent origin, although of course the history of the Jewish people goes back very much further.

Last summer's seven-day war with the Arabs was eloquent of the vitality and courage of a people with faith in their homeland, of a race with a sense of cohesiveness and purpose.

A recent news picture afforded evidence of this spirit. It showed young people working at fruit grading in a kibbutz — one of the many rural communes where citizens work to boost agricultural production.

The kibbutz' also afford young people from overseas an opportunity to work alongside the Israelis and at the same time enjoy a vacation in the sun.

This year hundreds of Canadian college students and teenagers are expected to visit Israel for this purpose.

Ottawa Offbeat

Lust for Power All-Consuming for Political Hopefuls

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It is four-thirty o'clock of a bleak Monday morning.

The temperature cowers at 19 below.

A cutting wind, sharp as a knife, slices at the faces of a single line of people hurrying, heads huddled protectively down between scrunched-up shoulders as they file across the tarmac to board this early-early morning flight out of Winnipeg for Toronto and Ottawa.

Finance Minister.

Candidate.

One of the front-runners in the Liberal leadership race for the best of all Canadian political prizes, the power and the glory of the office of prime minister.

What is he doing, making his way, badly fatigued from a sleepless night, across the wind-scoured tarmac through the frozen pre-dawn darkness to catch this four-thirty flight?

He is flying back to Ottawa for a mid-Monday morning cabinet meeting of urgent importance.

Why had he left it so exhaustingly late as to be flying out at this inhuman hour?

Because he had been too frantically busy on this weekend to catch an earlier flight.

Too busy shaking a thousand-odd hands.

Setting up hundreds of drinks.

Holding a score of hotel-suite conferences.

Making a dozen mini-pitches to little groups of people.

Doing all the demanding things politicians — and especially delegates with convention votes — expect a candidate to do.

And by the time it is all done and the hospitality suite finally is rid of the last late-drinking freeloader, there is just time to dash from the hotel, leap into a cab and race for the airport to get that four-thirty flight.

All this imagination . . . a fanciful account of time and toil of candidate Mitchell Sharp?

It happens to all the candidates in greater or lesser degree every weekend.

And once the Commons recesses to give them a clear campaign track for the few fast-finishing weeks, it will be no more than their daily routine.

They must be out of their minds?

In a way peculiar to men of compelling political ambition — yes, perhaps they are

It is the all-consuming hunger for power that drives them so.

No other country in the world — except perhaps the United States — subjects its potential leaders to such a brutal and exhausing contest.

It has been going on ever since that December day when Prime Minister Pearson said he would be retiring April 6.

And with each passing week it intensifies, and will escalate in the closing weeks of the stretch into a succession of flat-out days that begin around six in the morning and go on long past midnight.

Apart from the killing demands of the campaign proper, the thousands of miles logged by plane and car, the conferences, strategy huddles, speeches, the glad-handing in hospitality suites — in the final week there will be days of tension-ridding political negotiation in secret.

Then at last, on the night of April 6, the agony and the ecstasy of the polling of the votes.

Because ahead of him — and not very far ahead — will be the even more gruelling days and nights of the coming federal general election when he will be compelled to campaign, even more exhaustingly, to prove his bone fides to 2 million Canadians as prime minister.

So this, then, is only a continuation, another heat, of the great race that began last September in Toronto when Robert Stanfield was made Conservative leader.

It compels national attention, as everybody watches and listens to what the candidates say and do, for it shapes the thrust and direction of the final elimination of all but one man, Conservative or Liberal, as prime minister of Canada.

Saturday afternoon and evening performances of the skating carnival put on by the Quinte Skating Club were well attended with both programs being witnessed by packed audiences. This was the first year that the local skating club had attempted three performances for their skating carnival.

Tax Load Hits 25-65 Age Group

Brantford Expositor

To buttress the proposition that youth must be served, the argument is commonly raised that half the population of Canada is under 25. Often forgotten is that the burden of providing for their needs falls mainly on the group whose age is between 25 and 65, the normal productive working years of a person's life.

According to figures given by Assessment Commissioner C. K. Rice, 51.45 per cent of the Brantford population, or 30,773 persons, is between 20 and 64. While assessment reports may make dull reading for some people, they should be of more than passing interest to those in this category who bear the main tax load.

Providing for the needs of the young and of the elderly (one in ten) may be a civic responsibility, but a municipality's capacity to do so depends to a great degree on the ability of the group in the middle span of life to pay its way.

Auto Safety Lags

Accidents 'A Burning Disgrace'

Christian Science Monitor

In two recent editorials we spoke encouragingly of several new wrinkles in automobile safety. One is a bumper filled with water, which seems to greatly lessen harmful impact on smash-ups. The other is a wide-angle mirror, perhaps attached to a 160-degree periscope on the car's roof.

These editorials brought a number of interesting letters and quite a bit of literature. Some of the latter showed examples of how the water-filled bumper worked to cut fatal accidents. Others illustrated wide-angle mirrors already in use. We were encouraged to see how much thought is being given to such forward-looking devices.

What disheartened us, however, was the failure of any automobile company to come forward saying that it was experimenting with these and other major safety devices. Unhappily, this tended to strengthen a feeling which many persons have that the car industry is being dragged unwillingly into the field of greater safety, a field which is far and away the most important for the industry to explore.

The deadly qualities of the automobile, the high rate of highway mortality, the waste which accompanies roadcraft accidents are a burning disgrace. Let the public demand safer cars. Let the industry rush to supply them.

Men and the Culinary Art

Christian Science Monitor

We always suspected that men were good cooks. Or at least claimed to be. Now the Borden Company has taken a survey of 900 "middle - class American males in 42 states". It finds that 52 per cent say they like to cook, as against 49 per cent who made that quiet admission in 1965. About 42 per cent admitted that they were rather good cooks; only 30 per cent made that boast in 1956.

So perhaps the food processors and supermarkets should zero their advertising in on the men as well as the women. Particularly the manufacturers of cookbooks should do so.

Nearly 40 per cent of the men questioned admitted that they paid no heed to cookbooks. They played the cooking, from epicure sauces to simple sandwiches, almost entirely "by ear".

Under sharp questioning, families in general agree that the man in the house is the best at outdoor barbecues, at scrambling eggs, roasting meats, making sandwiches, and in trying out gourmet recipes. And what is he least efficient at? Tidying up! Wives say many husbands "leave the kitchen in a mess". And some husbands label this an unproved vilification.

Fatter Lobsters

Cornwall Standrad - Freeholder

Anyone looking for a new line of business? How about buying up skinny lobsters, fattening them up and selling them at a nice profit? Returns might even rival the lusty days of the Old West's cattle business.

Scientists at the Halifax Fisheries Research Board think they are on the trail of producing fatter, fancier lobsters by making them shed their shells more often than nature calls for.

If they succeed in this and other research aimed at improved handling methods, the $40,000,000 Maritime lobster industry may be enriched by $3,000,000.

There is one big problem to producing fatter lobsters. They must shed their shells before they can put on weight. Natural moulting occurs once a year in males and every two years in females.

Looking for ways to produce more frequent moulting, Dr. David Idler and Dr. Michael Gilgan of the research board discovered that Japanese yew, a fairly common shrub, contains a hormone that controls the transformation of the house fly's larva. They think the lobster's moulting is controlled by a similar hormone.

If the plant hormone fails, the researchers hope to discover the chemical make up of the hormone that does the work in nature.

Status Symbols

Windsor Star

The seeking of status is almost as old as human kind itself. But status, unless attended by symbols which illustrate it, is rather an empty tribute.

Status symbols vary greatly from country to country and, indeed, from age to age. The ancient Mongol had his status recognized by the number of horses or tents in his tribe. In tribal Africa the number of cattle, or even the number of wives still is a status symbol.

In the earlier days in Ontario but still remembered by oldsters, a man often carried his status symbol in his mouth — in the form of gold teeth! Preventive dentistry was not then the science it now is, and artificial choppers were prevalent.

The man of means, or the one who at least wished to suggest he had means, favored gold teeth. The more gold teeth he could display, the more satisfaction his smile gave him. Lesser mortals had to be content with fangs of cheaper material.

Nowadays a man with a mouthful of gold teeth would be a laughing stock, even if currently gold is a coveted commodity. A modern man would have much greater status if he could boast of having a gold bar in his safety deposit box.

Asian Immigrants Pose Moral Dilemma For Britain

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain's moral dilemma over the tide of Asian immigrants from East Africa gives new point to a familiar historical tendency: The more commercially powerful a minority becomes in an alien community, the more it is hated by the people who need it most.

The basic problem with the Asians of Kenya, now flowing legally into Britain at 1,000 a week with British passports in their pockets, is that in 60 years they have succeeded in making themselves valuable to black Africa but even less wanted than the white man.

In many ways the 190,000 Kenya Asians and their 200,000 brothers in neighboring Uganda and Tanzania have bcome indispensable to the banking, trading and industrial structure of their adopted countries. But they are in a sense reaping a harvest of hate and distrust.

British author John Hatch in a history of post-war Africa said the Asians in some ways resemble the Jews of medieval Europe — "indispensable as money-lenders and traders, but hated for the power this gave them over those who made use of their services."

The Asians, who came to East Africa as coolie labor for the early railways, built a vast trading empire serving the black African market and at the same time incurred a reputation for frequently exploiting and despising their ill-paid and less-educated customers. Most Asians have refused to assimilate.

Travellers in East Africa can hardly fail to note the Oriental flavor of shopping streets in Nairobi and other cities. As far south as Bulawayo, in white-ruled Rhodesia, the African shopping quarter is run by Indians. Since East African independence, Africans have made it plain to visiting reporters that the bitter legacy of Asian distrust is one of their biggest problems.

The distrust remains and now many Asians in Kenya feel it is being expressed more subtly, by government legislation aimed at transferring trading and land ownership rights primarily to Kenya citizens — a reasonable enough goal. Some 60,000 Asians already are Kenya citizens by birth. Another 10,000 have applied but many found delays in the procedure.

Its the remaining 120,000 that worries Britain, which at Kenya independence in 1963 gave Asian and white residents a choice of retaining their U.K. colonial passports or opting for local citizenship. Most Asians decided to hold on to their colonial passports.

Britain fears an influx into her large colored communites, though influential sections of the national press urge these immigrants must be admitted to fulfill her commitment. Kenya authorities say the emigration flood isn't their fault but a panic reaction to signs that Britain may tighten restrictions.

Stanfield Says Government Demands Commons Swallow Itself

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Stanfield said Wednesday night the federal government's move for a vote of confidence is a "high-handed and presumptuous" demand that Parliament "swallow itself."

He said the motion, announced earlier to the Commons for debate starting Friday, asks the opposition to declare it was "not really serious" in beating the government Monday night.

In a major speech on the parliamentary crisis to a Young Conservatives' banquet, Mr. Stanfield said there is no precedent in the whole of parliamentary practice for the "special refuge" now being sought by the Liberal administration.

Text of the address was given to reporters before delivery.

He said inflation, slow growth and confidence in the Canadian dollar were all at issue when the government was beaten Monday night, 84 to 82, on a major tax bill. Confidence in the government was unquestionably at stake.

Mr. Stanfield's 30-minute speech was interrupted 15 times by applause. The 500 party faithful laughed, clapped and cheered when he said:

"The rules and conventions of Parliament must not be set aside to suit the convenience of the ruling party As a people we will either live within the rules or live without protection.

"When a government is dealing with the fate and future of the country, and it fails to meet the test, that government will find little sympathy when it complains about rules which were quite all right until the government lost."

Confidence Motion Debate in House Is Blocked

expert, said a number of options are open to the government.

"It'll probably be a rowdy day," he concluded.

One good possibility was that Mr. Pearson would seek another adjournement until Friday when debate on the confidence motion can legally begin—with or without the unanimous consent of the House.

Another was that the government might make another bid for unanimous consent to go ahead with the debate. Or it could try to open a previously-scheduled discussion on the constitution.

But with the opposition in an angry mood, these possibilities seemed slim. And the debate itself, when it does start, promised to be a long one.

Prime Minister Pearson told a late-afternoon press conference Tuesday that he would prefer adjournment today rather than allowing the debate to degenerate into a shambles with no business being done.

"We're not going to have that kind of 1956 pipeline situation," he said.

Echoes of the 1956 crisis hung over Parliament Hill throughout Tuesday although Mr. Pearson said it was the "height of partisan irresponsibility" to suggest the Commons had gone back to that pattern.

Opposition members raised the charge on the grounds that the government's confidence motion was, in the words of NDP Leader Douglas, an attempt to reimpose the five-per-cent increase in income taxes defeated Monday on an 84-to-82 vote.

"It is a motion asking this House to turn back the clock," he said.

If the government had brought in a "straight" confidence motion, the NDP might have agreed to go ahead with it.

Opposition Leader Stanfield, on the other hand, said the government had no right to put business before the House—including the confidence motion—and should resign.

The motion, on which the government has promised to stand or fall, asks the Commons to state that it does not regard Monday's vote as one of no confidence.

Opposition members had expected a simple request for an expression of confidence.

They said the government had framed the motion in a "tricky" and "clever" way aimed at recovery of money lost by defeat of the tax bill.

Mr. Pearson rejected that view at his press conference, saying there had been "misrepresentations, distortions and falsifications" on the nature of the motion.

He said the government believes it is entitled to a confidence vote and believes it can win. If it did win, it was ready to go ahead with its program and to raise money to pay for it.

But he said:

"I have been around this House long enough to know that if the opposition wishes to do—and are irresponsible enough to do so—they can bring the business of Parliament to a standstill."

"If at this particular moment in our history and the world's history they wish to do that to Canada, that's their responsibility."

Mr. Pearson went on the attack again later in the evening in a special CBC television interview when he accused the Opposition of trickery and of manufacturing a crisis.

"There is no crisis," he said. "There's a crisis being manufactured . . .

The television broadcast was the last development in a day that began with a cabinet session where finishing touches were put on the government confidence motion.

Crowds meanwhile were lining up outside the Commons chamber to see the showdown that had been postponed 24 hours when Mr. Stanfield allowed the government time to sort out its position.

Mr. Pearson received a long ovation from the packed Liberal benches as he stood to read the motion but was interrupted by jeers and laughter from the opposition side as the nature of the motion became clear.

Mr. Stanfield immediately rose to reject it.

"Mr. Speaker, we take the position that th's government has no right to put any business before this House, including a motion of confidence," he said.

He said there was no precedent for a government trying to proceed after defeat on such a fundamental matter as taxes.

Mr. Douglas said the government might have a constitutional right to ask for a confidence vote but it had no moral right to do so since one of its major fiscal measures had been defeated.

He said the defeat was "merely the culmination of a long process of disintegration of the government which is not only inept but so badly divided that it cannot make any decisions on major matters of importance."

The government's "only real option" was to call an election.

Nevertheless, the NDP might have agreed to an immediate debate if the government had not put in a motion asking the House to repudiate a decision it had already made.

Creditiste Leader Caouette also said the government had no way out but to call an election and ask the decision of the people on the way it had conducted the country's affairs.

The government had only itself to blame for the crisis, he said. It could have delayed the Monday night vote but Finance Minister Sharp had arrogantly let it go ahead.

However, Mr. Caouette said he would not have objected to an immediate debate on the confidence motion. Delay only meant more cost to the taxpayer.

Acting Social Credit Leader A. B. Patterson called Monday's defeat a clear repudiation of the government's economic policy, but he made no direct demand for the government to resign.

He, too, criticized the nature of the motion, saying it was phrased in such a way "that it actually implies a repudiation of the decision taken the other evening on third reading."

After the opposition statements, Mr. Pearson rose to suggest that the planned constitutional debate go ahead today, but ran into Conservative and NDP objections. Mr. Knowles said no business could be conducted until the confidence question was settled.

The prime minister then moved adjournment and Mr. Diefenbaker, quivering with anger, rose on a point of order.

"This is a most unusual proceeding, a government having been defeated now chooses a means of endeavoring to get a second chance," he said. "I am reminded of February . . ."

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux interrupted with a reminder that the adjournment motion was not debatable, but added that he had no objection to hearing Mr. Diefenbaker if the House consented.

There was a chorus of dissent but Mr. Diefenbaker plunged ahead.

"With or without consent I rise to a question of order," he shouted.

"Is Parliament to be throttled again as it was in 1956 by the same party?" he asked.

"In 1956 the government endeavored to wipe out one day, Friday.

"What they are trying to do on this occasion is wipe out a decision of Parliament, which is an unjust, unfair, unconstitu-

Defeat Called Organized Plot

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday night he hopes the Conservative Opposition in the Commons will reconsider its position that a minority government must resign because it was defeated 84 to 82 on third reading of a bill.

"There is nothing in constitutional authority to say we must," Mr. Pearson said in a televised CBC interview.

He called Monday's defeat in the Commons "an organized plot" and accused the opposition of "exploiting what they feel is a very happy partisan position."

Mr. Pearson returned repeatedly during the questioning to the legality of the motion he presented to the Commons Wednesday, and to which opposition MPs refused unanimous consent.

He quoted unnamed "the greatest constitutional authority in the world" as having said that "the sudden upset of the government is not a vote of confidence particularly if it is a minority government."

member for Montreal Lafontaine.

The government lost the vote by 84 to 82. Two less Conservatives would have resulted in a tie, which could have been broken in favor of the government by the Speaker's vote.

Mr. Valade denied he was paired with Mr. Lachance. He told a Canadian Press reporter Wednesday that Mr. Lachance had asked him to pair for a week, but they decided it was unnecessary since both MPs were going to be away for the same week.

Mr. Asselin said Wednesday he had no standing arrangement with Mr. Gendron. Each pairing arrangement was made for a specific occasion only. He said he had no such arrangement for Monday night of this week.

$20 Bill Bore Her Initials Cashier Tells Court Here

A $20 bill found on one of the accused in the Food City robbery case bore her initials, a crown witness testified in Supreme court here yesterday.

Mrs. June Finkle, assistant head cashier at the west end shopping centre, identified numerals on a $20 bill introduced in evidence as figures she had put on the bill when counting money at the store.

Later, crown witness Det. Pinard of the Quebec Provincial Police, testified the $20 bill was found on the person of accused Larry Morrison when he was arrested in Montreal.

Morrison, along with Lawrence Schlaer, is charged with conspiracy to commit robbery and robbery with violence in connection with the Sept. 1 theft of $10,000 from Samuel Mulholland, manager of Food City in Belleville.

Counsel for the defence, Robert Carter, upon questioning Mrs. Finkle brought out that there were most probably many bills with her writing on them in circulation. Mrs. Finkle also admitted to the defence that she had no idea when the numerals were put on.

Another bill found on the accused with initials on it was not able to be positively identified although some of the witnesses from Food City testified that the initials bore some similarity to Mr. Mulholland's script.

The manager was not able to say the initials were definitely his.

Mr. Mulholland, victim of the Labor Day weekend robbery, gave his account to the court of the actual robbery. He was unable to identify anybody in connection with the robbery but testimony indicated that he noticed a blue jacket on one of his assailants.

William Morrison, a brother of the accused, testified Tuesday that his blue jacket was taken out of the trunk of his car and mentioned that only his brother, the accused, had access to the trunk.

It was later brought to the attention of the court that a blue jacket was also noticed in the apartment of Lawrence Schlaer, by Det. Sgt. Gerrard Vieau of the Montreal police.

Under cross - examination Mr. Mulholland told the court that he recognized no voices and did not even hear the third person speak. He also admitted that he could be mistaken about seeing three boys walk across the parking lot as he left the store.

Other witnesses called were Carol Wager and Margaret Clemens who were car hostesses at the A and W drive-in last September. Both girls testified that they noticed at least one of the accused at the A and W on Sept. 1. This testimony was in line with William Morrison's testimony that he met the accused at the A and W on Friday to give them a map of Food City and Rite-Way.

Mr. Carter asked both girls if they had ever been asked to pick out the accused from a line-up. Both answered in the negative. Miss Clemens also admitted to counsel that she had been shown a picture of the accused, Morrison, by the police.

The trial, which began Monday, continues today.

Thinking Day Observed By Guides, Brownies

By MRS. T. R. COLDEN

Feb. 22 is observed by Guides and Brownies around the world as Thinking Day.

The joint birthday of the Founders of the Scout and Guide movement, Lord Baden-Powell and his wife, Lady Baden-Powell, this day is set aside for Guides and Brownies to think of others around the world and emphasize international friendship.

Girls are asked to wear their uniforms all day and special ceremonies mark the occasion in each pack or company.

In Belleville, each pack or company give the dues collected on Thinking Day to the World Friendship Fund. The fund was set up in 1939 to assist Guides in underdeveloped countries and provide aid in times of disaster.

Guiding was started in Belleville in 1922 by Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, who even yet, although in her eighties, takes a keen interest in Guiding activities in the city. The first Guide Captain was Mrs. William H. Finkle. Belleville Guiding has grown until it now numbers 985 girls in 20 Brownie Packs, 16 Guide Companies and one Ranger Crew.

Belleville Division extends from Point Anne to Avondale and north to Corbyville. Division Commissioner is Mrs. T. R. Colden.

The Division is subdivided into six Districts, each with a District Commissioner: Mrs. A. Bannon for North West; Mrs. F. Donohoe, Central; Mrs. M. Chartrand, South; Mrs. D. Stewart, North East; and Mrs. J. Miles, East.

The West District, including the School for the Deaf, is temporarily without a Commissioner and is administered by the Division. At least one Guide in the OSD Company is trying for her First Class Badge, which is an achievement for hearing girls.

Belleville Division is part of Quinte Area, with Miss E. M. Kay Baker, Trenton, as Commissioner.

Belleville Division camping is handled by Mrs. A. Steenburg, Division Camp Advisor. The Girl Guide Camp for Quinte Area is at Waupoos near Picton. It is large enough to accommodate over 200 girls under canvas at one time. There is also a converted farm house where Brownies may camp.

Each leader must take at least ten hours training before receiving her warrant to run a pack or company. Some trainers are local and some come from Toronto for different types of training. Mrs. G. Rice is training chairman.

During the past ten years Guides have taken an increasing interest in internatonal camps and trips. Through Mrs. Carl Bateman, who is in charge of this aspect of Guiding, girls have made trips to Great Britain, Sweden, the United States and other provinces in Canada. It is hoped this year to have a Belleville girl travelling to the Guide Chalet in Switzerland.

Membership in Guides and Brownies has increased 15 per cent in Canada during the last ten years. This is partially due to lowering the age requirements to seven for Brownies and ten for Guides.

Scouting in the Home

By MRS. A. J. FORT

"Scouting is for boys and the boy is the most important person in the Scout movement. As parents, we must realize that Scouting can be one of the most important influences in the lives of our sons.

My views on Scouting are slightly prejudiced because of over 15 years' close connection with uniformed members of the movement, as wife and mother, but, I, myself have never been a uniformed Scouter.

Many women are Scouters, doing a fine service for the boys of this community. A goodly percentage of these women are, or have been, the mothers of Cubs, Scouts, Venturers or Rovers.

What can Scouting offer my boy? Is this what parents are asking? All I can answer is "a very great deal", but a word of caution here! Your boy will derive benefits from the Scout movement in direct proportion to the amount of effort and "follow-through" that he puts into the Scout program.

Here are some of the things that I consider meaningful advantages that our boys gain through their active participation in Scouting. Training - to care for and protect themselves; to care for and serve others. Friendship - of their own age group that will last a lifetime; of adults who will give them a guide and pattern to travel the trails of the future; of brother Scouts all over the world to greet him wherever he goes. Appreciation - of the needs of others; of the world in which he lives. A Way of Life - The Scout law provides, in simple form, a code of ethics that, is followed, serves the man a Scout becomes in all environments and in every crisis he may have to face.

There are many skills that a scout learns, and not least of all, a sheer joy of living in his world and in being part of it.

As a mother of sons and as a citizen of this community, I feel the program that is offered by the Boy Scouts of Canada, through the foresighted sponsors and the volunteer supporters of this city, is, undoubtedly, one of the major forces in the fight against juvenile crime of all types.

However, the Scout program is only as effective as we, the parents, make it. The family is one of the most important factors. A Scouter can give a boy plenty of useful instruction and a great deal of food for thought, but that Scouter only has direct contact with your boy for a few hours a week. It is only the reinforcement and encouragement that parents can give to their sons that will make Scouting, truly, a preparation for life in tomorrow's world."

'Disaster Plans' Topic At Hospital Auxiliary

Dr. S. D. Thorne, chief of disaster medical services, described disaster emergency procedures at Belleville General Hospital to Women's Hospital Auxiliary members at the February meeting.

He told how the hospital plans for an unforeseen disaster, co-ordinates its facilities and drills the staff in its role.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. W. S. Greaves and thanked by Mrs. W. H. Finkle.

Mrs. W. Grant Harvey presided for the discussion of the Hospital Ball May 3 at the Sun Valley Motel. The Board of Governors of the hospital has requested the Auxiliary to sponsor the event.

Shoplifting for Kicks Is Poor Amusement

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My dearest friend is refined, a good student and she goes to church. She is attractive and has a great personality. Her parents are wonderful people. They are not millionaires but she could have just about anything she asked for.

So what is wrong? She is a thief. I refuse to go into a store with her any more because if she gets caught stealing I don't want to be around. I have asked her a half dozen times why she steals and her answer is always the same: "For kicks." At first it was a candy bar or a package of bobby pins: now she has graduated to jewelry and handbags. She says it's like a game — the object being to outsmart somebody.

My friend thinks you are neat and maybe she will listen to you. Say something please. — FRIGHTENED.

DEAR FRIGHTENED: Shoplifting, whether it's for kicks, profit or kleptomania, is a problem which has reached staggering proportions and the storekeepers have decided to do something about it.

A variety of devices to catch thieves have been installed in retail stores all over the country — hidden TV cameras, two-way mirrors and electronic buzzers, to name a few. Recently a group of California women who call themselves "Housewives Alert" banded together to combat higher prices resulting from shoplifting losses. They keep their eyes open and report shoplifters to the manager.

If your friend is a compulsive thief she should get professional help. If she is just playing games she should consider what life will be like when she loses. The shame and heartache will make her wish she had found a better way to amuse herself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My children enjoy a certain TV program which I always felt was in poor taste. On this program a girl interviews three eligible bachelors who are hidden from her sight. She selects her date on the basis of the answers he gives from behind the screen.

Last week a girl chose Number Three "because he is always putting me in bed." I am not 90 years old nor am I a prude, but I was appalled at that statement. The studio audience laughed and the way the girl looked at her date was sickening.

My son said, "Wow!" My teen-age daughter looked bewildered. What is this world coming to when such stuff is allowed to invade our homes? — MRS. R.J.G.

DEAR MRS.: Since I did not see the program I am unable to comment on it. If your report is accurate, I, too, am appalled.

The best way to fight trash on TV is with your pencil, pen or typewriter. Write a letter to the network and the sponsor. Tell them you will not look at their programs or buy their products unless they clean up the shows. If people don't want garbage dumped into their living rooms they should say so.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a career girl, 27, and have lived in another state since I was 20. My mother confided that Dad (who is a physician) wants a divorce and she is willing to give it to him. Dad has asked for his freedom so he can marry the nurse who works in his office.

My parents never had a beautiful marriage but they managed to stay together for 30 years. My problem is as follows: I have set my wedding date for May. My future in-laws are very conservative people and they would be horrified by this.

Do I have the right to ask my parents to hold off on the divorce until after my wedding? — DISTRAUGHT.

DEAR DIS.: You certainly do. If your parents stood each other for 30 years they can stand each other for another three months.

Boys Tend to Like Long Hair on Girls

NEW YORK (AP) — "Boys tend to like long hair on girls," Sheryl Karp started out. "It's more feminine. . . ." Then she said it: "Sexier."

The 20-year-old co-ed — who keeps her own lustrous red hair a few inches below her shoulders — apparently speaks for a majority at Hunter College. The New York school is a veritable stable of long silky manes, in blonde, brunette, brownette and every other imaginable hue.

"A lot of girls have short hair," said Sheryl's girl friend, Linda Langsam, 20, talking above the hubbub of Hunter's sprawling basement cafeteria. "But they can wear 'falls.'" That's an artificial mane and they sell for $45 to $125 or so.

Sheryl and Linda nabbed Bonnie Karrin as she walked by. Bonnie owns a fall to go with her light auburn hair, which she wears shorter than most boys' hair. "I like it short because it's so easy just to get up in the morning and go," Bonnie said.

These college girls, like many others, have found that long hair — whether real or "put on" — helps get looks and dates, despite the attempts of coiffeurists' to keep hair clipped and kinked.

"My boy-friend wants me to cut my hair because he's away," said Betty Franco, a 20-year-old nursing student .Her guy, serving in Vietnam, thinks this would help keep the pack away from his dark-haired sweetheart.

Upstairs in the offices of the Hunter student newspaper, The Envoy, a pert brunette staffer named Gerry Malerba commented: "Just about every guy I've met says, 'Keep your hair long,' and they even notice how much it's growing and everything."

"It's too much of a hassle to cut it," comments Kathy Smith ,20, The Envoy's editor-in-chief. "And I like the way it looks around my face. Also, my mother hates it long."

Gerry chimed in that that was another of her reasons for letting the strands grow and flow. "It's a big rebellion thing," she said.

Jerry Teplitz, 21, the student body president, made no bones about saying long-haired lasses "are a helluva lot sexier."

Alice Schweitzer

Shape Subtly Slants to Flare

Shaped seams widen subtly to the hem to give a lovely A-line flare to this dress. Flaps turn inward to narrow the hipline — one of the fine and meaningful details typical of an Alice Schweitzer design. Notice, too, that the smooth back is uninterrupted for the zipper glides along a back seam. Count on Printed Pattern A845 to make the most of your figure — a dress that is suitable to wear anywhere and almost any time of the day or evening, according to your selection of fabrics. We suggest: knits, blends, linen, silk, wool, crepe.

Successful Living

Bachelor Is Fearful of His Future

Dear Doris: Please send any literature you have that will help solve my problem that is similar to the one described by "Still Alone and Lump It".

I am 32, self-conscious and suffer from 'phone phobia. The men seem to outnumber the girls in all of the dances I have attended, therefore personal handicaps are something that I cannot afford.

At 32, I have fears and anxieties about either remaining a bachelor or marrying someone who might be unsuitable for me. — Earnest

Dear Earnest: Do you fear your fate too much? May I hazard a guess or two?

I'm thinking that either you were overprotected from away back, never learning to trust your own judgment; or you have a zany notion that love will strike you like lightning. Or both.

You might just grow up if you ventured out a little. None of us learn to swim by staying on shore.

So many anxieties mean you concentrate on yourself. When I tell a fellow to be thoughtful and attentive to someone, I mean do a job of it. Devote imagination and enthusiasm to putting yourself in the other's place.

If you imagine your dance partner wanting a sandwich or cool beverage, get it for her. If she has trouble making conversation, make it for her by asking her about herself. Persevere until you've deserted your own self-thoughts entirely.

Don't let your future pass you by.

Dear Doris: This McMaster University correspondence course interests me immensely, and I'd appreciate more details.

I am a registered nurse with some background in social work. Have been a farm wife, my family is gone; my husband and I are leaving this tiring but happy life for retirement.

At 56, I am ready for a second career; financial return need not be my concern. The ideal approach would be to return to university but my husband, quite rightly, feels that he is entitled to my companionship; so, possibly, correspondence is the answer. — Ready to Up-Grade

Dear Ready: The study units called "Interviewing and Counselling" and "Understanding Human Behavior" are to be had by mail, for $90 each. Try one a year.

There are textbooks to work from, lessons and tests arriving by mail. Many workers and volunteers like yourself are asking about them.

Wouldn't be surprised if the older, second-career-type students were the best at applying themselves to this material. It takes discipline, eagerness to learn. And your experience of life can make the lessons mean a great deal more, at 56.

Next courses start next September. Write to the Department of Extension, McMaster University, Hamilton, Canada, for the announcement folder.

Confidential to Uncertain: To know that you don't know is a step in the right direction. Pity the girl who mistakes those first delicious thrills for love.

I'm all for having you date the others; broaden your base of comparison and preference. Shun the necking sessions in favor of friendly diversions.

But keep it all straight with the Boy Back Home. And read my discussion called "What Is Love?" which I am mailing to you.

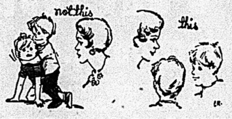
When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a dressed envelope is enclosed.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Boys, please go upstairs and be quiet until bedtime. Do you hear me? I'm ashamed to have you act like this and bother our guests. Don't you know how to behave when we have company?"

Mother: "Dad and I are entertaining at a grown-up party tonight. You may come in and meet the guests. Then you may watch TV in the family room until bedtime — if you keep the volume low."

Tell your children exactly what you expect of them when you entertain. They may be acting up because they don't know what else to do.

Mornay Casserole Base

By MARY MOORE

My niece is an eye specialist and there are times when she arrives home late, tired and hungry, that she has to prepare dinner in a hurry for her equally hungry family.

Convenience foods are a life saver for her. I used one of them — Mornay Casserole Base — for dinner when she and her family were invited here. It was a success with all of us. I know other career girls — and men — in this audience who will adopt it to restore their good natures when they reach home cold and hungry.

I used salmon as my meat addition.

SALMON MORNAY CASSEROLE (5 or 6 servings)

One 1-lb. can pink or red salmon (see notes below re alternatives)
One pkge. Mornay Casserole Base

In the package you find three envelopes. One contains broad noodles. Tip these into a large casserole. Now sprinkle over top the contents of another envelope marked Mornay Sauce Mix. Add 2½ cups boiling water and 1 tbsp. butter. Open the 1-pound can of salmon (or other fish or meat — see below) and break it up and remove large spine bones. Tip broken up salmon and its liquid into casserole and carefully mix through. Cover and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 20-30 min. or until noodles are tender and soft. Remove cover, sprinkle top with contents of remaining envelope which are a tasty, pretty garnish. Serve hot with a green vegetable such as peas or spinach or broccoli or a generous green salad.

VARIATIONS:

1) Instead of salmon you may use tuna.

2) Instead of salmon you may use 2 cups well packed chopped chicken or turkey or ham but you must add another ½ cup boiling water for these meats lack the moisture that the canned salmon contains.

I hope you career cooks clip this time-saving, delicious casserole recipe now and file it under "Casseroles: Fast".

Canadiens, Philadelphia, Minnesota Win

Hawks Defeat Oakland 1-0; St. Louis Humbles Toronto 5-1

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks made a prophet out of Pierre Pilote Wednesday night, but it is nothing they can be happy about.

Prior to the Hawks National Hockey League game with Oakland Seals, the veteran Chicago defenceman told reporters that an expansion division club could win the Stanley Cup in two or three years.

"There's only one or two goals difference now between the expansion teams and the old," he said.

Then just a few hours later the Hawks, NHL champions last year, needed Bobby Hull's 41st goal of the year with only 2:50 remaining in the game for a 1-0 verdict over the Seals, last-place team in the expansion Western Division.

Although the Hawks needed the two points earned by the victory to stay close to Montreal Canadiens, leaders of the Eastern Division, it saved them only from embarrassment compared with the rest of the eastern playoff contenders.

BOBBY HULL
. . . Another Win

Third-place New York Rangers absorbed a 7-2 thrashing from the Canadiens. Fourth-place Boston Bruins lost 5-3 to Minnesota North Stars, second-place team in the west behind Philadelphia Flyers, who tied Pittsburgh Penguins 1-1.

In the fifth game of the night, St. Louis Blues humbled Toronto Maple Leafs 5-1. It fas Toronto's sixth straight loss, their eighth game without a win and their 11th game with only one victory.

To make matters worse for Toronto, they are battling for the fourth and last eastern playoff spot with Boston, who have a nine-point edge on Toronto with time in the 74-game schedule fast running out.

Toronto now has played 56 games, two fewer than the Bruins.

Hull's goal—he leads the league in goals scored—moved him back into a tie with injured team-mate Stan Mikita for the league point lead, each with 70 points. Hull also has 29 assists while Mikita has 34 goals and 36 assists.

Mikita saw only spot action Wednesday, still suffering a sore shoulder picked up Sunday in a game against Detroit Red Wings, but Hull's goal was enough to give goalie Dave Dryden his first NHL shutout.

In Toronto the Leafs not only lost the game, but also lost some of the affection of their fans.

When veteran goalie John Bower was unable to stop two second-period St. Louis goals, the fans started yelling in derision and continued for the rest of the game, even after Bruce Gamble replaced Bower at the start of the third period.

Main architects of the disaffection were Gary Sabourin and Gerry Melnyk, who each scored twice for the Blues. St. Louis' other goal went to Barclay Plager while Murray Oliver scored for Toronto.

The Canadiens continued to get outstanding play from Dick Duff and Claude Provost as the two veterans each scored twice. Henri Richard added a pair of assists and Ralph Backstrom three. Ted Harris, John Ferguson and Bobby Rousseau also scored for Montreal with Camille Henry and Reg Fleming replying for New York.

The Canadiens now have won seven straight games in their current victory streak and have lost only once since starting the 24-game charge that has carried them to the division lead since Christmas Night.

Andre Lacroix, who owns the American League scoring title with 86 points for Quebec Aces, showed he knows how it's done in the NHL as well by scoring Philadelphia's only goal in his first appearance with the club.

PUNCH IMLACH
. . . Another Loss

Before leaving the Aces, he built up a 20-point lead over his closest opposition on 41 goals and 45 assists.

The Pittsburgh goal was scored by Paul Andrea to give the Penguins a short-lived first-period lead.

The North Stars got two goals from Wayne Connelly and one each from Mike McMahon, Andre Boudrias and Parker MacDonald to beat the Bruins and move to within three points of the Flyers.

Boston goals went to Skip Krake, Derek Sanderson and John Bucyk.

Only three games are scheduled tonight with St. Louis at Montreal, Boston at Detroit and Minnesota at Philadelphia to try and narrow the gap even more.

Scoring Leaders

Bobby Hull climbed back in to the National Hockey League scoring lead with team-mate Stan Mikita Friday, scoring the only goal as Chicago Black Hawks nipped Oakland Seals 1-0.

The goal was Hull's 41st of the year, giving him an insurmountable lead as the leading goal-scorer in the league. He also has 29 assists in his 59 games for a total of 70 points.

Mikita has 34 goals and 36 assists for his 70 points.

It was a one-point night among the leaders as Jean Ratelle earned one assist in New York Rangers 7-2 loss to Montreal Canadiens while John Bucyk got a goal and Fred Stanfield an assist as Boston Bruins fell 5-3 to Minnesota North Stars.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander
Staff Sportswriter

At times this winter, it must have seemed as if the hockey season would never end for the Belleville Junior "B" entry.

To say the locals have had a rough season, competitively and financially, has to be the understatement of the year.

On determination and the willingness to keep junior hockey alive, Jim "Snipe" Matthews and a handful of others, rate as league leaders" all the way.

Victories you can count on half a hand — and at times fans have been just about as numerous.

But the organization, and that includes the players themselves, has lived up to its responsibilities.

And that long, long season is about to come to a close this Friday when the Kingston Frontenacs visit town.

As much as we hate to mention it, this could be the swan song appearance for junior "B" hockey here for some time. Matthews won't say so and one thing for certain, if the "B's" could survive this season, it will take a lot to knock them out of the picture.

Be that as it may. Only the future will tell and a lot can happen between now and next fall.

Right now, the "B's" main concern is to go out in a blaze of glory — and they are getting plenty of help in that respect from the city's Fire and Police Departments.

The gentlemen in red and blue will renew their old rivilary in hockey garb prior to the regular junior game at 9.15 Friday.

Lined up for the special battle on skates, slated to get under way at 7.45, are the best (or the worst) that the Police and Firemen can come up with, plus the likes of Gordie Bell as referee. Gordie will be assisted by two lady linesmen; there will be plenty of prizes, clowns and the works.

Also on tap will be the presentation of the trophy to the most valuable player on the local club (The Bobby Hull Trophy, to be presented by Robert Hull Sr.) and another to the player best combining sportsmanship and ability (The Bill Cook Memorial, to be presented by Mrs. Bill Cook). Names of the winners will be unknown until the presentations themselves.

Back to the Fireman-Policeman game, the "rosters" read like something out of "Who's Who — or What."

Bill "Punch" Armstrong will coach the Policemen, with Deputy Chief "Bingo" Reid as manager and Jill "Legs" Tripp the trainer. They have Garnet "Basket" Goodwin in goal; Bob "Golden Jet" McAlpine, Barry "Hard Rock" Titterson, Les "Moose" Hall and Ivan "Dealer" Nelson on defence; Don "Slap Shot" Cathers, Jack "Ace" Boulter, Lorne "Flash" McLinton, Bill "Legs" Spencer, Glen "Slash" Jacques and John "Digger" Hill on the forward lines.

Countering for the Firemen are: coach Deputy Chief Leo "Ace" Culhane, manager chief Ted "Matches" Post and Maisie "Bomber" Haywood in the training role. Bob "Shut Out" Andrus will play goal with a defence consisting of Fred "Blackie" Dainard, Bob "Klunk" Davenport and Rocque "Hard Rock" Davis. The forward units will have Wally "Legs" Istead, Fred "Soapy" Smith, Pat "Whooper" Barrett, Grant "Digger" Parks, Bob "Gommer" Lloyd and John "Onion" Browning in action.

Advance tickets are only 25c and admission at the door will be 50c for adults and half that for children. Don't forget, that ticket entitles you to both hockey games, the prizes, and the whole evening's show, with all proceeds going to Junior "B" hockey.

Rest assured, it is a good cause, and a big crowd will prove to those who tried so hard that it wasn't all for nothing.

Alouettes To Sign Gary Glick

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Montreal Alouettes likely will announce today the signing of Gary Glick as an assistant coach who will specialize in offence.

The newspaper says the club, which is currently negotiating an agreement for the Autostade near the Expo 67 site, has called a press conference for 11 a.m. EST, but the stadium is an unlikely subject to come up at the conference.

Yanks Holding Breath

Pirates Sign Veals and Bunning

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Pirates breathed a sigh of relief today with the anchors of their pitching staff—Bob Veale and Jim Bunning—under contract, but New York Yankees are holding their breath with Al Downing still unsigned.

Veale and Bunning signed Wednesday just before they would have become holdouts as pitchers and catchers opened camp at Fort Myers, Fla.

Reliever Dooley Womack ended a brief holdout for the Yankees and outfielders Steve Whitaker and Roy White also came to terms, but Downing is a holdout with the pitchers and catchers already in camp.

Other batterymen also signed contracts Wednesday—catchers Don Pavletich of Cincinnati Reds and Bob Barton of San Francisco Giants and pitchers Tom Phoebus, Baltimore Orioles 1967 Rookie of the Year and Dick Lines of Washington Senators.

In other news, Marvin Milkes was named general manager of the new Seattle club that will join the American League in 1969.

We don't pretend. Because we are rye.

All Rye.

Don't let anyone kid you. All Canadian whiskies are nicknamed "rye". But most are made from corn, even when they say rye on the label. Alberta Distillers is the only Canadian distiller that doesn't keep a kernel of corn in the place, because we believe in the clean, g-e-n-t-l-e taste of an all rye, like Alberta Premium.

Trenton Shares Lead With 4-1 Record

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — A sensational triple highlighted Canadian schoolboy curling action Wednesday night as three teams moved into a tie for first place.

First place after six rounds was shared by Bill Hope of Trenton, Ont., Rick Folk of Saskatoon and Ken Clapham of Winnipeg. Each has won four games against one loss.

In the thick of the battle, with 4-2 records, are Northern Ontario skip Allan Viehbeck of Fort Frances and Doug Johnston of Schefferville, Que.

Ron Kelly of Calgary is 3-3 while at 2-3 are New Brunswick skip Bruce Forster of Moncton and Robert Little and his Halifax team-mates.

Newfoundland's Marty Dalton of St. John's is 1-4 while Peter Johnston of Charlottetown and Mark Ottem of Kamloops, B.C., are 1-5.

Action in the 11-team round-robin continues today with draws scheduled at 9:30 a.m., 2:30 and 8 p.m. EST.

In the morning seventh round, it was British Columbia against Nova Scotia, Newfoundland playing New Brunswick, Saskatchewan against Prince Edward Island, Northern Ontario against Ontario, Manitoba playing Quebec and Alberta getting the bye.

In Wednesday's fifth round Manitoba edged Alberta 5-4, Quebec downed Prince Edward Island 7-5, Northern Ontario defeated Newfoundland 8-5, Saskatchewan tripped Ontario 8-6, and British Columbia defeated New Brunswick 12-8.

BILL HOPE
... Team on Top

Sixth-round action saw Saskatchewan nip Northern Ontario 6-5, Quebec defeated New Brunswick 13-7, Manitoba beat British Columbia 7-4, Alberta downed Nova Scotia 11-9, Newfoundland defeated Prince Edward Island 9-5.

The Saskatchewan-Northern Ontario clash was the crowd thriller which climaxed in an extra end forced when Robert Booren, who plays third but throws skip rocks for Viehbeck, wiped out three Saskatchewan rocks with his last shot in the 10th end to count two.

Folk, who won the game by burying his first stone behind two guards in the extra end after squeezing through a two-foot port and knocking a Northern Ontario shot rock from the four foot, said the triple kill was "unbelievable."

Booren was crowded by admirers after the game and said "I thought I was a bit lucky."

But, he said it was the only shot that could be called.

Viehbeck was ecstatic in his praise of Booren. "He had to hit it within a half an inch to make it. It was the best shot I've ever seen."

Manitoba and Alberta battled through a tough fifth round match before the Kelly foursome blew a 4-3 lead coming home.

Manitoba third Jim Sproule took advantage of a missed shot by his Alberta counterpart Bernie Cox and wicked off an Alberta stone, burying his shot behind two guards.

Clapham placed second shot in the 12 foot and Kelly hit a guard on a takeout attempt.

Newfoundland drew rounds of applause from the large crowd in the afternoon round by making a triple and a double kill in a single end but lost the game.

In the afternoon round, Prince Edward Island was to face Ontario, Manitoba vs. Newfoundland, Nova Scotia vs. Quebec British Columbia vs. Alberta and Saskatchewan vs. New Brunswick. Northern Ontario had the bye.

NFL May Recognize Players' Football Union

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League and the NFL Players' Association have taken the first formal step toward recognition of the independent union as a bargaining agent for collective bargaining in mid-March.

After a meeting between labor counsels for the two groups, two NFL owners and three player representatives, it was announced Wednesday that the association will be recognized pending a check of its membership by the independent American Arbitration Association.

Both Ted Kheel, legal consultant to the owners, and Dan Shulman, labor counsel for the players, were optimistic about the possibility of an agreement once the bargaining starts.

Shulman said the association has 685 members who pay $100 a year in membership fees. Time after time he reiterated that the association did not expect to negotiate individual salaries.

"This is not the classic union situation," said Shulman, a 34-year-old Chicago labor lawyer. "We are talking about things common to everyone—pension plan, shares of postseason games and, of course, minimum salary."

Although the association said in Miami in January it wanted $15,000 minimum salary, $500 a game for exhibition and a $5,000,000 annual contribution to the pension fund, Shulman would not be specific at this time.

South Hastings League May Be Expanded

Indications point toward expansion for the South Hastings Baseball League following that organization's annual meeting this week.

Art Buller, re-named secretary-treasurer for a second term, will again serve as the league's only executive.

Buller said yesterday that six teams were represented and announced intentions of entering the loop at Tuesday's meeting.

One new entry will come from Frankford.

Buller also announced that Bill Hurst, president of the Belleville Minor Baseball Association, attended the meeting and entered a Belleville juvenile team. Russ Soule was also present from Belleville.

Another meeting will be held on March 19 when such matters as an opening date, the schedule, etc. will be on the agenda.

"Confirmation of the number of entries should allow us to establish the length of our schedule then," Buller said.

Well Balanced Squad

Scarborough Headed for Second International Pee Wee Title

QUEBEC (CP) — Scarborough Dorset Park from Toronto, defending over-all champions, today look like they are headed toward a second straight title in the international peewee hockey tournament.

The well-balanced squad recorded the only shutout in the Class AA division Wednesday to move into quarter final play with five other Toronto-area teams and two from Quebec City.

A champion for the Class AA competition, for teams from cities with more than 50,000 population, will be decided by Saturday when a playoff for the grand championship will be held among three other division winners. Teams compete in each class according to the population of their respective communities.

Also advancing to the quarter-finals of the big city class are Toronto Shopsy's, Toronto Christie, Wexford, Etobicoke, Toronto Seaboard, Quebec Beavers and Ste. Foy, a Quebec City suburb.

Two Toronto teams were eliminated by the Quebec entries. Ste. Foy edged Leaside 4-3 and Quebec Beavers defeated West Hill Rangers 6-3.

In the other division games, Wexford dumped Toronto Goulding Park 6-4 and Christie walloped Scarborough Olympics 6-2.

Two other games were played Wednesday, both in Class B. Richmond Hill, Ont., shut out Pointe Gatineau, Que., 5-0 and Gatineau, Que., turned around in the other encounter to trounce Borden, Ont., 4-0.

Guy Chouinard, Quebec City's peewee scoring champion, and Jean Verreault each scored twice for the Beavers while Barry Fanning and Louis Dore got one each. West Hill Rangers' three goals were scored by Jim Gibson.

Bilingualism and Biculturalism in Action

QUEBEC (CP) — To sports-minded youngsters, the international peewee hockey tournament here probably is biculturalism and bilingualism in action.

A lot of new friendships have been made since the tournament got under way a week ago with a record 95 entries. It ends Saturday.

Finding billets for English-speaking out-of-province players, who range in age from nine to 12 years, is no simple matter.

But tournament organizers, staging the competition for the ninth year, find a ready hospitality among Quebecers for visiting youngsters from cities in Ontario, the Maritimes and the United States.

Two such typical visitors are Craig Hamilton and Billy Ramsey of Scarborough Olympics, a Toronto suburban team.

For their French-Canadian foster parents, they got Mr. and Mrs. Brunso Racine.

Mrs. Racine, a sports enthusiast, made the boys feel right at home.

"You know," she said in French, "last year the boys we had lost a tough game and were eliminated. They came home and could do nothing but cry and after a while I found myself crying too."

The Racines speak little English and the Scarborough lads do not speak French.

"The kids get along great," said Mr. Racine.

"All they do is point, mutter a few words in the other's language and after a while they communicate sufficiently to understand one another."

In the Racine family are 15-year-old Roger, Gilles, 12, and nine-year-old Sonya, whose first English words were to the visiting peewees "Do you want some pop."

"Oui, orange" said Craig.

"If adults and politicians were as sincere in communicating as are these kids we wouldn't have all the silly problems we have in the world today," said Mr. Racine.

"You know," said Billy, "the only difference between them and us is language and that's not hard to fix if you try hard enough."

Another friendly aspect of the tournament came out Wednesday, when the Oshawa, Ont., entry—already eliminated from competition—presented gifts to children from Cardinal Villeneuve School for Retarded Children. The school children were guests at the Coliseum.

Midget, Tyke Hockey Action

Three Midget and six Tyke games were played in BMHA action last night.

In Midget action the Elks Hawks took a 6-3 decision from the Leafs. R. Mitchell led the Hawks with three goals. N. Pope, B. Codling, and J. Drummond, scored the others. F. Calder, G. Bridge and W. Kerik scored for the Leafs.

The Bruins whipped the Canadiens 5-1. R. Woodley, Martor, Flesch, Richardson and Bellis scored for the Bruins. P. Hall was the lone Canadien goal-scorer.

In Tyke action, the Wings and Leafs tied 1-1. C. Thompson scored for the Wings, and Burkholder got the Leaf goal.

The Canadiens blanked the Rangers, 5-0, behind the four-goal performance of Chris Ridley. John Murray got the other Canadien goal. Wayne Rault was in the Canadien nets for the shutout.

The Mohawks nipped the Hawks, 4-3. E. Marineau led the Mohawks with three goals. D. Duffy added another for the victors. J. Jianopolis scored a pair of goals for the Hawks. T. Christopher scored the third.

The Bruins whitewashed the Barons by a score of 5-0. W. Lynch, scored two goals for the Bruins. D. Clarke, R. Cousins, and D. Archer. Terry Rivers was in the nets for the shutout.

The Kings turned back the Seals, 4-1. A. Horwood paced the Kings' attack with three goals. W. McCorwood scored the other King goal. M. Crawford scored the lone Seal goal.

The Penguins topped the Flyers, 2-1, behind the two-goal performance of Andy Plane. Terry Porter scored for the Flyers.

Kinsmen Team Competes

The Belleville Bantam Kinsmen team travels to Cornwall this weekend to participate in the Cornwall International Invitational Bantam Hockey Tournament.

Eastern and Southern Ontario will provide 16 of the 24 teams in the tournament. The rest will come from New York and the New England states.

The Belleville club has drawn Renfrew as their first opponent. The game will be played Saturday morning at 10.30 a.m. at the Cornwall Community Arena. Tournament action will also take place at the Bob Turner Memorial Centre.

The "A" finals take place Sunday afternoon at 3.00 p.m. The "B" finals begin at 1.30 the same day at the Bob Turner Memorial Centre.

Flyers Call Up Lacroix

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Andre Lacroix of Quebec Aces, called up by the Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League, leaves a healthy bulge in the American Hockey League scoring race behind him.

Van Doos Make Life Miserable for First Guards From Picton

PUERTO RICO (CP) — The script calls for a happy ending next week for Canada's practice peace-keeping exercise in the Caribbean, with the good guys successfully routing the bad guys.

But a band of 30 consummate actors from the Royal 22nd Regiment are making sure that the peace-keepers are put thoroughly through the wringer before the curtain comes down.

They give a real test to the capabilities, the alertness and the temper-keeping qualities of the 750 men in the Mobile Command force practising the sort of duty they might have to perform in reality as members of a United Nations peace force.

As demonstrators, the Van Doos pelt the Mobile Command forces with small stones and dried cow dung, shouting unprintable insults in French, English and Spanish.

"That's the side to be on in an exercise like this," a perspiring officer of the 1st Canadian Guards said as his men ran across a dusty, sun-scorched flat to stop a demonstration by Van Doos "natives" who wanted to cross a special demarcation line manned by the peace force.

The Guards, from Picton, Ont., and the Royal Canadian Regiment from London, Ont., make up the bulk of the Mobile Command force acting as UN peace-keepers.

Brown Charged with Threatening FBI

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Black Power advocate H. Rap Brown was in jail today as his lawyer drafted a defence on a new charge and tried to raise of intimidating an FBI agent $100,000 bail.

Lawyer William Kuntsler of New York hoped to get the bail reduced at the preliminary hearing, the next legal step facing the militant Negro leader.

The new charge was imposed on Brown, a spokesman for the Student Non-violent Co-ordinating Committee, after he lost a legal argument in federal court about a court order limiting his travel.

The FBI said Brown, during a recess, told FBI Agent William H. Smith Jr., also a Negro, that: "We will get you. . . . We better not find out where you live, and if you have any children we will get them, too."

Commissioner Fritz H. Windhorst fixed bail at $50,000.

In federal court, a few minutes earlier, Brown's bail on another charge—violation of a federal firearms law—had been re-set at $50,000 and he had been ordered to forfeit $5,000 of his old $15,000 bail.

Judge Lansing Mitchell ordered the forfeit as punishment for violation of his order that Brown confine his travel to Louisiana, New York and Atlanta, Ga., pending trial.

The firearms charge against Brown said he violated the law by carrying a gun around while under federal indictment.

Specifically, the charge was that he took a .30-calibre rifle from New York to New Orleans and back while under indictment at Cambridge, Md., on charges of arson and inciting riots.

"I'll stay there until I am released or die because I will refuse all food and water," he said.

The federal court was heavily guarded during the hearing

Belleville Girl Wins Fellowship

Brigitte M. Koestler, 36 Harris Crescent, Belleville, is one of 24 University of Toronto students to be named Woodrow Wilson Designates, an honor conferred this year by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation of Princeton, N. J., on graduating students of high academic standing who are considering a career as university teachers.

Miss Koestler graduates from St. Michael's College this spring in honors French. The Foundation will assist her to enter a graduate school in Canada or the United States.

The University of Toronto ranked first among 21 Canadian universities from which 93 students were named Woodrow Wilson Designates. U of T and Harvard University were third among 307 Canadian and U. S. universities and colleges from which a total of 1,124 winners were selected.

Additional Grant May Be Given

Belleville city council will consider an additional grant of $1,500 to the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association to assist the organization in the cost of the new $13,000 bandshell at Zwick's Island.

Council earlier agreed to a $1,500 grant on the understanding that a request for a similar amount would be made to the County of Hastings. County council, however, refused the grant.

The Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans have committed themselves to raising $10,000 toward the bandshell.

Bermuda, with a population of only 50,000, has two television stations, both commercial.

Behind the Glass

Next Wednesday the Tri-Quinte bonspiel sponsored by the Quinte, Trenton and CFB curling clubs will open and continue through to Sunday when final games in all competitions will be played at the three clubs. This year the Trenton Curling Club will be the host club and James Bowman of that club is the general chairman of the spiel with Charles Cox of Quinte and Cal Drake of CFB as vice chairmen. Along with this personnel is an energetic committee, who have plans for the spiel nearly completed.

This year the entry list will be limited to 64 rinks and already 52 rinks from three clubs and Brighton, Picton, Colborne, Napanee, Uplands, Rockcliffe, Kingston, Camp Borden, St. Hubert, Whitby, Washington, Georgetown, Richmond Hill, Ottawa Granites and Utica, N.Y. have entered.

There will be eight events in the spiel with the primary event being for the Pepsi Cola trophy and others are Belle Cleaners, Elliott Motors, O'Keefe's, Quinte Transport, Corbys and North American Van Lines. Each year these trophies are rotated and one becomes the primary event. The Quinte Shield this year will be given to the winner of the Pepsi Cola event.

The finals will be played at all three rinks on Sunday with Elliott Motors and Corbys being played at the Quinte Club at 4.00 p.m., the Quinte Transport and North American Van Lines at the Trenton Club at the same time and the Pepsi Cola, Belle Cleaners and the O'Keefe's at the CFB commencing at six o'clock. Instead of having a banquet and entertainment on one night of this spiel this year the players at the three clubs on Saturday will be served a full course meal from five to seven o'clock. The draw has been revised so that any rink entered is guaranteed five games and a rink going through to the finals will have eight games to play.

The draws will be on Wednesday at 6.30 and 9.00 p.m. and the same will apply for Thursday. On Friday the draws will be at 5.00, 7.30 and 10.00 p.m. and all day Saturday and Sunday.

Religious, Political Question

Moira Students Take Issue with School Opening Exercises

By STEVE BISHOP

The opening exercises of a school day are short, but they bring up some interesting religious and political questions. Moira students, in particular, have taken exception to the nature of their opening exercises.

Moira's opening exercises begin with either O Canada or God Save the Queen. These are alternated, with the national anthem being played each Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and God Save the Queen each Tuesday and Thursday.

The playing of the anthem is followed by a selected Scripture reading and the Lord's Prayer. The final item on the agenda is the announcements.

"I am strongly nationalistic and I feel that O Canada should be the only national anthem. As it stands, the students cannot develop a national pride."

The Scripture reading and the Lord's Prayer do not belong at all. In the first place, religion belongs in the church, not the school, and secondly, monotonous repetition of the Lord's Prayer breeds nothing but disrespect."

He went on to say that the solution he would advocate is a program consisting of simply O Canada plus the announcements.

Other students, while not exactly in accord with these views, expressed similar sentiments.

Rick Cheesman, a Grade 13 student, had a strong statement concerning the religious aspect. "Religion doesn't belong in the school."

"About religion, I don't care one way or the other," stated Grade 12 student Jack Longstaff. "But I wish they'd get rid of God Save the Queen."

Bill Probert, a Grade 13 student, expressed a dissenting opinion on the same question. "I don't think the anthem should be alternated from day to day. It should be just O Canada."

Students are not the only ones concerned with the issue. English teacher Christopher Marshall questioned the use of religion in the exercises. "There shouldn't be any religion in it at all. Just essential announcements."

Moira principal Linton D. Read explained the school's position. He first pointed out that the law allows any student to leave the classroom during a prayer for religious reasons.

"The Lord's Prayer is accepted as a basic religious concept. Churches perpetuate it without any monotony or disrespect. We feel that by using it we are keeping a balance between a religious atmosphere and one that is totally free of it."

Mr. Read stated that the playing of God Save the Queen was symbolic rather than sycophantic.

"It's a good thing for us to realize that we're part of something bigger than Canada."

Although students at the city's other secondary schools expressed no complaint similar to those of Moira students, the principals at the other schools outlined their opening exercises.

Centennial has a Scripture reading, the Lord's Prayer, and the announcements.

Principal W. J. Musgrove said that the attitude in which the Lord's Prayer is taken depends upon the individual.

"I would tend to agree that it becomes monotonous due to the students' frame of mind. But do you wipe our religion for that?

"While a student is in an attitude of prayer, it may wash his mind for a moment. I'm not strongly for or strongly against it from a psychological point of view. It's the pause and the attitude of prayer that may have considerable value."

Mr. Musgrove explained that the national anthem could not be played at Centennial due to a mechanical problem. The playing of the anthem in each classroom could not be properly co-ordinated.

Vice-principal J. D. MacKay of BCI said that the opening exercises consisted of a Scripture reading by the principal and the Lord's Prayer led by the teachers in each classroom. The announcements are read at 1.18, after the noon break.

Mr. MacKay said that no complaints from students had been received concerning this system.

Quinte principal John Hayman stated that opening exercises at his school consisted of O Canada, a Scripture reading, the Lord's Prayer and the announcements.

"The Bible Club read the Scripture lesson. Each week a different person reads. That way the students are participating, and it's good for them.

"We feel that O Canada is our only national anthem, and so we use it here."

Opening exercises may be short, but they can breed controversy. On just such grounds parliamentary debates have been fought.

Included in Act

Board Chairman Reacts

Chairman of the Bay of Quinte High School Board, James Clarke said this morning the administration are simply carrying out the orders of the school act in opening exercises at secondary schools.

"We're obliged to use a reading of the Scriptures or the Lord's Prayer in the opening or closing exercises at all our schools."

The school act also states that God Save The Queen and or O Canada shall be part of the opening or closing exercises.

"As far as the board is concerned we don't have any interest in the matter," he said. "It's part of the act and we can't operate contrary to it."

Under the act the board may direct Scripture readings at the close of the day or suggest the Bible readings which should be used.

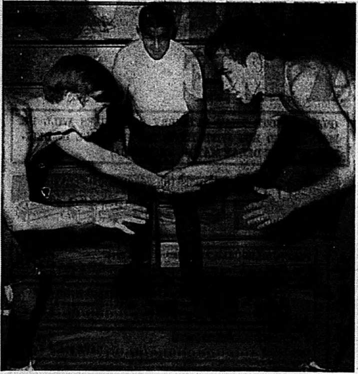
Students, who's parents object to them being present during the exercises, can be excused while the Scripture is read.

The board may also direct the principal to suggest Bible passages to be memorized by the pupils. This is not done in Belleville secondary schools.

The act also gives the board the authority to allow a minister to give religious instruction to persons of his own denomination at a time during the school day allotted by the principal. This time can't exceed one hour per week.

The regulations covering the opening or closing exercises in schools are set-up under the department of education act.

Youth Parade



QUINTE WRESTLERS Tom Brant and Dave Casselman square off in a practice session under the guidance of Coach Walter Uhrynuk. They'll go at it in earnest Friday and Saturday in the All-Ontario meet at Centennial.

Wrestling Takes Over...

Centennial opens its doors to 453 wrestlers this weekend in one of the largest sporting events in this area's history.

It's the OFSSA wrestling tournament, and provincial schools and individuals will be decided in the Centennial gym Friday and Saturday.

One hundred and twenty three schools will be represented at the meet, including Moira and Quinte. Six wrestlers from Moira and five from Quinte will be competing.

The Quinte representatives are: Tom Brant, at 115 lbs., Dave Casselman, 123 lbs., Dave Storey, 136 lbs., Ian Rutherford, 168 lbs. and Harold Townsend, who is in the 183 lb. division.

The meet gets under way at 7:00 Friday night, and runs to 11:00. It begins again at 7:00 Saturday morning and continues throughout the day, with the finals starting at 7:00 in the evening.

'Paint-in' Staged

Trenton Students Impressed with Loyalist

By PATRICIA BRIDGE

LOYALIST IS back in the news again after a rather long leave of absence. I've been informed that many events have taken place during the past month. Several weeks ago a "Paint-In" started a chain reaction of occurrences.

One Tuesday night Loyalist students and teachers, armed with paint, brushes, and way-out designs decided to paint the walls of our lounge. The effect was startling to say the least!

• • •

LAST WEEK students from Trenton High School were invited to a Cider Party in the Student Lounge. Music was provided by The Righteous Brothers (on record only). A film on community colleges was shown. All the teachers and some students were available to answer any questions the Trenton Students had about Loyalist.

Four Loyalist boys, Barry Detenbeck, Larry Mason, Phil Armstrong, and John Lewis represented Loyalist at the Community Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology Conference held in Ottawa February 15-18.

Seminars on student government, activities, and extra-curricular activities made the four days extremely interesting. One hundred and fifty delegates represented 19 Community Colleges. Phil Armstrong may be quoted as saying "The boys outnumbered the girls about ten to one."

• • •

STILL ANOTHER Convention took place last week. This was a Community College Workshop on student counselling. Edward Workman and A. H. McFarlane, Student Services Representative, attended all the meetings and seminars which were held at The Inn on the Park in Toronto.

From January 21-25 the boys from the Municipal Assessors Course spent the week in Ottawa, mainly at City Hall observing the daily work of an assessor, and attending lectures. Jerry Finn acted as guide and guardian.

It seems hard to believe, but I actually have a sports score to report (almost two as a matter of fact). The Loyalist girls defeated the Brighton Juniors in a volleyball game. With great ostentation our girls bragged of their 15-6 win over the Brighton Juniors.

Their loss to the Seniors is unmentionable. After the game a luncheon was served, which was greatly appreciated by everyone. Credit and thanks must be given to our three star players: Judy Zuber, Alice Cannons, and Anne Linton. Without them what would have happened to the Junior game?

DAVID ROSS WATTS, chairman of the Glee Club has had great success with the club. There are now 30 enthusiastic charter members who meet every Tuesday night at 7:30 and make the attempt. Everyone is anxiously awaiting for a release by D.R. and The Boys!

'Kampus Kapers' Slated at BCI

By ANN McCORQUODALE

ON FEBRUARY 23 and 24, BCI presents its 22nd production of Kampus Kapers. This, the original school variety show in Belleville, is under the direction of Mr. Retallick, with Ralph Spencer as our very capable Master of Ceremonies.

On Friday and Saturday evening at 8:15 p.m., you will be able to see the results of months of practicing and rehearsals. I've seen a couple of the acts and they are very good. And this year, there is an added attaction. Besides the singing, dancing, music, gymnastics and comedy, BCI teachers are presenting a Staff Act.

Why it's worth 50 cents and 75 cents to see this alone. Get your tickets now at the Quinte Bookshop or at the door.

Also on Saturday, our Junior and Senior basketball compete in the Black Ball Tournament. The competition is fierce up there so we wish our guys the best of luck.

This past week was a busy one for the Keyettes. In honor of Valentine's day, they sold cinnamon hearts all week and homemade candy on Friday. Evey noon hour, they polished shoes, energetically, if not professionally.

Please girls, next time let's have more polish on the shoes and less on the floor and socks.

Wednesday morning the Key Club joined forces with the Keyettes and they presented Keyette Follies. During this assembly, the girls presented suitably inscribed Valentines to the men teachers. And, as Mr. Hildebrandt remarked upon receiving his, "That's worth five term marks."

Moirantics Called 'Smashing Success'

By STEPHEN HUNTER

THE MID-WINTER slump has struck again. It is with great joy that I say I am glad for the holiday in March as I doubt I could last much longer in this state of depression.

The summer holidays and Christmas season are too far back to remember and the upcoming summer seems too far away to believe.

It is about this time every year that the homework slides, the long essays are assigned, and the weather adds to the dreary scene.

The only exciting words I can add are that exams are coming soon so don't let your slump continue too long or you'll end up in a worse position than the Toronto Maple Leafs.

• • •

I AM PROUD to say as a Moira student that somebody isn't slacking and that is our Trojan wrestling team. The team captured the Bay of Quinte championship and went on to place 2nd at COSSA.

A great team effort and I understand we had 6 champions in the COSSA finals. So congratulations Trojans and good luck to our six champions.

Moirantics was a smashing success contrary to popular belief and received compliments from all those who watched it. The cast, stage crew, and staff advisors deserve our heartiest congratulations.

Period of Reflection at NCC

By DONNA WHALEN

EVERY YEAR the students of Nicholson Catholic College take a brief pause from the regular school - work routine for a period of reflection during which time they contemplate spiritual aspects and personal pursuits. This time is commonly called "a retreat" but it has also been termed "a challenge"; both names are relevant to the basic idea.

It is a retreat because the participants try to withdraw for a few days from the usual bubub of the madding crowd and view themselves objectively and it is a challenge because the students must try to make the most of this opportunity — to think about their futures and to develop an understanding of what life is all about.

From Wednesday until Friday, all the students of NCC will be "on retreat." We will listen to lectures by three visiting priests, have discussions and most of all, do a little soul searching.

ON MONDAY, Nicholson will have its own version of the Stanley Cup playoffs when George Genereux's team and Mike Marino's team go into stick-to-stick combat in pursuit of the honor of being the best team and winning the prize.

Later in the week another floor hockey game will be held — a game between the all-stars and the "old-timers". The latter team will be composed of people who have been in high school for more than five years. Everyone is anxious to know if the extra years have had any effect on athletic capabilities

The Chemistry Club convened last week to hear a lecture given by Dr. Pritam Singh, from the Entomological Laboratory, on biochemistry and the importance of research in coping with scientific problems. His talk was interesting and helpful.

CSS Council Has Busy Week

By VICKI ANDERSON

THE STUDENT Council at Centennial Secondary has been very busy the past few weeks arranging things so that the six hours a day, five days a week will be more pleasant for the student body.

The first step was taken on Thursday of last week when a new scoreboard was installed in the gymnasium. Now instead of the usual blackboard we were using for the past year and a half, the scores of both teams playing can be seen by all spectators.

Secondly, the school council is in the process of purchasing a crest for the front of the school to be placed beside the name which was put up several months ago.

IF THERE WERE any visitors to our school on Friday afternoon they probably would have heard lively music pouring out of the doors of the cafeteria, because Centennial's student council has also purchased a uke box.

Now the CSS students are the first to have music to eat by and to do homework to.

The CSS cheerleaders are as active as ever this season. Although we've lost some, others now take their place.

THE POEM for this week was composed by Gordon Till of 11D:

THE ARROW

The two woods scratched,
The brown string hummed,
Into his chest
The red shaft drummed.

Each ear was touched,
All eyes were turned
He cried like a cat
For the arrowhead burned.

Then he pulled it out;
The bleeders caught,
They ripped his heart,
His nerves were taut.

A second next
That was it!
His nerves relaxed
That was it!
He breathed his last.

Dissent Assists Authority

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

Authority, by its very nature, is forced to justify its decisions, even when those decisions are wrong; and the really basic value of "dissent" is as much practical as moral — in that a substantial thrust of public opinion can permit authority to change or reverse its decisions under the guise of "responding to people," without losing face.

One reason that literature cannot be lumped with the other arts (as is so loosely done) is that while it is possible to speak about speech, it is not possible to paint about painting, or compose about composing; the use of words in literature is not the same as the use of pigment in painting or notes in music, and this is why most criticism of art and music is murky and unconvincing.

There are people so emotionally crippled in childhood that in adulthood they are afraid to be happy lest something bad happen to them.

What we call "war" is both a social institution and human passion; and its abolition is so hard because the people who want to reform the institution underestimate the depth of the passion, and the people who want to reform (or divert) the passion underestimate the complexity of the institution; while hardly anyone sees that both efforts must proceed together, pari passu, on the social and psychological planes.

Fire Losses Greatest in Ten Years

TRENTON — Padded by the record loss in a Jan. 15 shoe warehouse fire, Trenton's 1967 fire loss totals are the greatest in 10 years.

Fire Chief Cecil Ellis' annual report to town council lists the 1967 town fire loss figure at $826,655. This includes a $790,080 loss estimate for the January blaze at Bata Shoe's Reid St. warehouse.

The warehouse fire was the largest on record for Trenton.

Had it not been for the one serious blaze, last year's total would have been considerably lower than the $76,150 recorded in 1966.

The highest loss figure to date was recorded in 1958, when a bevy of serious fires resulted in some $862,430 in losses.

The 399 alarms responded to by local firemen in 1967 represented a high for the last 10-year period, during which seven fire fatalities were recorded.

No one died as a result of a fire during 1967.

The town's average annual fire loss between the peak 1958 and 1967 totals works out to about $140,000.

Minister To Attend Meeting

TRENTON — Town representatives will attend a Feb. 29 meeting in Castleton, the third in a series to study the possibility of establishing a conservation authority for the watersheds of Northumberland County and some adjacent areas.

Ontario Minister of Energy and Resources Management J. R. Simonett will attend the meeting.

Town council agreed Industrial and Economic Development Committee chairman Paul Tripp should represent Trenton.

There are at present 36 conservation authorities in Ontario, covering most of the southern part of the province.

In recent months, a group of interested persons from the Trent Valley region have urged establishment of an authority to take in the 50,000 inhabitants of most of Northumberland County, and a western section of Hastings.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry suggested council give serious consideration to the establishment of a conservation authority in the Trent area, because of the government grants available for such projects as flood control dams, reservoirs, and recreational facilities.

Dr. Fairweather Will Speak On Ecumenism

Legion News

BRANCH 99 L.A.

Despite cold weather many members attended the general meeting of the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies' Auxiliary.

President Hope Begley opened the meeting. Mrs. Marian Little was initiated into the Auxiliary. Mrs. Ethel Joslin applied for membership and will be requested to attend the March meeting.

Reports of various committees were heard. Comrade Muriel Little read a long list of members who have been ill and in hospital, all of whom she either visited or sent treats.

Comrade Dennis reported that the euchres on Thursday afternoons are as well attended as ever.

Comrade Semark is the new convener for banquets and gave a satisfactory account of catering and announced dates of forthcoming banquets.

This Saturday the bowling teams and euchre players go to Madoc. The bus will leave the Legion Hall at 12.30. Sports day for this Auxiliary will be held Saturday, March 23rd. Teams from all branches in the Zone will be competing. Local members will provide the lunch and refreshments.

President Begley presented Zone Commander Dorothy Rashotte with past president's medal, and expressed the Branch's appreciation for all she had done during her term of office.

Zone Commander Rashotte will be making her official visit in March, and it is hoped all members will be on hand to greet her.

Comrade Edna White who is 83 years of age, spoke of her visit to Holland. She now resides at Hastings Manor. The Legionnaires helped make her dream come true — to see her son's grave in Holland. Robert Alexander White of the Regina Rifles was only 18 years old when he gave his life.

Comrade White spoke of the attention and care shown her, during her flight and stay. She was billeted in a local home and her host and hostess drove her around the countryside. Mrs. White was greatly impressed and moved at the sight of rows of beautifully kept graves, each with its own marker and fresh flowers.

Comrade Begley thanked Mrs. White for her interesting story and was pleased to see her at the club, once again.

The evenings' draw was won by Mrs. Vickers. A lunch and social get-together concluded an enjoyable evening.

Dancing cupids and sparkling red hearts and streamers provided a warm welcome for members and their guests at the annual Valentine's dance.

Comrade Marg Bolger and her assistants arranged an evening of entertainment. Music was by the Troubadors, always a popular group of musicians. Everett Parks and Gerry Downs won the door prizes. The lucky winners of various spot dances were Mr. and Mrs. Rice, Marg. Carson and Everett Parks, Gwen Hughes and Cy Gardiner, and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.

Policemen in Bermuda dress exactly like English bobbies except that in the summer Bermuda's constables don the traditional Bermuda shorts and knee socks.

To Your Good Health

Controlling Height Is Not Practical

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband and I are worried over our 6-year-old son. He is small for his age, 43 inches tall and weighs only 35 pounds. We have had him to a physician and there seems to be no trouble physically.

Are there shots a doctor could give him to make him grow? His father is 6 feet tall. I am under 5 feet. Assuming this could be hereditary, would it help to give shots, and could this be harmful to him? — Mrs. H. V.

This is a question which comes up quite frequently — balanced by inquiries from girls who think they are too tall and want to be shorter.

My advice has always been that controlling height is not practical and for all ordinary purposes I still say so.

There is, however, a good deal of research in this direction, work with what is known as the "growth hormone." It is an interesting study, and is adding much to the store of medical knowledge.

But to tell people to rush off to the doctor and ask for "shots" to encourage growth is another matter. For one thing, growth hormone is a scarce (and expensive) commodity. Even the research groups are hard put to get enough for their work. Second they don't just give the hormone and cross their fingers and hope. They make searching examinations of children to start with, and continue careful checking throughout the use of the hormone, which may take a year or more.

They do feel that they are meeting with some success, but of necessity it is a costly undertaking and in any event available only to the few children who have been sought out by the research people for such treatment.

Finally, age and parentage are important. I am told that work must begin when a child is young — above the age of 8 there is little prospect of any success. Nor is it possible to turn the child of two short parents into a tall child. There are limits to the amount of change that seems possible. According to height - weight charts I have, this boy falls within the 10 per cent variation from average. Hence he is not abnormal. He has considerable growth to look forward tc.

Parallell with this is investigation of the chances of minimizing growth of tall girls. This, too, does not promise any miraculous alterations, but some control apparently is possible.

Folks are entitled to know that these sophisticated studies are in progress, but for the average person it is still futile to go shopping around trying to find "shots" to control height. For the time being — forget it. Be satisfied with whatever height Nature has ordained.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can overdoses of Vitamin C cause an over-abundance of acid? — Mrs. M T.

No. Vitamin C is the one vitamin, more than any other, which is rapidly discharged by the body if more than enough is consumed. That is why such emphasis is placed on citrus juice or other source of Vitamin C in the diet daily.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Just want you to know I enjoy reading your column, and the "seven danger signals" made me report a small lump in my breast. I had surgery two weeks ago. The lump was the size of a pea but was cancer, but from the tissue report it had not spread elsewhere. My surgeon said I was a lucky girl. (I am 46.) — D. J.

It's a joy when people profit by advice. And an endless disappointment when others write in and tell their symptoms and ask "Do you think it could be cancer?" If in doubt, go to your doctor at once. Promptness saves lives.

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Baseball Minimum Salary Now Set at $10,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Most major league baseball spring training camps are just on the verge of opening, but a lot of rookies already have received $3,000 worth of good news.

One of the most important provisions of an agreement between club owners and the players association announced Wednesday was raising the minimum major-league salary to $10,000 from $7,000 a year.

In addition, the players won some other financial concessions including an increase in meal allowances, spring training expenses and reduction of the amount salaries may be cut from one season to the next.

Top non-economic concessions included studies of possible alternatives to the reserve clause and of the length of the season, both to be completed next year.

The agreement is for two years and was made retroactive to Jan. 1.

Meal and tip allowances for players when their teams are on the road were increased to $15 a day from $12. Spring training meal allotments for players living away from club headquarters went up to $12 a day from $8. Miscellaneous spring training allowances went up to $40 a week from $25.

Salaries may only be reduced 20 per cent from the previous season rather than 25 per cent as in the past.

Senior Curlers to Compete In National Championship

MONTREAL (CP) — An estimated 10,000 senior curlers from across Canada are expected to compete in the various club, district and provincial playoffs leading to the national seniors championship at Edmonton's Glenora Curling Club March 25-29.

William E. Lumsden, president of the Dominion Curling Association, made the estimate Wednesday.

Now in its fourth year, the seniors event is for curlers 55 years of age and over. This year's competition will again feature 11 provincial champion rinks, with Ontario divided into Ontario and Northern Ontario representatives.

Competition for Guest Stars On Variety Shows Quite Keen

NEW YORK (AP)—It's not easy to turn out a new show each week—different host, different guest stars, different theme, but that's the format of NBC's Wednesday night Music Hall. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising that it is a show with ups and downs.

Music Hall is one of those middle-of-the-road programs, designed to appeal to all ages, and offend and shock none. Thus this week's edition, called The Class of '68, really didn't do much more than present some attractive people singing sons and make a rather feeble stab at some comedy. The show was billed as "a salute" to this year's college graduates, but just about all the collegiate atmosphere was glimpsd was a bunch of extras dressed like students who sat around and applauded on cue.

John Davidson, an attractive singer who is, however, several years beyond college, was the host of the show. Then there were singers Michele Lee, Buffy Sainte Marie, Tom Jones and the Fifth Dimension, a rock group, and comedian Flip Wilson without much material to work with.

The Jonathan Winters Show followed on CBS. Winters had a pretty funny opening Wednesday night, playing a gun-happy soldier of fortune submitting to an interview. But the show slidown hill after that. Paula Prentiss and Dick Benjamin turned up in a satiric musical salute to New York—noting its bad air, crime rate and garbage problems—in a fashion that may bring complaints from the city fathers. Then there was a spoof of films about decadent southern families—about the 10th of its kind this season and hopefully the last.

The show seemed perfunctory and, even at this early stage of its life, a bit tired.

If the three networks stick with present plans, there will be 13 weekly prime time hours of variety next season, plus all sorts of specials. Since most of them stick to the same recipe of music and sketches, the competition for guest stars will be even hotter than it has been this season. Don Rickles, whose style of insult comedy is in high demand, counted up recently and found that he had appeared in spot shots 60 times this season. This is a lot of television exposure.

ABC, which paid $5,000,000 for TV rights to the Olympic games, was not too happy with the size of the ratings the programs drew last week, but blames the lack of intense interest on the generally disappointing performance of the Americans. It is expected that it will do better with the second part of the sports package—the summer games in Mexico next October.

Quebecers Win Case

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Mr. Justice Jean-Louis Marchand of Quebec Superior Court ruled Wednesday that the Quebec Junior A Hockey League was not legally entitled to deduct 29 points from the standings total earned by Trois-Rivieres Maple Leafs.

The league deducted the points earlier in the hockey season because the Maple Leafs were allegedly using a player who was over the age limit for Junior A hockey.

The deduction meant that the Leafs would finish the season out of the playoffs because of their low points total. The Leafs took the matter to court.

Mr. Justice Marchand ruled that the 29 points be reinstated.

The Leafs thus returned to third place in the league with a total of 48 points.

Seattle Defeated

Chicago Bulls Win by Two

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Washington missed a free throw, but Chicago Bulls will forgive him.

The Bulls took 31 shots from the foul line in their 108-106 squeeker over Seattle Supersonics in the National Basketball Association Wednesday night. They made 30 of them, including 14 straight by Bob Boozer who led the scorers with 26 points.

In other NBA games, Baltimore Bullets beat San Francisco Warriors 126-117 and Los Angeles Lakers turned back Boston Celtics 122-117.

Bob Rule's basket for the Supersonics tied the score at 106-106 with 52 seconds left, but Clem Haskins hit on a one-hander from the foul line with eight seconds left for the Bulls' victory.

The Bullets got 54 points out of their backcourt combination of Earl Monroe and Kelvin Loughery. Monroe collected 29 points and Loughery had 25. Jeff Mullins scored 29 points for the Warriors.

Elgin Baylor came through in the clutch with 28 seconds remaining in the Lakers' victory over the Celtics.

With Los Angeles leading by one point, Baylor connected on a 13-foot jump shot and then converted a pair of free throws. Bill Russell topped the Celts with 24 points. Jerry West was high for Los Angeles with 34.

With The Trotters

WINDSOR (CP) — Ron Feagan of Goderich, Ont., drove Mertz Western to the front in the stretch to win the $1,700 conditioned pace at Windsor Raceway Wednesday afternoon.

Mertz Western, now credited with two wins and two second-place finishes in six starts this season, paid $4.40.

Bincross took the fifth race and combined with Volosharp for a $25.80 quinella. The quinella combination of Claybrook Van, winner of the seventh race, and Fair Worthy paid $27.20.

In night racing, Hockory Way was first out of the gate, but had to put on a backstretch spurt to win the one-mile feature trot.

Hockory Way turned the mile in 2:08.8 before 3,998 fans and paid $11.80, $7.10 and $3.80.

Academy Award won the first race and combined with Jerrikim, winner of the second, for a $182.60 daily double.

French Economy Faces Uncertainty

PARIS (AP)-The French economy, after a year of moderate growth, has started this year in a climate of uncertainty.

Unemployment is higher than at any time since the war. Several key economic sectors remained chronically weak. Pressure on prices is expected to be felt from tax revisions.

Also to be taken into account are repercussions from the devaluation of the pound, the elimination of tariffs within the Common Market next July 1, Kennedy Round tariff reductions and U.S. measures to stop the dollar hemorrhage.

Taking note of these factors—and offsetting them with an anticipated upswing in West German economic activity—independent observers cautiously predict a real growth in the 1968 gross national product of 4.2 per cent.

This is less than the five per cent the government has planned but still greater than growth anywhere else in Western Europe except Italy.

Though there are weaknesses in steel, coal, textiles and the stock market, encouraging signs of strength appear in chemicals, electronics and automobiles.

On balance, planners had a right to hop for a brisk upturn in business this year after 1967's four-per-cent rise in gross national product disappointed business leaders and government economists. But hesitation dominates French thinking about business activity, and this is expected to influence consumer spending.

An opinion poll at year-end revealed that 87 per cent of Frenchmen expect higher prices and nearly three-quarters fear unemployment.

Joblessness, almost unknown in peacetime France since the 1930s, is on the rise. It is estimated 450,000 Frenchmen are out of work, or 3.1 per cent of the civilian labor force of 14,500,000.

Compounding the widespread uncertainty is fear that French exports will be in a poor, competitive position. How the French economy depends on trade was brought home last year when the recession in West Germany, where France sells a fifth of her exports, was blamed for a French downturn.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

I am often asked "How does one get rid of property that is unsalable?" The answer below lists the various methods.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm the owner of a property that no one seems to want to buy. An uncle left me a house right in the midst of the biggest slum in our city. He thought he was being generous. Let me recite my tale of woe.

The tenant living in it not only refuses to pay rent, but has been breaking up doors and floors and using them for firewood. The housing bureau keeps threatening me with jail because the building is dilapidated.

The house has been up for sale for more than a year without a single offer. I am now ready to take almost any price. Please help! — Mr. SG.

ANSWER: The problem of unsalable real estate is becoming more common in dilapidated areas because municipal authorities are now more vigorously enforcing housing regulations. Notwithstanding, one of the following methods can be used to dispose of this type of property:

A. Real estate brokers in such areas will usually buy directly from the owner if the property is discounted enough.

B. Speculators are usually active in such areas. If you don't know of any, ask a local broker or the building inspector serving the area.

C. Find a reputable tenant, if possible, and give him a "lease-purchase" agreement His rent will be buying the house and his growing equity may cause him to take care of the property.

D. Offer to sell the property at a reasonable price, with the understanding that you will take back a 90 to 100 per cent purchase money mortgage for "nothing." People will buy.

E. As a last resort, find a charity and give them the property as a gift. Its fair market value is a proper income tax deduction.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My most precious possession is my pet Dalmatian. To properly house him, I have built an elaborate kennel with electric heating.

I just accepted a teaching position in another state and sold my house. I always assumed that I would be taking the kennel with me. Apparently, the buyer assumed the kennel was part of the real estate. This is a problem that has us quarreling.

My real estate agent thinks it's all one big joke. I don't! Can I take the kennel when I move? — Mr. L.

ANSWER: Based upon my experience in somewhat similar situations, this writer is of the opinion that the teacher's pet can have his dog house at the new location.

Generally, a dog house is considered a personal property, unless firmly attached by means of a foundation and footing. It would have been much better, however, if the agreement of sale had specifically contained a clause as to the ownership of the kennel!

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm about to buy the last lot in a development. Because it's shaped like a slice of pie, the agent is asking 20 per cent more than for other lots. He says that any real estate book will bear out his theory. I've looked, but could not find the proof. Do you agree? — Mr. E. N.

ANSWER: Your agent must be quoting from his own book. His theory is interesting, but the facts are reversed. As a general rule, a pie-shaped lot with the tip fronting on the street is worth 20 to 30 per cent less. If the rim of the pie fronts on the street, the lot is worth about 10 per cent less.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: When my grandmother would want to tell us that we children were acting stupid, she would use the expression, "Your head is as thick as the stone wall of a castle."

For nostalgic reasons, I have been curious as to the thickness of a castle wall. What's the answer? — Mr. M.

ANSWER: A respectable castle wall is a minimum of 12 feet thick.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Smallwood Would Ban Reports of Family Cases

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Smallwood said Wednesday his Liberal government plans to "outlaw" press and broadcast coverage of certain court proceedings.

The speech from the throne at the opening of the legislature said the government plans to "outlaw the publication by a newspaper, radio, television or other such means, of any information about divorce cases, separation cases, custody of children cases or such domestic or family cases as may come before any court or any other public authority in this province."

Mr. Smallwood said later he thinks all Newfoundland will approve.

The proposed legislation follows a custody case here last November in which William Smallwood, the premier's son and Liberal member of the legislature for Green Bay, and the younger Smallwood's wife were involved.

Detailed testimony was published, including that of the premier. William Smallwood launched a libel action against the St. John's Telegram. This action is still pending while the custody case was subsequently settled out of court.

Mr. Smallwood said he knew of "25 cases in this city" which had not been covered by the press.

"Any newspaper could have published any details. They didn't. They only published one in 70 years. We are going to stop that. We are going to do something we think all Newfoundland will approve—outlaw it."

He said he had been reading the police court reports in the newspapers recently. Sometimes names were reported, sometimes they weren't.

"This is freedom—freedom to discriminate," he said. "What kind of freedom is this? Freedom of the press."

Some legal authorities expressed reservations regarding the proposed Newfoundland legislation.

In Edmonton, Deputy Attorney-General J. E. Hart said the proposed legislation appeared to be similar to Alberta legislation. This provides that family court proceedings are closed unless the judge decides to make them public.

Jackie Heads for Laurentians

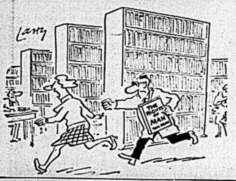
STE. AGATHE, Que. (CP) — Jackie Kennedy and her two children, Caroline and John, were expected to head for the Laurentian ski slopes today.

A flurry of rumors Wednesday suggested that the widow of the assassinated U.S. president was en route to London and a reunion with Lord Harlech but Mrs. Kennedy's friends at Ste. Agathe denied this.

Mrs. Kennedy and her children flew unexpectedly to Montreal Wednesday from New York amid a renewed flurry of rumors that she planned to marry again.

The Kennedys were staying at the home of Robert Timmins, a wealthy Montreal industrialist, and a longtime friend of Mrs. Kennedy. A spokesman for the family said Mrs. Kennedy had flown to Montreal only to keep a "long-planned" skiing date with the family at their estate near this Laurentian resort community 55 miles north of Montreal.

THE PICK OF Punch



Airliner Forced To Visit Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A gunman wearing a white cowboy hat and tennis shoes pushed a stewardess into the cockpit of a DC-8 jet over Florida Wednesday and held a pistol under her ear until the pilot detoured his craft and 109 persons to a landing in Cuba. There were six Canadians aboard.

About five hours after the hijacking, Delta Air Line Flight 843 returned to Miami, leaving behind in Havana a young man who gave his name to the airline as "S. Wilson."

Pearson Tells House Tax Measure Killed

Curbs On Red Trade Studied

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. officials are taking another look at the "extra-territorial" question raised by American law affecting the conduct of business subsidiaries in Canada and elsewhere.

Specifically, the re-examination deals with curbs on trade with China, Cuba, North Vietnam and Albania, which in effect prohibit such trade for all American business outside the U.S.

Officials say the problem has been most acute for Canada, because of the high degree of American investment. But as American overseas ownership continues to grow, other cases have risen elsewhere.

The latest reported is in Belgium where an American-controlled firm refuses to sell agricultural machinery to Cuba.

The U.S. legislation on controls is the Trading with the Enemy Act, which U.S. corporations interpret as holding them liable to penalties if their foreign subsidiaries engage in trade with nations on the black list.

Flour, motor vehicles, drugs and other items have been named as Canadian goods affected at one time or another.

U.S. officials say candidly they do not know just what if anything may come of the latest appraisal. They say assorted "imponderables" exist, including willingness of U.S. business to continue to invest in foreign countries applying regulations on trade with Communist countries that differ from the U.S. prohibitions.

In this connection, the state department's Canadian desk has been reading the Canadian report on foreign ownership published last week.

One recommendation is for a federal agency to deal with Communist trade. If no Canadian firm could be found to fill a Communist order and no American-owned firm would if it could, "the American subsidiary would be required to show cause to the agency."

Fulton Tries To Censure PM

OTTAWA — Thursday the House of Commons sat for only 67 minutes.

Davie Fulton PC-Kamlops introduced a censure motion on a question of privilege. He accused Prime Minister Pearson of a breach of parliamentary privilege by levelling "slander" against MPs in a nationally broadcast television program Wednesday night.

The main offending refences to the Conservatives were allegations, of "trickery" by the opposition in the Monday night vote. Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux, after heated debate on the privilege question, ruled there was no privilege involved.

The House then rose.

John Diefenbaker, rarely a lamb himself in Commons debate, says Prime Minister Pearson should have met the House meekly.

"Mr. Pearson would have done far more for Parliament and for himself if he had withdrawn his statements," the former Conservative prime minister said after the Commons adjourned.

Vote Is Strictly On Confidence

OTTAWA (CP) Prime Minister Pearson led off the Commons debate on a crucial confidence motion today.

Mr. Pearson said the government accepted the rejection of its income tax bill, defeated in the Commons Monday on a vote of 84 to 82.

The confidence motion did not seek to alter the decision, question the Commons action nor ask Parliament to change it.

Mr. Pearson began by remarking that the confidence issue would have been "much simpler" to deal with if the Opposition had given the necessary unanimous consent to begin the debate last Wednesday.

The government was not concerned "at this time" with the income tax bill.

Mr. Pearson said it is strictly a question of confidence — "that is what this motion is about."

The Prime Minister said the need remains for the $385,000,000 revenue provided by the defeated bill. The government intends to raise that money and expects to tell the Commons how it proposes to do so next week.

He said no individual taxpayer, who has already paid part of the five-per-cent surtax on income taxes involved in the bill, will suffer for it in any way.

In the present economic circumstances the need remained for the money involved in the bill to balance the budget.

"The government intends to meet that requirement."

Mr. Pearson was obviously delighted that the Conservatives were not opposing introduction of the confidence motion with a claim that the government could not bring business before the House.

Again and again he referred to the Conservative position held "until this morning."

He said Monday's vote does put the government's control of the House into question and should be cleared up.

If it is defeated "all doubt will be removed and the government will resign or the House will be dissolved."

If it carries, the government will carry on until the Liberal leadership convention and thereafter under a new leader.

Mr. Pearson said he had been encouraged by Opposition Leader Stanfield's charge that the government was trying to provoke the Conservatives into a filibuster.

This should mean that the confidence motion will be dealt with quickly.

He said the government motion simply asked the House to decide whether Monday's vote was one of confidence. It did not ask the House to rescind or reconsider its action.

There was ample evidence to support the view that the Monday defeat of a major tax bill did not constitute a non-confidence motion.

Mr. Pearson cited one constitutional expert as saying that it was primarily for the government to decide whether a defeat of this kind was a question of confidence.

Quoting opinions of parliamentary authorities, the Prime Minister said one source maintains that defeat on third reading of a bill "is not necessarily fatal to the bill."

However, the government is not arguing along this line in the case of the tax bill with

Two Groups Give Plans To Control School TV

OTTAWA (CP) — After a 75-minute wait to muster a quorum, the Commons broadcasting committee heard suggestions Thursday for two types of boards to watch over educational broadcasting.

New Brunswick's department of education called for creation of a special provincial council with representatives from labor and business, community improvement groups, teachers and universities as well as from the education department.

L'Association canadienne des Educateurs de langue francaise suggested there could be a board with representatives from every province set up under the Canadian Council of Education Ministers.

Its main purpose would be to see how the various provinces could help each other in producing broadcast material for schools.

The two groups presented their briefs after the 75-minute wait to gather 11 MPs for a quorum of the 24-member committee. Nine Liberals and two New Democrats finally made it up.

H-bomber Flights Not Issue--Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — An external affairs department spokesman denied Thursday that Canada is considering making cessation of nuclear-armed flights by American bombers over this country a condition for renewal of the NORAD agreement is "without foundation in fact."

"The question of U. S. Strategic Air Command overflights of Canada is not an element in the current discussions with the U.S. on future bomber defence arrangements for North American," the spokesman said.

The Canadian Press in an Ottawa dispatch Wednesday quoted informants as saying that "Canada may ask the U.S. to discontinue flights of hydrogen-bomb-carrying planes over this country as part of the price of remaining in North American Air Defence Command."

Sea Would Be Firing Pad For New Type of Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Navy engineers are studying a possible new generation of long-range missiles that would be fired while floating upright on the ocean's surface.

Pentagon sources said such a missile would be released from a submarine and then fired by remote control as it bobbed on the surface. A weighted bottom would keep the missile from tipping over.

Target information would be fed into the missile's guidance system before it was released from the submarine, sources said.

The proposed new system would be cheaper and simpler than the Polaris submarine with its complicated mechanisms for launching and firing missiles under water.

The new weapons would have a range of about 6,000 miles—roughly twice that of the most advanced current submarine-fired missile, the Poseidon.

Stirling and Marmora Secondary Schools Will Be Sold

By ROGER WORTH
Staff Reporter

Secondary schools in Stirling and Marmora will be sold and students will attend classes in Belleville and Madoc.

The move, involving 312 students, comes into effect next September.

James Clarke, chairman of the Bay of Quinte High School Board, said this morning the two units will be sold to Hastings County Area number two public school board for use in the elementary school system.

The decision to close the schools was inherent in the amalgamation of the Bay of Quinte and Centre Hastings High School Boards last year.

Mr. Clarke said about 100 students will travel to Centre Hastings High School at Madoc and the remainder are expected to attend Centennial High School in Belleville.

"The Stirling and Marmora schools were not operating at capacity and the public school board needed the extra space," he said. "The sale of the schools will provide economies for the secondary school board and will also make available the widest range of educational opportunity to the maximum number of students at the lowest possible cost."

At present none of the schools involved in the change is operating at capacity.

The nine-room Stirling unit has an enrolment of 190 and a capacity for 260 students. In Marmora the nine-room school has a capacity for 250 students. The present enrolment is 122.

To make way for the extra students, the secondary board is planning an addition to the Centre Hastings School in Madoc. The 25-room unit may be expanded to handle 1,200 students — an increase of 600 pupils.

The cost of the new addition is estimated at $2,000,000.

Mr. Clarke said the board is discussing the use of temporary portable classrooms to handle the increase in student population.

"We would probably need four or five of these until the addition is completed."

"The closing of the units in Stirling and Marmora will save the board about $30,000 per year and will also make way for a composite school in Madoc."

Another factor in the secondary board''s decision was the announcement by Loyalist College that it would erect temporary quarters for classes next fall.

"This gives us the space at Centennial School to handle the Stirling students," Mr. Clarke said.

Loyalist has been renting classroom space at Centennial Secondary School from the Bay of Quinte Board.

In another decision the board has appointed the firm of Boigon and Heinonen of Toronto as architects for the Madoc addition.

Mr. Clarke said it was important to note that a major factor in the move was the desire of the public school board to provide an updated program to the elementary students in the Hastings number two area.

"The two schools at Marmora and Stirling will provide them with the facilities they require at a cost lower then the cost of constructing new units.

The board chairman said he hopes the present staffs of the two schools will continue to work in the Bay of Quinte system.

Eighteen Small Public Schools Will Be Closed

Eighteen one-room and two-room schools in Central Hastings County will be closed next September.

The move to close the units follows an announcement this morning that the Hastings County number two public school board will purchase secondary schools in Stirling and Marmora.

The decision will affect between 500 and 550 elementary students attending the one-room and two-room units in Rawdon and Huntingdon townships.

They will travel to schools in Marmora, Stirling and Tweed.

Public school board administrator Cliff Cotton said today an addition to a four-room school in Marmora is also planned.

"We expect to select an arch-

Wrestlers Converge on Belleville

Today some 460 wrestlers from 123 schools converge on Belleville for the eighth annual Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations Wrestling Tournament.

The competition gets under way tonight at Centennial Secondary School at 7.00 p.m. and continues through Saturday night. The finals begin at 7.00 Saturday night.

Close to 500 matches will be held in 14 weight classes as officials go through the process of declaring individual champions in each class.

Defending team champions from Alliston-Banting Memorial Secondary School and Winston Churchill Collegiate of Scarborough will both have strong representation.

In addition to these schools there will be representatives from London, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Fort William, Kirkland Lake and Ottawa. The competitors from the farthest distance have come from Rainy River, 1200 miles away.

Local schools are well represented. Wrestlers from Madoc, Trenton, and Quinte and Moira Secondary Schools of Belleville have qualified for the tournament. The strongest local challenge should come from Wayne Morris of Moira, who took first place in the 123-lb class at last year's tournament at Niagara Falls.

The event is perhaps the largest in Belleville sports history, and tournament officials would like to see it well supported. The public is welcome to any and all sessions.

Planning Board Asks Freeze On Burnt-out Properties

Belleville and Suburban Planning Board will recommend that no building permits be issued for construction on the recently burnt - out lot on Front St., south of Thomas' Cigar Store, without consultation with city council.

The decision to ask planning director P. J. Beavis to write the city engineer about the issue was made at the board meeting last night. Board member Zdenek Kvarda prompted the discussion by asking whether a move had been made to put a freeze on the area in view of urban renewal studies now under way by Toronto consultants.

"We would be foolish to allow development on the site which might interfere with urban renewals plans of the consultants," Ald. E. A. Orr agreed.

A letter to the city engineer on the subject received the unanimous endorsement of the board.

The board's park planning study, prepared a year ago, is now being considered by the city's parks' board, Mr. Beavis reported The park's board has decided on the order of priority in park and recreational development in the north - east section of the city and will continue to study the remaining three sections of the city.

A special meeting of planning board will held Feb. 29 at 7 p.m. to accept and discuss the budget report for 1968.

Owners Say Compensation Fair if Freeze Ordered

Planning Board's recommendation that a building permit freeze be placed on the burnt-out properties south of Thomas' Cigar Store on Front St. met with agreement in principle from the owners involved.

But all agreed the city should compensate the owners for holding useless land until urban renewal studies are completed.

The president of Mymore Holdings, owners of a lot with 50 foot frontage in the area, said this morning the city should waive taxes on the vacant properties to make up for the loss of income to the owners.

"I can't see the magic circle plan south of Bridge St. becoming a reality for at least 10 years," he said. "In the meantime, it might be a hardship for some owners to have to pay taxes with no income coming from their holdings. On the other hand, why should the city buy the properties now and then decide, on the basis of the urban renewal studies to be presented in a year's time, that it doesn't want the land?"

G. Lampros, co-owner of a lot—with 39-foot frontage in the area, said he thought the city should take over the properties if it refused to allow building.

"If the city forbids income-producing building on the lots I don't see how it can force anyone to pay taxes," he commented.

L. G. Lennox, realtor acting for Mrs. Marion Tilbrook in the sale of her 50-foot frontage lot, said the building freeze would restrict chances of selling the land.

"Mrs. Tilbrook has her lot for sale, and the city should be prepared to buy it or compensate her for her loss of income while waiting an urban renewal decision," he commented.

City solicitor E. Gus Porter declined to comment on the legality of a building permit prohibition.

Foster Ward Residents Urged To Go Slow on Zoning Changes

Despite the fact that local improvement charges for sewer installation will prove costly for owners of wide frontage lots, members of the Foster Ward Ratepayers' Association will adopt a "wait and see" attitude before making any request for a zoning change, which would permit new residential construction.

This, it is stated, results in a hardship for some owners with wide frontage lots, who would like to sell at least part of their holdings for the construction of new houses, and thus recover some of the local improvement costs resulting from the present sewer installation.

Last night at a ratepayers' meeting, city planning director P. J. Beavis urged residents to go slow in any request for a zoning change.

He noted that the city had authorized an urban renewal planning study for the area and said that something concrete by way of recommendations may be forthcoming within the next ten months.

Another matter of interest to Foster Ward residents is the timing for completing sewer installation throughout the entire area.

The present sewer installation project will see only part of Foster Ward serviced and residents in the "left out" area would like to see the program continued until the entire area is serviced.

Alternate routing of sewer service lines to residences in corner lots areas was also discussed at the meeting. It was noted that in some instances the length of service lines from corner lots could be shortened if permission was given to run them to intersecting streets, rather than to the street on which the property fronted.

The planning director advised the matter being taken up with the city engineering department.

Association president Cecil Kellar chaired the ratepayers' meeting held at the Wharf Street Debating club and attended by approximately 35 area residents.

Education Best Weapon to Break Poverty Circle

Education opportunity is still the most reliable single force in the fight against poverty, the United Community Services was told last night.

Poverty is a compound of many problems and no one solution has yet been devised to solve it, Dr. Jean W. Frei executive director of the Montreal Council of Social agencies told the Belleville's organization's annual meeting at the Shrine Club.

"But better education gives an opportunity to break the vicious (poverty) circle," he suggested.

Education boosts the intelligence quotient of individuals, he claimed. Once an IQ of 140 was equated with near genius. Modern methods of learning have boosted that guide mark to 200.

"So you see what we need: We need more education," he concluded.

"If you give knowledge to these (underprivileged) children you give them an opportunity to break out of the poverty circle."

And, Dr. Frei told the organization's voluntary workers there would always be a role for them in social work, despite increasing state involvement.

By nature, bureaucracy is slow moving.

The state can keep pace, but not ahead of developments in social work.

It does not engage in pilot projects exploring the future trends of social aid.

Innovation is possible on the voluntary level and there is no limit to creativity.

While the state engages in the tasks of assistance and rehabilitation, the volunteer agencies can move ahead and experiment with prevention.

"There is a role unlimited for the volunteers," Dr. Frei assured.

* * *

The growth of industrialized automation in an urbanized society also indicated the need for a guaranteed income.

It means "you have to pay men even if there's no work for them to do," said Dr. Frei.

What happens as available spare time increases also is a problem.

"Some people will be happy doing nothing. But for most of the people, you'll have to give them something to do."

On solution is that the time made available by automated production, could be transferred to creative pastimes.

In other words, Dr. Frei indicated, man's social role would switch from sheer "productivity to creativity."

It was the first annual meeting of the United Community Services, which has re-organized local social agencies under one administrative roof.

The initial assembly also was a lengthy one, lasting three and one-half hours.

It ranged through a banquet, presentations and by-law business of the new group.

Campaign chairman George Dainard whose 1967 fund organizing raised $100,400 for the group, received a special award during the meeting.

Other awards were given budget chairman Hugh Kennedy and Mrs. Seymour Bochnek, director of a special project which sent 325 children to Expo.

Approved as directors were: F. H. Belstead, Mrs. Freeman Burrows, Thomas Carruthers, George Dainard, Jack Ellis, Paul Fleming, Oriel Griffiths, Mrs. Roy Jeffrey, Hugh Kennedy, Mrs. Kenneth Loucks, Kenneth Macdonald, Mrs. Arthur McFarlane, Robert Ord, Mrs. Robert Smith, Maurice Stotesbury, Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, Mrs. James Uttley, Carl Whittemore, Donald Williams, Mrs. Charles Wilson, Ross Wright.

Awarded certificates were outgoing directors Theodore Boretski, Mrs. Leo Buckley, Douglas Burr, Rod Cameron, Sqn. Ldr. Terence P. Indifference Still Negative Factor But Civic Involvement Growing

Indifference and hesitancy to become involved, are hampering social fund - raising in Belleville and district.

The negative aspects of public response to the community ideal are stressed in the interim annual report of the United Community Services.

The report was presented at the agency's first annual meeting in the Shrine Club last night.

A key section notes the agency's fund drive last year raised $100,400 to support 14 participating groups. This was 86 per cent of a $116,500 goal.

"An indifferent attitude among some sectors of the general public and a hesitancy to become involved in building a better community continue to be significant problems," says the report.

The attitudes do both fund - raising and social planning, it asserts. However, the warning is not completely negative.

The cited drawbacks "are being increasingly offset by the comitment and involvement of a growing number of community leaders," says the report.

The agency's activities in 1967 were evidence of "citizen involvement in planning for imported services to the community," says the report of executive director Robert Porter.

The agency also has seen a shift in emphasis to the citizenship role, Mr. Porter indicated.

"This year, I think the principal change has been from . . . perceiving staff as the agents of change to seeing citizens, as change-agents."

"This is the main difference between physical and social planning," explains Mr. Porter.

"In the first, (agency) experts prepare plans which are ratified by the community's representative and changes are effected by legislation. . . . In the second, concerned citizens study problems and propose solutions which they themselves carry out. The expert merely facilitates the process."

"A large number of persons . . . have made our progress possible and have contributed greatly to the effective administration of our affairs," tributes Mr. Porter.

The Board broadly cites a number of successful projects undertaken by the agency's volunteers during the past year.

These include:

Volunteer Bureau — More than 60 qualified volunteers were placed in weekly assignments on health, welfare and recreation projects.

Christmas Exchange — Helped standardize giving to 450 families — including 1,050 children — and eliminated much duplication by acting as a clearing house for community efforts. Total value of gifts was about $7,300.

Furniture exchange — Matches needs of poor families with donated household furnishings and appliances. In its first month alone, 200 items were processed. Now a telephone operation, long-range planning projects it as a thrift-store enterprise.

Expo-A-Go-Go — Sent 325 children and 50 parents to Expo, all of whom would not have seen the site otherwise. More than 150 volunteers and the CNR participated. A program that might have cost $6,500 was achieved for $2,000.

The agency also has a roster of flourishing study-action committees on such topics as:

Rehabilitation — Will study and co-ordinate activities in rehabilitating physically, mentally and socially handicapped. Will develop long-range plans for effective operation of community services.

Credit-Counselling — Will study what programs might aid prevent credit problems and implement its own findings.

Nutrition of Elderly — Already has pilot meals-on-wheels project underway for aged and convalescent. Once-a-week meal for 50 cents "has resulted in improvement in a number of persons by providing social outlet and . . . effecting vitamin intake."

U Thant Sees LBJ—But Still No Progress on Vietnam

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Anything new that Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations had to tell President Johnson Wednesday about Vietnam peace prospects was well concealed by the brief communique reporting a "friendly exchange of views on a number of matters, including Vietnam."

The hour-long White House session probably is more important as a step to improving relations between the U.S. and the UN leader, somewhat strained in the past. This was Thant's first visit since 1965 and it was conducted with considerable pomp.

The fundamentals of the Vietnamese peace impasse were covered in much more detail later at a working lunch given by State Secretary Dean Rusk.

As for Thant, he was quoted as saying before arrival that he was "more convinced than ever" that meaningful talks would follow a U.S. bombing halt within two weeks.

That summed up his conclusions after talking to North Vietnamese representatives in New Delhi and Paris as well as Soviet leaders in Moscow and Prime Minister Wilson in London.

But he was not optimistic about progress either.

The North has said there "will" be talks if the bombing and all other American attacks stop. The president stands on his so-called San Antonio formulas which, in its latest interpretation, says the bombing will stop in exchange for guarantees of "productive discussions" and a pledge by the North to stop increasing the flow of men, arms and other military supplies into the South.

Canadian diplomat Ormond Dier, back in Saigon after three weeks in Hanoi with a message from the Canadian government, is quoted by the Washington Post in a UN dispatch as seeing "no give" in the Northern conditions.

Dier is quoted as saying the North still stands on its four-point program of 1965 which includes insistence on the National Liberation Front—or political arm of the Viet Cong—being the only representative of the South, and removal of all American troops.

"Dier is said to have confirmed the impression that North Vietnamese officials are riding high in anticipation of military victory," says The Post dispatch. "At one point he was told by an official that Saigon had been captured, South Vietnamese President Thieu killed and the war was over."

Commons Wrangle

Whatever the ethics of a government remaining in power after it has been defeated by two votes, with some 100 other members absent from the House, there is good reason to question the unseemly politicking that has been the sequel to Monday night's ballot.

Party considerations are one thing — but the welfare of the country and its citizens is another. A Government defeat by accident — and that is virtually what it was — is not the strongest of ploys upon which to demand an immediate dissolution of Parliament. On the other hand it was a defeat just the same, and to ignore it as the Government is doing is to defy the principles of constitutional government.

The argument continues, but the sooner it is resolved one way or another the better it will be for Canada and for democracy.

Progress — or Taik?

There is a tendency — these days — inspired no doubt by Ottawa's predilection for royal commission investigations — for municipal government to pass the buck to committees.

True local councils need their committees, but when these proliferate, and duplication results, confusion is the result.

For instance, there is this special committee that has been considering recommendations contained in a roadway planning study report covering Belleville's east end. It is composed of city and rural municipal representatives along with an official of Canadian National Railway.

Thus we have a committee which is examining this report of a firm of consulting engineers.

Next we have Alderman Keegan suggesting to council last Monday that more than just roadways should be considered in the committee investigation — and to this end a Quinte-area development committee should be established. He listed sewer and water services among possible other spheres of study.

Perhaps Alderman Keegan is thinking only of bolstering the existing committee to embrace added topics, rather than setting up another one. Be that as it may it should be remembered that Trenton, as was pointed out the other day, has a group of young men engaged in producing factory buildings as an inducement to industry. They also have in mind the development of a Quinte area development corporation.

Somewhere amid all this activity there must be room for co-ordination and for action rather than talk. In Belleville we already have an industrial commission. Where does it fit in amid such planning activity? Also the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

It seems we have more planners and committees than you could shake a stick at — but not all that much actual progress.

Balance of Power

That the Soviet Union may have as many land-based nuclear missiles as the United States by mid-1969 — as revealed by defence secretary Robert McNamara — is a reminder that the only real insurance against a third world war is this very balance of power.

As former prime minister Harold MacMillan of Britain said some years ago, "War happily has become too dangerous." He was referring of course to nuclear war, for that would mean the end, finis, the Armageddon of Biblical legend.

Conventional war, as in Vietnam, unhappily, continues its ever more violent way.

Interesting, however, as Mr. McNamara's statement is, of even greater significance is the fact that his forecast of Soviet missile strength is based largely on reconnaissance photographs.

While this might be expected, quite apart from intelligence from other sources, the idea of reconnaissance flights being conducted over the Soviet Union by United States aircraft still carries an aura of excitement and danger.

Presumably these flights are being carried out by U-2 aircraft of the type that featured in the extraordinary case of Francis Gary Powers some years ago. Powers was shot down over Russia and he spent a number of years in a Soviet prison. U-2 aircraft are also known to have flown over China.

It seems clear then that such flights are continuing. And it may be concluded they are doing so without interference. This suggests in turn that improved U-2 type aircraft, operating at even greater heights and outside the range of defending aircraft and missiles, are in use.

Civil Servants Get Raise

Winnipeg Free Press

That was a pleasant little windfall that more than 100,000 civil servants received the other day from the federal government. Those involved — in executive, scientific, professional, technical and administrative classifications — get a three per cent raise retroactive to July 1 in some cases, to Oct. 1 in others.

And they got the raise without even asking for it. The reason given by Treasury Board President Benson was that salaries for these people must be kept competitive with free enterprise until their final increases (so there is more to come) can be determined by collective bargaining agreements.

The cost to the taxpayer is at least $17 million, and this does not take into account the federal government's superannuation contributions for the employees involved.

Taxpayers will certainly be asking themselves how this $17 million handout squares with the government's professed desire to control 1968 expenditures.

Is Low-cost Housing Possible?

Kingston Whig-Standard

A great deal has been said about housing recently by various Ontario Government spokesmen and by members of the construction industry. It is natural that a representative of private lending institutions should add his voice to the chorus and it happens that this came about recently when Mr. J. Allyn Taylor, President of the Canada Trust-Huron and Erie, spoke on the subject in London.

Mr. Taylor started out by remarking on the Canadian preference for "a hand-built house made of baked clay, sand and wood." If we could leave behind outmoded building concepts we would be taking a big step towards cheaper construction. Prefabrication he pointed out, is in bad repute because of shoddy wartime examples. But architects and designers should be able to develop suitable and economical houses built with prefabricated units. And one of the first steps to take is the elimination of restrictive municipal legislation, prejudice and red tape.

Mr. Taylor reiterated that housing is the first of our problems. The ownership of a home has become a luxury because of interest rates, land costs and building costs. He mentioned high interest rates as being due to the same supply - and - demand factors affecting other commodities. These rates are higher now than they have been in living memory.

One factor in the rising cost of land has been the reluctance of municipal governments to permit low-rise apartments, town houses, maisonettes and the like. More effective land use comes about through the use of such units as these. He also criticized municipalities for forcing developers to assume all the costs of essential services in new areas. This sifts a disproportionate burden to ultimate buyers of building lots.

Letter to the Editor

Cheese Producers Meet

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

During the past week a report of a meeting of the Prince Edward milk committee and of the cheese factory directors of the four share-owned cheese factories, and the one privately owned cheese factory that operate in the County of Prince Edward, was printed in your paper.

This meeting was called by the P.E. County milk committee, under the leadership of its president, Mr. James E. Alexander. It felt a need for the cheese companies to get together to express their individual difficulties and experiences, that all might share their knowledge and gain new insight from others.

As probably the only person present at the meeting who was not directly involved with actual milk or cheese production, and whose prime association with the dairy industry is as a homemaker and consumer, I could not but feel gratified and even stimulated by this meeting.

It was not a handful of old men sitting around a cracker barrel discussing the weather, as farmers are inclined to be pictured; rather, it was a group of approximately 50 persons, interested, well-spoken, intelligent and informed dairymen from early twenties on up. The value of the meeting was almost met in the fact that such a good reresentation from each factory turned out. Then the availability of representatives from the Department of Agriculture, Ontario Milk Marketing Board, Milk Committee and ARDA (Agricultural Rural Development Association) to give information and answer questions showed excellent preparation by the milk committee in that the producers, the government representatives and retailers were eager for co-operation.

Messrs. A. Johnston, cheese division OMMB, Allan Ketcheson, regional representative to OMMB, Clayton Hall, director of ARDA, D. Ptolemy, field representative OMMB, Thomas Heath and Peter Johnston, Department of Agriculture, were all on hand as speakers.

All cheese factory patrons should be proud of their representatives and support them any way they can, but most of all, every consumer should be grateful that in this time of world upset and dog-eat-dog existence, there are people who are willing to take time from their own businesses, in an effort to improve quantity and quality of necessary food items and to make people aware of the importance of the dairy industry, a very vital part of Canada's national economy.

Drug Stores On The Wane In Windsor

Windsor Star

Another old-established drug store has closed in Windsor, one of several in the past few years. This is part of a general pattern in other Canadian cities also. What is wrong with the old corner drug store?

It isn't particularly that its operations have become uneconomic, though in some cases they may have. Many stores which have been closed were going concerns, having provided a good living for their operators for years.

The trouble mainly is a shortage of druggists. Many operators have found it just impossible to obtain druggists. And this dates back to the changes in pharmaceutical education.

Until the early 1920s, a druggist could qualify by a few years apprenticeship plus one year at the College of Pharmacy. Then it was upgraded to two years and finally became four years. Most four-year graduates do not want to operate a store with its long hours, and relying for income largely on the sale of candy, tobaccos and other non-drug merchandise. They can get good money, with regular hours, by working for the big drug firms, on the manufacturing, wholesale or retail levels.

The trend seems to be fewer drug stores which would have a higher percentage of their income derived from their primary purpose, drugs. That is why it is almost impossible to even give away a corner drug store, unless it has an exceptional location and very large trade.

The old corner drug store was a convenience. It usually was open so that one could get urgent medical needs attended to but also was handy for the variety of merchandise it stocked.

Stranded on the Highway

Bruce West in
The Globe and Mail

It is just my imagination, or are these scientists out there in the engineering divisions of the large industrial corporations trying to drive us frustrated consumers out of our cotton-picking minds? I used to think that some of these things were mere accidents, but I am reaching the conculsion that there must be a large team of experts working on us with slide rules and computers to find new ways of driving us up the wall. The other day, for instance I had my first flat tire on a car which is of fairly recent vintage. Rooting about the trunk, I found the jack, which was an ingenious device indeed, easy to place beneath the car and fitted with a ratchet handle. Checking my operation manual, I found that the ratchet handle was also designed to be used as a wrench with which to remove the nuts from the wheel. Fumbling around in the cold, I got the hub cap off my car, applied this dandy little wrench to one of the nuts and gave it a pull to loosen it — whereupon this tool of devilishly clever design bent up into a curve like the limp handle of a 45c saucepan. I discovered it was made of some kind of sheet metal barely thicker than that of a sardine can and certainly not much stronger. Trying to take a nut off my car wheel with it was as hopeless a task as trying to tear down the steelwork of the Toronto-Dominion Centre with a Made in Hong Kong can-opener. So I had to rap on the door of a nearby house—thank goodness I wasn't far out on the highway—and ask permission to call a service station, which responded at the usual rate.

Now, my question is a humble and forlorn one, asked not so much in anger as in desperation :Why is it that our automobile companies spend such fortunes to design cars full of tiger-power, road-huggability, sex appeal and numerous push-button wonders but seem unable to toss in the trunk of these miracle-wagons a wrench which will take the nuts off the wheel when you get a flat tire? Had my misfortune taken place on a bleak and deserted country road, I could have sat there for hours pushing my buttons and listening to my tiger purring and feeling my car hug the road even closer than ever as it slouched down on its sadly deflated tire.

Gas Wells Ice Cream Anyone?

Windsor Star

Mining operations usually leave vast empty spaces far under the surface. Sometimes these can be put to a purpose, as the old gas wells in Southwestern Ontario now are used for the storage of gas which is pumped into them. Otherwise they are waste spaces and, in places as in certain coal mining areas, there is danger of them collapsing.

Sweden offers an example of caverns actually being created for a use. The largest ice cream manufacturer there has dug large tunnels into a mountain near Stockholm. It plans to store 25,000,000 ice cream bars in them. The temperature within the granite chamber can be kept at the proper level.

Come to think of it, huge chambers are being created by the rock salt operations in Oj'bway. They are clean, dry areas and there will be an increasing number of them over the years. Perhaps, sometime, they can be used as storage space for commodities.

Still Need Friendly Banker

Computer Geared to Give You Money When You Want It

MONTREAL (CP)—Money when you want it and a telequote system that tells the current stock quotation or traces your baggage are the latest steps in man's march toward dependance on the computer.

A new money dispenser, operating from a central computer-controlled unit will change the banking habits of Canadians if it catches on, a Royal Bank of Canada official says.

The IDA—identifying, dispensing and accounting—is for installation in shopping centres, hotel and apartment lobbies or anywhere that 24-hour banking service would be desirable.

The customer would set up a credit account with an appropriate bank which would supply two keys needed for the operation and a code number known only to him.

One key unlocks the unit. The customer fits a second key in a slot, punches out his code number and cash immediately appears in a plastic container.

The IDA concept would provide convenience for the customers and relieve the work load on bank staffs, the bank spokesman said.

The transactions are electronically-controlled, supervised and recorded in every detail, even to showing the bank balance left in the customer's account.

"A high degree of security from both physical attack and fraud" would be provided by the system, the bank spokesman said.

Similar machines have been in operation in the U.S. and Europe for some time but they are self-contained, having no base memory units, he said.

Another piece of electronic equipment now being developed is a telequote system, in which a desk instrument like a small TV set enables a broker to have current quotations, market trends and other information displayed before him on a screen.

The machine is also being developed to help hotel patrons get reservations and airline travellers to trace their luggage.

An intermediate unit called a composer accepts a query from a remote station and transmits it to the computer. The computer sends the required information back to the inquirer.

Marketing System Said Generation Out of Date

OTTAWA (CP) — It's now technologically possible to sit in your living room, shop by television, and pay your bills by computer.

But the marketing system is a generation behind the times.

These and other findings are the result of a study of 1961 and earlier census figures commissioned by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and made public Thursday.

The study is by Professor M. S. Moyer of York University, Toronto, and Gerald Snyder, director of the merchandising and services division of DBS. It is one of a series of studies commissioned by the bureau, currently being published.

In 1961, Canadian household consumers bought $17,000,000,000 worth of goods, and the cost of marketing these goods was $8,765,000,000. The remaining $8,245,000,000 covered the cost of manufacturing, including raw materials.

Thus, of every dollar the Canadian consumer spends on finished goods, roughly 52 cents represents the purchase of marketing facilities and service.

And for every $1 cost of marketing, retailing took 53 cents, wholesaling took 32 cents, and manufacturers spent 15 cents getting their goods from completion of the product to the wholesale market.

The study raises the question of whether distribution costs too much. It provides only a partial answer, however.

"In its broadest sense, the question defies answer, since a determination of whether any cost is 'too much' ultimately rests on an assessment of the value of the purpose for which the cost was incurred-which is, of course, a matter of individual judgment and quite beyond the terms of this study.

"In a narrower sense, however, it can be argued that distribution does cost too much in that it is conducted less efficiently than any thoughtful observer would wish."

Roll of Tape, Hair and Hood Introduced Into Evidence

Crown Attorney Glenn Deline called three witnesses yesterday in his case to prove a link between the defendants and the Food City store robbery last Sept. 1.

Charged with conspiracy to commit robbery and robbery with violence are Larry Wayne Morrison and Lawrence Schlaer. Victim in the $10,000 robbery was store manager Samuel Mulholland.

Called to the stand by the crown was Mrs. Anne Yearwood, a sales clerk at Duff's drug store. She testified that on Sept. 1, the day of the robbery, she sold two rolls of surgical tape of one inch and two inch widths, and identified the accused, Morrison, as the purchaser.

Exhibits produced by the crown (two rolls of surgical tape) were pronounced by the witness to be similar to the ones she said she sold to the accused.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Robert Carter, the witness admitted she had been shown a picture of the accused by the police.

Later on in the day's testimony Constable Lawrence Smith, identification officer for the provincial police, testified that a fingerprint found on a cover from a roll of tape at the scene of the crime were those of Morrison.

The cover had earlier been reported similar to the one Morrison was identified as buying at Duff's Drugs.

However, upon cross examination by defence counsel, Constable Smith told the court that the fingerprint found on the roll was only part of a finger and that it could have belonged to others.

Asking Constable Smith whether it was admissible on evidence on that basis the constable answered negatively.

The accused were also identified as being at the Wayside Inn at Shannonville different times during the day of the robbery Angelo Pascuillo who was the assistant manager at the inn last September, testified that he saw Morrison and Schlaer at the inn around 5 p.m. and also at 11.30 p.m. the evening of Sept. 1.

During cross examination the witness was asked if he had ever attended a police line-up to identify the accused out of a group and answered "no." Mr. Pascuillo admitted he had been shown pictures of the accused on two different occasions but he could not remember when.

He also admitted he could have seen the accused in court and described them from that. He said he could not name any of the other customers at the Inn that night.

Other witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Buick, also testified that they saw Morrison at the Inn on Sept. 1.

Experts were called by the crown to testify on the handwriting on the two $20 bills taken from Morrison on the occasion of his arrest and on the materials found at the scene of the crime.

Documents' expert Norman Duxbury said there was a similarity between the numerals 30 on one $20 bill and the script of Food City's assistant head cashier, June Finkle.

The other $20 bill with initials on it, he testified, held similarities to the script of Mr. Mulholland.

The witness said, however, that he could not make a positive identification and that although the writing on the bills could have been made by the named persons he could not eliminate other people.

Mrs. Finkle had earlier identified the numerals 30 on the $20 as her own.

John Bordniek, biological chemist, was called by the crown to give testimony on the tape that was used to bind Mr. Mulholland and also testify on the hood that was found at the scene.

The tape, used for the crime Mr. Bordniek identified as being similar to the samples that the police purchased at Duff's Drugs. He also testified that a hair inside a black hood found at the scene had similar characteristics to Morrison's hair.

Answering questions posed by the defence Mr. Bordniek said the hair could not be positively identified as Morrison's. Neither could the tape be positively identified as coming from Duff's Drugs by Mr. Bordniek.

House Assured Tax Bill Dead

which it does not intend to proceed.

"The government of the day can adjudge what is and what is not a matter of confidence," the prime minister said. It rested with a government "to decide which matters it shall treat as vital."

He said many of the authorities he was quoting supported these arguments and said they held particularly true when a government is in a minority position.

He quoted Dr. Eugene Forsey, a recognized Canadian constitutional authority, as writing:

"We shall have to get rid of the notion that every defeat in the House means a fresh election."

As Mr. Pearson defended the government's decision not to resign but to seek a confidence vote an opposition MP interjected:

"You make up the rules as you go along."

Mr. Pearson said Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) — seated across the chamber — agreed with Dr. Forsey.

Oposition Leader Stanfield speaking after Mr. Pearson said his Progressive Conservatives still contend the Liberal government has no right to do business in Parliament.

But he said he is willing to get on with the government's confidence motion and let Canadian voters sooner or later rule who has been right during this week's parliamentary crisis.

"The prime minister," Mr. Stanfield said, "has been completely unable to cite any precedent in which a government in the parliamentary system suffered such a crushing defeat on a matter of fundamental government policy as this government did Monday and yet attempt to continue to do business in the House of Commons."

Mr. Pearson had taken two postures—one for television cameras and another in the Commons itself.

He was saying outside the chamber that the Opposition Leader would risk responsibility for holding up the conduct of national affairs if he continued to oppose the government's right to bring its motion to debate.

"What is my right honorable friend challenging me to do? Obstruct the business of the House?"

Mr. Stanfield said everyone in the Commons voted against the bill Monday except the Liberals.

"If any member of that—government—front bench, including the right honorable prime minister, had been asked beforehand whether that vote was one of confidence, every one would have said without hesitation: 'Certainly it was.'

"Not only did they believe that before the vote was taken, but you could see it in their face afterward that they knew it was a vote of confidence."

The prime minister had been giving the impression that it was a snap vote, taken without warning.

Yet the tax measure had been opposed in the budget debate before Christmas, it had been opposed on second reading debate and in committee study.

The bill had been dealt with Monday only because Government House Leader MacEachen had said the Commons could not get to supplementary spending estimates until the tax bill was passed.

Spare the Rare

LONDON (AP) — The drooping saxifrage, spiked speedwell, bristle fern, teesdale sandwort, monkey orchid and 10 other plants have a special friend in Parliament. Conservative member Peter Mills, a Devonshire farmer, introduced a bill providing a three-months jail term for picking any of these plants he described as rare. Some not so rare, such as stinking hellbore, bloody cranesbill, fritillary and 22 others could be picked but not sold.

FROSTED EYE — Cover girl actress Willi Koopman illustrates the frosty finish which makes the eyes your first-to-notice feature.

Play It Cool with Frosted Cosmetics

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

Introducing the "Frosted Eye" — the latest beauty innovation. This exciting trend predicts white eye make-up as a triple threat cosmetic — underbase, liner and fill-in color. The technique is based on the artist's rule that white expands, highlights and attracts. Therefore with some professional brush and stroke pointers such "eye-lusion" helps orbs appear larger, wider or deeper set. Cover girl-actress, Willi Koopman, illustrates the frosty finish which makes the eyes your first-to-notice feature.

Begin your make-up maneuvers by smoothing bisque tone shadow across the lid, extending color to the brow. Usually the area from the fold of the lid to just under brow bone is slightly full. Reduce such puffiness with a blend of beige-brow shadow; soften with fingertip. Now, apply brown liner on upper lashes, keeping line slender. Remember, the wider the liner the smaller the eye appears. Lift the line at the outer corner, and fill-in this section with white. Repeat on lower lid, and firm-set with a puff of translucent powder.

Take time to study the effect you're achieving. Notice how white shadow along upper lashes eliminates a heavy, artificial look and allows flecks of light to show through. Also, see how white next to brow removes the natural shadow line and helps lift the arch. Encouraged by the results, progress to the next step. As Willi, seen in the Universal-TV film, "The Crooked Man," demonstrates, mascara lashes; then speckle them with a lighter, luminescent coating. The deeper color extends length of hairs, while the hit-and-miss application of the shimmer shade sparkles the iris and provides a wide-eyed look that lets you play it cool and complimented.

Girl Abused by Father Wants Uncle to Give Her in Marriage

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I'm 19; engaged to be married. My father treats me like dirt and says things to me when he's drunk. He say he won't pay a cent for my wedding because I'm nothing.

I've been taking care of this house for two years since my mother's death. He beats me and sends me to bed. He stays up and talks to my boy friend till he's sober. My boy friend has nearly hit him so many times but I have to step in.

I can't go on any more. I love my uncle more than him. Can I ask my uncle to walk me up the aisle? — Troubled

Dear Troubled: You may indeed. But I'm thinking your dad may relent when he sees that the wedding will go on without him anyway.

Two years ago he suffered the great shock of losing your mother. The alcohol, the insults, suggest to me that he is taking out his deep sense of loss on you. He doubtless also resents the fact that you will leave him too. Pity he would not think about making you enjoy being around.

Try talking this all over with that uncle you love, before taking unfriendly action. Your star is in the ascendant; your father's is going down.

• • •

Dear Doris: I know several middle-aged wheel chair people who would like very much to correspond with pen pals all over the world. (For a couple of persons, I shall write what they dictate, since they are unable to write!) — Penholder

Dear Penholder: Bless you! If that isn't selfless service I don't know what is! Our pen pal list supplies several addresses of clubs which regularly link up correspondents from many countries. I'm sending it.

Would one of those wheel chair pals consider talking to a tape recorder? There's a good international-type club which keeps the tapes flying all over the place. You can say a lot on a tape.

Dear Doris: My problem is body hair. I am 22, hold a good job, am very pretty. You would think that I would be very confident, but I am so self-conscious that my nerves are starting to bother me. I look just great in a bathing suit except for my hairy legs. Sure, I can shave them, but it grows back in so fast and I have shaved them so much that it's coarse and dark. I am afraid to do it any more in case it gets worse.

My boy friend kids me about our honeymoon, and how lucky he is to have such a wonderful girl with a beautiful body on top of it all. If he only knew what an ugly beautiful body I had. I feel like a porcupine and I hate the thought of him touching me. I know if he really loves me, which he does, he won't care but I care and I won't feel at ease.

This thing has really been bothering me lately, and it's not the type of problem that you can discuss with others, which is the reason why I'm writing to you Is there anything at all that can be done about it? — Troubled No. 2.

Dear Troubled No. 2: There is not the remotest connection between a growth of body hair and any lack of femininity. Many, many women keep this secret well and so can you. But you do share it with your husband and with your skin specialist — who can help you cope with it.

Electrolysis might well be the answer for you. But good commercial hair removers do a good job too. Don't reject the problem; face it. He loves you for your personality.

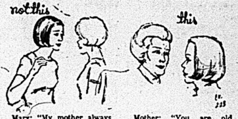
Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Doris can tell you how it's done in Canada.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mary: "My mother always wants to know what I'm doing and when I'll be home. I'm grown up now and I think it's time for me to decide when to come home."

Mother: "You are old enough to set your own hours, but you should let us know where you are and when you will be home, in case we should need to contact you."

Parents are not being dictatorial when they expect to know the whereabout of all the family members, even though some of the members are grown children who are living at home.

Splendid Recipe for Fish and Chips

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Please give recipe for batter for fish to deep fry. — Jeanine B.

QUESTION: My copy of your fish and chip column is frayed. I'm sure my friends and other readers would like you to repeat it. I know I would. — Beth W.

ANSWER: I agree.

FISH AND CHIPS

(Repeated from Jan. 1965)

Cut fish into serving size pieces, ½" thick. Haddock is commonly used but halibut or cod could be used in this method. Thaw if frozen. Dry pieces of fish with clean tea towel. Dip in Batter: (sufficient for 2 lbs.) 1½ cups all-purpose flour, 1 tbsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 2 eggs, well beaten, 1 cup milk. Mix or sift dry ingredients. Add beaten eggs and milk and mix until smooth.

Dip serving-sized pieces of fish into batter, drain and fry 2 or 3 pieces at a time in cooking oil at 375 deg. Fahr. until golden brown, 4 to 7 min. Drain on paper towels and keep warm while remaining fish is fried.

NOTE: Oil has a high smoke point and does not fill the kitchen with smoke and may be cooled and strained and refrigerated for future frying.

POTATO CHIPS

(French Fried Potatoes)

Peel and wash potatoes. Cut into strips ¼" wide and ¼" thick. Soak in cold, salted water 30 min. to 1 hr. Heat oil to 390 deg. Fahr. (1" cube of day-old bread will brown in about 20 seconds.) Drain potatoes and dry them well. Using a deep frying basket, lower potatoes, about 1 cupful at a time, into hot oil at 380 deg. Fahr. until golden brown, 5 to 7 min. Drain on paper towel. Sprinkle with salt and serve very hot.

NOTE: The soaking brings out the starch in potatoes and produces puffier chips.

Use a deep saucepan with straight sides. An electric deep fat fryer is ideal. For a 3-qt. saucepan use 4 to 5 cups oil. The oil should be deep enough to cover food generously — but 3" must be left between the oil and the top of the pan to prevent bubbling over.

Turtle Neck Enhanced With Dinner Jacket

TORONTO CP — Wear a turtle neck for dinner Dad, but you will need a new dinner jacket over it.

Do not imagine a turtle looks good in the evening under an old graduation tuxedo. This was the word from Joe Sannuto, president of the Toronto Club of Clothing Designers at the final session of the Men's Clothing Manufacturers Association of Ontario seminar Tuesday.

Mr. Sannuto, a designer, said Lord Snowdon had the right idea when he wore his with a maroon velvet dinner jacket.

Mr. Sannuto and manufacturer Max Enkin described new styles they said would make most men's wardrobes obsolete.

Jackets will be slightly longer and more shaped, have more side vents and slightly wider lapels.

They will be styled in everything from one or two buttons to a modified double-breasted look not yet as wide as it was 20 years ago.

Secret of Contentment: Live A Day at A Time

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a teen-age girl who is searching for some of the answers to life's problems. Can you tell me why everyone wants the future to hurry up and get here? Why can't people enjoy today? The 10-year-olds want to be 13. The 13-year-olds want to be 16. The 16-year-olds want to be 21. Why is it that the age ahead always seems like the ideal age to be?

ANN LANDERS

I ran across a little poem that expresses this thought well. Here it is:

I plan for the future.
I yearn for the past.
And, meantime, the present
Is leaving me fast.

Will you please answer in the paper for the benefit of others who wonder about this, as I do? — CONTENT WITH TODAY.

DEAR CONTENT: The key to the answer is found in your signature. Because most people are not content with today, they look to tomorrow with the hope that it will offer something better. More often than not they are disappointed. The excitement of anticipation generally surpasses realization.

One of the secrets of a happy life is the ability to appreciate the joys and blessings of the present. While it is wise to plan for the future, we should make the most of each day as we live it and keep in mind that today was tomorrow, yesterday.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister and her husband needed a place to live. They have two children and are expecting a third. We rented them our small but lovely home. It was in perfect condition.

After four months they moved out and left 22 holes in the walls, a broken toilet, two broken windows, cigarette holes in the kitchen linoleum and garbage in the sink.

They refuse to fix anything because it is not their property — they paid rent. Why are relatives such slobs? Shall we sue? — INDIANA.

DEAR IN.: Strangers can be slobs, too, but it's worse when they are relatives. You should have had an agreement (in writing) that the renters would leave the house in first-class condition, as they found it.

Don't sue. It is messy, expensive and probably useless. Slobs are usually deadbeats as well.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the bride who decided to have three bridesmaids after having invited five girls to be in the wedding party reopened an old wound. Many years ago I was a bridesmaid who was lopped off and I never was able to forgive the girl.

Your advice was right. You told her it didn't make much difference how she worded it, that the friendship would never be the same. How come you are so smart about so many things, Ann? Have you learned from experience? — NO CHICKEN MYSELF.

DEAR CHICK: If I had experience in all the problems I deal with, I'd be in no shape to write a column. What you read here is the result of consultation and brainpicking. I am in constant communication with outstanding authorities in a variety of fields — and they make me look a lot smarter than I am.

TWEED — A winter wedding was solemnized recently in St. Edmund's Church, Stoco, when Colleen Loretta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Gabourie, of Stoco, became the bride of Clair Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rivers of Tweed. Father J. Groenewegen was the officiating clergyman.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. Lawrence LeSage, and the soloist was Mrs. Fergus Cassidy.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of white embossed velvet, with circular train and long sleeves. A matching velvet bow secured her shoulder-length veil. She carried a white prayer book adorned with red roses, streamers and rosebuds.

Miss Sharon Rivers, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a full length gown of red silk brocade and carried white 'mums centred with red roses. Mrs. Joseph Gabourie, sister-in-law of the bride, and Miss Judy Semke, were bridesmaids. Their gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor.

Gerald McWilliams was groomsman, and the guests were ushered by Joseph Gabourie and Francis Rivers.

At the reception following in St. Carthagh's Hall, Tweed, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a blue printed jersey dress. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who chose a green suit with mink collar.

For the wedding trip to Quebec ,the bride chose a rust colored suit and hat, with brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Rivers have taken up residence at 30 Penrose Road, Toronto.

Quebec to Establish Broadcasting System Under 1945 Law

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hippies, broadcasting, and Maritime political union were among topics in Canadian legislatures Thursday.

Premier Daniel Johnson told the Quebec legislature his Union Nationale government has decided to apply a 1945 provincial law to establish and operate a broadcasting system to be called Radio-Quebec.

Radio-Quebec would begin by producing programs for educational radio and television.

Nova Scotia announced legislation to aid farmers, extend government control over illegal work stoppages, upgrade facilities for French teaching and strengthen consumer protection.

The Prince Edward Island legislature adjourned until Tuesday after reading of the throne speech, which forecast legislation to establish a secretariat to encourage co-operation of the four Atlantic provinces in matters of mutual concern.

Dan Campbell, British Columbia's minister of welfare and municipal affairs, warned hippies and other potential welfare applicants to reconsider plans to move to B.C.

New "Wonder Drug" Prevents Apple Drop

OTTAWA — Alar, a growth suppressing chemical that has been used on ornamental plants, has been cleared for use on apple trees where it offers an impressive list of benefits for growers.

Extensive testing by CDA scientists has shown that Alar, or B-Nine (succinic acid 2, 2 - dimethylhydrazide), when applied to the trees shortly after bloom will not only reduce tree shoot growth but will, among other things, prevent apples from dropping prior to harvest and will improve firmness, color and storage life of the fruit.

"Alar could become a very important aid in apple growing," observes Dr. N. E. Looney of the CDA's Research Station at Summerland, B.C., where the chemical has been used experimentally for the past few years on many apple varieties including McIntosh, Spartan, Delicious, Golden Delicious and Winesap.

His view is shared by researchers R. L. Granger and P. O. Roy of the department's Research Station at St. Jean, Que., who have tested Alar on Cortland, Melba and a number of other varieties.

Dr. Looney reports that experimental work also has pointed up other benefits from the use of Alar in orchards — The chemical reduces fruit size and this effect increases with heavier dosages. This characteristic makes the chemical especially useful for young, vigorous Spartan and McIntosh trees whose fruit often creates a storage and marketing problem.

Application of Alar stimulates fruit bud formation and in many of the tests this led to bigger crops the next year.

In their work with Cortland apples, researchers Granger and Roy found that Alar, when applied to the trees in mid - July, resulted in a dramatic reduction in scalding when apples of this variety were stored. Scalding is even more extensive with Cortlands when they are stored along with McIntosh apples, as they were in an experiment at St. Jean when they were kept for 169 days in a controlled atmosphere room. Only six per cent of the Alar - treated apples showed traces of scald, while 85 per cent of the untreated apples of this variety suffered severe scalding.

Competition Night at Camera Club

It was competition night at the Belleville Camera Club regular meeting on Wednesday when shutter enthusiasts brought out their favorite prints and color slides for judging. Since the subject matter was open, there was a wide variety of exciting themes with pictures showing a high degree of imagination and skill.

In the black and white print competition, first and second awards went to Don Askett with Mike Williams taking third place. John Lewis took first prize in the color slide awards and Mike Williams carried off second and third.

Following the competition, Jack Leyton showed a number of his color slides of Fundy National Park along with other maritime scenes, and John Lewis projected his shots of Expo which were appreciated for their unusual viewpoint and technique.

Members were reminded that the next meeting is the deadline for entries in the "Centennial" competition and the meeting adjourned to enjoy refreshments.

REPORTS CASUALTIES

JERUSALEM (AP) — Defence Minister Moshe Dyan reported that 21 Israeli security troops were killed and 76 wounded by Arab saboteurs since the June 5-10 war. He said Israeli security forces in the same period killed 45 saboteurs, wounded 35 and detained 1,250.

U.S. May Call Up 50,000 Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 50,000 national guardsmen and marine reserves would be called up under a plan tentatively proposed by the U.S. joint chiefs of staff to alleviate a shortage in home forces manpower caused by the Vietnam war.

But in sketching details of the plan, sources said Thursday night it is only one of a number of options being considered to reinforce U.S.-based forces depleted by the war's needs for troops.

The sources said the proposal—which also calls for putting on alert another 130,000 or so reservists for possible later callup—may differ from proposals by the army and the other services for solving the problem.

National guard sources said they anticipated a call-up of up to 90,000 guardsmen and reservists, but other sources discounted such an estimate as premature.

Word of the proposal leaked out as the chairman, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, arrived in Vietnam for a visit expected to last several days.

Wheeler told reporters the trip was to get first-hand information on the war's course—information that presumably would include future troop requirements.

President Johnson has said the United States will raise its troop ceiling, now set for 525,000 by July 1, if a larger force is needed.

A number of ranking members of congressional committees dealing with military affairs have recently bemoaned what they say is a reduction to dangerously low levels of forces based in the United States.

Such forces, ostensibly for use in emergencies that might arise around the world, were further reduced by last week's presidential order sending 10,500 paratroops and marines to Vietnam.

Fair Board Revises Prize List

MARMORA — The Women's Committee was in attendance at the annual meeting of Marmora Agricultural Society Wednesday in the Town Hall with suggestions for improvements in the prize list.

The committee will make a study of improvements for the Labor Day fair and bring its report to the next Society meeting.

With the formation of a horticultural society in the community, an added interest is expected to be shown in plant and flower exhibits.

The art display at last year's fair was received with enthusiasm and this year it is planned to have paintings shown by those taking the course at night school.

A revision will also be made in the home baking, canning and fancy work entries and it is hoped that a pamphlet outlining these sections of the prize list can be distributed to all organizations by May.

Officers elected for 1968 were: president, William Doyle; vice-presidents, Dan Bateman and Bob Bird; secretary-treasurer, Tom Bateman; delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Fair Board, Bob Bird and Sam Davidson.

Scouts, Cubs Enjoy Banquets With Fathers

PICTON (STAFF) — Scouts and Cubs in Picton last night turned out in force with their fathers to attend two Father and Son banquets. At St. Andrews' Presbyterian Church 2nd Picton were turned out over 90 strong and at Picton United Church, about 140 were present.

District Commissioner for Scouting in Prince Edward County attended both banquets as guest speaker and provided a most interesting insight into the World Jamboree trip taken by Quinte area Scouts last summer. Using color slides to illustrate his talk he traced the journey from beginning to end showing highlights and amusing occurrences to delight both of his audiences.

At St. Andrews Presbyterian Church badges and stars were presented by Scout Master Ronald Scott. A presentation was made also to Mrs. McNamee, Akela, when she was given a beautiful floral spray by David Matthews on behalf of the Cubs and Scouts. Head table guests president of the Prince Edward Robert Jones of St. Andrews' Church, District Commissioner for Scouting in Prince Edward chairman for the banquet, William Strachan, who introduced Mr. and Mrs. David Campbell as Mr. and Mrs. Scouting in Prince Edward County. "Their combined total service in Scouting," he said, "totalled 50 years."

At 3rd Picton banquet at the United Church a large crowd was present to witness some fine skits put on by the boys. Movies were shown as well as Mr. Webb's slides. Jim Baker showed films of the Canadian Jamboree held in Saskatchewan this summer. Toasts were made to the Queen, to Baden-Powell, to the fathers and to the sons. Victor Lord, on behalf of the Scout council extended greetings and told of forthcoming plans for the summer. It was announced that the Canadian Jamboree this year would be held in the Yukon.

Two Games to Go

Trenton Curlers Still Tied for Lead in Schoolboy Tournament

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (CP) — Manitoba and Ontario curlers missed opportunities to snare the lead in the Canadian schoolboy curling championships here Thursday, but both were victims of upstarts from the Atlantic provinces.

BILL HOPE
. . . Team Skip

A fired-up Newfoundland foursome edged Manitoba 8-7 in the eighth round of the 11-team event. Then New Brunswick routed Ontario and Manitoba scored a come-from-behind effort over Saskatchewan.

The results left Ontario, skipped by Bill Hope of Trenton, in a three-way tie for first with Saskatchewan, skipped by Rick Folk of Saskatoon and a Winnipeg rink skipped by Ken Clapham, representing Manitoba. Each has a 6-2, won-loss record.

Northern Ontario's Allan Viehbeck of Fort Frances and defending champion Alberta's Ron Kelly of Calgary follow with 5-2 records while Quebec skip Doug Johnston of Schfferville is next with a 5-4 mark.

Tied in seventh place are New Brunswick's Bruce Forster of Moncton and Nova Scotia's Robert Little of Halifax with 4-4 records. Newfoundland skip Marty Dalton of St. John's is in ninth spot at 2-6.

DENNIS GARDINER
. . . Newcomer

Mark Ottem and his Kamloops team-mates from British Columbia are 1-7 and Prince Edward Island's Peter Johnston of Charlottetown is 1-8.

Starting the final day of activity at 10 a.m. EST today, it was New Brunswick vs Northern Ontario, Nova Scotia vs Saskatchewan, Alberta vs Newfoundland, Quebec vs British Columbia, Ontario vs Manitoba. Bye: Prince Edward Island.

Thursday's results were:

Seventh round: Nova Scotia beat British Columbia 8-6, New Brunswick defeated Newfoundland 10-7, Saskatchewan downed Prince Edward Island 11-3, Ontario defeated Northern Ontario in an extra end 10-9, and Manitoba defeated Quebec 9-4. Alberta had a bye.

Eighth round: Newfoundland nipped Manitoba 8-7 in an extra end. Ontario defeated Prince Edward Island 10-4. Quebec downed Nova Scotia 10-8, Alberta defeated British Columbia 12-6, and Saskatchewan bombed New Brunswick 13-3. Northern Ontario had a bye.

Ninth round: Alberta beat Quebec 14-8, Manitoba downed Saskatchewan 12-9 in an extra end. New Brunswick upset Ontario 13-6. Northern Ontario defeated Prince Edward Island 8-7, and Nova Scotia beat Newfoundland 12-6. British Columbia had a bye.

BRUCE LORD
. . . Third Rock

Forster said he felt "great" after upsetting the strong Ontario team. He said the rink played well despite blisters from sweeping.

Dalton made a spectacular shot by drawing around two guards in the final end to force an extra frame against Manitoba and then went on to win when Clapham missed a takeout.

Sweeping has taken its toll with Newfoundland second Doug Ryan sitting on the sidelines with a bandaged hand. He said a knuckle has stiffened and callouses have appeared.

"If I can close my hand tomorrow I'll play," he said Thursday.

Nova Scotia and Northern Ontario also had to employ relief men from Lakehead curling teams because of a headache or sore hands.

In the event a team member is sick or is unable to perform efficiently, a relief man may be picked up for sweeping only.

Ontario had to steal one in an extra end in the seventh round to defeat Northern Ontario 10-9. Hope brought his team from behind in the 10th end by taking advantage of misses by Viehbeck and Bob Booren, who throw last rocks for Northern Ontario.

Booren missed with his last rock in attempting to take out a button-hugging Ontario stone, hitting a guard.

Miller Takes Cut

Baseball Players in Limelight

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball life begins at 40 this season for Elroy Face and Stu Miller, but neither veteran relief pitcher was feeling too chipper today.

Face, longtime Pittsburgh bullpen ace, was grounded Thursday by an antibiotics reaction that has bugged him since the Pirates opened their spring camp at Fort Myers, Fla., four days ago.

Miller, meanwhile, signed his 1968 contract with Baltimore Orioles— and took a reported $5,000 pay cut from his $40,000-plus salary of last season.

Jim Lonborg, hard-luck pitching ace of Boston's American League champion Red Sox, also received a setback when it was determined he isn't recovering from recent knee surgery as quickly as had been expected. The Cy Young Award winner underwent an operation last Dec. 27 to repair torn knee ligaments suffered in a skiing mishap.

Face, who celebrated his 40th birthday two days ago, did some running at the Pirates' base but was unable to throw because of a swollen right hand. Doctors believe the swelling was caused by a combination of antibiotics and a bad sunburn.

Miller, also 40, and beginning his 17th major league campaign, would like to forget his 16th. He was 3-10, with eight saves, last year as the Orioles failed to defend their title.

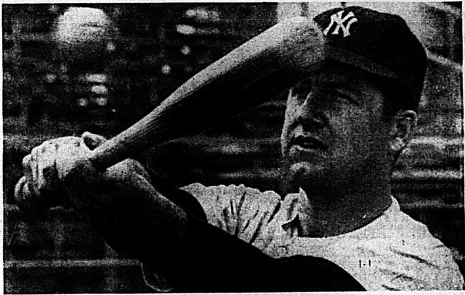
Lonborg had hoped to have a long cast on his leg replaced by a smaller one this week. But Dr. John J. McGillicuddy decided the long cast still was needed.

"The doctor wasn't too happy with my knee's healing," said the 24-year-old right-hander. "I guess it means a longer wait."

The Red Sox announced the signing of five 1967 standouts—infielders George Scott, Rico Petrocelli, Jerry Adair and Dalton Jones, and relief pitcher John Wyatt.

At Tampa, Fla., however, Cincinnati Reds batterymen began workouts with four starting pitchers—Jim Maloney, Milt Pappas, Mel Queen and Gary Nolan—among the missing.

Other signees included infielder Tony Perez, Reds; pitcher Dick Farrell, Philadelphia Phillies, infielder Felix Millan, Atlanta Braves; infielder Tim Cullen, Chicago White Sox, and pitcher Jim Ollum, Minnesota Twins.



New York catcher Jake Gibbs, was sharpening his batting eye as he hit to teammates in a pepper game after the Yankees opened their spring baseball training camp for pitchers and catchers at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Tuesday.

Committees to Be Named

AFL, NFL Merger Possible

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle is expected to name committees to speed the actual merger of the American and National Football Leagues in 1970 at today's final sessions of the annual meetings of the two Leagues.

The committees are to consider such factors as television, playing rules, schedule, realignment, league organization, post season games and sites.

Both leagues have been concerned largely with internal matters in their meetings but the common problems of the ultimate merger must be resolved within the next two years.

Art Modell, president of the NFL and Cleveland Browns' owner, undoubtedly will be named to another term by the owners. Modell said Thursday he expected the NFL to continue the four divisional setup in 1968 and 1969. However, the actual structure of the league in '69 still has to be determined.

In his role as owner of the Cleveland Browns, Modell said he expected to meet with Leroy Kelly, his unsigned running back, and hoped to sign him next week. Kelly played out his option last season and thus became free to sign with any club.

Kelly was getting about $18,000 under his 1966 contract. Although he gained over 1,000 yards in 1966, he was not satisfied with the contract offered. Instead of signing he decided to play out his option and took a 10-per cent cut.

Gambling on possible injury or an off season, Kelly came up with a superior effort and led the league in ground gaining.

"He gambled and won," said Modell. "He had a magnificent year. He is a fine boy. I know I will be fair and I think he'll be fair."

Curling Title Format Decided

MONTREAL (CP) — The format for playoffs if they become necessary at the world curling championship scheduled for the suburban Pointe Claire Arena March 20-23 was announced Thursday.

National champions from eight countries are competing. For once Canada will not be defending the world title. Last year, on his home ice at Perth, Scotland, Church Hay provided that country with its first-ever world title.

This year's competition sees the preliminary round-robin series start Wednesday, March 20 and end Friday afternoon. If there is no tie for the top three positions, the semi-final game will be played Friday evening. It will feature the second-and third-place teams.

The winner of that match will then go on to play the first place finishers on Saturday afternoon.

Surprise to Everyone

Pro Hockey A Hit in Return to Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Bill Putnam, president of the expansionist Philadelphia Flyers, said last summer that pro hockey would be a hit in its return to Philadelphia, many people, including the team's board chairman, scoffed.

They had just watched Philadelphia Spartans of the now-merged National Pro Soccer League struggle to scrape up 5,000 fans a game to watch that sport in the warm summer sun.

And they knew that historically, the backer of any expansion club in pro athletics has to have a pocketbook twice as big as his dreams.

But the Flyers surprised everyone except Putnam by rising to the top of the National Hockey League's Western Division, getting a hammerlock on that slot and then posting consistent attendance marks.

Ed Snider, the Flyers' board chairman, said he was surprised by the way Philadelphians took to the game. "I just thought it was going to take a lot longer to get to the point we've reached now," he said.

They are averaging more than 9,200 for each home game and selling out all 15,000 seats of the new Spectrum Sports Arena with regularity when the Flyers host an established NHL club.

"We have a good chance—if we keep going like we have since the first of the year—to end up in the black," said Snider—an uncommon feat for an expansion club in any sport. In this one, the new clubs—six of them—had to put up $2,000,000 each to join the elite.

The Flyers' attendance still doesn't approach the established clubs, such as Toronto, which consistently pulls in 15,900 fans, Chicago Black Hawks, who always sell out at 16,600, and the New York Rangers who average about 14,500.

The figure, however, does look good against some other expansion teams. Pittsburgh Penguins average about 7,100, Los Angeles Kings average 7,200 and Oakland Seals, 5,300, while the Minnesota North Stars—second place in the Western division—average 11,200.

One factor in increased attendance is the new arena which, despite recent roof troubles, has been drawing consistently higher attendance than the venerable Convention Hall.

Another factor, says Putnam, is the quality of the team. The Flyers have the best record against established NHL teams of any expansion club.

Boston Defeats Red Wings In Final Second of Squeaker

DETROIT (AP) — After 59 minutes and 59 seconds of their National Hockey League game against Boston Bruins Thursday night, it looked as if the floundering Detroit Red Wings had secured a tie.

One second later it was all over, the Bruins with a 3-2 victory and the puck sitting squarely in an unattended goal, slapped in by Johnny Bucyk.

Detroit netminder Roger Crozier was sitting squarely on the ice, 15 feet from the goal. Crozier had just finished making a valiant but vain attempt at playing his own defence with an effort to pick up a loose puck rebounding off the boards.

The Wings, winless in their last eight games including two ties, have won only three games in their last 22.

Wings' general manager Sid Abel said earlier this week he has been trying to make a trade in an effort to get his hapless team off the skids. Mentioned as trade bait have been such former untouchables as Norm Ullman, the No. 2 Red Wings' scorer with 27 goals, Bruce MacGregor and Paul Henderson.

The Bruins victory lifted them into third place in the NHL's Eastern Division, three points behind second-place Chicago.

The Bruins have also been having their troubles since they lost star defenceman Bobby Orr with a knee operation. Although Orr is out of the hospital, he is expected to be out of the lineup for the rest of the season.

Bruin John McKenzie bagged his 21st goal of the season when he tipped in a slap shot by team-mate Fred Stanfield at 7:33 of the first period.

Gordie Howe, the Wings' 39-year-old wonder, converted a pass from Alex Delvecchio later in the first period and again midway through the second frame to put the Wings ahead 2-1.

But the lead was shortlived as Phil Esposito tied up the contest 27 seconds later with a shot that went past Crozier.

The stage for the last-second finale was set when Crozier's defence left him to fend for himself on Don Awrey's pass-in. Crozier went for the rebounding puck himself, fell down and left an easy shot for Bucyk.

...Flyers, Canadiens Victorious

By GRAHAM COX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

As a junior, the big leaguers considered Andre Lacroix too small.

Now that he's in the National Hockey League, opposing coaches may find he's too much.

After ripping the American Hockey League scoring race apart, the 5-foot-8, 150-pounder has shown in his two games with Philadelphia Flyers he's not lost that scoring touch

The centre-ice star rapped in a goal and set up three others by linemate Leon Rochefort Thursday night as the Flyers clobbered Minnesota North Stars 7-2.

The 22-year-old native of Lauzon, Que., also scored in his first game up in Wednesday's 1-1 stalemate with Pittsburgh Penguins.

In only his second year of pro hockey, Lacroix, who performed in junior hockey with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, scored 41 goals and 45 assists with the Aces before being elevated by the NHL's Western Division leaders.

The win padded Philadelphia's division lead to five points over Minnesota.

Montreal Canadiens scored twice in the second period for a 2-1 win over St. Louis Blues to increase their Eastern Division lead while Boston Bruins climbed over New York Rangers into third place in the East behind Chicago Black Hawks by beating Detroit Red Wings 3-2.

The victory was the eighth in succession for the Canadiens, who have lost only once in 25 outings since Dec. 25 when they were last in the veteran division.

Other flyer scorers were Claude LaForge, Forbes Kennedy and Pat Hannigan.

Milan Marcetta scored twice and Bob McCord once for the North Stars who peppered Philadelphia goalie Doug Favell with 37 shots. Taking his worst beating of the year, Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago handled 38 shots.

Despite a low-scoring game, the Canadiens fired 36 shots at St. Louis goalie Glenn Hall while Rogatien Vachon, in the Montreal goal, was called on to handle just 17.

Gilles Tremblay and Jacques Lemaire tallied Montreal's second-period goals before rookie Craig Cameron blasted a screen shot through the legs of defenceman Jacques Laperriere to beat Vachon.

Montreal winger Claude Provost injured his leg in the first period and had to leave the game. Details of the injury were not immediately available.

Recalled from Minors

Lacroix Booming in Big League

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Andre Lacroix doesn't know if he's coming or going and says he couldn't care less.

The 22-year-old rookie was recalled from the minors by Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League Tuesday. He played and scored a goal in a 1-1 tie against Pittsburgh Penguins Wednesday, and contributed a goal and three assists Thursday night in a 7-3 victory over Minnesota North Stars.

His reward could be a plane ticket back to Quebec Aces.

Quebec has to have back at least two, if not all three, in its drive for a playoff spot. The Aces play Cleveland Barons tonight, so the Flyers will have to make a quick decision.

"If they send me to Quebec, it is because it will be better for me," said Lacroix, a 5-foot-8, 150-pounder, whose quick stick and speed ignited a dormant Philadelphia offence, when it needed it most.

"I want to help both teams. Quebec has a chance for the playoff. If the Flyers need me again I'll be happy to come back."

Lacroix is torn between Philadelphia and Quebec for another reason. He's the leading scorer in the AHL, with 86 points and is within striking distance of a new point record in the 30-year-old league. Twice this season he has scored four goals in a game.

If it was up to Leon Rochefort, Lacroix would stay.

Each time the 29-year-old Rochefort scored Thursday, Lacroix was credited with an assist.

Asked to explain how he felt about his second three-goal night of the season, Rochefort said:

"Like a pitcher who gets a no-hit, no-run game, a golfer after a hole-in-one."

Pinch Hitting

By Gary Alexander

Epitaphs seldom make pleasant reading.

Especially if the deceased was very much alive and showing signs of a healthy existance shortly before the "death."

If a coroner had to decide the cause in the case of the Belleville Mo-Hawks senior "A" hockey team, there is a grave danger his verdict might be suicide in the face of ill health.

On Tuesday, January 30, the Mo-Hawks nipped Kingston Frontenacs 3-2 here. It was their eighth consecutive win on home ice and their seventh victory in 10 starts. But it was to be their final victory of the year.

Three nights later they got a 1-1 tie in Barrie .That was their final point of the season — but at that point, with five games left to play and two of them at home, they were four points ahead of ninth-place Oakville and only a couple behind Barrie and Woodstock.

In short, the Mo-Hawks, after floundering near the cellar for most of the campaign, had sprung to life on December 15 and appeared ready for a strong schedule finish and a serious run at playoff honors.

On Sunday, February 4, nearly 2,500 fans watched the debut of Sunday hockey. The Mo-Hawks played well, as well as they had during their winning days, but lost an overtime decision to Guelph.

On the previous Wednesday they had suffered a tougher loss, that of left-winger Minnie Menard, the club's leading goal scorer, when the veteran was hit in the eye in an exhibition game in Napanee. Later the news came that Menard had lost the sight in the eye, ending a 19-year-career which started with Menard leaving home to play Junior "B" in Barrie at the age of 15.

It was a crippling blow to the club, but the Mo-Hawks were still in a position, with just one or two more wins and especially with one in Oakville on February 11, to wrap up that eighth spot.

Instead of responding to the challenge, the club reverted to its earlier inconsistent style of play. The goalies couldn't stop anything; the defence slipped; forwards couldn't score and were backchecking in a half-hearted manner. Coach Floyd Crawford tried everything possible to get his charges "up"; to get them to give that "little extra," that "second effort" needed so badly.

Their second consecutive home-ice loss, to Kingston, was followed with the big one, a 6-2 setback in Oakville, in which centre Hec Lalonde injured his arm. He dressed but did not play after that.

But the Mo-Hawks were getting help. The Oaks, too, couldn't win for losing and it appeared that the Mo-Hawks might back into that final berth.

On the final day of the 40-game schedule, the Oaks got the win they needed to tie the Mo-Hawks, forcing a sudden-death affair.

Neither team had been able to win away from home all season so rather than flip a coin to decide home ice, the club's agreed to play it in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens on Monday of this week.

Belleville should still have been favored for this game, having rested since Friday night while Oakville had played both Friday and Sunday.

Maybe the key came Sunday morning. After losing five games in a row and facing either a sudden-death game Monday or a playoff series starting later in the week, only three of the Mo-Hawks bothered attending a two-hour practice.

Crawford blasted his players — and rightly so — we feel but he never quit giving it everything he had. That's all he asked of players and management too, all season. Floyd never lost faith. Before leaving for Monday's game he told this writer: "They can do it and they will do it. They must have the pride to give until it hurts in a position like this, where the whole season depends on one game."

Oakville won 4-0 that night, scoring all the goals in the first period when the Mo-Hawks were reported to be "not very sharp."

True, luck was not with them but most athletes agree that you make your own luck.

What of next year?

New bodies are needed, that is obvious. At least two good defencemen are needed and have been since the club existed. Crawford's connections and efforts have been responsible for most of the players who have come — but he needs complete co-operation to do the job properly.

Contacted about future plans on Wednesday, general manager Bob Temple refused to make any statement at this time.

Tiger Cats Get New Coach

HAMILTON (CP) — A long wait ended Thursday for Joe Restic when he signed a four-year contract as head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

It started six years ago when he came to the Canadian Football League club as assistant coach with Ralph Sazio under Jim Trimble and it ended when Sazio moved up to the general manager's job and picked Restic as the man to lead the Grey Cup champion Ticats.

"We've worked closely together for six years and he knows the Canadian game and our personnel," said Sazio. "That's extremely important because it maintains continuity in our program."

Restic, 40, watched a lot of shuffling in his six years with Hamilton, but this is his first big move within the club. When Trimble left in 1963, Sazio took over as head coach.

Restic turned down numerous head coaching offers from other CFL clubs and decided to stick with Sazio and the Ticats. Then, this year, Jake Gaudaur gave up his job as general manager and president of the Eastern Conference club and Sazio moved up.

Doctors Tour Hospital

PICTON (Staff) — Three representatives of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons in Toronto were in Picton for two days. Arriving Tuesday they were touring the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital — part of a program for the assessment of medical services, in hospitals throughout Ontario.

The three doctors, all from Hamilton are Dr. W. R. McMillan, Dr. W. J. Walsh, and Dr. W. H. Barnes. Mr. William Cook, administrator of the county hospital, said Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital was selected along with a number of other hospitals in the province, for the visit.

To Your Good Health

Why Emotions Cause Tears Not Known

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you tell me why people cry? I know it is all emotional, but what is the physical reason for shedding tears?—D. DeM.

I'll give you a "somewhat" answer.

Man is one of the few animals that cries.

Tears, of course, are very useful, and are produced by the lacrimal (tear) glands. A slight flow of moisture keeps the eye-balls moist. If you get an irritant in your eye (soap, pollen, dust) an increased flow of tears is a protective and automatic means of washing out the irritant.

Finally, emotions can cause tears — joy, grief, tenderness, sympathy. Exactly why our nervous system reacts in this way is the part of the question I cannot answer.

We do know, however, that severing a certain nerve in the face will stop tear production. This has been demonstrated experimentally. I don't know, but presume that accidental cutting of the nerve perhaps gave someone a clue to this fact in the first place.

Babies cry — their only effective means of vocal expression. They may be in pain, hungry, lonesome or just plain mad. Sometimes there are tears, sometimes not. Maybe you've heard and seen an outraged but dry-eyed infant bellowing.

Tears — or some of them — normally are disposed of via ducts at the corner near the nose, which carry tears into the nose to drain away. If when you're having a good wholesome cry, the ducts can't keep up, then tears run out over your cheeks.

Anyway, the tears draining into the nose are the reason why, after a cry, you feel impelled to blow your nose—and if the ducts are plugged or are full, as is not unusual, the blowing may send a few tears rolling out of the eyes.

But basically, tears are a mildly antiseptic, gentle lubricant and cleansing agent, consisting of water, nitrogen, sugar, potassium, salt and a trace of mucus.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Have you any information on chronic sore throat and infected sinus? Can it cause deafness? — Mrs. J. V.

Yes, if such chronic infections persist they carry a threat of spreading to the delicate structures of the ear and can impair hearing. They aren't always easy to subdue, but that doesn't mean give up trying. It means you should keep up the battle.

So far as the sinuses are concerned, you will find some helpful information in return for 30 cents in coin, plus a self-addressed, un-stamped envelope and 6 cents for postage. Send requests to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you give me some information about Cesarean births? How many are safe? Is it possible to have a normal birth after a Caesarean delivery?—E. V.

There are now cases on record of a woman having something like a dozen Caesarean deliveries, and a great many examples of women having several.

Sometimes a normal delivery is possible later after having had a Caesarean, but it depends on the need for having the Caesarean. If the pelvic structure, for example, is too small for a safe normal birth, that same situation will demand Caesarean section with subsequent births.

• • •

Note to Mrs. McD.: I don't know why salted pumpkin seeds (a delicacy to many people) should harm your grandson, or harm anyone with the exception of those individuals who, because of diverticulosis or other intestinal problem, might find the husks irritating.

Sunday Afternoon

Teachers, Students Compete

Teachers and students battle Sunday afternoon at the arena in a hockey game that will draw competitors from all the schools in the area.

The greatest number of teachers will come from Moira and Quinte. Teachers from Moira include Paul Henderson, Dave Snedden, Dave Bell, Gord McGaughey, and Jim Robertson. From Quinte come Grant Collet, Duffy Follwell, Casey Soden, Jack Sisson and Murray Bradson.

Other teachers include Leo Holland and Doug Irvine of Centennial, Father Gazeley of Nicholson, Hyalie Brant of OSD, Dave Talbot of BCI, and Ray Manbert of Albert College.

Convention Accommodation Booked

A campaign begun several weeks ago reaches its climax this week. George Alton, 279 North Front Street, has been a busy man directing a group of volunteer workers who have been finding accommodations for upward of two hundred delegates arriving in Belleville Friday. The occasion is a three-day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses being held in the Moira Secondary School.

'More than five hundred are expected to attend the gathering, but for the most part only those from the more distant centres, such as Peterborough and Bancroft will require rooms," Mr. Alton explained.

"Of course, we have booked accommodations in hotels and motels for some; however, for the many family groups who are coming, accommodations in private homes are much preferred.

By inquiring of members of the Belleville Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses as well as other individuals who have opened their homes on such occasions in the past, we have been able to find all the accommodations needed at a reasonable cost," Mr. Alton said.

"Provision of rooms in private homes, helps cut expenses and also affords pleasant occasions for making friendly acquaintance with people in other towns," Mr. Alton said.

Parks Board Will Take Part

The city parks board will again participate in the Belleville Horticultural Show to be held this year on June 29 at the Centennial Secondary School.

At last year's show there were 700 flower exhibits and the junior park display sponsored by the parks board was one of the main attractions for the 400 visitors, which took in the show.

Wednesday at their monthly meeting members of the parks board voted to again take part in the rose show, with parks board director L. E. Syer being authorized to prepare the display.

Although the city now owns the Salvation Army Citadel property on Pinnacle street, the building will not be available for intended recreational purposes for another year.

Wednesday the parks board was told that the Salvation Army will continue to occupy the Citadel until January 1, 1969 and that the building will not be available for recreational purposes until after that date.

The lease agreement for the Cannifton Road hydro property proposed for park use in the riverside park development in that area will be sent on to city council for approval. The lease of the hydro property would be for a five-year period.

New Beacon at Point Petre

PICTON (Staff) — Point Petre, the most southerly point in Prince Edward County, shoves it's long arm well out into Lake Ontario. Great Lake shipping passes very close past this point, and according to records (dated as far back as 1879) two thirds or more of the early shipwrecks which occurred on Lake Ontario took place between Point Petre and the Main Duck Islands.

The Point Petre light went up in 1833, a 60-foot tower constructed of mortar and stone. It still stands today, and is operational, but like many other things in this generation it is to be replaced by more modern equipment. A new tower containing 10 tons of steel and faced with concrete has been erected only a short distance from the old historic lighthouse.

The new light, which will be put in place at the top of the structure, before navigation opens this spring, will be a modern DCB10 revolving light and will operate much the same as an airport beacon, sweeping the sky.

A new fog horn, operated electrically, will also be installed and a radio beacon will send out signals for a period of 60 seconds every six minutes to warn ships of the dangerous - shallows that lie of shore.

The first lighthouse keeper at Point Petre was Anson Palen, today it is under the capable management of Charles Newman, along with an assistant, Leonard Goodmurphy. There are two houses adjacent to the lighthouse and they are occupied year round. Mr. Newman said that when the new light goes into operation the station will be manned by three men. In case of an emergency such as a power failure a standby diesel motor has been installed in the "watch room," a separate building which houses the operational equipment, and is located near the new light. The 60-foot tower which is only 4 feet 6 inches wide at the base and will permit a man to climb the ladder inside the tower, to attend the light, was erected by Ford Construction Company of Prescott, Ontario. It is expected the new light will be operational in time for the opening of the navigation season, which usually is some time late in March.

Toronto's Casa Loma Regaining Its Beauty

TORONTO (CP) — Under an idea taking shape a year late, Toronto's Casa Loma, the turreted mansion built by the late Sir Henry Pellatt, is reclaiming some of the beauty and magnificence of former years.

The West End Kiwanis Club, which has operated the castle since 1937, made plans late last year to refurbish it as a centennial project.

Because the service club's funds go to charitable organizations, it turned to the public for help. Now gifts are starting to arrive.

One of the most exquisite items received so far is a hand-carved four-poster bed from the 16th century beneath whose tapestried canopy Marie Antoinette is said to have slept.

Built in 1911, the castle went on sale in the early 1920s when Sir Henry was nearing bankruptcy trying to keep up the payments on it.

The furnishings were auctioned in 1924, and a group of New York investors bought the building in 1927–for conversion into an exclusive apartment-hotel. The group went bankrupt after a year of trying to make a success of the building.

The Kiwanis Club for years has been trying to refurnish the castle's 98 rooms, and its attempts have been stimulated by the centennial-project idea. Fifty pieces of furniture are being refurbished, the hand-carved panels in the massive Oak Room have been restored and Flemish-design brass chandeliers and wall sconces have been acquired for the library.

Experience Changes Brain

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Quite a few readers have written in to ask where I got my information in a recent paragraph I devoted to "intelligence." I said that we now know that intelligence is not wholly fixed at birth, and perhaps as much as 30 or 40 per cent of it is determined by environmental factors.

There are many converging avenues of research all leading to this same conclusion. Psychologists, educators, neurologists and biologists have demonstrated amply that the brain has an enormous potential that can either be stifled or stimulated by external influences, especially in the early years of the child.

Dr. Ralph W. Gerard, one of the world's foremost authorities on brain processes has stated that there is "unequivocal evidence" that experience produces "material changes" in the brain itself. "A rich environment in infancy," he says, "can actually thicken the brain cortex. With altered brains goes altered behavior and learning."

Environment, indeed, produces a significant change even after the age of six, during the school years. A fascinating experiment of this sort is reported in the current issue of Trans-action, that admirable new journal of the social and behavioral sciences.

Prof. George W. Albee of Western Reserve, tells of a recent study involving teachers, children and intelligence. "At the beginning of the school year," he writes, "intelligence tests were given to children in a city school of 18 classrooms three at each grade level, from first to sixth."

By pre-arranged plan, he explains, the teachers were told that the tests measured potential for "intellectual blooming." One child in five was chosen at random in each classroom, and was said to have scored high on the test. The teacher was told that this child would probably show marked intellectual improvement within a few months.

"Eight months later," reports Professor Albee, "another intelligence test was given. The specially-identified child in the first and second grades had made dramatic improvements. In the first grade, the average gain was more than 15 points: in the second grade, more than 10 points. . .The teachers had behaved in such a way toward these young children, who were designated as special, as to elicit more of their basic potential."

Mind you, all these "special" children had been randomly chosen for identification; it was the way they were treated that made them respond with more potential, and thus raised their "intelligence" level. It is impossible to separate the emotional atmosphere from the performance of the mind.

Shepherds and Slave-drivers

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Sheep play an important role in the life of millions of people. An American child can live all his life without ever seeing a real shepherd. In fact, a city child can grow up without ever seeing a real live sheep. But in many countries, flocks of sheep with their shepherds are a common sight. They dot the hills and valleys wherever one looks.

The thought of a shepherd leading his sheep is an appealing one. A shepherd faces hardships, often real dangers for his sheep. It was natural, therefore, for authors of scripture to whom sheep and shepherds were a daily sight to use this picture to illustrate God's watchcare over people.

The Bible is full of such pictures. The Psalmist calls people the sheep of God's pasture. (Psalm 100:3) Isaiah pictures God as a shepherd who carries new-born lambs in His arms. (Isaiah 40:11) Jesus pictures a shepherd risking his life to find a lost sheep. (Luke 15:4) Both Ezekiel and Matthew describe the confused masses as sheep without a shepherd (Ezekiel 34:5; Matthew 9:36)

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 25: "The Good Shepherd," John 10.

Psalm 23, the Shepherd's Psalm, is unquestionably the most familiar passage in the Bible. People who know no other scripture can quote verses from this Psalm. Soldiers on battlefields have died with its words on their lips. This Psalm has brought comfort to more grieving hearts than any other passage of scripture.

Its New Testament counterpart is John 10. Here Jesus depicts the role of a shepherd, and says He came to fulfill it, even to the extent of giving His life for His sheep. (John 10:15)

God is like a Shepherd, not a Slave-driver, and He wants this kind of leadership in the world. Dr. Walter Rauschenbusch once asked why Jesus chose the men He did to be His disciples. They were not trained in theology. They were not men of prominence or authority. Dr. Rauschenbusch says this is precisely why Jesus chose them. He wanted to inaugurate a new kind of leadership in the world, one that would serve and not exploit, so He chose men who were not already spoiled by the possession of power.

The world was burdened with the kind of leaders who exploited people; who cracked the whip, and expected people to knuckle under. The Caesars, the Herods, often the centurions were just such kind of men. And so, in one of His rare references to Roman leaders, Jesus criticized them for their kind of leadership. (Matthew 20:25)

In contrast, He pointed out that His followers must offer the world a different kind of leadership. They must lead men by serving them. (Matthew 20:26-27) They must not try to knock people down and climb up on top of them to positions of arrogance and power. They must seek to lead people by serving them, and by lifting them up to new levels of vision and hope.

One of the things that disturbed Jesus most, as it disturbed Ezekiel before Him (Ezekiel 34), was the fact that so many religious leaders were not true shepherds. They used their position and influence to exploit people rather than serve them, even to the extent of fattening their own pocketbooks at the expense of helpless people. (Matthew 23:14) They were like thieves come to destroy rather than being true life-givers. Like hirelings, they were more concerned about their own safety than the welfare of their sheep. The test of His love, said Jesus, was His willingness to give His life for His sheep. (See John 10)

Moreover, Jesus made it clear that His church was to be a fellowship into which people of all nations would be drawn. His mission was primarily to the Jews. But He could not forget the Gentile world. Its people, too, must be welcomed into His flock. There must be one flock of all people who followed Him as their shepherd. (John 10:16)

The book of Acts and the letters of Paul reveal the struggle of the early church to make this dream of Jesus a reality. The Christian church is meant to be a fellowship in which Arab and Jew, American and Russian, black and white can worship at the same altar, and work together to bring about one brotherhood of men on the face of the earth.

The world is still like sheep without a shepherd. Jesus fulfilled a shepherd's role because God Himself is the Great Shepherd whom He wanted to reveal. To know this kind of a God, said Jesus, is to know a security that neither life nor death can take away. (John 10:29)

Ontario Will Probe Report Kickbacks Demanded

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government, having sniffed some bad apples in the province's fruit and vegetable industry, Thursday set up a public inquiry to investigate charges that farmers are being forced to pay "kickbacks" to guarantee markets.

The inquiry will be conducted by Douglas E. Williams, chairman of the Ontario Food Council.

Agriculture Minister William Stewart said in the legislature that he turned over evidence in the charges to the attorney-general's department.

"It has been reported to us, for example, that some buyers of fruits and vegetables in this province have been demanding, and receiving, from producers and producer groups, kickbacks and under-the-table commissions in return for guarantee of certain market outlets," said Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Williams will investigate the sale and distribution of fruits and vegetables in Essex County; the purchasing practices of wholesale and retail distributors of fruits and vegetables, and the sale and distribution of fruits and vegetables from any other part of Ontario.

Premier Robarts announced that the government had no immediate plans to introduce legislation spelling out the rights of tenants.

Transport Minister Irwin Haskett said his department is making an intensive investigation into possible regulation of the use of snowmobiles.

Judge Says Shulman's Charges Made for Political Effect

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, wealthy practising physician who has frequently come to bat against officials in both the medical and political fields, was thrown a strike Thursday by a justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Mr. Justice W. D. Parker, in a royal commission report, dismissed charges by Dr. Shulman that the Ontario government had improperly interfered with coroners' inquests in the province.

The report, presented Wednesday in the Ontario legislature by Premier John Robarts, said the allegations by Dr. Shulman were made in anger or "for their political effect" and some were not supported by facts.

The inquiry was set up by the premier after Attorney-General Arthur Wishart fired Dr. Shulman as chief coroner for Metropolitan Toronto on April 7, 1967, for ordering an inquest against the instructions of the supervising Ontario coroner.

Dr. Shulman immediately branded the Parker report as "Conservative balderdash."

"I had to be smeared and he smeared me."

Mr. Justice Parker's report found "that there was no unlawful or improper suppression of any evidence or any unlawful or improper interference by any member or senior official of the department of the attorney-general. . . ."

Premier Robarts said later there would be no charges laid as a result of the report.

Mr. Wishart said the report proved Dr. Shulman's allegations groundless. "That's the end of it."

Dr. Shulman, at 42 a self-made near-millionaire and crusader, had charged the government with interference and said it was covering up facts. The allegations came after Dr. H. Beatty Cotnam, supervising coroner for Ontario, ordered Dr. Shulman not to hold an inquest into a fire death at the Workmen's Compensation Board hospital here last winter.

Dr. Shulman said he went ahead with the inquest because he believed a delay might conceal some facts.

During the lengthy hearing, Dr. Shulman made several charges in connection with other inquests. In the report, Mr. Justice Parker, in dealing with Dr. Shulman and most charges, used such phrases as "malicious allegation," "unsubstantiated rumor," "unjustified," and "false and defamatory."

Dr. Shulman, a New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, has been a crusader for such things as better medical procedures, automobile and highway safety, and liberalized abortion laws. He is the author of a best-seller, Anyone Can Make a Million, a book on how to play the stock market.

In the house after the report was tabled, Dr. Shulman rose on a point of personal order to declare:

"The premier has today tabled a slanderous, untrue report. . ."

There was a brief uproar from both sides of the House and then Speaker Fred Cass ruled him out of order.

Dr. Shulman later asked when the legislature could discuss "this shameful document," but Premier Robarts said outside the house that the matter was closed.

Later during the throne speech debate, Liberal leader Robert Nixon said "without exception Judge Parker has found that the mighty Morty has struck out."

In part, Mr. Justice Parker's report said:

"To criticize public officials when they are wrong is in the public interest. To make vague allegations and insinuations against unspecified individuals is not. This smacks of McCarthyism, a technique repugnant to our sense of fair play and justice."

In his summary, Mr. Justice Parker said his first impression during the hearings was that Dr. Shulman used words carelessly.

"As the hearing progressed it became clear that this was not so. He was very glib and articulate. . . .

"Many of the allegations made by Dr. Shulman were merely suppositions. In such cases, when pressed for facts to support them, Dr. Shulman, produced none. . . ."

British Influence Will Grow

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson's government boasted Thursday Britain soon will be the strongest military power in Western Europe and predicted greater British influence in NATO affairs.

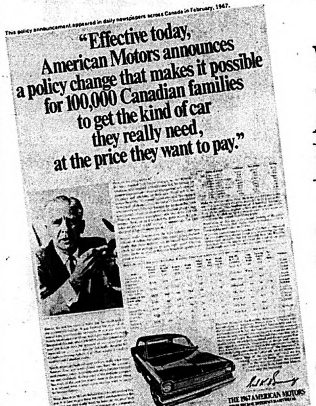
A white paper on defence policy said the nation's "formidable contribution" to the security of the Old World will match its driv. for the political and economic unity of Europe.

bases by 1971 and to concentrate instead on a European strategy:

1. When in the early 1970s Britain completes its redeployment "we can expect to have a major influence on the development of allied strategy."

2. In the next 10 years there is "some probability that the extent of the United States' physical commitment" to Europe will be reduced and this must make Europeans more self-reliant.

WE HAVE A REASON TO SMILE



This policy announcement appeared in daily newspapers across Canada in February, 1967.

"Effective today, American Motors announces a policy change that makes it possible for 100,000 Canadian families to get the kind of car they really need, at the price they want to pay."

THE 1967 AMERICAN MOTORS

WE WERE RIGHT AND SALES PROVE IT!

Our policy of no annual model change
Gives you:
Lower price (as noted below)
Lower depreciation cost
Higher resale value
Gives us:
Sales increases of 79%

We won't change this winner for '69.

Exactly one year ago, American Motors announced that there would be no wasteful annual model changes for the Rambler American.

What happened?

Sales of the lowest-priced Rambler American model shot up by 79%, proving that we were right: that there were a lot of people who wanted basic transportation—North American style—without the additional cost of the unnecessary annual model change.

Then came the '68 model year…and more of the same. More and more people are coming around to our way of thinking: that for a compact car, a car designed as basic transportation, the annual model change makes no sense. So they're buying Rambler American.

What are they getting for their investment? A 6-passenger car designed and built for our kind of driving, our kind of weather, our kind of traffic…at a price that is at least $289 lower than any other domestic compact. They're getting a car that will keep its value longer because it's not going to undergo annual styling change.

The 1969 Rambler American will be basically the same as the 1968 model. There will be no changes for the sake of change.

So before you invest in a new car this year, take a good long look at what the Rambler American has to offer.

See your local American Motors/Rambler dealer now and forget about the calendar.

THIS IS HOW RAMBLER AMERICAN STACKS UP AGAINST ITS MAJOR COMPETITION. TAKE A LOOK, TAKE A TEST DRIVE, THEN DRAW YOUR OWN CONCLUSIONS.

Curling Title First For Town

PORT ARTHUR (Special) — Trenton's Bill Hope returned the Canadian high school curling championship to Ontario yesterday after an absence of 11 years.

The 18-year-old schoolboy shotmaker did it the hard way — knocking off all the favored western rinks on his way to the championship. In a sudden death playoff last night, the Trenton rink gained revenge for one of its two defeats on the way to the title, smashing Saskatchewan 11-3. On Wednesday, Saskatchewan nipped Ontario 8-6.

"It was my best game ever," Hope said after winning the playoff. The two rinks finished the 11-team round-robin bonspiel with 8-2 records.

Hope, 18, who became interested in curling by tending ice at rinks at air force bases in Canada where his father has ben stationed, said: "When I made my first two shots I knew I was going good."

At Trenton, today plans were made for a parade and motor cavalcade to greet the returning curlers, skip Bill Hope, third Bruce Lord, second Brian Domney and lead Dennis Gardiner.

Mayor James MacDonald assembled the civic welcome committee at the Quinte Machine premises on Bay street and was to lead the rink, returning from Toronto by car, to the 6 RD base for a 3 p.m. welcome.

Two bands, the CFB brass and reed band and the pipe band were on hand with musical fanfares for the four young champions and to hear base commandant Col. G. R. Adamson tell them the community "is proud of them."

"I understand it is the first time a national sporting laurel has come to Trenton," he said. "It's terrific. It's wonderful."

Hope had a good shot at the championship right from the first day when he knocked off favored Alberta and added B.C. His record was 4-0 before Rick Folk of Saskatoon handed the Trenton rink its first defeat.

Police said Dennis Whiteside, 17, of Toronto has been charged with non-capital murder.

Natural Uranium Plants Out?

LONDON (CP) — The Daily Telegraph says Dutch engineers have found a cheap method of producing uranium-235, used in atomic bombs, which could change the world's nuclear picture.

It says a centrifuge has been built by the Werkspoor Co of Amsterdam and adds:

"Any nuclear power station using natural uranium, as do all the British plants, will rapidly go out of date and will certainly not be attractive for export."

Reds Lose Palace At Hue

HUE (CP) — South Vietnamese forces recaptured the Imperial palace grounds of Hue's citadel today from Communist troops which seized them 25 days ago, but heavy fighting continued in other parts of the citadel.

The Communist troops apparently slipped out of the palace grounds into positions along the western half of the south wall of the 1½-mile square citadel, where heavy fighting was reported still in progress.

Support Pledged

Creditistes Save Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Crisis week in Ottawa ended on a note of anti-climax Friday as the Creditiste party undertook to support the government's confidence motion.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A large high pressure area centered north of Lake Superior dominates the weather over all of Ontario. Skies are clear and winds are light. Temperatures have dropped sharply. The high is moving eastward. Southern Ontario should have fair weather today and Sunday. The northern regions will be sunny today but considerable cloudiness will spread across the area Sunday.

The pledge by Creditiste Leader Caouette took the steam out the opposition drive to bring down Prime Minister Pearson's minority Liberal government.

The eight Creditiste votes were almost certain to tip the fine Commons balance in favor of the government when the motion comes to a vote, probably by Tuesday.

Mr. Caouette told the Commons his party has no confidence in the Liberals—or the Conservatives.

If the government had sought a simple expression of confidence, the Creditistes would have voted against.

But tle motion asks the House to state that Monday's defeat of the government tax bill, which set off all the fireworks, did not constitute a motion of confidence.

But Mr. Pearson twitted the Conservatives repeatedly during the day by implying that they had backed down.

Opening debate on the confidence motion, the prime minister repeated three times that the Conservatives "until this morning" had taken the position the government could not continue.

" . . . we are discussing this motion now and I am very glad indeed that the Opposition have come to the conclusion that it is quite proper to discuss it," he said.

Mr. Stanfield said in reply that according to constitutional practice, the government had no right to place business before the House.

"We have not waived this stand in any respect—that is still our view and we are still confident we are right. ....."

Later in the day, at a brief press conference, Mr. Pearson again worked over the Conservative stand.

He said twice that "there wasn't a peep" out of the Conservatives Friday on the legality of the government's procedure.

Caouette Not Bribed

Mr. Caouette's position also was raised at the press conference and Mr. Pearson rejected a reporter's statement that "there have been a lot of suggestions ... Mr. Caouette has had some consideration in terms of trips or something like that."

The prime minister said this was rubbish, an insult to Mr. Caouette and his party and also to the Liberals.

In reply to another question, he confirmed that External Affairs Minister Martin had met Mr. Caouette.

"They talked over the situation—what was happening in the House and what should be done. . . ."

The prime minister also said the government has not decided how to replace revenue lost by rejection of the tax bill, authorizing a five-per-cent increase in income tax which went into effect at the start of the year.

He was asked about his earlier Commons statement that no taxpayer would suffer financially under whatever new measure the government brings in, and replied that this meant the tax already collected would be refunded or transferred as a credit to some new tax.

Members scarcely looked up from their papers as the last speaker of the day, Eldon Woolliams (PC—Bow River), charged that the government was setting up a dictatorship.

Comic relief was provided as separatist Gilles Gregoire (Ind—Lapointe) repeated that he held the balance of power in the House and read a nine-point list of demands as the price of his support for the government.

The demands included a retaining wall along a river in his own riding, an airport for Mr. Caouette's riding — "One needs some allies"—and the return to Quebec of full authority over social security.

Crew Shot Crap for Captaincy

In one of the sharpest attacks on the government, NDP Leader Douglas said government has been disintegrating for weeks and that Mr. Pearson should have known better than go on holiday to Jamaica leaving the "awkward squad" in charge.

"While the skipper was off the bridge, the crew was shooting craps as to who should wear the captain's hat," he said.

Mr. Stanfield said the government was clinging to power although it had brought the country to the verge of catastrophe.

But he said he himself was not "grasping for power."

"I don't want to be prime minister of this country unless I have the approval of the people to be that," he said.

Finance Minister Sharp, under heavy heckling as he defended the government's financial policies, said the country was facing a difficult period brought on "largely by reasons that are beyond our control."

He cited financial problems in Britain and the United States and said international financial markets have not been so disturbed and jittery since the 20s.

Mr. Sharp was reminded of his part in Monday night's defeat—when he allowed the crucial vote to go ahead—as soon as he rose to speak

They Could Only Watch

So fierce was the blaze when a barn burned down on Belleville's outskirts last night, firemen were helpless to fight it. Fed by stored straw bales, the flames ripped through the barn, owned by George Mumby, just west of College Street. More than 30 hogs were believed inside when the fire started. For details see Page 3.

But with about 70 per cent of the 12,000 sets of plates already sold licence issuer George Olsen said "I think we will be able to handle it okay."

As of this morning there were about 3,600 sets of plates remaining to be sold at the Belleville office with another four days left next week for motorists to beat the deadline.

Trenton Curlers

wan, Ontario had its toughest games against eastern rinks.

Unheralded New Brunswick almost side tracked the Trenton four some with a crushing 13-6 loss on Friday morning but western rinks, fighting to stay in contention, knocked each other out of contention.

Earlier Hope scraped past Northern Ontario 10-9 in an extra end in a come from behind finish.

In 11th-round games, British Columbia edged Newfoundland 9-7 in an extra end, Manitoba defeated Northern Ontario 7-5, Prince Edward Island routed New Brunswick 12-4, and in two big games Ontario edged Nova Scotia 7-6 and Saskatchewan nipped Alberta by an identical score.

In 10th-round games, Northern Ontario walloped New Brunswick 14-3, Saskatchewan defeated Nova Scotia 7-5, Alberta downed Newfoundland 14-10, British Columbia edged Quebec 7-6 and Ontario beat Manitoba -3.

Saskatchewan and Ontario reached the final after counting in the 10th ends to salvage victories.

Hope had trouble with a detrmined Nova Scotia foursome in the 11th round with Little employing good shot-making to take a 6-4 lead going home. A Nova Scotia miss allowed Hope to draw in and count three to win the game.

Nova Scotia also gave Folk a rough time in the tenth round before bowing 7-5 when the Saskatchwan skip made both his shots good for a thre-endr.

Folk also ran into trouble in the 11th round when Alberta, who were defending the crown won last year by Stan Trout of Edmonton, took a 6-5 lead after nine.

Folk had to remove an Alberta stone which was nearly frozen to one of his in the eight foot, to make the comeback.

But Folk ran out of steam for the playoff.

"I was pretty tired, but that wasn't the reason we lost," he said after the game. "The other team played pretty good."

No Inquest Into Death

PICTON — No inquest will be held into the fire death of a Bloomfield area teenager Thursday, provincial police said today.

Daniel Halloran, 18, died when fire destroyed his home on the Scoharie Road, two miles east of Highway 14.

His body was found in the ruins of the brick home.

Still in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital here are his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. William Halloran suffered shock and burns as they fled their home in below-zero weather.

Picton Soldiers Return From Puerto Rico

TRENTON — The first elements of the Canadian Guards returning from two weeks of war games in the Caribbean last night recived a warm welcome from a handful of their wives and children who met them at the CFB air terminal.

Wearing deep tans the troops ladened with "battle" gear and in many cases souvenirs to remind them of the peace keeping exercise, underwent health and custom checks before leaving for the last leg of the 2,000 mile trip back to Camp Picton base.

The exercise took place on a parched island off the coast of Puerto Rico. Its purpose was to test the ability of the Canadian force to function properly after being transported from cold temperatures to the steady 80 degrees plus of Vieques.

It also gave Air Transport Command a further test in the logistics of emergency operations — some 750 men, 124 vehicles, and tons of field combat equipment were moved.

It was all part of an elaborately staged United Nations peace keping operation in which Canadian troops, mainly from Camp Picton were ordered in to keep the peace in a supposedly explosive situation.

The Latin American guerilla insurgents were played by 43 men from the Royal 22nd Regiment, Valcartier, Que., — the "Vandoos".

Nothing more serious happened than sunstroke to a few Canadians and non-poisonous tarantula bites to others as casualties were considered light in the virtually bloodless operation to restore a nation threatened in theory from anarchy to democratic sovereignity.

Special Council Session To Discuss Education

Regional government and the proposal of the Ontario Department of Education for county-wide boards of education will be topics of discussion at a special session of Hastings county council called for March 6.

During the forenoon of the special one day session, council will hear the report of a special county committee on regional government.

During the afternoon Dr. J. R. McCarthy, deputy minister of agriculture will address council members on the organization of county wide boards of education scheduled to go into effect in January, 1969. The chairmen of each of the school area boards in the county, along with councils of the city of Belleville and the town of Trenton have been invited to attend.

Early in January county clerk treasurer Carl Bateman, as panel member at a special tax conference in Toronto said that regional government as proposed would result in a state of "autocratic bureaucracy."

The proposed county-wide schools administration areas have also resulted in opposition from many areas although county council at its January sesion refrained from discussing the matter until details were spelled out by the department.

Morrison Denies Involvement In Food City Robbery

Larry Morrison, co-defendant with Lawrence Schlaer on a charge of conspiracy and robbery, took the witness stand yesterday and testified that there was no conspiracy or robbery on the part of himself or Schlaer.

He named his brother, William, a primary witness for the crown, as having brought up the idea of a robbery in the first place.

The men are charged in connection with the Sept. 1 robbery of $10,000 from Food City manager, Samuel Mulholland.

Counsel for the defence, Robert Carter, began to present his case after cross-examening the last crown witness, Constable Robert Gay, who had been placed with the prisoners, Morrison and Schlaer, as an undercover man.

Speaking French and being treated as a prison at all times, the Constable testified that he overheard certain conversations between the accused.

"Just remember, don't crack", said Schlaer to Morrison according to the constable. Other conversations recorded by the disguised policeman were of the same nature. However, Constable Gay readily admitted upon questioning by the defence that he at no time had the full context of the conversation.

Taking the stand later, the accused, Larry Morrison, explained that the statement was referring to his mental condition.

First witness for the defence was William Maragh, Montreal, who testified that he had on two occasions loaned Larry Morrison money — Oct. of 1965 and Sept. 8 of 1967.

Morrison had purchased a $4,500 automobile shortly after Sept. 1, the day the robbery occurred. Mr. Maragh stated he had lent $5,000 to the accused on Sept. 8 and produced a promisory note to that effect.

Crown Attorney Glenn Deline questioned the witness as to the advisability of lending $5,000 without security and without making a credit check. Mr. Maragh told the Crown that Morrison had established his credit in 1965 when he paid back $3,000 within a month.

The witness, when questioned about the interest rates, replied that Morrison was to pay back $6,000 in one month.

According to the accused, his brother approached him at home the Sunday before the robbery inquiring if he (the accused) was interested in ten per cent of $30,000. Morrison said he refused and phoned the co-defendant Schlaer in Montreal because he wanted to get out of Belleville.

After returning to Montreal (his brother William drove him back) Morrison testified he received a phone call from his brother asking him to come to Belleville on Sept. 1 to discuss something urgent. Upon agreeing a rendezvous was established at noon at the A and W Drive-in in Belleville.

Accompanied to Belleville by Lawrence Schlaer and John Phillips, Morrison stated he met his brother at the A and W restaurant and was again asked to get involved in a robbery. Once again the witness said that he declined.

Morrison said that his brother asked him to buy some surgical tape to fix the top of his brother's convertible and to meet once again in the evening at the A and W.

At the last meeting on the evening of Sept. 1 Morrison said that his brother told him the thing was all off and to forget that it had ever been mentioned.

Morrison then testified that he and his companions immediately returned to Montreal and heard no more about anything until his brother later told him over the phone from Belleville that the police were looking for him for armed robbery.

Another defence witness, Mrs. M. Slagen of Montreal, testified that Schlaer had arrived home in Montreal around ten p.m. on Friday, Sept. 1. Her testimony followed evidence by Morrison that the three men had returned to Montreal, Schlaer going home, and he and Phillips going to an apartment kept by Phillip's sister.

The robbery occurred in Belleville around eleven o'clock that same night.

Under cross examination by Crown Attorney Glen Deline, Morrison admitted that he was completely aware of the testimony already given in court. He also corroborated some of Constable Gay's testimony although he stated other parts of the testimony were completely inaccurate.

When asked by the crown if he was then saying that his brother, William Morrison, had made up most of the story the accused answered yes.

The trial, being heard in the Supreme Court of Ontario before the Honorable Mr. Justice Keith and a jury, has been going on since Monday and will continue on Monday.

Man Injured In Trenton Crash

TRENTON — A man from the district was badly injured in a spectacular car crash in front of the Dutch Mill motor hotel early last night. Property loss in the mishap was estimated at $3,000.

Jacob Senger, 36, of R.R. 1 Trenton was treated at the Trenton Memorial hospital and later transferred to Kingston for specialized care. An examination at the emergency here revealed he was suffering from head injuries, a fractured left leg, arm and pelvis and crushed ribs.

Senger, police said, was driving a car belonging to Heather Atkinson of R.R. 1 Trenton when it went out of control coming west on Dundas St., E., struck a parked car shunting it into another parked car then crossed the road and slammed into a car trailer parked in front of the Walter Richards premises. Hume Heads Industrial Body; Proposed Budget Jumps $8,000

GEORGE HUME

New industry and manufacturing establishments already located here laid out four and a half million dollars in capital expenditures in Belleville last year.

This was the figure given to members of the Belleville Industrial Commission yesterday in a review of last year's activities

The meeting saw chairman George Hume re-elected for a second term of office as head of the Commission.

Other commission members are Mayor J. Russell Scott and Alderman Gerald Joyce as city council representatives; Fred Deacon, chamber of commerce representative; Pat Hughson of Deloro Stellite, Al. Revell, Electronic Controls and Ernst Kneisel, former industrial commissioner and now administrator at Loyalist College

Ray Brown is the industrial commissioner.

The financial statement covering the commission's last year operations was read with this year's proposed budget being set at $28,000 — an increase of $8,000 over 1967. The $28,000 budget figure will be forwarded to city hall for council approval.

In his review of 1967 activities, Mr. Hume said that three new industries locating in Belleville last year made capital expenditures of $1,040,000 and when fully operational would employ approximately 155 workers.

Industry expansion projects for firms already located in the city saw a capital outlay of $3,460,000 with an addition of about 75 employees to the work staffs.

Local industrial firms expanding last year included Dussek Bros. Canada Ltd.; Mead Johnson; Deloro Stellite; Union Carbide, and Stephens-Adamson.

Mr. Hume said that the function of an industrial commission is actually two fold 1. to attract new industry and 2. to look after industry already located in the area.

Discussion at yesterday's organizational meeting centered around the city's latest industrial acquisition. Mr. Hume said the official announcement of the industry would be made next Wednesday by the company concerned.

Mr. Hume said that Ontario Development grants announced last fall would give Belleville "quite a boost" in its efforts to attract new industry.

In addition to the new industry to be announced next week, Belleville has two other prospects, which Mr. Hume said "look fairly good."

Belleville's Economy Tied Closely To CFB Trenton Says Report

This city is not generally considered to be an "air force" town, but Belleville's economy is nevertheless tied closely to the big sprawling Canadian Armed Forces Base just outside the eastern limits of Trenton.

The annual report of the city assessment commissioner G. Leighton Thompson shows that out of Belleville's 10,000 households 458 of them are CFB families.

And an additional unknown number of Belleville residents — household heads and others — work at the Trenton Canadian Armed Forces Base in a civilian capacity.

The same report from the assessment department indicates that Belleville is a centre of owner-occupied homes although with apartment blocks springing up in all parts of the city the percentage of local families living in their own homes must be on the decrease.

According to the assessor's report there are 5,444 owner occupied single family dwellings while another 1,022 families are classed as tenants in single family homes.

There are 220 semi-detached houses in the city; 554 duplexes; 183 triplexes and 128 multi-family dwellings.

Then there are 51 apartment buildings and another 128 apartments over stores.

There are 491 commercial establishments and 940 businesses; 49 manufacturers and 122 properties listed as institutional.

The city has a total taxable assessment of $110,590,643 of which $69, 124,810 is residential or 62.50 per cent. Non-residential assessment is given as $41,465,833, or 37.50 per cent.

In addition there is $26,299,280 worth of tax exempt property, for a total assessment of $137,202, 933.

The increase in taxable assessment over 1966 is given as $2,388,093.

The assessment total is up, but the number of citizens as recorded by the annual census is down as compared to 1966. The population for last year is given as 32,830 — a decrease of 124 from the year previous.

The assessor's report lists 48 different church properties (including one church cemetery): six separate schools, including Nicholson Catholic College; five secondary schools and four other schools and colleges, including the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Assessment per capita in the city is slowly increasing. Last year the assessment per capita was $3,295.84. In 1966 it was $3,226.77 and back in 1964 — the year re-assessment came into effect — it was $3,127.

Fire Destroys Barn

One of the last active barns in Belleville was totally destroyed last night.

Lost in the blaze on the farm of George Mumby were at least 40 pigs, 3,500 hay bales and some machinery.

The farm flanks West Park Village, one of the city's newest suburbs, west of College Street area.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined.

Mr. Mumby was away from home at the time and the alarm was turned in by neighbors after midnight.

The fire was raging out of control by the time firemen arrived. They stood by helplessly while the hay-fed flames made the building a bonfire.

A Challenge for Blind Wrestlers

There's an added aura of challenge about the Ontario high school wrestling tournament in Belleville this weekend.

It's centred on three of the more than 400 contestants.

It should have been a quartet. But 14-year-old Tom Bissett was a quarter-pound overweight for the 90-lb. class when the blind students weighed in for the tournament at Centennial Secondary School last evening.

Last year, says 23-year-old coach John Howe, one OSB wrestler placed second in his class at the all-Ontario contest.

His biggest problem in training the blind students it time and lack of space, he says.

Otherwise, coaching his wrestlers is a matter of detailed explanation.

"The only difference is when you have sight you can imitate. When you haven't, everything has to be explained minutely."

"I'd compare some of the blind boys to the other wrestlers here except they are not as experienced or not as tough," says the young teacher.

"It's easy for a boy with normal vision to train on his own. But when you're blind you can't do that.

Tom Bissett agrees with the coach.

Wrestling for him is not "really" difficult.

"When you have contact with an opponent it's not hard. But you have to use judgment quite a bit — and sometimes you miss. But I don't think it's any harder for us when we have contact than it is for a wrestler with normal sight.

Tom's record demonstrates his point. He's won six matches and lost three this year.

The OSB team was launched two years ago when he was appointed physical-education instructor at the school.

A high school wrestler himself, he took on the job because of the challenge.

But then, he points out, challenge is basic to the wrestling spirit.

Representing the OSB on the mat this weekend are teenagers Ricky Stacknick, Arthur Scott and Murray Powell.

Back in Kampus Kapers for his 10th year is Ralph Boomhower, here being helped with make-up by dancer Bev Burns. The clown's costume hides a talent for dazzling gymnastics that has made Ralph an annual favorite with audiences for Belleville Collegiate show.

Applause Greets 'Kapers'

Ralph Boomhower left BCI seven years ago. But by that time, his natural talent for gymnastics already was a tradition in the Kampus Kapers show.

His ability found other outlets after leaving BCI — in Kingston he instructed a YMCA gymnast team for more than four years.

However, the school show organizers apparently never forgot him either.

A few years ago he was back onstage as a volunter artist.

He's playing his old role again in the 1968 Kapers edition — Ralph's 10th year of participation — playing the clown with the high school gymnasts.

His dazzling acrobatics were one of the reasons for the applause which greeted the show's opening last night.

Kampus Kapers concludes its two-night run tonight.

Electronics Strike In Second Week

TRENTON — The strike at Essex Electronics has entered its second week with accusations from both sides.

The verbal flurry was tipped off yesterday by a labor representative who said the company was trying to persuade people to cross the picket lines.

Harry Haddaway, International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers representative, said Essex management "has made attempts by phone to get people to leave the picket lines."

"But," added Mr. Haddaway "this failed."

A Trenton woman, offered a job, refused to work at Essex "when we explained our story," said the union official.

Essex president J. E. Kalfus retorted that the woman's husband had been approached by the union.

"Her husband's job was threatened by the union," he said. "I was told this — let's not say where my source is."

Mr. Haddaway also claimed a youth also was hired by the plant for $1 17 an hour, but left when his father was approached by the union.

Mr. Haddaway said the strikers — all women — were not "second-class citizens" and would not return to work until a "reasonable and just" settlement was made.

However, Mr Kalfus pointed out it was the company's privilege to hire employees.

He said it was "legal to hire, not legal to intimidate."

Keep NORAD Strong

Has anyone ever stopped to consider the possibility of a conventional land war between east and west.

Such a war could erupt say in Europe — or improbable as it may seem, right here on this continent.

Improbable? Well maybe. It is interesting, however, to consider Canada's role in such a fray. Canada apparently is quibbling about U.S. bombers continuing to use Canadian airspace. Four H-bombs were lost off Greenland recently following the crash of a U.S. plane, and now there are suggestions Ottawa may ask the U.S. to discontinue flights of hydrogen bomb-carrying planes over this country as part of the price of remaining in the North American Air Defence Command.

Are we in a position to engage in such petty bargaining over the defence of this continent? How many men have we to defend the second largest land mass in the world, this country of Canada? A few thousand regulars and militia, perhaps, out of a total population of only 20,000,000. And how many aircraft are available to support what can only be regarded as a numerically inadequate force against an advancing enemy? Just 48 operational planes in three interceptor squadrons. That's how many — not even a plane to cover each of the States of the United States.

Are we so immune from conventional attack on this continent? It is a point worth pondering before we ask the Americans to drop their own guard, as Ottawa is now contemplating with regard to U.S. overflights.

Rural Meeting

Judging by what has been going on in Ottawa during the past week Ontario Farmers' Union president Walter Miller's advice to Northumberland County farmers in Wooler the other day has particular relevance.

Affiliation with a political party, said Mr. Miller, was not the answer to the problems confronting the nation's farmers. Noting that OFU membership embraced all parties, he said that with more economic power farmers would be in a better position to receive government concessions, no matter which party was in office.

Mr. Miller cited the tractor demonstrations as an example of the influence farmers can exert when the need arises. Organization, he added, was the key to agricultural stability, with farmers realizing "they will have to solve problems which they have been depending on others to solve for them."

Firmness and dependability have always been at the root of the countryman's character. But in these days of government "benevolence" it has become as easy to depend on the national administration in this sphere as in any other. Self-reliance is a quality that too many individuals, not to mention groups, have lost.

Mr. Miller had another piece of advice farmers bent on strengthening their bargaining position might take to heart. Farm organizations, he said, in future will have to avoid commodity lines. The OFU had in its ranks tobacco growers, beef raisers and milk producers, among others.

The union official spoke to a small audience. Thus, a greater response to such public occasions is one of the first needs of the rural population. Unlike many a union occasion, Mr. Miller's words were not directed so much at the misdeeds or impotence of government as at improving the farmers' economic situation and imbuing farming generally with new found confidence.

Heart Trouble

An electrocardiogram indicates the electrical activity of the heart as it is at the moment the machine takes it, not as it is five minutes, five weeks or five years later.

This is information of significance for the layman at this time when continuing emphasis is being placed on heart research.

Dr. John Armstrong, executive director of the Canadian Heart Foundation, made the statement in connection with the death of a 39-year-old Toronto man who died half-an-hour after an electrocardiogram showed nothing wrong with his heart.

The man collapsed at home after pushing his small car to get it started. He left hospital after tests, including the ECG, but collapsed again in a store ten minutes later.

Dr. Armstrong noted that former President Eishenhower and the late Paul Sauve, Premier of Quebec, both had their heart attacks shortly after complete physical checks that showed normal heart function.

Liberal "Left" Could Win for Dark-Horse MacEachen

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — What kind of prime minister might Liberal leadership candidate National Health and Welfare Minister Allan MacEachen make?

As an administrator of the senior bureaucracy, as a manipulator of the Commons, as the premier parliamentarian, excellent.

For of all the many political qualities Allan MacEachen has, professionalism is his prime qualification.

He knows Parliament, its stylized forms, its governing precedents, its operating rules and orders. Knows them perhaps better than anyone else in the Commons, even including that walking, talking file of regulations that goes under the name of Stanley Knowles, the New Democrats' living-library of parliamentary knowledge from the wrong side of the Winnipeg tracks.

So as their tactician in Parliament, the Liberals scarcely could produce a political field general as skilled as MacEachen.

But as their strategist in command at the head of the great oval cabinet conference table in the East Block?

On the issue of medicare in particular and social security in general, Allan MacEachen's position consistently has been that Canada can afford anything.

This is an attitude of social mind very probably conditioned by a hard boyhood in the Maritimes where the living has not always been easy and folks have become accustomed, if not reconciled, to working longer for less than people in most other parts of the country.

So when Allan MacEachen looks around a good part of Quebec, most of Ontario and generally all of the Prairies and the West Coast, it is to laugh when the moderates in the Liberal cabinet try to tell him that Canada can't afford all these social luxuries of the "great society" that even the much-richer U.S. doesn't yet enjoy.

The supposed experts, the assumed professionals among the political pundits, handicapping the Grand Liberal National will tell you Allan MacEachen can't possibly make it to the command - post of East Block power.

If he is still in there in the later ballots when the Liberal delegates' votes begin to polarize among the surviving candidates on the basis of left and right, then it conceivably could be Allan MacEachen's race.

Because he is the pin-up of the Liberal left.

The "swingers" of the cabinet were with him in the medicare crunch, and could hang in there when the leadership votes are polled.

On that basis, then, those who would be letting their votes ride with Allan MacEachen in the race could include Walter Gordon, Judy LaMarsh, Ben Benson, Larry Pennell.

Each of these cabinet ministers presumably controls or at least influences a regional bloc of delegates' votes plus whatever their individual support might be from across the land.

If not carrying a big enough count to win, the Liberal left will figure heavily in the final calculation, and as its leader, Allan MacEachen will be exerting a lot of leverage.

Just suppose the improbable — if not the impossible — did happen and MacEachen made it . . . what then?

Well, a quiet, even gentle man, he would run a most orderly Parliament. With Allan MacEachen as prime minister and Robert Stanfield as opposition leader, two cool maritimers in charge, the atmosphere would be positively church-like compared to the oratorical rock and roll of the Pearson-Diefenbaker days.

Up to positions of vastly increased power would go Judy LaMarsh, Walter Gordon, Ben Benson. In would come the young radicals who keep Allan MacEachen (as if he needs it) so passionately fired up on social-security-without-end.

A bachelor, he would leave capital city socializing to his cabinet ministers and their wives while he, perhaps, followed the footsteps of Mackenzie King into the pine-scented hills of the Gatineau, there to brood over the problems of the nation.

Letters to the Editor

Ameliasburg's Dilemma Over School Integration

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The recent bill brought in by Education Ministr Davis proposing changes in areas of educational administration has stirred up much controversy across Ontario. The Quinte area is no exception.

Trenton's appeal to be allowed to "go west" has been smothered by the department's reply "go east" — ruling that Trenton must remain in Hastings County. Now appeals to the department have been issued by Ameliasburgh Township Council and Public School trustees, asking to be allowed to secede from Prince Edward County and to be included in the Bay of Quinte area. It will be interesting to learn if school children and residents in Ameliasburgh will be granted privileges Trenton has so far been denied. Which proposal does a majority of township residents favor, and on what do they base their decision?

The complaint has been voiced that Ameliasburgh students could be forced into travelling "up to 100 miles per day" to receive secondary education at Picton, should the township join the Prince Edward County board. Unless buses travelled a tangled maze of criss-crossed routes, this would be quite a feat, since Picton is less than 25 miles from Rossmore and approximately the same distance from Carrying Place. Most bus routes are carefully arrangd by the bus companies involved, to pick up as many students at as few stops as possible and any unnecessary mileage is pared off the routes by these companies as a matter of economy.

The argument has been put forth that courses and facilities at Picton Collegiate do not compare favorably with those available in Belleville high schools. Mr. Davis' bill, presented and passed by the provincial house, is aimed at "providing equalized educational opportunities for Ontario's elementary and secondary school students." Should lack of facilities or courses really present a problem to Ameliasburgh students, in the event of their having to attend secondary school in Picton, does not the new bill stipulate that these would be provided in the integrated areas? If they were denied Prince Edward County students, would this not defeat the whole aim and purpose of the new bill?

Will another high school in the Quinte area be necssary to accommodate future students from the integrated areas? Would a second high school in Prince Edward county, perhaps more centrally located than PCVI, be an answer to this problem. Why not?

Meantime, Mr. Davis' new bill has made provisions for county units to continue purchasing secondary school education from neighboring counties until such time as courses and facilities are made available in their own area. Could not Ameliasburgh then, continue to purchase high school education from the Bay of Quinte board, and integrate with Prince Edward county at the elementary level only?

Finding solutions to these questions may present Mr. Davis' department with a heavy homework schedule during the next year or so.

MARION ANDREWS,
R.R.1, Carrying Place.

TV and The House Of Lords

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Britain's House of Lords has flunked its first great chance on television and it can now be safely said that the popular TV shows are in no danger of being pushed from peak spots in the BBC ratings.

It was found that while the scenery was magnificent, the characters lacked eye appeal. Viewers just were not ready for the noble lords in business suits and some with sunglasses or eye shades against the lights. The script, too, could have stood a bit of improvement.

However, in the stately chamber of Westminster, it was history of a sort. The peers last week initiated Parliament's first tentative step toward televising its debates.

Viewers heard a not very inspiring debate regarding sending British champs to a sod-busting championship event to be held in Rhodesia in the spring. This was headed off by Labor stalwarts stressing export sanctions on Ian Smith's outlawed government. Then there were some critics knocking the Concorde transport plane, supersonic pride and joy of the British and French governments.

Question of Censorship?

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

May I say a few words in answer to Sydney J. Harris' "False Analogy Exposed" article of February 19.

According to Mr. Harris there should be no censorship of any kind of immorality, and for the sake of freedom, sub-standard morals should be accepted by society.

I am glad there are not many of his kind, or else many young people might be exposed to the contamination of an immoral life.

I wonder if Mr. Harris has ever tried to condemn God for the ten commandments and Christ and His apostles for their equally strict moral rules?

Immoral standards have never been favored by any nation as a rule.

The Gentle Sex!

Brantford Expositor

In the age-old battle of the sexes few blows have been left unstruck, but an Englishwoman writing to The Times of London, has launched what appears to be a new offensive with five shrewd questions. She asks:

Which sex goes on strike continually and ruins the economy?

Which sex shoots policemen?

Which sex starts all the wars?

Which sex outnumbers the female sex by 80 to one in prison?

Which sex believes it is the salt of the earth and believes women to be inferior?

She may be on shaky ground with the fifth question, but what can man say in answer to the other four? For the moment we can't think of any reply except to point out that we have yet to learn of any man having shot a policewoman. But she might retort that that's only because there are so few of them.

A Hot Line To Jamaica

Peterborough Examiner

That's all right, operator, I'll hold. . . Hello, Mr. Pearson? Bob Winters here . . . Oh fine, sir, everything's going fine . . . No nothing special. Just thought I'd give you a call and chit-chat for a bit. Oh yes, there was one thing I'd just like to get your thoughts on . . .

No, it's nothing to do with the leadership, not directly. Fact is I'm beginning to lose interest in the whole thing, Mike. I mean . . . well, you know . . . it's a tough job and there are so many unpredictable things in politics. You know? One day you're sitting pretty and the next day you're. . . well. . .not sitting pretty. . .

What I called about is. . .no, we still have cabinet solidarity. That is, the cabinet is still there having meetings and all that. That reminds me. . .I know you are on your vacation and everything but we thought you might want to sit with us tomorrow about 1. We have this. . .well. . decision to make about. . .well, what we should do about this. . uh. . .thing. I mean, who wants an election in April?

Oh, I'm sure you'll understand better when you get here, Mr. Pearson. Oh, one other thing, you do have a key to the Commons, don't you?

Francis I of France was defeated and captured at the Battle of Pavia, Italy 443 years ago today—in 1525—by the Hapsburg emperor Charles V. Francis had to ransom himself by renouncing claims to Italy and Flanders and ceding part of central France as well. There were three more wars between Francis and Charles before they compromised on their territorial claims.

1955—Turkey and Iraq signed the Baghdad Pact.

Stones from Garbage: Jap Development

Christian Science Monitor

The Japanese do it better. Handling garbage we mean. A company in Yokosuka has announced that it is ready to turn garbage, dust, bottles and old clothes into stones which can be used for construction purposes. How Mayor Lindsay would have sighed, had he seen this announcement.

This Japanese invention is further proof of how far man's intelligence and ingenuity can go in meeting the mounting problems of his physical environment. Only a short while ago farmers were startled at the announcement that a Pennsylvania agricultural research station had proven that cows could thrive on a diet of old newspapers and molasses.

What can be done with newspapers, offal, dust and old clothes can surely be done with the rest of the refuse and pollution to be seen on all sides. While freshening the waters of Lake Erie (now considered "dead" because of its defilement) may be a mightier task than turning offal into stone, the latter can be taken as proof that man's intelligence is equal to whatever task is imposed upon it. What is needed now, is to use that intelligence.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 24, 1948.

There are very few residents of the city who cannot at once call to mind the thrill experienced when they have lined the curbs and cheered the Belleville Kiltie Band. Today this organization, which has been so much in the eyes of an admiring public, faces possible disbandment through a lack of funds. Consistent appearances before the public and in some cases non-payment for these services have depleted the resources of this group to a point whereby it must be given support or disband.

Mr. Justice C. A Cameron of the Exchequer court of Canada, has been appointed chairman of a conciliation board established to deal with a wage dispute involving Canadian Railways and a group of International Unions, Labor Minister Mitchell announced today.

30 YEARS AGO

February 24, 1938.

Wallace Havelock Robb of Abby Dawn, Kingston, formerly of Belleville, will be heard on the air over the National Broadcasting Company at W. J. Z. station on Sat. morning. Mr. Robb has been giving a series of addresses in the United States during the winter.

Carl D. Crosby, who has been associated with the J. B. Boyce automobile business for the past 15 years as service manager and salesman, has resigned and will enter the general insurance business on March 1st. Carl Crosby is well and favorably known and has a host of friends in the city and district who will wish him every success in his new undertaking.

40 YEARS AGO

February 24, 1928.

Two accidents occurred in last night's city hockey games, both resulting in a broken nose. Paul Hibbard, goal tender for the Quinte Electricians and playing against the Intelligencer Black Hawks, was hit by a hard shot square on the nose and Russell Gerow, playing for the "Y" Men against the Imperial Oil also received a broken nose when hit in a wild melee on the ice. Both players are reported as doing well today. Both games resulted in a tie, the score being 3 to 3.

50 YEARS AGO

February 24, 1918.

The mild weather followed by a downpour of rain during the greater part of the night was responsible for many Belleville citizens suffering inconvenience and damage owing to the flooding of their properties. This was especially the case on the west side of Coleman St. which is on the Coleman flats. At an early hour water from the flats developed into a torrent which raged down Boswell St., crossed Moira St., and then flooded houses on Coleman and Everett Sts. There was no warning and water rushed into houses and in several places the lower floors were covered with water to a depth of one foot or more.

West Learns From Orient

NEW YORK (AP)-He sits, legs folded, on a white deerskin rug, a small, bearded man in a white toga with a thin, reedy voice. The rug, followers explain, is to insulate him from vibrations that would disturb his serenity.

People today, he says, need "to experience the source of thought."

And it is realized, says Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, through—relaxed focusing of the mind on its clear, uncluttered centre—a discipline he advocates to cure the world's woes.

"The answer is to let life be free from suffering," he says, adding that this freedom comes once inward meditation dispels the petty drives and circumstances that torment human beings and cause their strife.

"For world peace, we have to have peace for the individual," says the visiting Hindu teacher.

It is an esoteric message for the pragmatic West, but it is one which is gaining a widening following in the United States, through numerous swamis of sundry methods, and a spreading network of meditation centres in many cities.

It also is an increasingly popular attraction in lecture halls and on college campuses, where various visiting swamis pack in the audiences.

Among students, "there's an unusual amount of interest in Oriental philosophy and the value of contemplation," said Yale's Roman Catholic chaplain, Rev. Richard R. Russell.

"It seems to come from a kind of frustration with social activism, a sense of despair at trying to change the ghettos or stop the war, and a turning to a more inner search."

Altogether there are more than 100 Hindu teaching centres in the United States, many of them started in recent years, led by swamis, teachers, or by yogis, ascetics who have mastered the yoga technique and exercises.

They frequently are called "our guru"—which also means teacher—by followers who include business executives, plumbers, lawyers, doctors, professors, housewives and mini-skirted secretaries.

Hinduism, an ancient, complex religion of ritual, creed and polytheism, maintains that man, entangled in the material world and blind to his inner spiritual nature, can overcome these worldly distractions by his own discipline and achieve harmony with divine reality.

In the Hindu view, all great religions have validity. It is believed that God, at various times, reincarnates himself in material form on earth in response to human need. These incarnations include Jesus Christ, Buddha, Mohammed, and recently, Ramakrishna, who died near Calcutta in 1886.

The travelling swami who has captured the widest attention lately is Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, 56, who has influenced various celebrities, including the Beatles, and whose highly organized appearances on the U.S. East Coast drew big turnouts.

A diminutive man, not more than five-foot-two, with white hair, grey beard, a double strand of beads around his neck and flowers in his arms, he has a vague, relaxed way about him, and laughs often and easily.

A Hindu disciple of Shankaracharya, his biographical sketch says he spent 13 years in study and meditation in the Himalayan Mountains to become a holy man, and has spent the last eight years touring to spread his message.

His approach calls for 30 minutes meditation in the morning and 30 minutes in the evening. Disciples are asked to contribute a week's salary to the movement to learn the technique.

Canadian Priests Aid Caribbeans

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (CP) — Eight Canadian priests minister here to a minority Roman Catholic population on the charming 150-square-mile island of St. Vincent in the Caribbean. They came from Vancouver, Ontario, Cape Breton Island and Newfoundland via the Foreign Mission Society in Scarborough, Ont.

Their St. Mary's Church in Kingstown is a one-tower oddity built by a Belgian monk. It has Moorish overtones, battlements and Gothic spires. The walls inside are painted a bright blue.

Rev. Ronald Bates from Cape Breton Island has been the regional supervisor since 1960.

Most of the priests are engaged in parish work but they do run a day creche for about 70 children at Georgetown, the last town on the good road along the east coast of the island. They are also planning to build a small hospital.

Other work includes the running of three primary schools, two in Kingstown and one up the coast.

"We're planning a fourth school out in the Mesopotami Valley," said Rev. John Gault, a native of Cornwall, Ont.

This is a good agricultural district with several villages scattered through it. It was formed when a volcano blew its peak off in 1812, leaving this long, narrow valley. Now the banana plantations grow right up the sides of the hills. The valley is one of St. Vincent's great tourist attractions.

Father Gault, educated at Laval University, came to the West Indies more than 20 years ago. He was assigned to St. Vincent some 15 months ago.

He said additional help has been forthcoming in welfare work, especially from Constance Kieley of St. John's, Nfld. This energetic young woman arranged to come to St. Vincent for three years and now is largely responsible for the creche. She also assists in other parish work in Georgetown.

A recent addition to the work is Rev. Melvin Stevens from Yarmouth, N.S. He has studied in the United States and at St. Francis Xavier College. He was assigned to St. Vincent last summer.

Face of the Future

A Los Angeles engineer thinks women living in an urban environment in 2000 will look like Vicki Dunlap, above. She wears body paint for insulation against the weather and air pollutants, including radioactivity. A computer necklace programs her day, governing the temperature of her oven, warning when her children will be home, and monitoring the guidance device of her car. Colored jewels are warning signals. Her hat it a receptor and transmitter for a two-way radio worn around the arms, with the earrings supplying energy for radio and computer. Think you can wait another 30 years?

Grade 13 Unnecessary For Nursing Students

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Matthew Dymond said Friday he sees no reason for every nursing student in the province to have Grade 13.

He said the greatest need in nursing is for bedside nurses and there is nothing to prevent a qualified nurse from adding to her education if she decides she wants to specialize or become an administrator.

Dr. Dymond was addressing about 150 nursing educationists representing most of Ontario's 65 diploma schools and several of the six university schools.

The conference was closed to the press, but a delegate said the most heated discussion was about how much schooling a student should have to qualify for nursing school.

Dr. Dymond said the province needs 5,000 nursing graduates every year to meet demands. In 1968, only 3,554 students enrolled in first year to bring the total in nursing schools to 9,713 this year.

Volunteer Bureau Formed

VICTORIA (CP) — A symphony musician works with retarded children. A bank manager visits a lonely pensioner. A university student tutors a group of children who can't afford a tutor.

All these and more are a result of the Volunteer Bureau of Greater Victoria.

Joan Stockdill, a spokesman for the bureau, says the symphony musician, a bank manager, university students, housewives and night workers are among many people who have volunteered to help any community that needs an extra hand.

Since the bureau first opened three months ago, to co-ordinate supply and demand for volunteer workers, more than 40 persons have been placed, Mrs. Stockdill says.

"A lot of men have been placed, including a number of night workers who feel they want to make more use of their daylight time," she says.

"The talents they have had to offer have brought agencies to our door who at first said they did not think they would be able to use our services.

"We can use anyone, whether they are kindly persons with no special skill, or highly trained in sports and academically."

The Volunteer Bureau is an offshoot of the Victoria Community Welfare Council and is open two days a week for persons interested in simply helping others.

Card Party Held by PC Women

The Progressive Conservative Women's Association of Belleville held a successful card party on Monday evening at the Kiwanis Centre.

The event was convened by the women of Ward 4 with Mrs. Shirley Glover and Mrs. Doreen Fox in charge. Prize winners were Ena Prentice, Mabel Green, Dorothy Howell, Pearl Holmes, Mrs. I. Goodfellow and Mr. Taylor. Mrs. Pearl Holmes instructed the players as to the rules and procedures.

President Mrs. Cliff Rendell thanked the members for coming out and expressed appreciation to those in charge of the social event.

Next meeting of the association will be on March 18, at which time N. Mika of Belleville will address the group at a supper meeting. Women of Ward 5 are responsible for the March meeting.

Fresh Flowers Become Important Accessories

If the "bells on her toes" don't ring, it might be because this year they are bluebells.

This is the word from New York fashion experts who recommend, among other things, the use of fresh flowers in a nosegay on feminine footwear.

The occasion, say the floral designers would be a party. The memorable entrance would be made by the guest whose makeup is accented by the fresh softness of real flowers.

This year, they say, makeup is sheer, with soft, glowing overtones. This calls for brighter shades than usual to create a spark under artificial light.

The suggestion is that romantic makeup be complemented by foregoing traditional gold and silver jewelry for the freshness of flowers.

Designers made it a head-to-toe proposition this year by creating special live accessories. The pin-on corsage, they suggest, should be traded for a nosegay worn on the shoe and posies in the hair.

Skin shows up petal soft with flower chains at the wrist and neck, they suggest. Or, what about a single floral strap for the gown? For the ultra-romantic, florists have come up with an arrangement of flowers laced through a fan in imitation of Victorian maidens.

For the lady planning to try this "smashing entrance," the designers have this advice: experiment with makeup and accessories well in advance — and leave yourself emergency time on the big night.

And if you plan to try the floral footwear, it might be a good idea to remind party-goers to keep off the garden!

Church Groups

Mercy Rao Mission Circle

The February meeting of Mercy Rao Mission Circle of Emmanuel Baptist Church was held recently in the church hall.

Mrs. Savage installed the following 1963 officers: president, Mrs. S. Campbell; vice-president, Mrs. A. Arthur; secretary, Mrs. C. Dondale; treasurer, Mrs. D. Rowe; group leaders, Mrs. C. Savage, Mrs. C. Pryor, Mrs. I. Bowerman; White Cross, Mrs. B. Hamilton; social, Mrs. P. Wiegand, Mrs. B. Kerr; New Canadian work, Mrs. G. Brunet; reading course, Mrs. E. Jensen; link and visitor, Mrs. G. Low.

Mrs. C. Pryor's group was in charge of the program which opened with a devotional by Mrs. J. English.

Members of the Mohawk band from Tyendinaga Reserve were guests, and gave and account of their language and dress, David Maracle recited the Lord's Prayer in Mohawk, and explained some of the words, saying that Mohawk is a very descriptive language. He and Mrs. Shirley Brant modelled costumes worn by Indians of bygone days. His was an elaborate beaded velvet outfit worn by his great-grandfather in 1889 on a trip to England, where he was presented with a set of communion silver by Queen Anne. The silver is still used in the church on the reserve.

The deerskin costumes were laced rather than sewn together, and were made by Mrs. Brant. They were worn by Mr. and Mrs. Brant last summer when they were presented to Queen Elizabeth in Kingston.

Arnold Brant showed slides of the service of commemoration held each May in memory of the safe landing of the Mohawks at their present site after their flight from New York State.

The guests were thanked by Mrs. G. Brunet and the program closed with prayer by Mrs. D. Rowe.

The guests served Indian soup and homemade bread to the group.

CNE Women's Division To Have More Space

TORONTO (CP) — The women's division at the Canadian National Exhibition will have more than three times as much space this year as it did last.

It will move into the 210,000-square-foot better living building from its 63,000 square foot quarters in the Queen Elizabeth building.

Elsa Jenkins, director of the women's division described plans for change Thursday at a meeting of the women's section of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

She told about 500 women there may be a bridal show and centre in addition to fashion windows, handicrafts and the traditional competitions.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH DONALD ALLAIRE

Allaire – Hall

The Church of St. Gregory, Picton, was the scene of the wedding Feb. 10, 1968, at 11 a.m., of Barbara Diane, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard N. Hall, Bloomfield, and Joseph Donald Allaire, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Allaire, Picton. Rev. G. O'Hearn officiated and Sister Mary Hubert played the wedding music and accompanied the choir.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length A-line gown of white peau de soie with Guipure lace bodice, bell sleeves and detachable train bordered with matching lace. Her three-tier silk illusion veil fell from an organza rose and lily-of-the-valley headpiece and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white shasta daisies.

Mrs. Sharon Vanclief, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a floor length Empire style gown of emerald green silk velvet, a feathered headpiece and matching veil.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Jane McAlpine, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Lynne Richards and Miss Barbara Morrow, were gowned identically to the matron of honor.

Peter Allaire was his brother's attendant and the ushers were Joe McAlpine, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Lyle Vanclief, brother-in-law of the bride, and Terry Plews.

At the reception at Maple Inn, Bloomfield, the bride's mother received, wearing a green and gold puff brocade dress and jacket, gold hat and accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. To assist, the bridegroom's mother wore a brown and gold dress and jacket with beige satin hat, matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

A SEAWARD ROUTE

"I must go down to the seas again . . . and all I ask is a tall shop and a star to steer her by." — from "Sea-Fever" by John Masefield.

* * *

"It was cloudy and threatening to rain. About three o'clock we thought we might as well head across Lake Ontario to Olcott, N.Y. At least we would be getting farther south and that's the idea of this jaunt. The Toronto skyline certainly is beautiful from the middle of the lake. About 7 o'clock it was pitch black, no moon, no stars. A bit later it was strictly a compass course, water, water everywhere. The sailing was fine till the wind went down, then it was rolling, rolling, up and down, back and forth. And cold! You don't know what cold is till you're in the middle of a black lake under a black sky. Dear God, Thy sea is so great and my boat is so small . . ."

Dated the day after Thanksgiving, 1967, so writes Mrs. Waghorne, the former Betty Ann Lazenby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Page, 37 Dunbar Street of Belleville. As a school-girl attending Prince Charles, Queen Mary and Quinte Secondary schools, Betty Ann, perhaps, little dreamed that one day she would set out for the West Indies in a sail boat.

Her descriptive, enthusiastic daily accounts of this trip take the reader with her and her husband Clay (both in their early twenties) as they sail down the International Waterway, to avoid the seas as much as possible, from Toronto to the West Indies (where they hope to live for a while) in their 30 foot-sailing boat "Yonder 11". The Waghornes are members of the Belleville Yacht Club.

They left Olcott, N. Y. going "to the farthest point of land, and when we got there we headed for the farthest point of land again and so on into the afternoon and evening" until they arrived at Rochester. At Oswego, N.Y. she writes, "This is the end of the sailing for a while and the beginning of the chug-chug motor. I wonder what the locks will be like. . ." and as they enter the Erie Canal system says "Our first lock . .it wasn't too hard. We have to go through eight locks across Lake Oneida and then down through 22 locks." The fourth lock is "the highest of the canal system: about 75 feet and very forbidding looking. We've been told that going down is easier."

At Brewerton, N. Y. on the shore of Lake Oneida, another boat "got too close and tore out two life rail stancions and broke the railing they were attached to. The fellow who did it took one look and said, "Oh, Milt will pay for it." Like it happened every day. This fellow was taking the boat to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, for the owner, Milt. We got all the particulars about the boat and about Milt, so we'll have to get repaired at Troy and take the bill to Fort Lauderdale. We got as far as Rome after going through our last "up" lock."

The next day, upon reaching St. Johnsville, N. Y. "we started out in the sunshine. We're going through about three or four locks a day now; we made 14, 13, and 12 so far today. That leaves only 11 more before we reach Troy. The last six are one right after the other just outside Troy." Upon reaching Troy, "we had our first experience with tides last night; we went down six feet over night. The Erie Canal joins the Hudson River at Troy and we'll be getting tides from now on."

"The country is so beautiful, going down the Hudson. Hills all over the place and in the background far away, big black hills. Quite often there's a sheer rock cliff coming right down to the water. We went by West Point Military Academy and headed into Peekskill where we stayed over night." Then "as we neared New York City it was quite exciting to see all the large buildings getting closer and closer. We made it to 79th Street Boat Basin about 5.30 and tied up just before dark. New York City at last!"

Soon after, two boats travelling together tied up beside the Yonder 11. "They were the 'Xanadu' from Hamilton and lo and behold! — one from Belleville, the 'James B'!" And since all three boats were sailing southward, it was decided they would try to keep together, now that the International Waterway course lay entirely on the open sea from New York City to Cape May, N. J.

"It was quite a good day for the early part. By three o'clock the shore started to get misty. Xanadu had gone ahead and James B and Yonder 11 were staying together, yelling back and forth. About 3:30 the visibility was down to a quarter of a mile and I was keeping my eye on James B. who had changed course slightly. In five more minutes, we could barely see the bow of the boat! We were completely cut off from Xanadu and the James B. All we could do then was to keep our course and hop and pray that every one was safe.

"This was our very first experience with fog and only our second time on the ocean. We followed the compass course that Clay had charted previously and about five o'clock we came right to a buoy that was on our course. We could read the letters on it with the flashlight, so we looked on our chart and there it was. We were exactly where we were supposed to be! We have more faith than ever now in our compass.

"The fog lifted for about an hour. . .we could plainly see the mass of lights from Atlantic City." The fog closed in again and with much difficulty "we made a beeline into the harbor entrance trying to find the Atlantic State Marina." Unsuccessful in this, "we tied up at a small but very nice yacht basin we were in. . . and set out at once to try to locate the other two boats."

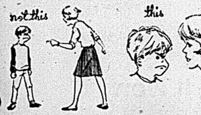
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

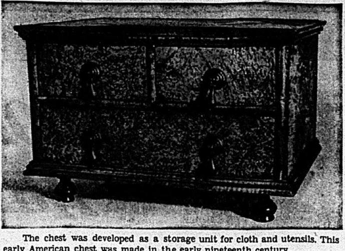


Son: "I don't like you. You're a mean mother.

Mother: "Don't you dare talk to me like that or I'll slap you."

Mother: "I'm sorry you're so disappointed — but you know I'm not keeping you home just to be mean."

Everybody loses when a parent battles an angry overwrought child. Let him know you understand his anger and sympathize with his disappointment, even though you cannot grant his wishes.



The chest was developed as a storage unit for cloth and utensils. This early American chest was made in the early nineteenth century.

Wife Says Poetical Thank-you To Tree-planting Husband

Dear Doris: Having weathered 26 years of marriage and the upbringing of six children, counselling is not what I need at the moment, but every now and then you act as go-between for those of us interested in a bit of poetry. How you manage all this is a mystery to me.

Would you by any chance have a poem on "He Who Plants a Tree"; the very last two lines of which are:

"A nation's growth, from sea to sea,
Stirs in the heart of he,
who plants a tree."

It might interest you to know why I want it. Two years ago we were facing expropriation of our property. Our City Council was helpful and fair. We were given permission to remove fruit trees and other ornamental bushes to our new location. In all, my husband transplanted 25 small trees and ornamental shrubs. I'd like to give him the poem. — Just Eve.

Dear Eve: Say it with poetry. Good for you!

But it simply couldn't be "in the heart of he." Help, somebody!

• • •

Dear Doris: There is one subject that you and I don't see eye to eye on: that is about a girl going with a boy a few years older than herself. I think it depends a lot on the individuals.

I married my husband when I was 17 and he 29, 26 years ago, and I have never for one minute regretted it. If there is such a thing as a perfect marriage we have it.

My three sisters married in their early 20's to men about their own age and none of them has been as happy as we have been. My youngest sister is divorced and living common law with a man much older than she is. While I don't go along with that part of it, the fact remains that they get along fine together.

So you see, Doris, age does not always mean so much in a marriage. I wouldn't trade my old man for any of the young ones I have seen so far. My wish for my children is that when they marry, whether it be to someone their own age or someone older or younger, they will be as happy as their father and I have been. —Maw.

Dear Maw: There's nothing I'd rather read than a success story like yours. Many things besides age to into the making of a good marriage, and you had all of them going for you.

In counselling folk I don't know, all I can do is quote the averages, which show that matches usually work out best between individuals of around the same age. Thank heaven there are notable exceptions.

Dear Doris: I am 18. I'm five months pregnant. I'm so scared I've never seen a doctor or told anyone yet, not even my mother, and I can't tell my parents because they are too strict.

What can I do? If I tell my parents, what can I say to them? — A girl in Trouble.

Dear Girl: This tragic secret simply won't keep. Better tell it soon and get the help which is there for you.

The strictness is your parents' way of keeping you from trouble. Now that you are in it they are your first aid. Show them this column and say: "I am that girl. I'm sorry. Please help me!"

Ask your mother to go with you to the child care agency, where an understanding worker will talk it all over and help you with plans for your baby and your own future. In Belleville this is the Children's Aid Society of Belleville and Hastings County, 63 Moira Street West.

Domineering Mother Overrules Doctor

DEAR ANN LANDERS: At what age should a daughter be allowed to go into a doctor's examination room without her mother?

ANN LANDERS

I am 14 years old and mature for my age. My mother has always been too protective and too domineering. We have had a big argument over this and she made me feel like a fool. The doctor told my mother (in my presence) that it was not necessary for her to stay with me during the examination but she raised such a fuss that he finally let her have her way. Please reply in the paper for the benefit of other girls who may have this problem. — OVERRULED DAUGHTER.

DEAR DAUGHTER: Any child who is old enough to walk is old enough to go into a physician's examining room without mother. Most doctors have a nurse to assist them, so you would in all probability not have been alone.

It's unfortunate that the doctor did not overrule your mother instead of allowing her to overrule him — and you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please print something in your column about people who spend half their waking hours in "dreamland?"

My husband who is 60 has had three marriages — none of them any good, including this one. The problem is that he fancies himself a dashing Lothario and I am sick of it. For the past year he has carried on a red hot, mail-order romance with a girl who is barely out of her teens. I found a letter he had written to her but not mailed. He said he was willing to leave his wife and family if she would run off with him. When I confronted him with the letter he laughed and said "I don't mean any of this silly stuff — I'm just having fun."

I've never been able to prove that he has actually done anything out of line, but if he is imagining all this doesn't he need psychiatric help? — TORONTO.

DEAR T.: He sounds a little weird, but it may be a combination of male menopause and plain foolishness. If all he does is write goofy letters and you have no evidence that he is running around, forget it. Part of his "fun" might be leaving the junk around so you can see it. When you react less he may behave better.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What is the matter with people who stop you on the street, grab you in a restaurant or on a bus, back you into a corner and show you two dozen snapshots of their children? I am a father and my kids happen to be very attractive, but I wouldn't dream of button-holing a friend and shoving a fistful of pictures in his face.

The other day I was rushing to a dental appointment and a woman who used to live near us yelled at me from across the street, "Wait a minute!" It had started to rain and I was already five minutes late, but of course, I was hooked. She rushed me under an awning. "I knew you would want to see what the children look like now. We moved away almost three years ago," she cackled.

I was so mad I could hardly see straight, yet I had to smile and say, "Oh aren't they adorable!" I felt like a hypocrite and a fool. Can you think of something fairly honest yet not insulting? I'd appreciate some help. — WET AND LATE.

DEAR W. AND L.: You could try Goldwyn's famous line, which he used on a competitor after he watched his film — "You've got yourself a picture there!"

Chest for Storage Was Known in Ancient Egypt

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

No one ever seems to have enough space in the closet or enough drawers for storage. Imagine what it must have been like for our ancestors. They had fewer dresses or suits but far fewer drawers.

The chest for storage was known in ancient Egypt and Rome. A portable chest for belongings was important in the middle ages. As living became easier and homes more permanent the chest became less portable. Larger storage units were constructed. The chest of drawers was an important piece of furniture for the home by the end of the seventeenth century.

Styles have changed but the basic idea of several drawers in a box-like structure has remained the same.

Q. The name John Haviland is written on my dishes. Is that real Haviland china?

A. Johann Haviland made porcelain wares after 1907. He worked in Waldershof, Bavaria. The famous Haviland wares were made in France beginning in 1846. Your dishes were made by a distant relative of the original French family.

• • •

Q. How much lead can be used safely in pewter dishes?

A. Pure lead containers for food are dangerous. The English guilds for pewter makers in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries said that 4 to 10 per cent lead content was permissible in food containers. This was found to be safe. All pewter made today as tableware is safe to use.

Q. Paperweights are often discussed. I can't find anything about the type that contains water, snow, and a figure in the centre. The paperweight I own has a little girl sitting on a brown porcelain base. The snow and water are getting cloudy. How can I refill it?

A. Snow paperweights were first made in France about 1850. The earliest ones have porcelain or marble bases. New paperweights have been made with wooden or plastic stands. Do not try changing the liquid and snow. It will destroy the value of the weight. The original liquid is not water but a chemical mixture.

Q. What is Schneider art glass?

A. Charles and Ernest Schneider founded the "Cristallerie Schneider" in 1903. The firm was located a few miles from Paris, France. The company is still working although it has moved to Orleans, France.

Most of the wares made by the firm from 1903 to 1925 were art glass, art nouveau designs, mottled glass, cameo glass and red iridescent wares.

All of the glass was marked with the name Schneider in script letters before 1925. After that time only the best pieces were marked with block letters.

Head Start Offered On Christmas Baking

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Before you finally put away your last Christmas cake recipe for 1967 would you please help me? One time (I believe it was within the last six years) you gave a recipe for a white Christmas cake. The flavoring called for almond extract and rose water. After mention was made of the rose water you said, "do not omit". That cake had the nicest flavor of any I have tried. As you probably have guessed by now, I misplaced the recipe and cannot find it. — Dorothy L. S.

ANSWER: Thank you for quoting from the release. It made the fruit cake you wanted easy to identify. Other readers! Please clip this if it catches your interest for Christmas 1968.

WHITE FRUIT CAKE 1963

These amounts make a little more than 4 pounds and fill 2 loaf pans, 8½" x 4½" x 2¾".

two-thirds cup whole pecans two-thirds cup cocoanut (preferably "natural unsweetened) monds, chopped coarsely
two-thirds cocoanut (preferably "natural unsweetened) two-thirds cup whole glace cherries (preferably red and green)
two-thirds cup candied pineapple, chopped coarsely (could be variegated colors)
2 cups blanched Sultana raisins
5 tablespoons flour (for dredging fruits)
two-thirds cup butter
1 one-third cups white sugar
4 eggs, yolks and whites separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon rosewater (do not omit)
4 teaspoons orange juice or pineapple juice or brandy
2 cups stirred but not sifted flour
1 one-third teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Cream together butter and sugar until light and fluffy—an electric beater is ideal. Add unbeaten egg yolks and beat until very light and fluffy — about 4 or 5 minutes. Add vanilla, rosewater, and the orange juice or pineapple juice or brandy. Mix well again for about 1 minute. Sift together the 2 cups flour, baking powder and salt. Mix fruits and nuts together. Dredge them with the 5 tablespoons flour. Beat egg whites stiffly. Stir flour mixture into butter-sugar mixture, alternately with the floured fruits and nuts. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Line 2 loaf pans (see above) with 4 thickness of heavy wax paper. Butter the last thickness of wax paper. Pour batter into lined pans. Smooth tops. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for about 2 hours — having water pan in oven under cakes during entire baking period. Test for doneness with toothpick at centre. If cake is baked toothpick will come out clean. If desired to glaze — fifteen minutes before time is up remove cakes from oven and decorate tops artistically with flowerlike arrangements of glace pineapple "petals" and sliced glace cherries. When you have fruits in place on tops of cakes, drip a little corn syrup diluted with alittle hot water, over top and return cakes to oven. They will come out attractively glazed.

Sanitary sewer main being installed to serve Foster Ward area goes deep underground. Picture indicates depth of excavation near the corner of St. Paul and Newberry streets.

Building Program Is Boon To City

There have been few major municipal winter works projects in the city this winter, but a healthier than usual February building program is helping to keep numbers of people in the construction trades busy.

City building inspector Grant Stickle reports that construction permits so far this month have totalled just over $152,000 with 24 single family houses and a number of multi-unit apartment blocks under various stages of construction.

Municipal works underway this winter include installation of sewers in the Foster Ward area; installation of water services in Hillcrest, and a $16,000 tree cutting program aimed at ridding the city of elms killed by Dutch Elm disease.

Good progress is being made on the sewer construction project in Foster Ward with the work apparently slowed but little as the result of cold weather.

Much of the sewer installation done so far has called for considerable rock excavation.

City building inspector Stickle says a number of multi - unit apartment structures are underway in different parts of the city.

The largest of these is a 12 - unit block being constructed by Charles Lambert on Moira Street, East. The new apartment block is on the "river side" of the street with its rear yard facing the Moira River.

Two 11 - unit apartments are underway in West Belleville in the Catherine - Yeomans street area, while exterior work on two six - plexes in the Albany Heights area west of Sidney Street, is all but completed.

In the downtown area a large scale renovations at the former income tax building at 311 Front Street are nearing completion.

On completion the local Children's Aid Society, is scheduled to move into the second and third floors, while a finance company will be first floor tenants.

According to Mr. Stickle the $150,000 - plus building total so far this month has made it the best February in several years.

This month's building total compares with but $11,000 a year ago and $73,000 in February of 1966.

Sunday Fairs Asked

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies has been asked to support a bid by the Canadian National Exhibition to have legislation passed by the provincial government allowing fairs to be held on Sundays.

At present, Sunday fairs are not legal under the Lord's Day Act. Several of the larger agricultural fairs in Ontario have supported the CNE request.

"I feel we should support the seeking of permissive legislation and leave it to the individual fairs to decide whether they wish to operate on Sundays or not," William Fear, secretary-manager of the Welland Agricultural Society, told the association's convention Thursday.

When You're in Love Whole World Topless

TORONTO (CP) — "It's fun," says Barbara Branch.

"It makes you feel so . . . free," says Marcelle Mitchell.

It was "a great, daredevil idea," says Robin Sherwood.

And Debbie Dayan, a girl in love, says: "When you're in love the whole world is topless."

That's how four bare-breasted musicians summed up their experiences as the world's first all-girl topless band.

Calling themselves the Ladybirds, the girls this week are concluding a precedent-setting, two-week nightclub engagement in Toronto.

"I don't think we've had a warmer reception anywhere than we're having here," said Robin, 23, who plays lead guitar.

"We were all working in San Francisco as showgirls when our manager thought up the topless band gimmick last June," said Robin.

Marcelle, 23, who plays bass guitar, used to work for a foundation garment firm, but that was "before I found out how fantastic it is to play guitar bare-chested."

"It's fun," says blonde guitarist Barbara Branch, 21. "Of course now we feel we're more musical than topless."

But not everyone has agreed that bare bosoms covered with flesh - colored pasties are a necessary part of the job.

The Ladybirds were arrested during a night club engagement last year and the court case against them is still pending in New York.

Aces and Kings Win First Trick in Sr. A Playoff Shuffle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The favorites won by a country mile in the opening games Friday night of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior playoffs:

Kingston Aces downed Woodstock Aleans 7-4 while Collingwood Kings trounced Guelph Regals 3-0 in the first games of their best-of-seven quarter-final playoffs.

The four other teams in the playoff schedule open their quarter-final sets today with Toronto Marlboros at home to Barrie Flyers and Oakville Oaks travelling to Galt to meet the Hornets. The eight top teams after the regular schedule were eligible for playoffs.

Goalie Chuck Jewell was a standout at Collingwood as the Kings, who finished third in the league, easily turned back the Regals, the fifth-place team.

Butch Keeling, Hec Brainard and Joe Handley scored for Collingwood. Brainard's goal came in the first period on a short passing play while Handley banged in his own rebound to make the score 2-0 in the third period. Keeling's goal on a 50-foot slap shot with a minute left to play put the game out of reach for the Regals.

The teams resume the series Sunday at Guelph.

The Aces, Allan Cup champions last year but unable to finish better than fourth in the standings, led 6-2 going into the third period in their game at Kingston.

Ronnie Earl paced the Aces with two goals. The other Kingston goals were shared by John Ford, Charlie Convery, Bob Rawson, Rod Graham and Jim Sprott.

Dan Mahony led Woodstock with two goals and Gary Sharp and Dick Smith each scored once.

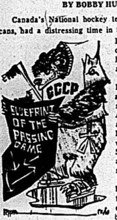
Woodstock goalie Al Bennett left the game in the second period when he was cut for nine stitches on the forehead by a flying puck. Al Cullen replaced him.

The teams moved to Woodstock for the second game Tuesday night.

Bobby Hull's World Of Hockey

BY BOBBY HULL

Canada's National hockey team, and the Americans, had a distressing time in the Winter Olympics.



CCCP
BLUEPRINT OF THE PASSING GAME

I mean how else to describe Canada's 5-2 loss to the Finns, of all people?

The Canadians haven't won the world amateur championship since 1961, and the Americans since 1960, and this inevitably leads to comparisons with the Europeans. Specifically with the all-conquering Russians.

To begin with, nobody should expect the Canadian and American amateurs to beat the Russians pros. There's no doubt in my mind about it. The Russians are as professional as any of us in the National Hockey League.

I also thing the Iron Curtain countries would do some ganging up if it would assure Russia of winning. If any Iron Curtain country developed a good hockey player, and the Russians wanted him, I'm sure the Russians would get him.

So what do we do to regain our hockey prestige abroad? We have to admit that our amateurs, who are as true as amateurs can be, are not strong enough to beat a Russian team that is the pick of thousands of Soviet players. The Russian Nationals are the best of more than a million so-called amateurs; Canada's team was picked from what? From 200,000 at most.

The Canadian and American amateurs have their hearts in it, but no expert would suggest they are the best players we produce. The pros are the best, which is why we should be represented by pros — NHL pros.

If our pros lost to the Russian pros, nobody would have any complaint. If their best is better than our best, the Russia deserves the title.

There will, I feel, come a relaxing of the phony amateur rules which bar pros from international competition. This will come when the Russians decide they want to take on the NHL pros head to head. The Olympic championship must seem pretty hollow to them when they know they didn't beat the best possible opposition.

I keep reading about the outdated amateur code loudly supported by Avery Brundage, the president of the International Olympic Committee. Mr. Brundage refuses to realize that the code is so strict that it leads only to hypocrisy. There are hardly any athletes — and certainly no hockey players — who can honestly say they haven't received some reward for competing.

I'd like a shot at the Russians, or anybody else, in open competition. How about shooting with a team composed of Stan Mikita and Ken Wharram of Chicago, goalie Doug Favell of Philadelphia, Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr of Boston, Jean Beliveau, Jacques Laperrier, Bob Rousseau and Yvan Cornoyor of Montreal, Gordie Howe and Norm Ullman of Detroit, Dave Keon, Tim Horton, Frank Mahovlich and Mike Walton of Toronto?

Even a sports writer could coach that mob and win.

Dick Duff's Play Makes Toe Blake Look Good

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Dick Duff's arrival in Montreal three-years ago in a move engineered by Canadien's that sent Billy Hicke to New York Rangers had some hockey experts questioning the deal.

Duff, after all, was a 10-year National Hockey League veteran with Toronto Maple Leafs and New York. Hicke was a young man with a future.

But today coach Toe Blake wouldn't trade Duff for a handful of young men in a hurry. The 32-year-old Kirkland Lake, Ont., native is one of the main generators of Montreal's recent surge to the top of the Eastern Division standings.

And the future for Duff looks bright.

"I have five more goals to get to reach 250," he said Friday in an interview. "And, looking around at some of the older fellows, I see no reason why I can't play for a number of years yet, barring injury."

Although an injury forced him to operate at reduced effort early in the season, he's been able to give maximum effort since Christmas Day when the Canadiens languished in the division cellar.

In the span, Duff has scored 14 of his 22 goals and added seven assists while playing on a line with rookie centre Jacques Lemaire and right winger Bobby Rousseau.

"I can't pinpoint any one thing that's helped me lately," he said. "I've just enjoyed playing the last while more than at other times since I started out.

"I made up my mind that I want the maximum effort from myself. The better the year I have, the better position I'm in for next year. . . .

"I always play better in the second half."

Duff is by no means the only reason the Canadiens have lost only one of their 25 games since Dec. 25, but he does typify the kind of play Blake has been getting from several quarters.

Lemaire (18 goals and 17 assists) and Rousseau (12 goals and 36 assists) have also been scoring consistently along with team captain Jean Beliveau (24 goals and 29 assists).

Lorne Worsley and Rogatien Vachon have played superb goals to hold the league lead with an average of just over two goals a game.

Toronto Maple Leafs take on Boston Bruins at home tonight in one of the four remaining games between the clubs, games which could decide the team to make the fourth and last playoff spot in the division.

Brian Conacher, demoted to Rochester Americans of the American League Feb. 6, has been recalled and is expected to dress.

Ray Cullen, out since Feb. 7 with a hairline fracture of his right ankle, was expected to be back for Minnesota North Stars in a limited capacity tonight when they visit Detroit Red Wings.

The rest of the schedule has Chicago Black Hawks in Los Angeles to play the Kings while Oakland Seals are at Pittsburgh Penguins.

Mikita, Hull Would Like to Play Russians

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two stars of Chicago Black Hawks, Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita, said Friday a hockey match with the Olympic champion Russian team might be interesting.

But both made it clear such a game would not be up to the players of the National Hockey League.

"The only way to resolve anything would be to play them," Mikita said.

Both said the Russians play under differnt rules as amateurs in international competition, although Mikita added:

"You can't really say that they are amateurs."

Mikita said he asked Czechoslovakian players last year what else they did besides play hockey.

"They said nothing, they just played hockey."

Hull said the Russians are a "fine group of athletes, whatever you call them, pro or amateur."

Mikita added:

"From what I've seen, they can handle the puck pretty well, but it's hard to say how they would play against us."

Mikita and Hull were speaking at a news conference.

The Russians won the Grenoble Winter Olympics hockey gold medal earlier this month with a 6-1 won-lost record. They defeated third-place Canada 5-0 in the last game.

Kitchener Trailing 6-1 Then Rallies To Win 7-6

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was comeback night Friday in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Hamilton Red Wings fired three consecutive third-period goals to earn a 5-5 tie with Toronto Marlboros.

But the most stunning comeback occurred at Niagara Falls where Kitchener Rangers overcame a five-goal deficit by scoring six goals in the third period to eke out a 7-6 victory over the Flyers.

At Montreal, the high-flying Junior Canadiens trimmed Oshawa Generals 8-5 in the night's only other action.

Kitchener's surprising win, after trailing 6-1, enabled the Rangers to maintain a three-point, first-place lead in the standings over the pursuing Canadiens, in second spot with 67 points.

Jack Egers scored twice for Kitchener and single goals went to John Barber, Danny Seguin, Dennis Dupere, Walt Tkaczuk and Jim McRea. Tom Webster scored three goals for the Flyers, raising his season total to 48. Phil Roberto, Mike Keeler and Russ Frieson were the other Flyers' marksmen.

At Toronto, the Marlboros held a 4-2 lead going into the third period and quickly increased it to 5-2 before the Red Wings scored three goals to earn the tie. Fred Speck and Ed Hatoum, each with two goals, were the leaders in the surge by Hamilton, outshot 41-29 over the three periods.

Tom Trevelyan got the other Hamilton marker.

Toronto scorers were Carl Varga, John Wright, Terry Caffery, Doug Acomb and Gord Davies.

In a rough game at Montreal, the Canadiens were led by Arthur Quoquochi, Rejean Houle and Jean-Pierre Bordeleau, each with two goals. Marc Tardif and Ralph Stewart got the other Montral goals.

Oshawa snipers were Ivan Boldirev, with two, Dale Tallon, Tom Foxcroft and Brian Morenz.

Referee Andre Langevin called 33 penalties, including seven majors and three misconducts. Joe Robertson of Oshawa was carried from the ice on a stretcher in the third period after a hard check from defenceman Jim Bannatyne.

Wrestling Referee Takes Close Look at West Elgin – Renfrew Combatants

Morris 1st Round Winner In High School Wrestling

Wrestlers - high school style-took over Belleville last night as the largest gathering of high school athletes ever to be seen in Canada opened the provincial wrestling championships.

But for Belleville schools it was an inauspicious start. Only two of seven students to see first round action won initial bouts. The remaining four students rounding out Belleville's contribution to the 453 wrestlers on hand from 123 schools weren't scheduled to see action until today.

Wayne Morris of Moira, Ontario champion last year in the 123-pound class, won his first bout by a fall in his effort to score a repeat win. Schoolmate John Hinchey win. by a decision in the 106 pound class.

However, other local wrestlers didn't fare as well. Ray Summers of Moira was defeated in the 136-pound class and four Quinte entrants lost first round bouts. They were Tom Brant, in the 115-pound class; Dave Storey in the 136-pound class; Dave Casselman in 123 and Ian Rutherford in the 168-pound category.

Harold Townsend of Quinte, and Al McLuskie, Bill Hinchey and Harold Brant of Moira did not get a chance to wrestle last night as all the opening round bouts were not completed.

Heading the pack after 135 matches in the opening night was defending champion Winston Churchill school of Scarborough with 12 points. Sturgeon Falls held second place with 11 points followed by West Hill of Scarborough and Catholic Central of London, Ont., with seven points. Southwood of Galt, Aliston - Banting, Georgetown and Pembroke each had six points.

The tournament continues all day at Centennial Secondary School. The finals in all events are scheduled to get under way at seven o'clock this evening.

Baseball Roundup

Red Sox Picture Not Matched by Other Training Camps

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

The pride of the Red Sox is counting on the pride of his team-mates bringing another American League pennant to Boston in 1968.

"I think we will win the pennant again because of our pride," Triple Crown winner Carl Yastrzemski said Friday after checking into Boston's Winter Haven, Fla., training base. "I have never seen a team with as much pride in itself as the Red Sox."

While Yaz' early arrival and the signing of pitcher Jose Santiago brightened the Boston camp, Los Angeles Dodgers, New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles continued to meet stiff resistance from unsigned players.

Relief pitcher Phil Regan said he would remain at his home in Grand Rapids, Mich., until his salary dispute with the Dodgers is settled. Yankee manager Ralph Houk fretted over the prolonged holdout of southpaw Al Downing, the club's top pitcher last season with a 14-10 mark.

And Orioles second baseman Dave Johnson held firm to his demand for a big pay boost, although he won't be considered a holdout until the Baltimore regulars report to spring camp at Miami, Fla., next week.

"I don't like to miss spring training, but the club has sent me four or five contracts and I have sent them all back," said Regan, who is fighting a $5,000 cut from his estimated 1967 salary of $36,000. The tall right-hander was 9-1 two years ago, 6-9 last season.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Houk said Downing, who wants a bigger raise than the Yankees have offered him, is "missing work he should have."

"I don't like a pitcher to push himself trying to get in shape too fast," added the Yanks' pilot. "I wish he'd get down here, get the contract signed and start working."

Johnson, who batted only .217 for the Orioles, is said to be seeking a $9,000 increase from his estimated $16,000 salary of last year. "We offered Dave a raise," said Harry Dalton, the club's director of player personnel. "But I would have to say we are still far apart."

Outfielders Frank Robinson and Curt Blefary and first baseman Boog Powell are among the other unsigned Orioles.

In granting Santiago a healthy raise on the merits of his 12-4 pitching record last year, the Red Sox trimmed their unsigned roster to two—outfielders Reggie Smith and Jose Tartabull.

Yastrzemski, meanwhile, weighed in at a trim 182 pounds—the same as he scaled at the end of the World Series last October—and set his sights on a .300 batting average and at least 100 runs batted in for 1968. The AL's Most Valuable Player batted .326, swatted 44 home runs and had 121 RBI last year.

"I can't even guess how many home runs I'll hit," he said. "I might hit 20 and I might hit 50. The runs batted in are the big thing. Of the three departments for the Triple Crown, I'll take the RBI first."

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals and the pennant-hungry Cincinnati Reds filled out a rainy Florida day by announcing some prominent signings.

Cowboy Shows Up to Watch Tucson Open

Douglass, 31, carded nine birdies en route to a 31-32—63 second round, equalling the Tucson National Golf Club course record in 1965 by Don January.

He and Ogden, the host pro, both had 36-hole totals of nine under par 135, to lead a pack of close pursuers over the 72-yard par 72 Tucson National Course.

Ogden, 41-year-old winter tour regular, eagled the 530-yard, par five, 11th hole with a drive, four-wood second shot and a six-inch putt.

One stroke behind the leaders with eight-under 136s at the start of play today are Harold Henning, Jack Montgomery and first-round leader Jerry McGee, who had to scramble to record a one-under-par 71.

Winnipeg-born shotmaker George Knudson, now playing out of Toronto, was just two strokes off the pace at 137. Winner of last weekend's Phoenix Open, Knudson was tied with Tommy Jacobs, George Bayer and Dave Stockton.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer had a three-under 69 Friday but his 36-hole total of 143 put him eight strokes behind the leaders.

With more than a dozen golfers taking shots at the lead Friday, tournament officials were startled to find a cowboy who rode his horse in from the desert to watch the golf action.

Ed Keating, greens chairman, recalled incredulously:

"This guy, on a brown horse rides in from the desert and begins taking in No. five green.

"I asked him what he was doing and he said he came to see the tournament.

"He said he heard on the radio that everyone should come, so he came."

Nancy Heads World Skiers

CHAMONIX, France (CP) — Nancy Greene soared to the top of the World Cup Alpine ski standings—at least temporarily—by winning the women's downhill Friday as the 33rd Arlberg-Kandahar meet opened.

The 24-year-old defending World Cup champion from Rossland, B.C., won by less than one-tenth of a second over Christl Haas, 25-year-old Austrian girl, who at first was announced as winner.

After a few minutes the announcer caught up with a figure transposition and declared the Canadian the winner, with a clocking of 2:05.61 for the 2,400-metre course, with a dip of 600 metres. Miss Haas was second in 2:05.70—not the 2:05.07 originally announced.

Miss Haas had made a sweep of the Kandahar events in 1966 and was third in the Winter Olympics downhill. Miss Greene had finished 10th in the Olympic event, partly due to a ski-wax miscalculation which also plagued the American and British girls that day.

Miss Greene, whose silver medal in the slalom and gold medal in the giant slalom last week at Grenoble put her right back into the World Cup race, went to the top of the list with 101 points. However races counting toward the World Cup also are being held at Oslo, Norway, this weekend, which may change the standing.

Football Proposal

U. S. Pros May Change Convert Rule

NEW YORK (AP) — The automatic kick for a point after touchdown may be doomed if the National Football League follows a suggestion that was proposed at Friday's annual meeting.

A committee will study a proposal to eliminate the conversion kick in 1968 pre-season games and force the team that has scored a touchdown to run or pass the ball for one point, starting from the two-yard line.

If the committee recommends the rule change, the league will vote on the proposal at the mid-May meetings to be held at a site to be determined.

The proposed elimination of the one-point conversion kick was the most interesting news from the week-long meetings of the two pro football leagues, the NFL and American Football League spent most of the time involved in working out technical problems leading to their merger in 1970.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle named joint committees to study television, finance, pension, Hall of Fame, player limits and trades.

While they are working out their future, the leagues will move into common quarters at 410 Park Avenue, New York, in mid-June.

They already have adopted a constitution for 1970 and an interim constitution for 1968 and 1969 to cover inter-league matters.

The new idea on conversions was by far the most intriguing development of the meetings. Don Shula, Baltimore Colts' coach, and Otto Graham, Washington coach, were enthusiastic about the suggestion. Vince Lombardi, retired Green Bay coach, and Joe Kuharick, Philadelphia coach, had a few reservations.

The NFL office produced figures to show that the conversion kick had become almost automatic with 97 per cent of the attempts being good in each of the past three seasons. In 1967 there were 606 touchdowns and 587 successful conversions.

Art Modell of Cleveland Browns, re-elected president of the NFL for another year on an unsalaried basis, said one result of the proposed change would be to put the individual high scoring race back into perspective.

Eight of the top 10 leading scorers in the NFL last season were kickers. If the conversion kicks were removed, Homer Jones, New York Giants' split end, would have been the top scorer with 84 points on 16 touchdowns.

Jim Bakken of St Louis was the leader with 117 points, including 36 of 36 conversions. Leroy Kelly of Cleveland with 78 points on 13 touchdowns was the only other in the top 10 who was not a kicker.

Outdoor Tips And Trick's

By BOB BLAIND

Winter months are moving along very quickly this year. Here it is the middle of February already.

I think that good ice fishing has helped the average fisherman in his winter fun and has made the time fly by having something to do with spare time this winter.

Pickerel fishing has been good all winter at Moira Lake and Bay of Quinte.

Perch fishing has also been excellent in Bay of Quinte, South Bay and Smith Bay.

Lake trout and speckled trout have been caught in enough quantity to keep the fishermen happy and interested.

My personal opinion is that best ice fishing for lakers appears to be in late February and early March.

Jigging for trout is becoming more popular every day and good results have been had with the use of the Rapala jig and several wobblers also used for summer deep trolling.

The lakes north of Kingston are opened for lake trout on Feb. 24th.

This region is having a trout fishing derby sponsored by an ale company with many good prizes. The contest runs for 3 weeks and is open to all fishermen.

Entry forms may be obtained in Belleville at Bob's Sports; in Kingston at Peters Live Bait and at Verona, Chucks Live Bait.

This Sunday the Belleville Fish and Game Association is holding a pickerel derby at Moira Lake from 7 a.m. till 5 p.m.

There is still a lot of wrangling going on with regard to the new fishing licence.

Our local fish and game clubs are against this new law unless monies collected are earmarked for fishing conservation. In fact most of the local clubs are writing local members of parliament suggesting their support in opposing this new bill. If you have comments on this subject it might be a good idea to write the local member stating your pros and cons.

There are over 1,600,000 resident fishermen in Ontario and at $3.25 per licence this would mean an additional 52 million dollars collected, but these monies go into the general fund and are not earmarked for conservation.

It would appear our Ontario government took a look at the amount of money spent by the resident and non resident anglers in Ontario, (1964 total 207 million dollars) of which 25 per cent was tax, and decided they could really make a killing by adding this $3.25 licence fee.

I am-taking these figures in this article from a government report, Department of Tourism and Information Report No. 17, called a short economic evaluation of hunting and fishing in Ontario and figures for the year 1964 are used. New figures for 1968 would be much higher.

Peewees Win Round With Overtime Spree

Belleville's Smiths Fuels Peewees entered the second round of the Ontario AA playdowns yesterday but did it the hard way.

Fuels had to heap a few coals on the fire in an overtime session to explode with four goals and break a 3-3 deadlock in the deciding game of their best-of-three playoff.

The 7-3 victory advanced the peewees into the next round against Whitby. The teams will play in Whitby next Saturday and return to Belleville on Sunday.

Yesterday the Fuels held a 3-1 lead going into the third period but ran into heavy weather as Cobourg battled to escape elimination and fired two goals. The second came with Belleville shorthanded.

Wally Dainard scored what proved to be the winning goal at 1:50 of the overtime session and then wrapped up the scoring with Belleville's seventh goal.

In between in the overtime period Mark Coates and Tim Whalen tallied. Peter Smrke was the big gun during the regular 60-minutes with two goals. Bruce Sutherland notched the other.

Trophy Winners!

Doug Potts and Keith Fleming were the respective winners of the Bobby Hull Trophy and the Bill Cook Memorial Trophy, presented last night during the final game of the local Junior hockey season. The Hull trophy is for the most valuable player while the Cook trophy is for ability and sportsmanship. Kingston came from behind in the season finale to defeat Belleville 5-4.

Juniors Lose Final Game 5-4

Belleville's Junior Bs ended their regular schedule last night in the same vein as they played throughout the season — on a fighting but losing note.

The juniors lost 5-4 to Kingston on a third period goal by Dave Balsom. Earlier they had enjoyed 2-1 and 4-3 leads but weren't able to hold off the playoff-bound Kingston squad.

Kingston's Huck Harvey opened the scoring early in the first period but goals by Rick Rosebush and Doug Potts gave Belleville a 2-1 margin at the end of the period.

Kingston wiped out the lead within the first two minutes of the second period as Murray Douglas and Gary Feeley scored. A pair of goals by Mike Healey restored Belleville's one-goal margin but Kingston's Bob Kinden scored with 25 seconds remaining in the period to tie the game.

The shots on goal failed to prove the play as Kingston outshot Belleville 12-6 in the first but trailed 2-1; outshot Belleville 10-5 in the second but then were outshot 12-5 in the third yet scored the lone goal.

The preliminary game — a 40-minute clash between the Police and the Firemen —ended in a 2-2 tie. The combination of the exhibition game and the juniors last game of the season drew an estimated 1,600 persons into the rink.

Elementary and Secondary Public Speaking Contests

NAPANEE — Matthew Downey of the Amherstview Public School received the superintendents' trophy as the winner of the public speaking contest in Lennox and Addington county.

Runner-up was Angela Rose of the Selby Public School (Richmond township) and John Wenik of Newburgh, representing Camden Township, was in third place. Each received a book as an award. Other contestants were Gary Raycraft of the Prince Charles School, Napanee and Charles McDonald of North Fredericksburg, the H. H. Langford School.

Judges were Mrs. Lorne (Louise) Graves, of Napanee; Irwin Snider of Kingston and Winston Cousins of Verona.

Lennox and Addington is one of the six counties in zone nine, each of which will select one winner as its representative. The zone competition will be held in Flinton March 2 at 1.30 and the zone winner will then go to Toronto to compete with other zone winners for provincial honors. Peterborough, Northumberland, Hastings, Frontenac and Leeds and Grenville are also in zone nine.

This is the first time this county has had an elimination contest of its own. It had previously been united with Frontenac, which would permit only one entrant from the county to compete with at least one representative from each of its own townships. As a result, this county had little chance of ever having a contestant in the zone contest. This year's contest was organized by the three area superintendents, Vernon Reid and Alex Watts of Kingston ,and Paul Anderson of Napanee.

Until the contest reaches the zone level, it has only local sponsors, who make all arrangements and pay expenses. Area superintendents usually enlist the help of principals, and of such organizations as the Women's Institute.

Once the contest reaches the zone level, it is sponsored by the Ontario School Trustees, the Municipal Councillors' Association and the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission.

The North Addington High School at Cloyne carried off both prizes in the public speaking contest for secondary schools of Lennox and Addington.

Gordon Paddick was first in the class for the prepared speech, and Ruth Roderick was judged to have made the best of the three impromptu speeches. Each of the secondary schools, North Addington, Ernestown, and the NDSS, entered one contestant in each class.

Sharman Brooks of Ernestown and Randy Wagar of the NDSS also gave prepared speeches, and the two other impromptu speakers were Garland McKeown for the NDSS, and Dieter Schoenwandt for Ernestown.

The winners from Lennox and Addington will go to Belleville March 7 to compete with representatives from the other counties in zone nine: Peterborough, Northumberland, Hastings, Frontenac, and Leeds and Grenville.

The contest for this county was held in the NDSS recently, with F. J. Baker of Saint John, N. B.; Eldon Poulson of Napanee; and G. W. Smith of Lakefield as the judges. Mr. Lakefield is the convener for zone nine.

The zone winners will compete in Toronto for provincial honors.

Foxboro

FOXBORO — Mr. and Mrs. George Brough, Toronto, were weekend guests of his brother and attended the wedding of his niece.

George Hicks returned home from hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Watson and family, Peterborough, were weekend guests of her mother, Mrs. Harold Stewart.

Diabetes Not Confined to Fat People

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister is 48 and has been advised that she has diabetes, following a loss of 30 pounds. She was not obese to begin with, and this loss has left her quite thin. Yet I understood that diabetes was prevalent in overweight people.

She is now taking diabetes tablets. How long does it take for diabetes to be under control and will it be possible for her to regain some of this weight despite no sweets in her diet? — N. R.

It is true that many diabetics have been overweight prior to discovering their disorder, but that does not mean that only obese people get diabetes.

Whether the obesity is principally a causative factor, or whether it is in part a result of a tendency to develop diabetes is somewhat beside the point. Perhaps it may be a combination.

Loss of weight is one symptom of diabetes, but not one of the early symptoms. Your sister doubtless had other symptoms, such as thirst, urinary frequency, and perhaps others, without recognizing their significance.

Anyway, the disease is characterized by an inability to utilize sugar, and sugar (meaning calories) "spills over" into the urine and is lost. These lost calories, in part, explain the loss of weight in an uncontrolled case of diabetes.

When your sister's case is finally under control, she may well gain back some of the weight she lost — I have known instances in which a patient, with the diabetes controlled, gained as much as a pound a day for a time.

However, plumpness or corpulence are not synonymous with health so — guided by her physician — your sister may or may not find it to her advantage to regain all her lost 30 pounds. Rather, renewed strength and vigor are the important considerations.

How long does it take to achieve control? Impossible to say in advance, because it depends on the individual's characteristics, the time that has passed before treatment started, and how well the patient follows instructions.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there any kind of oil, like mineral oil or olive oil that will help bursitis? What can be taken to relieve the pain? Aspirin doesn't give much relief. — Mrs. W. W. S.

No kind of oil will help bursitis. The trouble is inflammation in a bursa, or fluid-filled sac which acts as a sort of "bearing" for tendons to slide over.

A too-full bursa sometimes can be drained of excess fluid. Sometimes other treatments are necessary. Ordinarily one basic part of treatment is to rest the painful joint until the inflammation goes down or can be controlled.

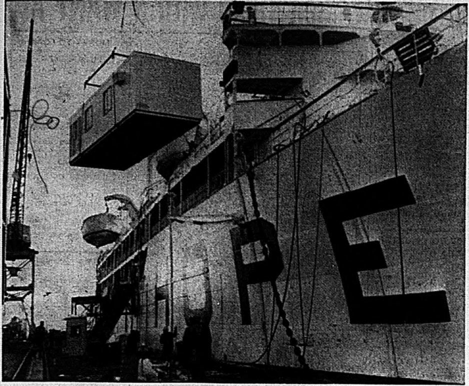
Unfortunately there isn't much a person can do for himself when bursitis develops, aside from taking strain off the joint which has the inflamed bursa. Beyond that, you need a doctor's care.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: My mother has emphysema. She has never smoked a cigarette in her life, but she does use snuff. Would that cause the disease? — Mrs. H. M.

I doubt it. Cigarettes are an important cause of emphysema, and they are one of the worst things for a patient who has emphysema — but the disease can develop in nonsmokers as well as smokers.

Not knowing how she reacts to snuff, I wouldn't care to say whether it does or doesn't harm her now. I think that should be discussed with her doctor.



Lessons at Sea

Being loaded aboard the United States hospital ship Hope at Chester, Pa., is this custom-designed classroom intended to provide further teaching space on board. The 12 by 36-foot unit is similar to the portable classrooms being used in many parts of the United States. The hospital ship leaves for Ceylon, Feb. 29, where American doctors, dentists and nurses will give medical teaching and training to Ceylonese aboard the ship. (CP Photo)

Investors Move to Sidelines To Keep Eye on Ottawa Crisis

By FRITS ROOS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Already made cautious by continuing uncertainty about the Vietnam situation, Canadian investors sat on their portfolios this week to watch developments in crisis-hit Ottawa.

Sleepy Canadian stock markets—volume was the lightest so far this year—stumbled upon some moderate gains under the pull of a major rally on Wall Street which petered out Friday.

At the close of the week, market trends were mixed while the minority Liberal government, defeated Monday on an amendment adding a five-per-cent surcharge to personal income taxes, continued to fight for its political life.

Analysts felt the market still can turn either way.

On the sidelines since the end of a three-week-long slump a fortnight ago, investors will continue to mark time until they see a major development, especially in the international political situation, one analyst said.

At Toronto, advances edged declines but price changes were generally small.

The mid-week rally favored major issues listed also at New York. Inco was up 2½ points to 113½, Seagrams 1½ to 41 and International Utilities 1 to 39¼.

Interlisted stocks also dominated the oils and refineries group which again finished ahead of the pack.

Dome Pete climbed 3¾ to 50¾, Jefferson Lake 3 to 47 and Canadian Superior 2½ to 39¾.

Great Canadian Oil Sands rose 1¼ to 12 as the Alberta government announced it will allow an increase in annual crude oil production from the tar sands.

The company said it may seek permission to expand production at its Athabasca plant.

British American, up 2¼ to 41¼, and Imperial Oil, up 1¼ to 64¾, members of Syncrude Canada Ltd., now hope to revive the consortorium's 15-year-old, $360,000,000 development program for the tar sand area near Mildred Lake.

Place Gas dropped 20 cents to 1.50 in sales of 255,000 shares as the company announced its second North Sea drilling had to be abandoned as noncommercial.

The gold average was up too, despite a mid-week drop after the U.S. House of Representatives approved removal of the gold cover from the dollar.

Still subject to Senate approval, the move would free some $10,700,000,000 worth of gold for further support of the dollar.

Mainly under buying pressure from New York, golds have boomed in the atmosphere of international monetary uncertainty since the devaluation of [illegible] British pound.

Analysts feel that, apart from the highly speculative prospect of a devaluation of the dollar, th stocks are heavily overpriced.

Most of this week's strength in the group was shown by the smaller issues, which traded actively. Sigma advanced 65 cents to 7.15, Macassa 38 cents to 1.88 and Madsen Red Lake 37 cents to 2.03.

Dome Mines closed at 75, up ¾ after some sharp fluctuations. Giant Yellowknife was off ⅜ to 12⅝.

Denison Mines again headed the list up among the quietly advancing base metals. The stock gained 2 to 69—up 9 from the year's low of 60 but still a long way to go from the high of 84 it reached early this year.

Ford Profits Sliced by Strike

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co., beset by a two months strike last year, announced Friday its 1967 net profits were $84,100,000, or 77 cents a share, compared with $621,000,000 or $5.63 a share in 1966.

Ford reported a loss of $109,100,000 for the fourth 1967 quarter, compared with a profit of $128,100,000 in the same October-December span of 1966. Sales were $2,400,000,000 and $3,300,000,000, respectively, for the two quarters.

The United Auto Workers strike against Ford began Sept. 7 and stretched into December. It was called to support new contract demands of the union. During it, Ford said it lost car, truck and tractor production of 619,000 units.

General Motors Corp., the only other of the Big Three U.S. auto-makers to report on 1967 earnings, said Feb. 14 that its profits were $1,600,000,000, compared with $1,700,000,000 in 1966. GM escaped strike, but auto sales generally were lower in 1967 than in 1966.

St. Catharines Strike Ends After 6 Months

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A six-month strike at the Columbus-McKinnon plant here ended Friday when members of Local 199 of the United Auto Workers union ratified a new four-year agreement.

The new contract, retroactive to Oct. 1, 1967, contains wage increases ranging from 54 cents to 70 cents over the life of the agreement, plus a union pension plan and two extra statutory holidays.

About 220 workers were affected by the strike at the link chain manufacturing plant. The new basic hourly rate for a laborer and sweeper is $2.98 and $3.73 for a tool and die maker.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY,

During the past week there was a weak local demand for additional workers, either male or female, in the unskilled or semi-skilled categories. Employment opportunities continued to be numberous for qualified administrative, professional and technical trained personnel. These positions, of which a small number are for local plants, exist across Canada.

At this time of the year, under the local static economic conditions, the Canada Manpower Centre is a very busy office. Here, the manpower counsellors are seeking to help those persons who are unemployed to find the best solution to their individual problems. If local suitable work is not available then manpower mobility assistance has to be considered. In other cases further training may be required, under occupational training for adults. Too frequently in the modern economy yesterday's skills aren't enough for tomorrow's job. Furthermore the manpower counsellors have to consider the requirements by employers in the selection of workers to fill the job vacancies.

However, there are encouraging indications at this period of the winter that community residents are making plans now which will increase the local economic activity in the immediate months ahead. Summer resort, hotel, motel and related business operators are already planning for an increased tourist trade this coming season.

The initial labor requirements are expected to be listed in the next few weeks. A number of local farmers are starting to enquire about general farm help to assist in planting and growing season.

To augment planned con-construction there is a good back-log of highway improvement and bridge construction jobs throughout the community.

The following are some of the positions now available:

In the female division locally there are several excellent positions for women who are interested in the field of child care. The wages being offered are good, together with room and board. An experienced saleslady is being sought to sell high quality women's clothing. An industrial plant has an attractive career opening for a university graduate who has taken sociology and who also possesses some personnel experience in industry or in other work fields.

Qualified typists are wanted to work in the United Nations Typing Pool in New York City. In constant demand are registered nurses and registered nursing assistants.

In the male division locally a professional engineer with a mechanical background is required for plant maintenance responsibility. Two chemical engineers and an electrical engineer are required by industrial plants. Openings are available for managerial staff positions calling for experience in the field of finance. There are numerous opportunities for commission salesmen. Other vacant positions exist for a qualified maintenance plant mechanic and a qualified men's clothing tailor. In a neighboring town there is a vacancy for a products manager and another one for a working foreman for plywood lay-out at a plywood processing plant. A business in North Hastings is seeking the services of a licensed automobile mechanic.

If interested in any of these positions, seeking other employment or thinking of re-entering the labor market, contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville.

'Sob Sister' of U. S. Letters, Fannie Hurst, Dies in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Fannie Hurst once remarked of her first bids for literary fame: "I wrote all day from loneliness, and all evening for the same reason."

Miss Hurst, 78, died Friday in her apartment home overlooking Central Park. She wrote hundreds of short stories, 30 books and several plays—all romances.

Born in Hamilton, Ohio, Oct. 18, 1889, Miss Hurst grew up in St. Louis, Mo., and began her first attempts at serious writing at Washington University there.

Before she received her diploma she had accumulated 35 rejection slips.

Miss Hurst came to New York at 21, took graduate work at Columbia University—and wrote.

Four years later her short story collection, Just Around the Corner, was published, and success followed.

Some literary critics call Miss Hurst the "sob sister" of American letters. But as one critic put it:

"We all know people who write beautifully and can't tell a story worth a damn. She is a really wonderful story teller."

Miss Hurst also could relate a good story, as evidenced by her numerous visits to Hans Christian Andersen's statue in Central Park where, surroundd by children, she talked to them in the language of youthful fantasy.

Probably her best-known novel was Back Street—the story of a mistress who followed her lover, but always as a shadow, until his death, when she sat in discreet sorrow at the back of the church.

Miss Hurst's works were translated into 12 languages, and several of her novels became movies. Her plays included Humoresque, Back Pay, Land of the Free and It Is To Laugh.

Miss Hurst was married in 1915 to Jacques S. Danielson, pianist and composer. Their marriage was kept secret for five years; then she and Danielson continued to maintain separate apartments.

Danielson died in 1952. Once, after nearly 30 years of marriage, Miss Hurst said of their arrangement: "If just happened to be right for us. I think our record is rather better than most."

Before her death, Miss Hurst's publishers received two new novels from her. One is entitled Lonely Is Only A Word. The other bears no title. Her last published novel, Fool, Be Still, appeared in 1964.

Many years ago Miss Hurst visited the Soviet Union and interviewed Leon Trotsky in his Kremlin office. Trotsky astonished her by reciting from memory passages from he novel Lummox, her favorite along with Back Street.

After he finished, Trotsky asked: "Is that right?"

"I don't know," replied Miss Hurst, "I don't think I have ever read a book of mine after it was written."

Rusk Asked Reporters What Side They Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk has been identified as the high Johnson administration source who told reporters during a Feb. 9 "background session" that criticism of U.S. war policy by the press and broadcast media sometimes gets to the point "where the question is, whose side are you on?"

As secretary of state, he said, "I'm on our side."

Rusk also said:

"None of your papers or your broadcasting apparatuses are worth a damn unless the United States succeeds. They are trivial compared to that question."

Reporters are invited to such background sessions on condition they will not identify the source of the information. But Rusk was identified Friday by the Wall Street Journal.

Rusk's statements had led to published speculation and broadcast commentary indicating that there was tension and unusual sensitivity to criticism at the highest levels of the Johnson administration in the days following the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam which began two weeks ago.

Although the attacks had been expected about that time, the exact timing and the places hit—about 100 cities and towns—came as a surprise.

The questions which preceded Rusk's comments on the issue of criticism had to do with whether there had been a failure of advance intelligence.

Toronto Spent 3 Million To Teach New Canadians

TORONTO (CP) — A report by the Toronto board of education Friday said Toronto taxpayers alone can no longer afford to pay the bill to educate the city's New Canadian students.

The report, prepared in response to a request of Education Minister William Davis, showed the cost of the 1968 program is $3,633,665, of which only $570,800 is absorbed by grants.

Ying Hope, board chairman, said in an interview that tne report is additional proof that the federal government should underwrite some of the program's costs and ease the Toronto tax burden.

Mr. Hope said the average cost per year of the New Canadian program is $505 for each of the pupils enrolled in day schol classes. The figure does not include the cost per student in summer and night school classes.

The program is a specially-graduated course for immigrant children in speaking, reading andw riting English and caters to 42 ethnic groups in the city. It is one of 16 special educational activities offered by the board and Mr. Hope considers it one of the most important.

The report gives no estimate of the number of children who may need help with English in addition to the 10,074 already in special classes.

Montreal Policemen Protest

MONTREAL (CP) — About 1,300 policemen—nearly half Montreal's force—marched on city hall Friday night and submitted 13 grievances involving working onditions and the way their pension fund is being operated.

After marching around the building for about 20 minutes the policemen were told by Mayor Jean Drapeau and executive chairman Lucien Saulnier that their grievances would be studied carefully.

Capt. Jean Paul Picard said in an interview the policemen feel they are getting less yet paying more than all other municipal employees through their pensions fund.

"But there are hundreds of reasons for the present discontent," he said. "We believe that discipline should exist in a police department but it should be tempered with humanity, understanding and respect."

About one-third of the police at city hall were in uniform, having just come off duty.

Robarts, Pearson Praised

MacDonald Sees Trudeau as Threat To Success in Constitutional Talks

TORONTO (CP) — Justice Minister Trudeau Friday was described as a threat to the continued success of talks aimed at solving Canada's constitutional problems.

The charge was made in the legislature by New Democratic Party Leader Donald MacDonald who praised Premier Robarts of Ontario for sparking the talks with his Confederation of Tomorrow conference here last November.

That conference was followed by the federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa Feb. 5-7.

"However," Mr. MacDonald said, "the future success of the continuing constitutional conference depends on a very great extent on maintaining and strengthening the working partnership which was so delicately built at the Confederation of Tomorrow conference.

"That has now been threatened by the confrontation which Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau so obviously still seeks with Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec."

He said it may have been good politics for Mr. Trudeau to "take on Mr. Johnson in open battle" at the Ottawa conference, "but I have grave doubts whether it is good nation-building."

"Without the skilful diplomacy of Mr. Pearson, who rescued his justice minister from the inevitable consequences of his tactics, the work of the constitutional conference might well have come to an abrupt end."

Mr. MacDonald attended the conference as an observer.

Judge Said Waging Vendetta Against Shulman

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice W. D. Parker was accused Friday of conducting a "personal vendetta" against Dr. Morton Shulman to the point where he didn't do his job as royal commissioner investigating allegations by the former chief coroner of Metropolitan Toronto.

The accusation was made in the legislature by NDP Leader Donald MacDonald during a brief but blistering attack on the royal commissioner's report, released Thursday.

Mr. MacDonald termed the report "the grand-daddy of all whitewashes."

He said the commissioner, in conducting a personal vendetta against Dr. Shulman, now NDP member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, completely ignored two important aspects of the inquiry.

The NDP leader said Premier Robarts had agreed last year that the inquiry should consider the historic role of coroners and the proper relationship between the office of Ontario's supervising coroner and the position of chief coroner in a metropolitan area.

He quoted Mr. Robarts as having told the legislature last year that both matters would "fall within the inquiry's terms of reference as they are presently drawn."

The premier had said that in conversations with Mr. Justice Parker it had been agreed consideration of the matters would be "absolutely basic to the approach he will follow."

"The commissioner simply didn't do his job," Mr. MacDonald said during the legislature's throne speech debate.

"He was so pre-occupied with trying to 'get' Dr. Shulman that he didn't do his job. . . . He was in there to do a political hatchet job."

Schools Will Get Film

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario's economics and development minister, said Friday 2,000 copies of the film A Place to Stand produced for Expo 67 by the province will be distributed to Ontario schools for classroom showing.

NDP Chief Wants Board To Review Price Boosts

TORONTO (CP) — Donald MacDonald, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, has renewed his appeal for a review board to investigate price increases that appear "excessive and unwarranted."

"I feel that just as trade unionists must go through a lengthy, public process of justifying their demands for a wage increase, so should producers, manufacturers and retailers justify before the public inordinate increases in prices," he told the legislature Friday.

He said he was not advocating rigid price controls.

In addition, he said, the Ontario government should "significantly" breaden the scope of the consumers protection bureau.

"It needs power to require truth in packaging, to outlaw unfair contracts and shady practices connected with repossession and debt collections, used-car selling and mortgage brokering.

"The right to choose the best bargain is hampered by misleading advertising, retail gimmickry, curious sizes and weights of packages and lack of coomparative data on competing products."

3-step Aid Plan For Indians Given

TORONTO (CP) — Donald MacDonald, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, told the legislature Friday Ontario should pioneer attempts to solve the plight of Canada's Indians and offered a three-step solution.

The first step should be an agreement "to speed up the transfer of a significant number of functions to the province from the federal Indian affairs branch."

"The present reliance on piece-meal arrangements has slowed implementation of this desirable policy to a snail's pace."

As a second step, Mr. MacDonald suggested the establishment of regional development programs, under Crown corporations, in Indian areas.

"These bodies would receive in one sum the present grants and other conditional forms of assistance now flowing from federal and provincial agencies and departments."

The corporations would be responsible for co-ordinating the use of the funds "in all phases of community development."

The final step would be to entrust the shaping of the programs to the Indian community, "providing outside assistance wherever necessary."

This approach would relieve the Indian affairs branch of most of its present powers "except the important work of safeguarding Indian lands and treaty rights."

Mr. MacDonald was speaking in the throne speech debate.

Summer Jobs To Be Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts said Friday that summer job shortages for Ontario school students may be an "increasing problem."

Replying in the legislature to George Ben (L—Toronto Humber), the premier said the problem is worsening "because of the increased retention of young people in our school system and because of increased enrolment in our post-secondary institutions of all kinds."

"We have no programs that I could say would be devoted directly to the employment of students but as the total economy of the province develops there are jobs available for these young people."

Mr. Ben had asked for comment on a press report that large numbers of applications for jobs at summer resorts indicated there would be two students for every job available.

Pickerel Fishing Opens on May 11

TORONTO (CP) —There are no surprises in Ontario's 1968 fishing seasons laid down by the department of lands and forests.

The most significant changes were announced earlier this year when Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle extended the seasons for speckled, brown and rainbow trout by almost two months.

With obvious assurance that Ontario's lakes and rivers are not being depleted of the three species, he opened the season in much of the province Jan. 1. The opening for the same areas last year was Feb. 25. The closing generally is Sept. 30.

The new regulations for speckled, brown and rainbow trout have opened a vast new area for Northern Ontario to year-round fishing.

Lou Ringham, northwestern Ontario regional director for the lands and forests department, said at the recent convention here of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters that the extended season has been a boon to anglers who use a snowmobile.

"Fishermen now are getting into speckled trout lakes that are almost impossible to reach in the summer," he said. "Snowmobiles may force us to have another look at the trout population."

The early opening excludes Algonquin Park, with a season running from Saturday, April 27 to Sept. 15, most of the eastern Ontario counties of Lanark and Leeds and the Kemptville forest district, with a season from Feb. 24 to Sept. 30.

There are 10 different seasons for pickerel in southern Ontario, with the general opening Saturday, May 11, and the closing March 31. There are only two seasons for the popular pickerel in Northern Ontario—all year and May 15, a Wednesday, to April 14.

The department had no closed season for pickerel in Georgian Bay in 1967. However, this year the season is open from Jan. 1 to March 31 and from May 16 to Dec. 31, allowing the fish six free weeks during the crucial spawning period.

The season for largemouth and smallmouth bass generally runs from Saturday, June 29 to Nov. 30. In areas that have a controlled season on pike, it generally runs from Saturday, May 11 to March 31.

Because of different openings in various parts of the province, anglers are advised to inquire for local details before casting their lines.

Gen. Westmoreland Wants More Troops

100,000 Men May Be Sent

SAIGON (AP) — Gen. William C. Westmoreland says more U.S. troops probably will be needed in Vietnam.

"With additional troops," he says, "we could more effectively deny the enemy his objective, capitalize on his recent defeats to a greater degree in both time and place, and clearly demonstrate to Hanoi our firm determination to prevent him from taking over any part of South Vietnam."

Westmoreland gave no estimate of how many more U.S. troops might be needed above the 525,000 already authorized. Some military sources estimated this may be as many as 100,000.

There are 500,000 U.S. troops here now, plus 35,000 men in 7th Fleet ships offshore and another 35,000 in Thailand at air bases from which bombing strikes are launched against North Vietnam.

Westmoreland, U.S. Commander in Vietnam, conferred during the weekend on the troop situation with Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff, who was in Saigon.

Wheeler left Saigon late Sunday to return to Washington. Dispatches from Washington said a decision on whether to call up thousands of reservists is hanging fire until he gets back to the capital.

Westmoreland's views, expressed Sunday in an interview said he did not believe Hanoi could stand a long war and he likened the recent Communist lunar new year (Tet) offensive to the Battle of the Bulge of the Second World War, in late 1944. That battle was the last major offensive by the Germans before their defeat in 1945.

Westmoreland said he underestimated the Communist infiltration tactics in their Tet offensive but said they nevertheless "suffered a military defeat."

In his wide-ranging replies, the 54-year-old commander also said:

—He had no reason to believe the North Vietnamese have changed their plan to attack Khe Sanh.

—The North Vietnamese had ignored the neutrality of Laos and Cambodia and used these countries to send men and munitions into South Vietnam.

—He was confident the U.S. "body count" of Communist troops killed in the war is accurate and even conservative.

—The Communist offensive put the southern allies temporarily on the defensive but the Communists have "run into a buzz saw."

—He saw no need to change strategy but the time had come for debate to end and "get on with the job."

—The Communist offenhive seems to be a "go-for-broke effort" and any followup attack would not have the element of surprise.

After the Crisis

A familiar public face — looking a little more relaxed than earlier last week — showed up at Batawa Saturday. With strain of crisis receding on Parliament Hill, George Hees, MP for Northumberland, officially opened Batawa ski chalet. Then, with Mrs. Hees, shown with him above, he grabbed his skis and took to nearby slopes for wintertime workout. For details see Page 2.

Canada Considering Cut in Defence Role

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs and defence departments have started a review of Canada's defence commitments with the expectation they will be severely trimmed, informants say.

The sources say Canada would be hard pressed at the moment to meet its commitments to supply an infantry battalion for United Nations peace-keeping and two battalions for NATO's mobile command.

Diplomatic sources said Canada is expected to reduce its commitments to NATO and the North American Air Defence Command, although not immediately.

Some sources said the defence department, now in the process of reducing manpower by 6,000 to 100,000, will eventually have to cut down the number of servicemen to 90,000.

The problem is not recruiting but higher costs. Some men who volunteered for the air force early last fall have not yet been called into the service.

British Thieves Get $364,000

LONDON (AP) — London police speculated today that Britain's biggest cash theft since the Great Train Robbery in 1963 was an inside job.

Detectives combed the country for clues to the gang which stole £140,000 ($364,000) Saturday from a postoffice sorting room near Paddington Station.

Khe Sanh Platoon Ambushed

KHE SANH (AP) — North Vietnamese troops ambushed a U.S. marine platoon patrolling outside the barbed wire of the Khe Sanh combat base today and overwhelmed the outnumbered Americans.

A second platoon of 45 men sent to help also suffered casualties.

Jet planes swooped in to cover the marines trying to get back to the base and pounded the battle site with bombs and napalm. An aerial observer said he saw marines lying on the ground and Communist soldiers were swarming through the area before the bombs landed.

Under new U.S. security regulations, the number of marine casualties was not disclosed.

The patrol, sent out on a routine intelligence-gathering mission, was 800 yards beyond the outer wire when it was hit. Senior officers said the young lieutenant leading the platoon went beyond the distance set for his patrol.

One of the survivors said the patrol point man saw two North Vietnamese soldiers moving away and the platoon chased them, a common manoeuvre to lure troops into an ambush.

"A whole bunch were killed in the very beginning," the survivor said.

Hanoi Docks Raided

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. bombers followed up their first raid of the war on Hanoi's Red River docks with their closest raid to the centre of Haiphong in nearly two months.

U.S. Navy pilots used radar to fly in low through northeast monsoon clouds which kept them from assessing damage they inflicted against a rail yard 1.7 miles northwest of the centre of Haiphong and Saturday against the docks 1.8 miles south of the centre of Hanoi.

The Hanoi docks handle 30 per cent of North Vietnam's inland water traffic.

It was the closest attack to the centre of Haiphong since Jan. 4, when President Johnson banned bombing in and around Hanoi and Haiphong with word of the North Vietnamese that this was a signal of U.S. interest in opening peace talks. Johnson removed the ban two weeks ago.

In other raids Sunday, air force fighter-bombers struck three truck parks and a fuel storage area along the supply line to North Vietnamese troops threatening the northwest frontier outpost at Khe Sanh.

Atomic Expert Killed by Bomb

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — The FBI aided police of nearby Avon today in investigating the death of a 42-year-old government scientist from the explosion of a bomb in a package sent him by bus.

Samuel Hammons Jr. died during surgery in St. Joseph's Hospital here at 11:30 p.m. Saturday night, six hours after he had picked up a package at the Greyhound bus terminal in Cleveland.

Since July, 1966, Hammons had worked at Lewis Research Centre of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as a health physicist.

A NASA spokesman said Hammons worked on instruments which kept track of radiation exposure to personnel in the nuclear reactor division.

Accompanied by his 14-year-old son, Dale, who carried the package on his lap, Hammons drove the 15 miles west from Cleveland to his home in Avon and took the package to the kitchen. Then, for some reason, he asked the boy to go to the car in the driveway outside and wait.

The booby-trapped device, believed to have contained dynamite, exploded with an impact that drove Hammons through a screen door into the yard.

Johnson Says Trudeau Resurrects Old Myths

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson Sunday night accused federal justice Minister Trudeau of fostering dangerous "backward and retrograde attitudes" toward French-Canadians.

The premier said the minister's federalist attitudes are those of "people who take pains not only to caricature Quebec aspirations, but even to represent them falsely and dishonestly."

He accused Mr. Trudeau, one of the candidates for the federal Liberal party leaderships, of attempting to build a career by "resurrecting all the old myths which have poisoned the relations between our two cultural communities since the Durham report."

Mr. Johnson said the Quebec government has had to write to Ottawa about once a month to protest federal attempts to invade fields of provincial jurisdiction.

"We want a new constitution precisely because we do not know where the encroachments of Ottawa under the present regime are going to stop," he told a $50-a-plate Union Nationale fund-raising dinner.

An Obviously Happy Leader

Prime Minister Pearson smiled for reporters outside the Commons and told them he was confident of his government's immediate survival. The government was given strong indications of support from the Creditistes, which should carry the confidence motion. (CP Photo)

Creditiste Switch Takes Heat Off Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservatives called an emergency caucus today to review their strategy in the Commons crucial debate on the government's confidence motion.

The party MPs were to meet at 10:30 a.m. EST. The cabinet had already gone into session an hour earlier Informants said the Conservatives may decide to keep the debate going longer than originally planned.

Mr. Caouett's turn-about Friday has virtually assured the minority Liberal government of victory when the confidence motion comes to a vote.

Debate on the motion resumes when the Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EST today. A vote had been expected by Tuesday before the Conservatives called a strategy review.

Prime Minister Pearson, who introduced the motion Friday, said his government will resign or call an election if defeated in the vote.

However, the decision by Parliament's eight Creditistes to desert the opposition and vote with the government on the motion has all but assured Liberal survival.

Against a united opposition, the government might have had trouble pulling through.

NDP Will Not Support A Filibuster

MONTREAL (CP) — T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, said Sunday his party will not support a filibuster should the Liberal government survive this week's vote of confidence.

Speaking at an airport press conference, Mr. Douglas said: "We feel any government defeated on a money bill should resign."

However, should the government survive with the help of the Creditistes, "then we can just get on with business. . . . We won't support any filibuster."

"The government will have to go to the country before long. It's apparent it has lost the confidence of a good part of the House."

Jack Green took his last bow as Salvation Army bandmaster in Belleville last night. Here, the veteran of 60 years' service leads his musicians for the last time at special tribute concert at Quinte Secondary School.

Jack Green Hands Over Baton

His successor, Robert Lessels, was immediately commissioned as bandmaster before a crowd of more than 300 Salvationists and well-wishers at Quinte Secondary School.

Veteran bandmaster Green, who has tutored scores of prize-winning musicians during his Army service, was given a standing ovation as he led his band for the last time.

A plaque commemorating 60 years of Salvation Army service was presented Mr. Green by Lt. Col. Morgan Flannigan of Toronto who once worked with the band-master as full-time Army representative in Belleville.

Music also was provided by the award-winning Peterborough Citadel band.

Ontario Fairs Association Honor Quinte District Men

John R. Bush, vice president of the Belleville Fair and funeral director in this city, was named director of the Class A and B section of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies held in Toronto last week.

Several Quinte district men were honored at the annual convention of the Association which is comprised of representatives of the larger fairs in the province.

Ben Bleecker of Holloway former secretary of Belleville Fair and past president of Class A and B Fairs as well as the Ontario Association, was named to head up the past presidents' Association of which Phil Dodd of Picton has now become a member.

Mr. Dodds, who continues on the provincial board for a second term as district director, was given a new appointment — that of information officer for the Association.

Agricultural societies in the Quinte district were well represented at the convention attended by approximately 900 delegates.

Many noted speakers were heard during the sessions with an outstanding address being given by Arthur Duncan, public relations officer with the Bata Shoe Company at Batawa.

Mr. Dodds moderated a panel on the topic "What Is Your Problem?" While Creighton Lockyer, past president of Prince Edward Society was a member of the Class A and B Fairs' panel discussing topic of particular interest to that group.

Sunday fairs — a new topic for the convention — saw some lively discussion following a request from the CNE for support of their approach to the governor general of Ontario for revision of the Lord's Day Act to make the holding of fairs on Sunday legal.

It was revealed that five Ontario fairs, including that at Lansdowne in the St. Lawrence Valley, now hold fairs on Sunday.

Representatives of the Lansdowne Society said that they were tying in with a Thousand Islands promotion, and the reason for fairs on Sunday was chiefly connected with tourists.

Fairs held on Sundays were somewhat 'restrained' as to activity, it was revealed in the discussion led by Mr. Dodds.

Representatives of rural agricultural societies were overwhelmingly against holding their fairs on Sundays. Most felt that there is sufficient work and activity on Sunday without adding fairs to the list.

No opposition was expressed to the CNE being open on Sunday, as was EXPO — but the societies, at a directors' meeting decided to take no action, as an association, on the CNE's proposal.

William Fear of the Welland Society urged that support be given to seek permissive legislation and leave it to individual societies to decide.

'We have no objection to the CNE being open on Sunday, but societies in general are not in favor of this action', declared retiring Association president Donald Lemon of Owen Sound.

New president of the Association is Harold Buchan of Paris with Harold Pond as president of the 'A' and 'B' section.

BEWARE OF LSD
IT IS DANGEROUS

LSD, or lysergic acid diethylamide, was discovered nearly thirty years ago and only recently became the subject of intense research. It has possibilities for great good if we can ever learn how to control it.

It has been said LSD is presently the most dangerous drug we have had in a long time. Its results are erratic, unpredictable and highly potent. Evidence indicates it damages the user's chromosomes, leading to mental retardation and birth defects. We will not under present condition, stock or sell LSD to anyone.

Signing Over A Regiment

Lt.-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks signs over command of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Belleville armory yesterday. The 38-year-old officer handed the famed militia unit to Lt.-Col. F. R. Allan as ceremony was witnessed by Col. L. E. Barclay, district militia commander, Ottawa.

Militia Backbone of Army Says Hasty Pees' Retiring CO

The militia is no football to be kicked around by politicians, a distinguished reserve force soldier stressed yesterday.

The warning was a parting shot from Lt.-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks, ADC to Ontario's lieutenant governor, as he handed over command of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Canada needs its militia, the outgoing commanding officer told a crowd of more than 200 in Belleville armory, where he paraded with his regiment for the last time.

"It is important for everyone to realize that the militia is not just a political football to be kicked around by any aspiring politician. It's the backbone of the army, the armed forces and, indeed, our country."

The colorful, if nostalgic occasion, saw command of the famed regiment surrendered to Lt.-Col. F. R. Allan transferred to the Hasty Pees in 1960.

Lt.-Col. Willcocks, a British army officer, joined the regiment in 1958, moving to its top post in July 1964.

His service with the famed unit, which includes the Northwest rebellion in its battle honors, has seen it undergo revolutionary changes in recent years.

Once a rural regiment, with seven armories spotted through the Quinte district, it now operates from a single base — its Belleville headquarters.

Now, however, it is designated part of the mobile command reserve forces.

This gives the regiment a significant, new responsibility in Canada's peace-keeping commitments, the retiring commanding officer emphasized.

The expense of maintaining a modern, sophisticated war machine rules out a large standing Canadian Army, he said.

"Its present forces are extended to the limit in its present commitment all over the world," he said. "From where do you think other troops will be found? From the militia, of course."

"This is your duty as militiamen today," Lt. Col. Willcocks bade his regiment. "You may at any time be called upon to assist with the greatest peace-keeping task in history. Make sure you're prepared."

The same theme was emphasized by Col. L. E. Barclay, district commander of militia from Ottawa, who inspected the regiment.

"All of you have an obligation as a regiment like this — and one you must never lose sight of," said Col. Barclay. "At no time in the peacetime history of your regiment will so much be asked of you as in the future."

He added the "handwriting is so plainly on the wall" for militia units to "produce or else" and it was imperative the regiment support its new commanding officer.

Lt. Col. Allan appealed for support for the regiment, also emphasizing its new mobile commitment role.

"One requirement this regiment has of you: to continue to support it in every way possible. There is a continuing need for new recruits to replace those who, through scrooling or other commitments, must move on."

Music for the event was played by the Royal Canadian Signal Corps band from Kingston.

35 Head of Cattle Lost In Hillier Twp. Fire

Loss estimated at close to $40,000 resulted late Sunday night when fire completely destroyed a large barn on the farm of Ross Benway, R. R. 1 Hillier.

Lost in the blaze were 35 head of milking Holsteins and 5,000 bales of hay.

The Wellington Fire Department under Chief Jack Ogilvie, stood by at the scene for more than eight hours as flames threatened the nearby house, garage and driveshed. Firemen kept the roof of the wood shingled house wet down to prevent it being ignited by flying sparks.

The Benway family had gone to bed when the blaze was spotted by a passerby minutes after 11:00 o'clock.

At that time the entire metal roof of the barn was glowing red in the darkness but the flames were still confined inside the building.

The cause of the blaze was not determined but Fire Chief Ogilvie said he was returning to the fire scene this morning to continue his investigation.

Hees Opens Ski Chalet at Batawa

BATAWA — Possibility of a general election by early summer was foreseen here Saturday by George Hees, MP Northumberland.

The Liberal government has "completely destroyed" itself in Parliament and might go to the country" "soon after the choice of a new leader."

Mr. Hees made the observations to a reporter after he had officially opened a new chalet at the Batawa Ski Club here.

His comments came after the steam of a week-long Commons crisis evaporated. Today MPs were headed back to Ottawa to vote on a non-confidence motion, a government victory finally assured by Creditiste support.

"I think there's a pretty good chance of an early-summer election," said Mr. Hees.

"But new leader or no new leader, I think they (Liberals) will have a very difficult time," he added.

"I think their authority has been completely destroyed because they've lost the respect of Parliament."

However, politics had no part in Saturday's events here — despite a line-up of local political representatives to mark the event.

Mr. Hees, key figure of the day, kept partisanship out of his brief speech before cutting the ribbon to announce the ski chalet open.

"This is a 100-per-cent community effort by the people of Batawa", he congratulated. "I foresee a tremendous development here".

Then with Mrs. Hees, he joined local club members for a day's skiing on the slopes.

The new chalet, built by local skiers from the Bata Shoe company village, is a handsome log building, complete with canteen and a big stone fireplace.

Among those attending the opening ceremonies were Lee Grills, MP Hastings South; Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Quinte and Douglas Boyle, acting mayor of Belleville.

TRENTON — Critically injured in a spectacular car crash near the east limits of town on Friday night Corporal Jacob Senger, 36, R.R. 1 Trenton died in the Tri-Services hospital in Kingston yesterday. The father of five children he managed the Tee Pee (US Army PX equivalent- store at south station CFB Trenton.

Contacted last night coroner Dr. J. V. Byrne said no decision had been made to hold an inquest although the matter was being considered.

Following the mishap the town police reported Senger was driving alone along Dundas St. E., when the car went out of control in the vicinity of the Dutch Mill Inn. Before coming to a stop against a car trailer on the north side of the main thoroughfare the careening sports model caromed off a hydro pole at the north east corner of the restaurant to the motor hotel. A couple eating at a table inside and the dining room staff serving them tensed themselves for the worst to happen when they heard the impact and the sound of grinding metal as the body of the conveyance disintegrated.

A vehicle in the path of destruction was shattered as the operator, a TV repairman, walked away from it to make a service call at the motel. A door from the car with the airman in it and smaller pieces of wreckage were found strewn about the Dutch Mill premises . . . afterwards.

Senger driving his sister-in-law's car received emergency treatment at the Trenton Memorial Hospital before he was moved by ambulance to the special care unit at Kingston.

In recent months several similar incidents resulting in heavy property loss, violent injuries to persons involved have occurred at the same point on the eastern approach to Trenton. The point is some 200 yards west of the end of the four lane section of No. 2 highway passing through the air base. Whether the reduction to a smaller two-lane access leading into a gentle curve has a relation to the high accident rate is a question people have been asking.

Community Project

The task of transferring Shannonville's century-old railroad station to Zwick's Island is not only a community project but one with emphasis on the young people of Belleville.

As related in a recent issue of The Intelligencer it is planned to have the station — a stop on the Toronto-Montreal Grand Trunk line in the 1850s — moved to a new site at the island.

In its new setting the structure will house a museum as well as provide shelter against summer rain for people using the park area's recreation facilities.

Nick Mika, chairman of the committee supervising the project, has spoken of the young people's involvement in it. At the moment, he pointed out, there is no place to take shelter at the island other than under trees. Benches, he said, could, also, be provided for baseball and the building serve as a focal point for park area activities generally.

Then, June 8 will be an occasion for something more in keeping with the tempo of that earlier railroad era than with the hectic pace of today. A picnic no less, and it will be held in the vicinity of the station at Shannonville with the children of Belleville as guests. The occasion will be a prelude to the transfer of the station to Zwick's Island at the end of the month. According to Mr. Mika several local firms have already pledged their assistance.

Perhaps, the most interesting aspect of the project as it affects the younger generation is publication of "Hastings Heritage". With Mr. Mika, the author of a number of historical works on the Quinte area and beyond, as editor, this journal will coincide with the task of removal and will serve to focus attention on this area's history and tourist attractions. Contributing to it will be area high school students who have been invited to write articles and obtain advertising.

As a community project this is one that should capture the imagination of a good many people. If it serves to stimulate an appetite for more efforts of this nature serving both historical and utilitarian interests so much the better.

Moonlight Cruises

Who says Canadians are going soft? Well admittedly we do not get around much on our two feet, but it is good to learn the snowmobile fans are giving the good old outdoors (and their own tired lungs, hearts and muscles) a new lease of life.

The word from Ameliasburg is that "moonlight cruises," not to mention daytime trips, are growing in popularity amid the largely unfertile and wilderness area west of Onderdonk's Hill.

Could it be the lure of the outdoors on a snowmobile is such that the late hour (when most are either in bed or slumped in a chair over the late movie) is giving folks a new lease of life?

It all sounds the very essence of romance, if a little on the chilly side!

In any event, it helps to demolish in part a theory of ours gained from driving along Ontario's highways and byways — that not many steps away on either side there is terrain which seldom if ever has known the foot of man.

The farmers yes . . . but walking in strange places is such an uncommon pastime that the sight of anyone darkening the rural scene by taking a walk is enough to make one think one is seeing things. It confirms our premise that in all directions there is land that knows only the changing seasons but not the hand of man.

Snow Belt

Traditionally this port going back to 1812 war days sustains a heavy blast of winter's fury. It seems only yesterday that Belleville sent over a few pieces of snow equipment to help the New York community dig out. It was, of course, a couple of winter seasons ago.

Anyway, this year is no exception in the snow belt. Reports from Watertown and Buffalo indicate life has been tough there. Oswego has had more than 100 inches of snow since February 9. Some 35 to 40 inches fell in the area on a recent weekend. Road connections to Syracuse and points south were severed with routes 81 and 11 becoming impassable for a 40-mile stretch.

And tragedy struck when a young Carthage woman arrived at the church in the small community of Copenhagen to learn that her fiance had been killed on the way to the wedding. He had run into a truck in a blinding snowstorm.

Vietnam Crucible

Anti-U.S. Stance Seen in Spanish Overtures to France

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

United States vulnerability in Vietnam may in its turn provide President de Gaulle with a fresh disciple—the elderly Francisco Franco of Spain whose government appears to be making overtures to the French leader through the Spanish press.

Though Spain in the past has leaned heavily on the U.S. and provides strategic bases for American Polaris submarines, observers have detected a strange growth of criticism of American policy in Vietnam in Spanish newspapers, almost echoing de Gaulle's position.

These newspapers tend to follow the government line which is religiously right-wing and strongly anti-Communist. However, it now may appear from the Spanish point of view that the American policy in Vietnam is unlikely to yield many prizes.

Spain, rich in sunshine, sand, tropical fruits and bullfights, is a developing economy depending heavily on tourism and international investment. American restrictions on overseas tourism and investment expansion threatens to hit Spain just as it threatens to hit a lot of other smaller countries.

There are other elements in what appears to be a stiffer Spanish attitude towards the U.S.

De Gaulle is in effect the central power in the European Common market which, despite internal quarrelling, grows stronger each year. Franco has been trying to wiggle into that arrangement though so far he has been no more successful than Britain.

Franco may have reached the conclusion that the way to de Gaulle's heart may be through an anti-American stance. He already has warned the U.S. he will demand a higher price for renewal of submarine and aircraft base privileges when the agreement comes up for renegotiation later this year.

Franco has been trying to force Britain out of neighboring Gibraltar, and Madrid authorities say they are not getting much understanding from the U.S.

The residents of Gibraltar, in a referendum, voted overwhelmingly in favor of remaining as a British colony.

Housing Concepts at Home and Abroad

By DR. ALBERT ROSE, professor of Social Work, University of Toronto, in the journal, Ontario Housing.

(Last of a Series)

A visitor to nations outside North America cannot fail to be struck by the tremendous difference in the standards of housing accommodation available to most citizens within these nations.

During a recent visit to Europe (specifically to France) and to the Middle East (specifically to Israel and Jordan) I found that the old questions which have plagued Canadian housing policy for the past half century inevitably arose in every contact with local officials (elected and appointed), and professional and volunteer wrokers in the community agencies.

In France and Israel, for example, the notion that the sole objective of housing policy should be the attainment of a separate detached dwelling unit for every family — and I contend that this has always been the basis of Canadian policy — is unthinkable and even incredible. In the Paris metropolitan area no one would dream of separate dwellings along with home ownership for families in the lowest half or even the last four-fifths of the population.

In the Tel Aviv metropolitan area the ownership of an apartment tends to dominate the housing market but the Ministry of Housing is fully aware of the inhibiting effects of this policy upon the overall objective of housing accommodation for all family units.

In France, the Netherlands, and Israel (three examples of modern Western communities), multiple housing accommodation for most of the population is accepted and is not considered one bit inferior to our North American idea of individually owned detached dwellings.

Nevertheless, in all of these areas that I have been privileged to visit during the past two years, and as recently as a month ago, a Canadian cannot fail to be aware of the difference in overall space standards for families who must have governmental assistance in attaining housing.

A visit to the old city of Jerusalem and to areas that were recently within Jordan takes the visitor through habitations which have proceeded for 2,000 years or more, much as they are today.

One hears Americans state openly that they would like to take representatives of the dissatisfied and riotous residents of the centres of many American cities to the old bazaars and refugee camps of the Middle East to show them how well off they really are. Unfortunately, this attitude cannot be accepted as any solution to our problems in North America. We are not going to convince the deprived or low income families residing in Halifax, Toronto, Winnipeg or Vancouver that they have nothing to complain about because refugees in many parts of the world, and urban dwellers for that matter in many metropolitan areas elsewhere, are miserably housed.

In an affluent industrial society, like that of Canada and the United States, housing standards for those families who require socially-assisted accommodation must always be related to the standard prevailing throughout the majority of the population.

Nevertheless, the barefooted Canadian boy cannot dismiss the question of standards of accommodation if it can be shown that these stand in the way of meeting the basic shelter needs of thousands of families who must wait unconscionably long periods of time to be accommodated.

Today in History

Feb. 26, 1968 . . .

King Charles I of the Two Sicilies encountered rival Manfred, illegitimate son of Emperor Frederick II, at Benevento, Italy 702 years ago—in 1266—and killed him after a hard-fought battle. Charles, Count of Anjou, had been offered the kingdom by the Pope, in return for a yearly payment. The battle of Benevento secured his claim but his own personal cruelty led to a revolution known as the Sicilian Vespers and decay of his kingdom.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1918—the British hospital ship Glenhart Castle was torpedoed and sunk in the Bristol Channel; Canadian troops made a successful raid near Lens; Romania decided to conclude peace talks with the Central Powers.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—RAF shot down 21 Japanese planes in the Rangoon area; a British submarine scored three torpedo hits on an enemy convoy of three ships in the Mediterranean; Russians tightened the ring around the German 16th Army at Staraya, Russia.

Immigrants Still Come

Brockville Recorder and Times

While immigrants from Great Britain and Italy still outstrip those from other countries, there has been a slacking off in the number of persons from these two leading sources of New Canadians, according to the figures released by the department of manpower and immigration for 1967 as compared with 1966. British immigrants, still the leaders, were fewer in number, while the number from France was the highest on record. There was a 50 percent increase in Asian immigrants too.

The total number of people granted landed immigrant status was 222,876, an increase of 28,133 over 1966. Totals by major sources were: Britain, 62,420, as compared with 63,291 in 1966; Italy, 30,055 vs 31,625; United States, 19,038 vs 17,514; Germany, 11,779 vs 9,263; Greece, 10,650 vs 7,174; France, 10,122 vs 7,872; Portugal, 9,500 vs 7,930.

Daylight Saving In Britain

Windsor Star

Britain's action to introduce Daylight Saving Time on a permanent basis has passed almost unnoticed in this country but it has increased the time difference between Canada and the U. K. by one hour, which is a matter of concern to international travellers and business.

Now, the time difference between Windsor and the United Kingdom is six hours, where previously it was five hours. In other words when it now is 12 noon in Windsor, it is 6 p.m. in England.

This difference will not last very long as Windsor will adopt Daylight Saving Time on April 28 for a six-month period and during this period the time difference between Windsor and the U. K. will be five hours, as it was before the change in Britain.

Now, however, for those flying from Canada to the U. K. or those making trans-Atlantic telephone calls, the one hour added time difference will be felt.

Kiwis Take Advice of Robbie Burns

Evening Post, Wellington, N.Z.

Many persons who look at the uninspired publicity which, in overseas publications, calls upon travellers to visit New Zealand, must wonder how on earth it succeeds in persuading anyone that this is the place to go to . . . Away, then, with the heavily contrived Maori pa scenes, the mud pools and geysers and the kiwi bird which the visitor never sees. New Zealand might well be a fascinating place, somewhere very "different" — but not for the reasons that the people who live here think is. We must try, for a while, to look at our land through the eyes of the foreigner, and when we have judged it aright, strive hard to get the message across.

Chin Up In the U.K.

Montreal Gazette

On the positive side there has been tremendous progress. In technology, Britain is ahead of every other country in Western Europe. Exports have increased two and a half times what they were before 1939, to $13,000,000,000 a year. And Britain still supplies a half - billion dollars a year in aid to underdeveloped areas.

Britain's future will be very different from its past, but it will not be unworthy of its past. It has great strength. Most of its troubles since 1945 have been caused by spending that strength too generously.

Apartheid Behind Africans' Boycott of Olympic Games

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Political decisions this weekend beside the Congo River at Brazzaville — far from Mount Olympus in space and spirit—may well spell the end of the Olympic Games in any meaningful international form.

The African Supreme Sports Council is expected to make Negro Africa's boycott of the Summer Olympics at Mexico City in October virtually unanimous.

The Africans are likely to recruit Asia in protesting the readmission of racist South Africa to the Games. For Russia, the Communist states of Eastern Europe, Cuba, perhaps others including Canada, pressure to join the boycott will be immense.

Further, the African boycott will strengthen the resolve of some Negro athletes in the United States who plan their own boycott on civil rights grounds.

The lament on many sides is that sport has been wrongly invaded by politics—a complaint based on the claim that some human pursuits, including art and science, are supranational and non-political.

"Political forces . . . can lead to the destruction of the Olympic movement if they are not controlled," says Avery Brundage, the 80-year-old American idealist who heads the International Olympic Committee.

The idea that any organized international endeavor can be insulated from politics—or ever has been—seems naive in a world where racial, religious, commercial and political struggle puts a premium on aggressive competition and winning.

The pretence that the Olympics can be non-political is as out of date as the hypocrisy that the Games are amateur and non-commercial.

The forces tending to destroy the Olympics may well be the sham that maintains fulltime athletes are amateurs, that olympians organize games on a non-commercial basis and that competition is among individuals, not nations seeking political prestige.

Salvation of the Olympics is more likely to be achieved by frankly facing the professional, commercial and political facts of life, however painful and disappointing that may be.

In the South Africa issue, the olympians might have been wiser—even though less idealistic—to bow to the wishes of the majority of governments and refuse to compromise with the white South Africans.

It took 1,169 years for interstate politics to wreck the original Olympics. The modern Games have been going for a mere 72 years but events move more quickly in the 20th century.

Fully Serviced Industrial Park Is Recommended by Commission

Creation of a fully serviced and organized industrial park within the city will be recommended to city council by the Belleville Industrial Commission.

Industrial commission members at their annual meeting last week were told that because of the commission's success last year and its anticipated success for 1968, the city must embark on an extensive program of land servicing and acquisition.

Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown said in his report that the serviced land was necessary to accommodate not only industrial inquiries but to ensure the availability of proper land space industry expansion needs.

Revision and improvement of Belleville's industrial brochure, provision of a slide promotion program and development of an industry appreciation night with the view of improving liaison, are other industrial commission projects for this year.

Industrial Commission members Boyce, J. Belarger, W. Cook, F. B Deacon, J. R. Ellis, R. Godden, W. Galt, J. C. Houston, I. S. Albert, D. C. Boyd, R. D. bers for 1968 are as follows: B. Hayes, G. $475,000,000 Required To Replace Lost Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — How much new tax revenue must Finance Minister Sharp find to replace the income tax bill defeated last Monday in the Commons?

The bill contained two major provisions applicable to both the current fiscal year ending March 31, and the new 1968-69 fiscal year staring April 1.

They were a five-per-cent surtax on basic personal income taxes of $100 or more, with a top limit of $600 on the amount any taxpayer would be charged in surtax, and an accelerated rate of payment for corporation profits taxes.

The surtax, Mr. Sharp said in his Nov. 30 budget, would yield the treasury $25,000,000 in the balance of this fiscal year and $185,000,000,000 in the new fiscal year if it remained in effect for the whole year.

The accelerated rate of corporation tax payments would bring in $50,000,000 this fiscal year and $290,000,000 in 1968-69.

Mr. Sharp also announced in his budget speech that starting next June the government would pay back the five-per-cent refundable tax levied on corporations in 1966. This tax was applied to corporate cash profits over $30,000 and was introduced to discourage over-expansion in industry.

In 1968-69 repayment of the refundable tax, at five-per-cent interest, will cost the treasury $105,000,000. This was not provided for in the income tax bill because it is repayment of a debt the government owes to the corporations, not a new taxing measure.

James Roy Darrah, 67, of no fixed address pleaded guilty this morning before Magistrate Crawford Guest of Toronto to a charge of uttering a worthless cheque.

He had passed a cheque for $354 under the pretense of buying some furniture for a son.

He wanted to pay $200 down and receive $154 in cash for the cheque. He was given only $100.

Darrah was remanded one week for sentencing.

Other charges are pending.

Retarded Get New Aide

Telephonic pioneers Larry Turner, Charlie McIlraith and Murnie Hick are putting their telephonic know - how to good use for the benefit of the young students at Prince Edward Retarded Children's School in Picton.

They will be installing a magneto switchboard and three telephone sets to aid in the children's development — the equipment is provided free of charge by the Historical Department of Bell Canada and reconditioned by life member Telephone Pioneers of America.

The sets will be painted different colors and placed at three places throughout the school. They are expected to stimulate group participation in the class - room and give the children a better understanding of what is involved in telephone communication.

Similar installations in Trenton and Belleville have been very successful and Mrs. L. Gibson, principal, is very enthusiastic about this new teaching aid.

EARLY FOUNDINGS

Britain was the birthplace of the modern machine-tool industry and by the early 1830s had developed to an advance stage the boring machine and screw-cutting lathe.

Magneto Magnetism

Bobby Newson, 12, a student at the Prince Edward Retarded Children's School, is thoroughly captivated by the new teaching apparatus at the school. The switchboard and phones will be of great use to the students.

Day-long Conference Held On Taxes, Women and Power

TORONTO (CP) — There was no opportunity for a battle to develop, but a day-long conference Saturday on taxes, women and power exposed a variety of conflicting viewpoints.

The conference, attended by about 150 representatives of women's organizations, was called by the Committee for the Equality of Women. Committee chairman Mrs. M. J. Sabia of St. Catharines was a prime mover behind the drive to appoint the royal commission on the status of women in Canada.

Lawyers and accountants expert in the tax field addressed the women. The emphasis was on the recommendations of the Carter royal commission on taxation and their effect on women.

Mrs. Sabia said in an interview she intended the conference to be informative. She did not expect any recommendations.

"I just wanted to rouse some thinking. I want these women to go back to their organizations and want them to consider the country's weighty problems and stop fiddling around with the small things."

At the close of the sessions she urged delegates to let the legislators know what women want done about taxes and to get elected and make laws themselves if need be.

Mrs. Merril Menzies of Winnipeg told the women times have changed since the Income Tax Act was instituted in 1917, but the tax concept of the wife as a dependent has remained the same.

She said the Carter report differs little from the traditional view that the wife's unpaid labor in the home makes no economic contribution and therefore all the family property belongs to the husband. She said this results in a widow paying taxes on an estate to which she has materially contributed.

She said the Carter report partly acknowledged a wife's contribution by delaying taxation of an estate until both husband and wife have died.

Mrs. Menzies said the Carter commission proposal that a working wife's salary be added to her husband's and the tax taken on the total family unit discriminates against the wife. The wife's income then was taxed at too high a rate.

Mrs. Menzies said women are discriminated against because society expects and compels them to be responsible for their children without financial help, she said.

The Carter report suggests a working mother should have a tax credit for child care help of $200 for a pre-school child and $80 for an older child. Mrs Menzies said this would be a step in the right direction.

Volunteer work should be recognized as a tax asset and household help should be a tax exemption, Mrs Menzies added. Harvey Perry of Toronto, a member of the Carter commission, said the commission's recommendations would broaden the base of taxation to spread the burden as evenly as possible. It would do away with hidden taxes and exemptions.

He told the women to urge their husbands to make preparations for death taxes and remember they will need ready cash while an estate is being settled.

Canadians Barred from Delegate Meetings at London Conference

LONDON (CP) — Canadian members of the Anglican Mothers' Union will be barred from delegate meetings at a world conference in London next summer, but sympathetic New Zealanders may speak for their Canadian sisters.

Joanna Hallifax, president of the union, is adamant that Canadians can send no official delegates to the July conference because branches in Canada admit divorcees.

The Canadian Mothers' Union altered its constitution to admit divorcees after the Anglican Church of Canada ruled that divorced persons could be remarried in church.

"We are awfully sad they did not wait at least until after the conference so that we could all talk over the matter together," Mrs. Hallifax is quoted saying today.

Only the Canadian president has been invited to the conference — "as a courtesy" — but she will not be able to vote. Other Canadians can attend non-delegate services, Mrs. Hallifax said.

However, the union in New Zealand has been discussing the possibility of admitting divorcees and New Zealand delegates are expected to press the issue at the world conference.

Mrs. Hallifax said the attitude against divorcees is based on the policy of the Church of England, which does not remarry divorced persons in church.

UCW Plan Annual Meet March 4 and 5

Mrs. Jean Casselman Wadds, MPP for Grenville-Dundas will speak on the Rights of Women in Canada on Monday evening, March 4 in Trinity United Church, Smith's Falls. As guest and main speaker of the annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference United Church Women, her topic will be the main emphasis of the chosen theme: Women and Human Rights in Canada and the World. The two-day event is scheduled this year on March 4 and 5 in Trinity United Church, Smith's Falls.

Mrs. R. C. Ellis of Belleville, president, will conduct all sessions which are open to both men and women. Special transportation is being planned from some of the neighboring Presbyterial areas for mixed groups to attend the Monday evening presentation, which will be followed by a fellowship hour in which all are invited to participate.

Women's Rights in Other Countries will be developed Tuesday afternoon with an international group under the leadership of Mrs. C. R Whetham of Kingston. A Reactor Panel on reports chaired by Mrs. F. J. Smith of Newburgh will precede a communion service Tuesday morning. Activities will terminate with election and installation of new officers.

Delegates will be billeted through the hospitality of the host congregation.

Hat Designer Favors Feminine Look in Hats

MONTREAL (CP) — Bonnie Parker would be outraged if she saw what Mr. Flemming was doing in his workshop.

Displaying on a variety of hairless headforms is a most exquisite collection of springtime petals designed to turn any gun-slinging, beret-toting female into a femme fatale.

One of Montreal's leading hat designers, Mr. Flemming says he's waging his own private war to bring about a romantic and feminine look for every woman who wants it.

"Frills and ruffless are here again and with that goes wide brims, brilliant colors and field flowers," says the Danish-born designer.

Mrs. Daniel Johnson, wife of Quebec's premier, apparently agrees as she was one of the many admirers on hand at the press preview of the collection Thursday.

Leading the indoor fashion parade was an enormous white brimmed hat liberally topped with wild field flowers.

"Although some wide brims cannot be worn by all women," explained Mr. Flemming, "most of the hats are adaptable to individual faces as the hats can be crushed or the brim slanted to suit a variety of face shapes."

On a slightly more tailored line for daytime wear was a soft white felt creation beautifully banded in bright green, navy and white stripes.

Organza flowers made their debut in the form of a pink bouquet of petals worn bonnet-fashion by a bride or bridesmaid and tying beneath the chin in a pink bow.

An elaborate version of a Chinese coolie hat was completely fashioned of white orange blossoms interwoven with tiny green leaves.

Interesting play was given to a cluster of silk ribbons cleverly curled to resemble ringlets and attached to a comb placed just at the crown of the head. The effect achieved was a headdress of white silk ribbons cascading to the shoulder.

The ribbons will be a popular item with the spring fashion bride who does not want to wear a veil or tiara.

Using black satin ribbons instead of white, Mr. Flemming achieves a slightly naughty and flirtation accessory for evening wear.

Enhancing the entire spring collection of hats was the creative touch of Montreal couturier Leo Cavalier, who months ago, began sewing femininity into his line of dresses and ensembles.

Successful Living

Sea of Matrimony Rough for Teenage Couple

Dear Doris: I am 17, married, and have a tiny baby. Before my husband married me he acted like he really loved me and said he'd love the baby. Now he acts as if he hates her.

We fight quite a bit and if I ask him to feed the baby or hold her he never wants to and is always glad to give her back to me again. It's getting that I can't stand the fighting and I'm sick of being the baby's only parent.

When we fight I start to cry and he just calls me names and sometimes hits me. I have bad nerves and he knows it and doesn't seem to care. If divorce is the only way, could you please tell me how to go about it and how much it costs? — Lonely And Far From Family.

Dear Lonely: Hold everything! There's hope! If you knew how many married boys and girls go through these rough times getting used to each other, you'd take heart.

Does a boy ever get practice holding a baby, ahead of time? At least you played with dolls a while back. He is still youthful enough to have an idea it is sissy to help with baby care.

What you are really doing is sharing a little living miracle that belongs to both of you. Just how well you make him feel he has an equal share — in the fun, too — will go far to determine the kind of family man he will become.

It comes natural to a new mother to be near to tears. You don't have to take physical abuse, but get back your health and spirits and see if things aren't better.

• • •

Dear Doris: I have just recently been made president of our missionary society and wonder if you could send me the proper procedure to conduct an opening at a meeting, as well as welcoming guests, etc. — First Time in Office.

Dear First Time: About the guests: Don't make the mistake of being in the next room settling details when the guests arrive. When V. I. P.'s (speaker, mayor, head table guests) show their faces at the door, it is your job to spot them and reach out a hand in welcome.

No one pinch hits for the president in this role. You may in a minute turn them over individually, to helpers, to be led to cloak room, refreshment, comfortable chairs and to be introduced to others.

As for meeting routines, I'm sending you the names of two books I recommend.

Cinfidential to a teen-age Reader: I agree. The items are offensive to anyone who considers himself a Christian. No respectable magazine would accept such advertisements.

• • •

Confidential to Lone Parent: Far, far better for you to accept the proffered help of a group worker at the "Y" than try to give all the control as well as love your boy needs, alone. Any boy, or girl, needs two parents.

When a father is lacking, the wise mother looks around for a "father figure", as the social workers term it, for her boy to look up to and chum around with. This is an important job which is being done in a number of Canadian centres by Big Brother Associations.

Thrifty Housewives Use Leftovers In Macaroni and Cheese Casserole

By MARY MOORE

This favorite dish is designed to lift the ego of some timid teenager or some beleaguerd bride. In addition it is a comfort to thrifty housewives who need some delicious way to use up those ends of cheese in the refrigerator.

PERFECT MACARONI AND CHEESE (serves 6)

1 cup uncooked elbow macaroni
1 teaspoon salt
4 cups boiling water
2 cups scalled milk
1 tablespoon grated or shredded or finely chopped onion
5 tablespoons butter — divided
4 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt (second amount)
4 oz. (half 8-oz. pkg.) process cheese, cut up
1 cup grated or shredded old Cheddar cheese
½ (or 1) cup soft breadcrumbs

To large saucepan containing the boiling water add macaroni and salt (first amount) and bring to boil for 15 minutes or until very tender.

In double boiler heat milk with grated onion, covered, until little bubbles form around edge. (Double boiler prevents worry about milk boiling over.)

In very large saucepan melt butter and tip-off 2 tablespoons and reserve (to add to crumbs later). Add flour, mustard and salt to melted butter in saucepan and stir to blend. Stir in hot milk and onion until thick. Remove from heat. Stir in processed cheese and ½ cup of the grated old Cheddar cheese. (Be sure to look in refrigerator to see if there are ends of cheese to be used up.) Reserve remaining ½ cup for topping. Stir well to start cheese melting.

Drain well cooked macaroni through colander or sieve. Add macaroni to sauce. Turn into large casserole or baking dish. Mix breadcrumbs with reserved 2 tablespoons melted butter and then add reserved ½ cup cheese and sprinkle evenly over top of dish. Sprinkle sparingly with paprika. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. at least ½ hour but if you like your macaroni 'n cheese fairly dry bake longer — 40 to 50 minutes.

NOTE: This method makes a lot of pots and pans to wash but is worth it. Wash up as soon as macaroni is in the oven to prevent pile-up after meal.

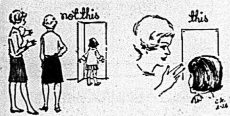
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Oh dear, Janie got away without brushing her teeth again. I scold and scold but she always forgets unless I remind her."

Mother: "I'll put this tooth brushing chart up in the bathroom. You can paste on a star every time you brush your teeth."

Jane: "I'll brush every time I eat."

Enforce tooth brushing rules until they become an automatic habit — but do it in a pleasant way so the child will not resist by "forgetting."

Ann Landers

Dangers of Marijuana Questioned by Student

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am not a hippie or a far-out creep with long hair and sandals. I attend a good eastern school and am a law-abiding, peace-loving citizen.

I want to ask a serious question and I need a direct answer. Is marijuana dangerous? Many of my friends smoke pot and have advanced some good arguments in favor of it. They claim pot gives them a high feeling but no hangover like alcohol. They insist it is not physically addictive and a person can quit without experiencing withdrawal symptoms. No one I know who smokes pot will admit to taking anything stronger. This discounts the theory that pot smokers often go on to other stuff. They say the only thing wrong with pot is that it is illegal and the law will soon be changed.

I have never used pot but I confess the idea is somewhat appealing. Perhaps your answer will help me decide. It may also be useful for some of my pot-smoking friends — including my fiancee. — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED — My answer to your question, "Is pot dangerous?" would cut no mustard. You might as well ask your mother. An answer from three of the country's most distinguished psychiatrists, however, might make a dent.

Dr. Edward M. Litin, Head of Psychiatry at Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., says:

"I am dead set against marijuana because it produces confusion, hallucination and impulsive behavior. While some marijuana users have no inclination to try anything stronger, many do graduate from pot to more powerful drugs and of course this can lead to serious trouble."

Dr. Zigmond M. Lebensohn, Chief of Psychiatry at Sibley Memorial Hospital, Washington, D.C., says:

"I consider marijuana a serious problem for our 'alienated youth'. It is not harmless, as some users insist, and I am sorry the notion that it is non-addictive has gained such wide acceptance. Although people who use marijuana do not experience 'withdrawal' symptoms when it is removed, they are tremendously drawn to it and many users go back to marijuana after they have left the hospital because they want to recapture the pleasurable feeling. This dependency is just as serious as a physical addiction.

"In my professional experience I have seen a number of young people experience psychotic episodes precipitated by marijuana. Intense emotional experiences were sufficient to trip the balance in the direction of acute psychotic disorganization. This sometimes lasts for weeks and even months. In certain instances, the effects continue indefinitely and cause complete disruption of a life plan, tremendous expense to the smoker and his family and the end is often a totally unproductive human being.

"Some individuals have been able to use marijuana and get away with it, but these individuals have stable nervous systems. Most young people who smoke marijuana do not have stable central nervous systems and for this reason it is particularly dangerous for them."

Dr. Philip Solomon, Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard, says:

"Some people have smoked marijuana for years and have experienced no damage whatever. For others it has proved disastrous. Marijuana is not harmless. It may not be addictive but it is habit-forming. In unstable personalities marijuana can be the trigger that precipitates psychosis.

"Marijuana is the coward's approach to dealing with life's problems. Escaping does not produce a solution. It merely distorts the judgment and delays acting on a solution. Prolonged and continued escape can and will create serious incapacitation and move a person farther and farther from reality."

So, there you have it, from three leading authorities. I wouldn't expect you to listen to me, but I do hope you listen to them.

* * *

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing an unstamped, self-addressed envelope plus 6c for postage.

All-Ontario Tournament

Townsend Wins Wrestling Championship

But, then it was worth it. Quinte's all-round athlete Harold Townsend brought out the cheers from 1,500 partisan throats when he won a close decision from Tom Ridding of East York to win the Ontario 183-pound high school wrestling championships.

It climaxed a 30-hour jam packed wrestling schedule of matches and more matches as 453 school champions from 123 institutions in the province met at Centennial Secondary School Friday and Saturday.

Townsend's win was reserved almost to the last as an even 500 bouts were scheduled. It proved a rugged task for the Quinte strongman who had to face five opponents in a 14-hour stretch from eight o'clock Saturday morning to the championship bout at 10 o'clock in the evening.

His performance was all but matched by Al McLuskie of Moira in the 98-pound class. The Grade 10 student also was formed into five matches on Saturday with but one difference.

His championship match with Mancino of Hillcrest went through the regular three, three-minute rounds and three one-minute overtime rounds before a judge's decision gave the match to the Ottawa Hillcrest student "for aggressiveness."

Another Moira competitor, Wayne Morris, lost a close semi final match to John Barry of Winston Churchill, Scarborough, and had to be content to wrestle for third place. He defeated Culp of Arthur District High school for third place. Barry went on to the 123-lb. final with a victory over Lowery of Brock.

Paul Turgeon of Trenton also reached the consolation final of his weight class, at 115 lbs. He lost a decision and took a fourth place finish.

Banting Memorial High School, of Alliston, produced the team champions with a strong club coached by Dave Moore and Ian Kay.

"It was a team effort," stated Moore, after the competition. "We only had one individual champion, so everybody contribute dto the victory. Needless to say, we're really porud of the boys."

Next to Quinte's Townsend, the Banting wrestlers drew the biggest cheers from the crowd, as they were presented by a sizeable contingent of cheerleaders and fans.

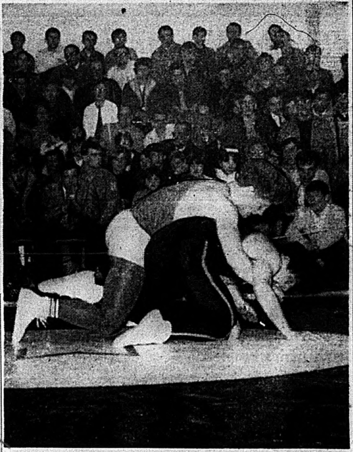
Guy Zink was the one individual champion for Banting. He defeated McDonald of West Hill in Scarborough for the championship in the 115-lb. class.

Other Banting wrestlers who placed included Dave Gordon, who was second in the 90-lb. class, Bill Nosad, third in the 194-lb. class, and "Tiny" Saunders, third in the unlimited division.

The other individual champions were: Hall, of Clarke Road, London, in the 90-lb. class; Shand, of West Hill, Scarborough, in the 106-lb. class; Zimmerman, of Preston High School, in the 130-lb. class; Roger Vachon, of Sturgeon Falls, in the 136-lb. class; Robinson of Westlane, Niagara Falls, in the 141-lb. class; Bedard, of Anderson, Whitby, in the 157-lb. class; Sherman of Bell High, Ottawa, in the 168-lb. class; Plummer, of Timmins, in the 194-lb. class; and Pilon, of St. Pat's Ottawa, in the unlimited division.

Behind Banting Memorial, which had 59 points, the team standings were: Catholic Central of London, 48; Sturgeon Falls, 38; Winston Churchill, 36; Pembroke C. I., 36; and West Hill, 32.

Among local schools, Moira was highest with 24 points, to place 13th. Quinte had 17 points, and stood 21st.



Ontario Champion

Harold Townsend of Quinte grapples with his opponent, Tom Ridding of East York, in Saturday night's final match in the 183-lb. class at the OFSSA wrestling meet at Centennial Secondary School. Townsend won by a decision to capture the All-Ontario championship in his class.

Senior A Hockey

Everything 'According to Form' in Finals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Everything is going according to form in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series playoffs.

The three strong favorites—Toronto Marlboros, Collingwood Kings and Galt Hornets, have taken 2-0 leads in their best-of-seven playoff sets.

Marlboros defeated Barrie Flyers 7-3 Saturday and 5-4 Sunday, while Galt defeated Oakville Oaks 9-1 and 4-2 to lead that series.

In the other game, Collingwood edged Guelph Regals 4-3 to take a 2-0 lead in the set. Kingston Aces, who did not play, lead Woodstock Alcans 1-0 in games.

The Toronto-Barrie series moves to Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto tonight. Galt and Oakville resume their series in Galt Saturday while Collingwood plays host to Guelph Friday.

On Saturday, Toronto got two goals from Earl Balfour and one each from Grant Moore, Moe Galand, Chris Evans, Doug Kelcher and Don Fuller. Dave Ferguson, Mike Dubeau and John Weeks replied for Barrie.

The Marlboros got three unanswered goals in the first period, one each from Moore, Galand and Walter MacLean on Sunday. Moore got another one in the second period and Evans got one.

Barrie's scoring was shared by Dave Nicholishen, Ferguson, Weeks and Corby Adams.

John Beechy and Vance Millar paced Galt with two goals each in their romp Saturday. Single goals went to Don Snider, Bob Hall, Lloyd McKay, Pete Brennan and Carl Hatt. Bill Cosborn scored Oakville's only goal.

Millar got two Sunday, Snider one, while Joe Hogan picked up the other. Bill Cosborn and Larry Shuker scored for Oakville.

Hec Bernard paced Collingwood with two goals. Dave Fitten and Butch Kt5-ing got one each. John MacMillan, with two, and George Montague scored for Guelph

Yarborough Victorious in $200,000 Race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "We'll learn how to handle these speeds," predicted Cale Yarborough, after winning his second straight major race on the banked asphalt track at Daytona International Speedway where high-velocity qualifying runs turned into low key racing for the second year in a row.

It was obvious from the 58 caution laps that the U.S.'s best stock car drivers didn't have things under control in Sunday's $200,000 Daytona 500.

The record crowd of 94,800 saw the survivors regroup behind the caution car 11 times and parade at slow speed for more than one-fourth of the race as a series of accidents eliminated all but 22 of the 50 starters.

The crowd's compensation for patience was a sensational finish in which Yarborough passed his Mercury Cyclone teammate, Lee Roy Yarbrough of Columbia, S.C., three laps from home and took the checkered flag less than one second in front.

Bobby Allison and David Pearson made it a great day or Ford-Mercury when they finished third and fourth in a pair of Ford Torinos.

The next four places went to Paul Goldsmith and Darel Dieringer in Plymouths, Al Unser in a Dodge and Richard Petty in a Plymouth.

Yarborough said his car wasn't quite as fast as Yarborough's and "he could pass me when he wanted to."

"All I could do was grin and bear it. I'd beat him in the corners and he'd pass me on the straight.

"You can't do better than wide open, and that's what I was doing."

He maintained a double pit stop with two laps fairly late in the race, had no bearing on his heartbreaking loss and the difference between Cale's $47,250 winnings and his own $17,525.

Trenton Greets Curling Champs

TRENTTON — The belief that all great Canadian curling stars are developed in western Canada was deflated by the Trenton high school rink representing Ontario in the national playoffs CFB base commander Col. G. R. Adamson said at a reception honoring the champions here on Saturday.

Praising skip Bill Hope and his teammates for their outstanding accomplishments the base commander noted the team made a dream come true that started 10 years ago when RCAF curling clubs decided to offer training and guidance for junior members.

The other members of the national award winning aggregation are third Bruce Lord, second Brian Domney and lead Dennis Gardiner.

The exhilarated champions were welcomed back to Trenton by Mayor James MacDonald and a number of civic leaders from the town and the City of Belleville. The long enthusiastic motorcade they headed up comprised a noisy fire engine from the air base and more than 40 horn blaring cars. They received the heroes homecoming treatment, riding in open convertibles leading the procession.

The parade passed through Trenton en route to the 6 RD recreation hall where a crowd of 200 and two bands awaited their arrival.

At the ceremonies for the champions Hollis Morrissey who managed them was given special recognition.

Among the gifts presented to the team as tokens to remember their title winning feat were gold cuff links and tie studs engraved with the Trenton coat- of-arms. Belleville businessman Bill Spinelli presented them with clocks as part of Pepsi Cola's contribution.

Messages of congratulations included telegrams from Premier John Robarts and Quinte riding MLA Dr. R. T. Potter.

With The Trotters

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Rip Herbert displayed his best form Saturday afternoon at the Western Fair Raceway in the featured Preferred Invitation Pace by coming from far back to register a half-length victory over Flash Volo in the mile dash.

Rip turned in the fastest mile of the afternoon when he was clocked in 2:08 4-5. He returned $5.40, $3.70 and $3.40 across the board in recording his second victory in three starts this year.

Phillips Turns Over Cruiser

TORONTO (CP) — Alfie Phillips Jr. of Toronto, skip of last year's Canadian championship rink, turned over his controversial snowmobile to the suburban North York Lions Club Saturday.

Phillips, reinstated as an amateur once before, risked losing his eligibility forever if he kept the prize, awarded last December to the runner-up rink in the CBC's world curling championship.

The Ontario Curling Association's code of ethics limits prize value to $150 a man or $600 a rink. The other members of the Phillips rink, third John Ross, second Ron Manning and lead Keith Riley took the $800 snow mobiles.

George Knudson Tops Tucson Open -- $40,000 in Two Weeks

TUCSON, Ariz. (CP) — George Knudson rocketted out of the pack Sunday to win the Tucson Open golf tournament, $20,000 and become the first pro of the year to take successive major matches.

Last week the chain-smoking Toronto pro registered his first victory of the 1968 Professional Golfers Association tour in the Phoenix Open, also worth $20,000.

He now has earned $50,310 on the winter tour and probably an invitation to the Masters in Augusta, Ga., as well. Normally one of the invited foreign pros, Knudson this year has to earn his invitation to the Masters by finishing high among the nation's golf money winners.

His final round seven-under-par 65 and total of 15-under 273 seem likely to assure him of just that. He gives a lot of credit to a muscle-building isometric course he took in the off-season from internationally-known Toronto trainer Lloyd Percival.

"It was a great round, just a great round," enthused the 30-year-old, 155-pounder who habitually wears dark prescription glasses while playing to ease the glare on the golf course.

"I just hit some great shots," he said of his final round, which included two birdies on the front nine and five on the back side with putts ranging from one foot to a curving 35-footer in the 13th hole.

"I played a heck of a round today.

"I was able to sleep last night and wasn't sick when I woke up this morning. I knew I would shoot a good round."

He had to win. When play opened Sunday he was four strokes off the pace set by Harold Henning of South Africa, who finished tied at 275 with Dale Douglass and host pro Bill Ogden where they earned $4,366 each.

Tied behind Knudson were Frank Beard and Frank Boynton, who earned $9,750 each for their 274 scores.

Beard was tied with Knudson until he went one over par on the 17th hole while Douglass went one over on the 18th. A birdie would have tied him with Knudson.

Arnold Palmer, who won the tournament last year, was bothered by the flu for the first three rounds but came back with a 67 Sunday for a 72-hole total of 283.

Knudson now plans to take a week off and drive his wife and two boys home to Toronto before returning to action in Florida at the Doral and Orland opens.

Polish Woman Loses Olympic Records Officials Claim She's the Wrong Sex

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — "It's a dirty and stupid thing to do to me," world record sprint holder Eva Klobukovska said, her voice both bitter and sad.

The Polish star, who beat the best women runners in the world, was in tears.

She had just been told that the International Amateur Athletic Federation had decided to strip her of her records because she failed a sex test last year. She may also lose her Olympic medals.

"I'm fed up with it all," Miss Klobukovska said Sunday. "I've worked very hard for my victories. I know what I am and how I feel. I've been very aware of all the unhealthy sensationalism in the press, but I wasn't expecting anything like this.

"I think it's a hypocritical and dirty business. I object to officials engaging in this kind of thing maybe because they have nothing better to do."

Miss Klobukovska swept away her tears with a tissue as she spoke to reporters in her comfortably furnished small flat in downtown Warsaw.

She wore a knee-length black skirt with a white frilly blouse and pink jersey. On two occasions she went into the next room to get fresh tissues, walking with that kind of strut one notices sometimes with women athletes. In her wake there was the scent of perfume.

Miss Klobukovska, a first-year student in industrial economics, was wearing an engagement ring. She said she intends to marry but first wants to make further advances in her studies.

The IAAF reached its decision to withdraw certification of her victories, medals and records Sunday after three days of discussion at a meeting in Frankfurt, Germany.

The ruling may mean she will have to give back the two Olympic medals she won in Tokyo in 1964. She won the bronze medal in the 100-metre dash and took a gold in helping the Polish team win the 400-metre relay.

Her problems began when she failed a chromosome test just before the European Nations Athletic Cup in Kiev, Russia, last September. Any decision about taking back her medals will be made when the International Olympic Committee meets in Mexico City in September.

Miss Klobukovska set a record for the 100 metres, 11.1, in 1965. It has since been tied by three runners.

The IAAF ruling means virtual banishment from athletics for the Polish girl and a lengthy wrangle in the sport.

The IAAF will now ask the respective athletic federations and associations, the same ones which put Klobukovska's records forward for ratification, to withdraw them.

The request, coming from the world athletic body, is little less than a command.

Mexico Entries to Get Test

FRANKFURT (AP) — All female competitors at the Mexico City Olympics will have to undergo a test to confirm their sex, the International Amateur Athletic Federation decided Sunday.

"It's the only solution and the only way to remove all doubts and suspicions," said the Marquess of Exeter, British president of the IAAF.

In addition to the sex tests, there will be snap doping tests for all competitors, male and female.

"In this way, every competitor will have to reckon with undergoing a doping examination," the marquess said.

South Africa Problem

Move to Boycott Olympic Games Continues to Grow

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two of the world's top amateur athletic organizations have set out to justify South Africa's participation in this year's Olympic Games, but the move to boycott the games continues to grow.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said in Paris Sunday that South Africa will allow its "underprivileged non-whites an opportunity to appear on the same basis as anyone else."

Brundage said: "South African non-whites long have sought the opportunity to participate in the Games and it is unfortunate that some who pretend to be their friends would deprive them of it."

In Frankfurt, Germany, the International Amateur Athletic Federation supported the decision to allow South Africa into the Games—a move that has led 16 countries to say they will pull out.

India has announced that it will not compete in the Olympics at Mexico City in October if South Africa does.

"If the Olympic Games and the very Olympic movement is to be saved, from total annihilation," the president of the Indian Olympic Association said in New Delhi, "the decision on South Africa's re-entry into the Olympic fold must be rescinded."

South Africa was barred from the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo because of its segregated athletic policies, but this month at the 1968 Winter Games in Grenoble, France, it was re-admitted when it promised to send an integrated team. The country's Olympic trials, however, will continue to be separate.

In Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, the annual African Foreign Ministers Conference called Sunday on the 38 members of the Organization of African Unity to boycott the Olympics if South Africa competes.

That statement was noted without comment by Tass, the Russian press service. Russia has criticized South Africa's re-admission to the Games but has not yet indicated whether or not it will compete.

On another related front Sunday, it was reported that British officials are planning ways to prevent the Rhodesian team from travelling to Mexico City for the games.

Rhodesia seized its independence from Britain in 1965 and, though there is no way of preventing the African country from competing, Rhodesian passports are not officially recognized by most countries.

Britain could ask countries through which the Rhodesians pass to notify British consulates which could then, under British law, confiscate the passports.

Richmond Hill Pee Wees 'Giant Killers' at Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener has crowned a bunch of little giant-killers from Richmond Hill, Ont., with a grand championship of the ninth international peewee hockey tournament.

The ceremony took place Saturday at the Quebec Coliseum after the Richmond Hill youngsters trounced a team from the Montreal suburb of Pointe Claire 4-1 in the tournament final to win the Robert Martineau Memorial trophy.

Saturday's action attracted an attendance of 18,371 and brought total attendance for the 10-day tournament to 191,486—an increase of 22,205 over the 1967 figure.

A record 95 teams from the United States and Canada took part in the tournament played in four divisions—Class AA teams coming from cities of 50,000 or more, followed by Class A, Class B and Class C which represents centres with populations of 7,000 or less.

Richmond Hill, playing in Class B, fought its way into the grand championship final by eliminating Class AA Toronto Shopsy's 3-2 in a surprising semi-final game.

The Richmond Hill victory marked the first time in the history of the tournament that a Class AA team had failed to get into the final.

Pointe Claire, playing in Class A, reached the final by scoring 3-2 win over Princeville, Que., which made its way into the semi-final in Class C play.

Teams reaching the semi-finals automatically became division champions—Toronto Shopsy's in Class AA, Pointe Claire in Class A, Richmond Hill in Class B and Princeville in Class C.

Goalie Bobby Clement was superb in the Richmond Hill net as Pointe Claire outshot his team 27-26 in the fast-skating, free-wheeling championship game.

Nancy 'The Tiger' Wins Two More French Races

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nancy Greene, the pixie-faced Canadian skiing ace, won the special slalom and the women's combined at Chamonix, France, Saturday—but lost her temporary lead in the World Cup standings.

Isabelle Mir of France, who bypassed the Chamonix events to compete in Oslo, Norway, had second-place finishes in Saturday's giant slalom and Sunday's slalom to pick up 40 World Cup points. That put her ahead of the World Cup defender from Rossland, B.C, 133 to 101.

Word from Chamonix was that Saturday's women's slalom didn't count in World Cup compilations, although the previous day's downhill did.

Miss Greene won both races and automatically was combined champ. The Friday downhill victory gave her 25 points.

These points pushed Nancy to 101, but her lead only lasted until the next day's results came in from Oslo.

Fernande Bochatay of Switzerland, winner of the giant slalom at Oslo was disqualified for missing a date in Sunday's slalom. Her World Cup points now total 99, for third place.

In international races counting for the World Cup points are awarded for placings 1 to 10 as follows: 25, 20, 15, 11, 8, 6, 4, 3, 2, 1. The competition ends in April.

The women's slalom at Oslo was won by Kiki Cutter of the U.S., in 1:33.41.

Betsy Clifford of Ottawa finished 11th.

Miss Greene, 24, was timed in 1:17.07 in winning the two women's slalom heats Saturday. French girls took the next three places. Florence Steurer was second in 1:18.41, Annie Famose third in 1:19.27 and Marielle Goitschel fourth in 1:19.85.

The International Federation of Ski Journalists named Miss Greene the top star of the Olympic season and awarded her its annual Golden Ski Trophy.

In contrast to other competitors, the slim Canadian did not find the course gruelling, despite wet snow.

"I thought it was a good course," she said. "I ski well in those conditions and was really going fast at the finish."

Gilbert Flying High

Rangers in Third Place With Wins Over Montreal, Leafs

By GRAHAM COX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle are blowing up a storm in the National Hockey League scoring race and their production has carried New York Rangers into third place in the Eastern Division.

The Rangers scored two big weekend victories—6-1 over Montreal Canadiens Saturday and 3-1 over Toronto Maple Leafs Sunday—to take a three-point lead over fourth-place Boston.

The two French-Canadian stars picked up 13 scoring points in weekend action. Gilbert scored four goals and an assist against Montreal and added two assists in the Toronto game. Ratelle, his centreman, scored once and assisted on three others Saturday while scoring one and assisting on another Sunday.

Gilbert's output moved him into third place in the scoring race with 69 points, one behind Chicago's Bobby Hull and two back of leader Stan Mikita, the Black Hawks' slick play-making centre. Ratele is in fourth place with 66 points.

The win for the Rangers Sunday extended their unbeaten Sunday string at home to 15 games and they've lost one just of their last 11 games.

The defending Stanley Cup champion Leafs, meanwhile, saw their playoff hopes fading despite a 1-0 win over Boston Saturday. Toronto now is nine points behind the Bruins who hold down the fourth and final playoff spot.

Gilbert has picked up 23 points in 10 games this month while Ratelle has accounted for 19.

"This is the best we've played together since our junior days," Gilbert said Sunday. "We're passing the puck now the way we did then."

"It's a matter of confidence," chimed in Ratelle, centre on the line which has Gilbert at right wing and Vic Hadfield normally at left wing.

"Rod and I have. played together so long we just know each others moves by heart."

Both Montreal natives, they started playing together in the city minor leagues then went with Guelph of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series for three years before turning pro.

"They've been fantastic," said Emile Francis, New York general manager-coach, who also coached the pair at Guelph.

In other Sunday games, Los Angeles Kings dumped St. Louis Blues 4-2, Pittsburgh Penguins clipped Philadelphia Flyers 2-1 and Oakland Seals tied Minnesota North Stars 3-3.

In other Saturday games, Detroit Red Wings beat Minnesota 3-1, Oakland upset Pittsburgh 3-1 and Chicago and Los Angeles tied 3-3.

The only game scheduled Tuesday has Boston at Pittsburgh.

Gilbert said Sunday he was suffering from a cold and played Saturday only after taking a shot of penicillin. But it didn't impair his game in any way and he termed it "my greatest thrill in hockey . . . to score four goals in my hometown.

After the game Saturday he said, "I'm glad we won as decisively as we did.

"Don't forget we were bombed by the Canadiens just last Wednesday (7-2) . . . so it's nice to come in here tonight and sort of give it back to them on their own ice."

It was even nicer in that ot kept another Ranger record intact, that of being the only team to beat Montreal since Christmas Day. In 26 games the Canadiens have lost only two—both to New York.

The Rangers ended an early 12-game Canadiens string Feb. 4 with a 3-0 victory and Saturday snapped an eight-game Montreal victory streak.

The other New York goals Sunday went to Rod Seiling and Phil Goyette. Mike Walton scored the only goal for Toronto.

Saturday the sixth New York goal was scored by Ron Stewart with Yvan Cournoyer tallying for Montreal.

Howie Menard scored twice for Los Angeles Sunday with their other goals going to Terry Gray and Doug Robinson. Dickie Moore and Gary Veneruzzo scored for St. Louis.

Andy Bathgate and Val Fonteyne scored for Pittsburgh, but it was the outstanding play of goalie Les Binkley and defencemen Leo Boivin and Al McNeil that made the difference in beating Philadelphia, leaders in the Western Division. Lou Angotti scored for Philadelphia.

Binkley made 29 saves in the game, many of them brilliant, while Boivin and McNeil gave Philadelphia forwards nothing but trouble as they manoeuvred for shots.

Goalie Charlie Hodge was the difference for Oakland as they forced Minnesota to come from behind twice for the tie.

John Brenneman, Gerry Ehman and George Swarbrick scored for the Seals with Sandy Fitzpatrick and Ray Cullen giving Minnesota a brief 2-1 second-period edge and Wayne Connelly finally tying it midway through the third period.

Gordie Howe scored his 30th goal of the season and set up another Saturday as Detroit won it's first game in nine outings. Alex Delvecchio and Peter Mahovlich got the other Detroit goals with Connelly scoring for Minnesota.

Bruce Gamble recorded his fourth shutout of the year as the Leafs snapped a seven-game losing streak on rookie Jim McKenney's second NHL and his first since being recalled from Rochester of the American League two games earlier.

Ehman scored twice for the Seals against Pittsburgh with Bob Baun getting the other Oakland goal and Ab McDonald replying for the Penguins.

The largest crowd of the year to watch a game in Los Angeles—15,752—saw Dennis Hull score twice and Mikita once for Chicago while Lowell MacDonald got two goals and Doug Robinson one for the Kings.

Lady Curlers Set for Action

WINNIPEG (CP) — The lady curlers will be watching more than their draw shots when the Canadian women's curling championships open here today

At least 10 banquets are on the menu for the eighth national women's final that again sees Western rinks favored to cop the title they've won on six of seven previous occasions.

Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba rate as co-favorites on the strength of past performances. Manitoba and British Columbia have each won national honors twice. Alberta and Saskatchewan have won it once each.

The lone Eastern victory went to Mabel Deware's New Brunswick foursome in 1963.

Rated highly in this year's 10-team, round-robin play is Barbara MacNiven of Delisle, Sask., who has twice represented her province in the national playoff.

After a disappointing championship in 1965, Mrs. MacNiven finished second in 1966.

Edmonton's Hazel Jamison will skip her three daughters in an attempt to return the championship to Alberta. She won the Canadian title in 1966 without daughter Jackie Spencer. Mrs. Jamison has been throwing rocks with daughters Gale Lee, June Coyle and Mrs. Spencer for 11 years.

Manitoba's Mabel Mitchell of Brandon will attempt to retain the title won last year by Winnipeg's Betty Duguid. Manitoba has a record of winning the title each time the event was held here, in 1955 and 1959, among Western teams before it became a national championship.

Lura McLuckie of Winnipeg, Canadian Ladies Curling Association president, says the championship will remain in the West this year and rates Mrs. Jamison, Mrs. Mitchell and Barbara MacNiven as co-favorites.

Myrtle Fashoway of Cranbrook will be after B.C's third championship—Ina Hansen of Kimberley won the crown in 1962 and 1961.

Barbara Likely will skip New Brunswick's rink from Saint John while Nova Scotia's entry from Halifax will be skipped by Shirley Robertson, a member of the province's 1963 team.

Jeanette Blair will skip Newfoundland's rink from St. John's and the Prince Edward Island rink, skipped by Gladys Carruthers, comes from Charlottetown.

Quebec's hopes rest with Peggie Bradshaw's rink from Hudson Heights and Peggy Wherrett of Dryden will carry Ontario's colors.

'He's A Smoothie' Wins $91,000 Race

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — He's a Smoothie, the Canada's 1967 Horse of the Year owned by W. R. Beasley of Toronto and ridden by Braulio Baeza, finished all-out Saturday to win the $91,200 Hialeah Turf Cup by a neck over fast-closing Irish Rebellion.

He's a Smoothie, a five-year-old son of Round Table, returned a winning mutuel payoff of $6.60 as the favorite. He took the lead a quarter of a mile from the finish and held off Irish Rebellion and Flit-To, the show horse in the field of eight.

Time for the 1½ miles over the grass course, softened by rain, was 2:32 4-5. The winner carried 117 pounds, two less than the top weight packed by Flit-To and four more than Irish Rebellion.

"This is the one we came for," said trainer Warren Beasley, the owner's son. "This is what we had in mind all winter. Mile and a quarter to mile and a half is his real game, and the soft turf helped."

It was the second victory of the year for He's a Smoothie and raised his earnings in 1968 to $72,425. Last year he won seven of 14 starts for a total of $112,265.

Blunt answers to questions about borrowing from Pacific Finance
Q. What happens when I come in for a loan?
A. A few questions in private—like where do you work, where do you live, and why you want the money. Our business is making loans, not refusing them.
Q. How fast can I get my money?
A. If you call first, it's not unusual to have your money within 20 minutes after you walk in. Same day service is standard.
Q. How much can I get?
A. Usually, you're a shoo-in for all you need. As a rule of thumb, you are probably good for a loan equal to three times your monthly salary. Over half of the people who come to us for loans qualify for more than they ask for.
Q. What happens if I don't make a payment?
A. Pacific Finance is easy to talk to at times like this. We know you can get trapped by bad luck. If you need more money, tell us. If you want to take longer and make the payments smaller, we can probably work that out for you too.
Q. Are you a fly-by-night outfit?
A. We have over 600 offices throughout the United States and Canada. We've been in business since 1920. Right now over a million people have loans with Pacific Finance totaling over a half billion dollars. And Pacific Finance is part of the Transamerica Corporation that also owns other companies such as Occidental Life and United Artists.
No matter what amount you need, stop by your nearest Pacific Finance office. Better yet, give us a call.

Crooks Trained At Monastery For Jail Break

LONDON (Reuters) — A gang of seven skilled crooks trained for weeks in a derelict northern France monastery before they spirited train robber Charles Wilson out of a heavily-guarded British jail.

Directed by a former French resistance fighter known as Frenchy, they engineered Wilson's break-out from Winson Green Prison near Birmingham in August, 1964, for £50,000 (then $150,000) in cash.

Details of the plot to free Wilson, recaptured in Rigaud, Que., in January were told by his wife Pat in an interview published Sunday in The News of the World.

Mrs. Wilson, interviewed in Canada, said the seven men began training in June, 1964, for Operation Breakout.

For days they practised scaling monastery walls which were about the same height as those of Winson Green prison.

Among the seven were a pilot, a radio operator and a locksmith, who all had special roles to play.

On Aug. 12, 1964, Frenchy and his gang were outside the 15-foot-high prison walls. They wore dark blue raincoats, black shoes and black trousers, making themselves almost invisible.

After nightfall three of them, with black-stocking face masks, scaled the prison walls with grappling hooks and a collapsible mountaineering ladder.

The radio operator listened for police broadcasts before joining the climbers.

Once inside, the four sped to a bathhouse which led to the wing in which Wilson was imprisoned. They seized and tied up a duty warder.

The locksmith raced to Wilson's cell and spent eight agonizing minutes picking the lock. Later he got £10,000 for his role in the escape.

Wilson donned dark clothing and followed the group over the prison walls.

Wilson and two of the gang hid in a special compartment in a gasoline truck, furnished with pillows and blankets. It trundled off for a deserted landing strip and a waiting plane piloted by a Belgian.

Frenchy drove off with the locksmith and Wilson and the others were flown to a villa in northern France.

Hours after his escape, Wilson heard the details over a glass of champagne, his wife said.

Wilson, a 37-year-old bookmaker, was in jail for his part in what was known as the crime of the century—the $7,000,000 robbery of the Glasgow-London mail-train in 1963.

SUFFERED DAMAGES

The second World War is estimated to have run down British domestic capital by about £3,000,000,000 through shipping losses, bomb damage and arrears of industrial maintenance and replacements.

Stanfield Declares Pearson and Caouette Have Devised System Ignoring Will of House

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Stanfield has called Prime Minister Pearson and Creditiste Leader Real Caouette the authors of a new parliamentary system in which the government can ignore the will of the House of Commons.

Appearing at the annual convention of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation Saturday night, Mr. Stanfield said last week's events in Parliament marked a backward step for Canada.

He criticized the Pearson government for ignoring defeat on a major issue, namely "its competence to manage the economy," and Mr. Caouette for switching his allegiance to the government and thus making it probable that it will win a vote of confidence.

The government was defeated 84 to 82 last Monday night on third reading of a bill to authorize a five-per-cent surcharge on income tax, which the government has been collecting since Jan. 1. The Creditistes joined the other opposition parties in voting against the measure.

Mr. Stanfield also was critical of Canada's foreign aid program, which was to have been his main topic.

Declaring that the Canadian aid program, "although still small, tends to spread itself too widely," the Conservative leader urged concentration on selected countries which show they can use aid effectively.

He told the students "we meet in a context of crisis in Parliament and chaos in government policies."

The parliamentary turmoil last week was an exhibition of a government determined "to cling to power at any cost."

"The Pearson precedent and the Caouette conversion have taken us on to an entirely new road," Mr. Stanfield said.

"If a government cannot lose the confidence of Parliament on a money bill, the principal item of its budgetary policy, it cannot be defeated in the future on anything, except a specific motion of non-confidence or censure. In effect, the policies of a government will be able to suffer defeat but the government will be able to survive."

Among resolutions adopted by the 150 students attending the convention were:

—Support of the royal commission report on bilingualism and biculturalism, with the added proposal that all English-speaking provinces, not just Ontario and New Brunswick, declare French an official language.

—Postponement of national medical-care insurance "until agreement can be reached on a universally acceptable plan" after further consultation with the provinces.

—Diplomatic recognition of mainland China, without withdrawing recognition of Nationalist China.

Pearson Ran Liberal Show

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson pulled the strings in his government's rally last week.

Hindsight and detail from informed sources show that, with some luck, deliberate Pearson choices guaranteed the Liberal survival after last Monday night's defeat of the tax bill.

Seething with anger at his cabinet and caucus, Mr. Pearson fled his Jamaican vacation. From the moment of his return Tuesday noon he dominated the Liberal show.

He spent only 10 minutes with his embarrassed cabinet early Tuesday afternoon before entering the Commons to win 24 hours for an assessment of the government's position.

First, Mr. Pearson picked the men who would advise him during the next three days.

The nucleus included Commons tacticians: Health Minister MacEachen, government House leader; Works Minister McIlraith, former House leader; Solicitor-General Pennell; and Treasury Board President Benson.

Among others were H. A. Olson, MP for Medicine Hat who recently crossed the floor from the Social Credit benches; and Don Jamieson, MP for Burin-Burgeo who won a byelection to enter the Commons in 1966.

Mr. Jamieson, a broadcaster, advised Liberal back-benchers on how to take the government's case to their constituents.

The inner group met several times daily in the prime minister's Centre Block office.

Wednesday morning the group settled on the wording of the confidence motion that Mr. Pearson took into the House that afternoon. It asked only for an interpretation of Monday night's vote—not for a clear statement of confidence.

As such, it won a pledge Friday of support from the eight Creditistes in the House, removing the last fear the government had of defeat.

During the same 24-hour breather the prime minister made another decision unusual for him but important in the final result.

He resolved to take his case straight to the public. Six times in the next 72 hours he spoke to national television audiences, displaying a fighting, aggressive mood. He kept away from the constitutional issue of whether a government, defeated on a major tax bill, must resign or dissolve Parliament.

He kept it simple: Canadians don't want an election, they want business done in the Commons.

'Relief from Heavy Acting'

Grand Prix--Lots of Racing

By BARRY GRILLS

Staff Reporter

With the roar of formula-1 racers "Grand Prix" fills the movie screen at the Belle Theatre. The exhaust fumes can almost be smelled. Already the audience has an inkling of what is in store for it, lots and lots and lots of racing.

The Grand Prix at Monaco is the setting of the first race and you meet the drivers who will occupy your attention for the next three hours and 15 minutes, Jean-Pierre Sardi, played by Yves Montand, Pete Aron, played by James Garner, Scot Stoddard, played by Brian Bedford and an Italian whose name remained unpronounceable throughout the whole show, played by Antonio Sabato.

This Italian guy didn't deserve a name anyway. They didn't even need him in the movie. He didn't have a problem and he wasn't attracted to someone else's wife. As a matter of fact he didn't even win the world championship.

If memory serves correctly, all three of the academy awards that this film nabbed were the technical kind.

The shots of the racing were well done as well, but then they had to go and ruin it by overdoing the trick photography. Everyone likes a competent cameraman, but after three hours of super photography, double - exposures and mirror shots, it gets tiring.

An inkling of the plot is probably due. Jean-Pierre is a married man, who meets a female American journalist, played by Eva Marie Saint and they fall in love. Meanwhile back at the racetrack, Mrs. Scot Stoddard is thinking of leaving her husband because he races and is making eyes at Pete Aron, one-time driving buddy of Scot's who by the way, had a bad accident because of Pete.

As well the Italian guy is making eyes at an Italian girl played by Franciose Hardy.

Near the end Mrs. Stoddard goes back to Mr. Stoddard leaving the audience wondering how it happened.

It's a movie the whole family should see just as a pleasant relief from heavy acting. There's plenty of racing for the kids and hubby and small doses of romance for mother. The racing will keep you on the edge of your seat.

Army Service Problem Troubles Detroit Team

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Detroit Tigers are going to lose pitcher Mickey Lolich before spring training really gets rolling, but the 27-year-old left-hander thinks it may be a blessing in disguise.

Lolich, who won nine of his last 12 games in the pennant stretch drive last season and wound up with a 14-13 record, leaves Friday for two weeks with the Michigan Air National Guard in Savannah, Ga.

"This will be the first year since 1964 that I won't have to leave for two weeks in the summer," said Lolich, who is working on a regular-season string of 28 2-3 scoreless innings. "And that year I won 18 games."

Elsewhere on the spring-training front, the facts of military life were also in evidence.

Glenn Beckert was missing from Chicago Cubs' training site in Scottsdale, Ariz., because of his two-week reserve obligation. But like Lolich, Beckert was happier with the situation than he was last year.

Then, the second baseman, who hit .280 in 146 games, had to spend two weeks during the season in summer camp.

But if the army taketh away, it also giveth.

Left-handed pitcher Bill Landis surprised Boston Red Sox manager Dick Williams by showing up at the Winter Haven, Fla., camp a little early. Landis just finished a six-month hitch.

One week out of Vietnam, where he spent a year as a parachute rigger, Martin was discharged seven days ahead of schedule to make spring training.

In Miami, Fla., Baltimore Orioles were plagued with four major holdouts: outfielders Frank Robinson and Curt Blefary, second baseman Dave Johnson and first baseman Boog Powell.

Johnson spent more than an hour conferring with the Oriole front office, which said they are about $5,000 apart.

Matty Alou remained the lone Pittsburgh Pirate not signed.

Bar Bell Club Wins Five Awards

The club won two firsts, one second and two thirds in the first edition of the Ontario Teenage Weightlifting Championships. The meet brought together 27 boys from around the province.

Firsts went to Ed Scriven, in the 132-lb. class, who lifted 450 lbs. and Bob Walt, in the 148-lb. class, who lifted 675 lbs.

Paul Barrett was second in the 165-lb. class, with a lift of 695 lbs. Mike McMahon took a third in the 123-lb. class, with a lift of 370 lbs., and Gary Walt was third in the 165-lb. class with a lift of 670 lbs.

The results were sent in to Montreal, where they are matched against those from across the nation, and an all-Canadian champion declared in each class.

Apollo coach Ken Carr-Braint indicated that Bob Walt, who was named the Hamilton competition's best lifter, is the club's big hope for the All-Canada Teen-Age contest.

Smothers Brothers Find It Hard To Be Funny, Witty Every Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Watching the Smothers Brothers Show on CBS these Sunday nights is, in a way, like watching the old Jack Paar shows. The viewer is looking for daring and shock almost as much as jokes and musical numbers.

But as far as shocks were concerned Sunday, they were about as strong as those received by touching metal after walking across a carpet.

Tommy Smothers, backed by the chorus, did have a long song called Lloyd George Knew my Father, done to the music of Onward Christian Soldiers. Pete Seeger, the folk singer, did have a number of war songs to sing, dating back to Yankee Doodle, including a parody of 1898 sung to the tune of Tramp, Tramp, Tramp The Boys Are Marching, although the music seems associated with the war of 1914.

Seeger, an attractive performer, also sang a narrative number about soldiers on manoeuvres led by a foolish captain into quicksand in the Mississippi River. But there seemed to be little to get steamed up about in the content of his performance.

There was a not altogether successful series of sketches built around a poll which included a Negro named George Wallace, with all the iredictable jokes about the similarity of name, and one pretty weak sally about President Johnson.

The program, which has received so much publicity about its "controversy" and troubles with network censors, seems to be in the process of discovering, as have other shows in the past, that it is difficult, if not impossible, to be outrageous, incisive, witty and funny week after week.

Recommended tonight: The Lucy Show, CBS, 8:39-9 EST. Joan Crawford in her comedy debut on television: The Danny Thomas Hour, NBC, 9-10, a program of his one-man nightclub act, taped during an appearance at Lake Tahoe: The Carol Burnett Show, CBS, 10-11, with Garry Moore and Durward Kirby, in a reunion reminiscing about Carol's star on the old Garry Moore Show.

UFO Is Sighted At London, Ontario

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An unidentified flying object that hovered and then flashed through the sky in a westerly direction was reported almost simultaneously Sunday night by a London man and a Dorchester family.

The first report of the sighting was made about 7:30 p.m. by David Priest of Dorchester.

Moments later, a similar sighting was reported by Bruce Phillips of London.

Mr. Priest said he, his wife, and house guests Mr. and Mrs. Blake Emmons of Nashville, Tenn., viewed the object for "six or seven minutes."

"We weren't really able to identify the shape of it because of the black (sky) background, but it did have a very bright white light at the front of the vehicle and three red lights in a triangular pattern at the rear," Mr. Priest said.

Mr. Priest said the object hovered, moved up and down slightly, then took off at a terrific speed in a westerly direction towards London.

"All of a sudden, it stopped, moved up and hovered there while a second vehicle moved to the same spot and hovered directly below," he said.

Mr. Phillips also reported seeing a bright light at the front of the vehicle but he thought it was two, "like car headlights, but very much brighter."

"I first noticed it as I was driving home," he said. "I dashed into the house for a pair of binoculars and watched it for six to seven minutes."

In addition to three red lights set in a triangular pattern, Mr. Phillips said he saw two smaller white lights and one green light. None of the lights blinked while it was hovering, he said.

One Missed Pill Could Mean Baby

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking birth control pills as we can't afford any more children. Well, Thursday night I forgot to take my pill, and didn't think of it until Friday night, so I took two. Now I'm worried that I may have goofed up. Please tell me if you think I did. — Mrs. Q.

Well, if you did goof, I hope it will be a pretty baby.

The pills, to be dependable, must be taken exactly on schedule, and this business of forgetting one is doubtless the explanation of some pregnancies among pill-users.

Taking two the next day won't make up for the missed one.

No harm done otherwise except the possible risk of pregnancy.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a hopeless alcoholic. Due to the fact that I am handicapped, I feel resentful and sorry for myself. I am lonely so I drink. In company with people, I still feel lost and lonely.

I am well aware that the drinking is slowly killing me, yet I crave alcohol. I have tried A. A. and psychiatry and in desperation have started taking Antabuse.

Is it possible to take this drug for a year without ill effects? — Mrs. M. P. W.

Yes, it is sometimes used for longer than that. But the drug (chemically, disulfiram) should not be in your hands at all unless under a physician's supervision.

In some forms of heart disease it should not be used at all, and in the presence of some other conditions must be used with great care because a reaction, if one occurs, can be dangerous.

By a reaction, I mean the unpleasant symptoms (nausea palpitations, difficulty in breathing, changes in blood pressure and others) which occurs if a person, having taken the drug, gets even a little alcohol, whether intentionally or not.

It is noteworthy that recommendation of the drug is to help the patient remain in a state of "self-imposed sobriety." You have to want to beat the alcohol habit to start with, and in that case the drug sometimes is helpful.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Why is spinal meningitis such a secret? What causes it? Is "stripe meningitis" much different from the plain? I have it, and have a right to know.— Mrs. S. P.

There isn't any secret about it. Meningitis is an infection of the meninges, or sheath which covers the brain and spinal cord.

A variety of germs can cause the infection — that is to say, "meningitis" denotes the area in which the germ attacks, but does not specify any particular type of germ.

By "stripe meningitis," I would guess that your ears mis-heard what was said. Was it "strep meningitis?" That is meningitis caused by the "strep" or streptococcus germ.

Any case of meningitis deserves close medical attention but if you can choose the germ to attack you, it might as well be one which can be fought with antibiotics, as the strep germ can.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it serious for a girl to have diarrhea when she has her monthly period? Can anything be done? — Miss D. B.

Either diarrhea or constipation can occur at the time of the period. Neither is a serious problem, but, naturally, is distressing. Your doctor may prescribe a bismuth preparation which can relieve the diarrhea.

• • •

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Sidney Township Council Meetings Date Back to 1790

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Township council heads were once known as moderators and council members were called wardens. And at one time Sidney and Thurlow townships were once governed by the same council body and later still Sidney was teamed up with Rawdon.

References to the above facts and other municipal procedures of one and a half centuries ago are contained in a small booklet outlining the "historic highlights" of the township of Sidney, compiled last year by municipal clerk B. Harder and Mrs. Harder.

The booklet gives the township history in minute book form from the time of its begining surveyed back in 1787

It shows that the frist council meeting was held in May 1790 with John W. Meyers named as "moderator".

At the same meeting path masters (to lay out roads) and fence viewers were appointed.

It wasn't until 1798 that Thurlow got around to holding its first annual meeting.

By this time it appears Rawdon township was having its organizational difficulties and Sidney and Rawdon were under the one municipal government in 1801. In 1806 Sidney elected its own council but by 1818 the two townships were again back under one government.

Early records list Sidney as being in Upper Canada (1787). By 1835 it was listed as being in Midland District of Upper Canada and five years later it was in the District of Victoria.

It wasn't until 1850 with the organization of counties and the present form of municipal government that Sidney is finally listed as being in the county of Hastings.

And in those early days councillors were able to accomplish something seemingly difficult in the modern day world — they ended the business year with a surplus.

Records show that expenditures for 1850 totalled 55 pounds, five shillings and pence. The net surplus for the year was 15 pounds and seven shillings.

By 1852 township officials felt they needed a town hall and a Mr Jones was paid one pound, five shillings for "draught and specifications", Contractor John D. Pringle was given the job of constructing the hall for 300 pounds.

The Grand Trunk Railway pushed its line through the township in 1856. The same year township councillors received six shillings and three pence for attending meetings.

Two years later — in 1858 — the country had apparently eight and three quarter gone to the dollar system of currency instead of pounds, shillings and pence. At any rate council minutes of that year saw first reference to dollars and cents.

In 1864 the Quinte area had a crop failure as the next spring a special session of council was held to deal with the purchase of a supply of seed grain for many residents.

In the year of Canada's confederation — 1867 — the township clerk received a salary of $73 and a transient killed on the railroad received a pauper's burial at a cost of $7.50.

By 1888 the city of Belleville was taking action to expand its boundaries and was considering a petition to take parts of the township within its limits. As is still the case in most annexations the township council opposed the action.

Township assessors were not highly paid employees and in 1890 the salary of these men was $12.50 each for assessing the township. No mention was made of the number of assessors.

Township roads were still being maintained by what was known as "statute labor" and the Miller Brothers, owners of the Glen Miller paper mill were allowed to expend their labor on sidewalks from the paper mill to what is now the Glen Miller bridge.

Two years later in 1893 the paper mill was heavily damaged by fire and as a measure to assist the firm financially, its assessment was limited to $20,000 for the next 10 years.

In 1901 a grant of $10 was given to Belleville General Hospital.

By 1917 the salary of the township clerk had risen to $250 per year and the following year returned soldiers who served in World War I were given $25 from the council.

By the early 1930's the depression was hitting hard at the municipality's economy, and in 1932 the salaries of all township officials with the exception of assessors were cut by 20 per cent.

In November, 1943, the township hall at Wallbridge was destroyed by fire, but with the exception of one minute book — for the years 1934 to 1937 — all township records were intact. The minute book is thought to have been out of the vault at the time of the fire.

For the next 20 years and until the new municipal offices were built two years ago, council met at the Orange Hall at Wallbridge.

Now in Montreal

Belleville Man Aids in Transplant Research

A former Belleville boy, now member of a medical science team at McGill University in Montreal, has helped to develop a new serum felt to be a most advanced step in combatting transplant rejection.

He is Dr. John Hinchey, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hinchey, Elmer Street, who with a fellow scientist, has developed the serum, a single dose of which prolongs transplant survival up to six times as long as in untreated animals.

Dr. Hinchey and his team member, Dr. James Bliss, have used the substance — anti-thymic serum — in 50 dog kidney transplants during the past two years. One dog is still alive after receiving a kidney graft 100 days ago.

A similar serum has been used on six kidney transplant patients at Royal Victoria Hospital by Dr. Lloyd MacLean and his group, and is seen as an important breakthrough for heart transplantation.

Dr. Hinchey is assistant professor of surgery and associate director of the McGill University Surgical Clinic. Dr. Bliss is an associate professor of physiology at the same university.

Their research work is supported by the Medical Research Council and the Quebec Heart Foundation.

According to Dr. Hinchey, the importance of the new serum, is that it is a true immuno-suppressive agent. It acts directly on the body's immunity system — the mechanism responsible for rejection.

In a recent byline story in the Montreal Gazette the effects of the new serum are explained by the doctors.

Immunization to disease is carried out in the body by the lymphocytes, a type of white blood cell. Lymphocytes form counter-agents, or anti-bodies when foreign viruses or bacteria invade.

DR. JOHN HINCHEY

They also form anti-bodies to newly transplanted tissue and these can succeed in destroying the graft.

"A kidney graft is ordinarily rejected within two weeks," Dr. Bliss said.

To suppress the rejection mechanism, radiation and amounts of anti-cancer drugs have been used. But these can have harmful side effects.

Thus efforts have been aimed at producing a serum which would contain anti-bodies for the lymphocytes. Several U.S. and Canadian centres now use such a serum — known as anti-lymphocyte serum or anti - lymphocyte globulin.

Dr. Hinchey and Dr. Bliss have taken this one step further. They have made a serum having anti-bodies for the lymphocyte control centre — a neck gland called the thymus.

One injection of the serum at the time of transplantation increased the survival of the graft by about six times.

The potential advantage of this serum is that it can reduce the amount of drugs necessary to inhibit rejection.

The McGill scientists attempted to measure the serum's potency rather than try for long-term survival. Animals were divided into three groups - - one not treated, one given normal blood serum from rabbits, and one administered the anti-rejection substance.

Results showed the serum was more effective than anti-lymphocyte serum, used successfully in liver transplant patients in Colorado.

Anti-thymic serum is obtained from the thymus glands of puppies. Thymus cells are injected into the blood of rabbits and the immunity mechanism produces anti-bodies to the cells.

The rabbit's blood — drained of blood cells and other solid particles — forms the serum.

In studying the rejection process, Drs. Hinchey and Bliss found that the transplanted animals may undergo a rejection crisis, but then recover.

Influence of Bonnie and Clyde Felt Everywhere Says Star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I was very lucky," says Oscar nominee Faye Dunaway. "If the part of Bonnie hadn't come along, I could have continued playing nondescript roles for a long time."

Call it luck or timing or talent, the fact remains that Faye Dunaway is this season's most promising young film actress. This was confirmed last week when she scored an Academy nomination for Bonnie and Clyde.

She was the only newcomer in a field that included three former winners—Katharine Hepburn, Anne Bancroft and Audrey Hepburn—and the 80-year-old Dame Edith Evans.

Miss Dunaway is enjoying her success, as might be expected of the army sergeant's daughter who waited on tables to support herself in the university of Florida and Boston university.

She is ambitious, appreciative and articulate. Among the subjects she touched on during an interview:

Bonnie and Clyde—"While we were making it, we thought perhaps it was something special. But none of us expected it would be the sensation that it has proved to be. I've just come back from a trip to Europe and Asia, and the influence of Bonnie and Clyde is being felt everywhere."

Warren Beatty—"As producer of Bonnie and Clyde, he was determined to make the picture as good as it possibly could be. And he succeeded. I think he has a bit of genius in him."

Otto Preminger—"I find him to be an absolute delight on a social basis, but I simply can't work for him. When he steps onto a movie set, he becomes another person entirely, and he and I had three encounters on Hurry Sundown that were violent. I believe we're working out a way to settle my contract with him."

Personal plans—"I'm engaged to Jerry Shetzberg, a fashion photographer. He's 40, but more like 30 (Faye just turned 27) and full of youthful ideas. Next fall he is going to direct me in a movie called The Puzzle of a Downfall Child. It's about a high-fashion model who suddenly finds herself no longer in demand: That's the tragedy of the modelling business. Jerry has the theory that movies cost too much to make, and he's making this one on a shoestring."

Next picture—"I'm going to Italy to make The Lovers with Vittoria De Sica. It's about an American girl who marries an aging Italian."

NHL Scoring

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stan Mikita took the lead in the National Hockey League scoring race Saturday, but a new challenge came screaming down right wing during the weekend.

Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers spurted out of the pack by scoring four goals and an assist Saturday in a 6-1 defeat of Montreal Canadiens, then added two more assists Sunday as the Rangers downed Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1.

Mikita has 71 points on 35 goals and 36 assists, one more than team-mate Bobby Hull who has a league-leading 41 goals.

Gilbert now has 69 points on 28 goals and 41 assists. Three points behind him is linemate Jean Ratelle, with 25 goals and 41 assists.

Gilbert and Ratelle are tied for the league lead in assists, one more than Alex Delvecchio of Detroit Red Wings.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts.	PIM
Mikita, Chi	35	36	71	10
B. Hull, Chi	41	29	70	31

Fulbright Seeks Full Debate On Any Future War Escalation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator J. W. Fulbright urges a full-scale congressional debate on any further U.S. escalation in Vietnam, saying dispatch of more American troops to the war would be "a disastrous course."

The Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and a long-time arch critic of U.S. policy in Vietnam, said Sunday he feels the country deserves a "re-examination of the purposes, the objectives" of that policy.

The president of South Vietnam and a top U.S. diplomat spurned UN Secretary-General U Thant's call Saturday for an end to American bombing of North Vietnam.

In saying the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong would take military advantage of any bombing halt, President Nguyen Van Thieu predicted the enemy would grow weaker and weaker this year.

Undersecretary of State William P. Bundy said North Vietnam must indicate clearly in advance that it would not take military advantage of a bombing halt.

"We just can't take this one on faith—pure and simple," said Bundy. Fulbright was interviewed on the ABC radio-televi- Answers; Thieu on CBS's Face the Nation, and Bundy on NBC's Meet the Press.

Fulbright once more said the administration hasn't proved two U.S. destroyers were attacked in the August, 1964, Gulf of Tonkin incident—the reported naval engagement that led to the first U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

And even if the ships were attacked, said Fulbright, the U.S. military retaliation was far too harsh.

Fulbright referred to 64 U.S. bombing sorties against North Vietnam launched shortly after the destroyers Maddox and Turner Joy reported being attacked by North Vietnamese torpedo boats.

Three days after the incident Fulbright, acting as floor manager, steered through the Senate the so-called Tonkin Gulf resolution authorizing the president to use "all necessary measures" to repel further aggression.

Fulbright said Sunday if he had known then what he does now he would not have supported the resolution, which won overwhelming Senate adoption.

His proposal for a full-scale Senate discussion of Vietnam policy came when he was asked about reports Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam, has requested more troops.

Fulbright said further escalation could bring China into the war.

McNamara Defends LBJ

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Johnson held up a bombing raid on North Vietnam in retaliation for a Communist torpedo-boat attack on two U.S. destroyers in 1964 until he was "damned sure what had happened," Defence Secretary Robert McNamara disclosed in testimony released Saturday.

MacNamara stressed this point at a secret meeting with the Senate foreign relations committee investigating the circumstances of the attack on the warships in the Gulf of Tonkin Aug. 4, 1964.

His 7½ hours of testimony Tuesday was challenged before its release by Senator Wayne Morse (Dem. Ore.), who claimed that the Maddox, one of the U.S. destroyers involved, was a spy ship which had provoked the North Vietnamese attack.

He said in the Senate Wednesday the activities of the Maddox, accompanied on the Aug. 4 patrol by the destroyer C. Turner Joy, were "an act of aggression" and constituted "picking a fight" with North Vietnam.

McNamara, who steps down as defence chief Thursday to become president of the World Bank, acknowledged to the Senate committee that the Maddox had engaged in "electrical surveillance" off the North Vietnamese coast.

He said one of its missions was to "turn on certain kind of equipment on board . . . which, in turn, leads the Chicoms (Chinese Communists) or the North Vietnamese to turn on the radars so that we can measure the radar frequencies . . ."

But he insisted this was not the Maddox's only mission or its most important one.

He said the ship was on routine patrol and had steamed in international waters close to the North Vietnamese coast at all times. He denied charges it was in the Gulf of Tonkin to lure Communist vessels away from the North Vietnamese coast.

As the testimony was released, the defence department said McNamara was mistaken in saying the Maddox had special equipment capable of inducing countries under surveillance to turn on their radar.

The ships carried only massive listening gear, such as radio receivers, said the department.

Hostage Praises Captor

SHIZUOKA, Japan (AP) — "He was a fine man with an honest fibre," a hostage said of a moody ex-convict the police seized Saturday after an 88-hour ordeal. "I will appear in court in his defence."

Kim Hi-ro, thinking he was at a press conference, was seized by detectives posing as reporters. The rifles and dynamite sticks with which he threatened to blow them up were left two steps behind in a hotel where he still kept six of his original 16 hostages.

Some spoke almost affectionately of the 41-year-old Korean who killed two men Tuesday, then ran to hiding.

Shoichi Omiya, who said he would testify for Kim, said:

"I don't think anyone of us ever felt we were in danger."

But other captives, released earlier by Kim, disagreed and told of lying "to keep him pacified."

Kim had threatened to blow up himself, his hostages and the police if an officer did not apologie for what Kim said were insults against him. His whole life, Kim told reporters, was a story of Japanese discrimination against Koreans.

Owen Sound Stays Dry

OWEN SOUND (CP) — This Georgian Bay city of 18,000, once a haven for hard drinking Great Lakes sailors, Saturday turned down a liquor plebescite for the sixth timo in 19 years.

The city became dry with prohibition in 1906 and it has remained that way since.

Mayor Robert Rutherford, 39, in an interview Sunday, said: "We are still the only dry city in Ontario, and I think, Canada."

The mayor said he was disappointed. He had been one of the wets' strongest supporters.

The final vote showed 59 per cent in favor of liquor for dining lounges and 55 per cent for cocktail bars. The wets needed 60 per cent.

Rev. David Clarke, 41, of First Baptist Church, president and manager of the Vote No Committee, rejoiced.

In an interview, he said: "There are lots of happy people in Owen Sound today. The yes supporters did not push their campaign. They're shy. But we won anyway."

The mayor said the United Church and the city's daily newspaper did much to contribute to the defeat.

"They both campaigned against us," he said.

"And besides that, our drinkers didn't support us. They just did not get out and vote."

He said the town will continue to lose business from the tourist trade.

"Here we are in a prime tourist area and no booze. People are mobile today. They'll just go somewhere else."

Mayor Rutherford said he was thinking of asking the province's three political parties to see if they would agree to remove the local option.

Wellington

Future Discussed

PICTON (Staff) — A Wellington group of citizens have decided to do something about the future of their village.

Recently a small number of interested citizens turned out for a special meeting to organize and discuss a few potential projects most important of which is the advertising and promotion of that village wherever and whenever possible.

"The "Wellington Development Association" may also wish to bring up at an open meeting — scheduled for March 6 in Wellington Consolidated school — the following additional projects. A footbridge to the Sandbanks, development of the area west of the dock, promote a property cleanup, possible affiliation with the county chamber of commerce, park site developments, summer use of the village arena such as roller skating, clearing the channel from West Lake to Lake Ontario, improving fishing and boating recreation in West Lake.

The organizing committee headed by Keith Barnett, a Wellington school teacher, hope the new association will be able to study and act on all types of community problems in Wellington and vicinity, including education and other services.

A spokesman for the committee said that the success of the organization will depend largely on the type of support obtained at the next meeting, the second meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, March 6th, and it's hoped a large crowd will turn out.

Horsburgh Returns to Chatham to Launch His New Career

CHATHAM (CP) — Rev. Russell Horsburgh returned Saturday night to the town of his trials to launch a new career.

The former United Church minister, through his new organization, the Mustard Seed, deliberately chose Chatham for the premiere of his fund-raising show.

Only 85 persons turned out to hear him at a theatre.

Mr. Horsburgh charged his old Chatham church with "black hypocrisy."

He said he has been waiting since Jan. 18, the day he was cleared in court of all charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency, to get "a letter of sympathy or understanding" from the church.

"But I don't expect it now," he said. "The least they could do for me is to re-establish the youth program at the church."

Mr. Horsburgh said it will take $75,000 to establish the Mustard Seed organization on a national basis.

Initially it will be started as a "drop-in" counselling service in Toronto for wayward youths.

Mr. Horsburgh said in an interview receipts for the meeting at the 850-seat Thames Theatre came to $126. He said he would have to pay $100 of his own money for use of the theatre, plus rental of an organ, a public address system and advertising.

"It was disappointing," said Mr. Horsburgh of the turncut. "But we've got other places to visit yet." He and his group will be in Hamilton tonight and in Waterloo next Sunday.

They also plan to visit Walkerton, Fordwich and Mount Forest, north of Kitchener.

He said his advisors chose Chatham to start the campaign, believing "it was a good idea."

"I didn't know what sort of crowd I would get, though something seemed to tell me Chatham would produce the poorest attendance."

He mentioned other attractions which probably hurt attendance.

Hundreds of families were committed to watch their children skate in a ice show as part of the city's annual mardi gras celebrations and Finance Minister Sharp was in the city to promote his candidacy for the national leadership of the Liberal party.

Thant States Door to Peace Talks Still Open

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant asserted Saturday that the door is open for Vietnam peace talks despite the current intensified fighting and that negotiations will begin within a few days the United States stops bombing North Vietnam.

Thant set forth his views in a long statement assessing his recent discussions with interested world leaders, including Johnson, Soviet Premier Kosygin, British Prime Minister Wilson, Indian Prime Minister Gandhi, French President de Gaulle and two North Vietnamese officials.

He said the North Vietnamese in a statement issued nine hours had assured him that talks would start as soon as a bombing ban became effective and that the United States could bring up any matter it chose, including a reduction of military operations in South Vietnam.

The U.S. government reacted later through its United Nations mission.

"We have carefully considered the secretary-general's statement, the essentials of which were reported by him during the useful talks which took place this week in Washington," the U.S. statement said.

"We assured him then that we share fully his desire for a political solution. . . .

"We have been seeking publicly and privately, and would welcome, confirmation from Hanoi that talks would start promptly in circumstances where we could reasonably assume that North Vietnam would not take military advantage of the cessation."

Thant expressed "deep concern" Saturday over the war in Vietnam.

Unless the essential steps are taken now to initiate peace talks, Thant said, "the conclusion is inescapable that there will be continued intensification and escalation of the conflict, resulting in unforeseeable developments with dire consequences."

North Vietnamese Feel They Won Tremendous Victories

SAIGON (AP) — A recent visitor to Hanoi said today that the North Vietnamese are convinced they achieved "tremendous victories" in their lunar new year offensive against South Vietnam's cities.

"They accept the fact that a military victory is not feasible," he said, "but they are damn certain of winning the psychological war."

The visitor, who talked with North Vietnam's leaders but refused to be quoted by name, said the outcome of the Communist offensive had not altered their view that they were moving closer to final victory. He said the attitude was the same as he observed during a previous stay in Hanoi last year.

The Communist offensive struck at more than three dozen population centres and military installations, and there was widespread destruction in the cities and towns.

American officials contend that although the offensive may have scored some psychological advantage, it was a complete military defeat for the Communists, and their casualties—estimated at more than 40,000 killed —may have been more than they could afford.

The visitor to Hanoi, who was there during the offensive, said newspapers and radio broadcasts were filled with stories of popular uprisings in the South, thousands of defections among South Vietnamese government troops and military victories in the cities.

"By now they may have reassessed this viewpoint and changed their propaganda" because of further reports from the South, the visitor said. "But I got the impression that the leadership was slightly surprised at what success they did achieve."

He warned that the Communist official could have been trying to paint a rosy picture for him, and that it was difficult to know what their real attitude is.

Soviet Union Is Hanoi's Biggest Supplier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union apparently is North Vietnam's largest supplier of weapons and economic aid and its assistance may climb further if the pace of the war steps up.

Preliminary defence department estimates are that aid to Hanoi from her Communist allies probably increased to about $1,000,000,000 in 1967—up from some $730,000,000 the year before.

Moscow's shipments, valued at about $700,000,000, accounted for the biggest share in North Vietnam's supply line in 1967 and for much of the total increase over the previous year.

China sent in an estimated $250,000,000 worth, roughly $75,000,000 more than in 1966. Communist East European states contributed perhaps $50,000,000.

U.S. spending in Vietnam last year has been put at about $25,000,000,000.

THE PICK OF Punch

Ontario Also Wants To Run School TV

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Ontario Education Minister William Davis will seek provincial control over educational television production and programming when he meets Tuesday in Ottawa with the Commons committee on broadcasting.

The newspaper says that Mr. Davis will tell the committee that Ontario plans to establish a programming authority with representatives from the government, the field of education and the public to handle productions for educational television.

The completed program would be turned over to the federal agency for transmission.

The Ontario proposal is in contrast with the one proposed by Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec.

Mr. Johnson has announced that Quebec will establish Radio Quebec, an agency intended to handle both production and transmission of educational television in the province.

The newspaper says the first official statement of Ontario's policy on broadcasting will probably come in the Ontario legislature today from Mr. Davis.

It says the Ontario attitude will be that good programming will be accepted from any source including the CBC and National Film Board—both federal agencies. Control, however, would remain in the hands of the Ontario agency.

Atomic Waste Plant Pollutes Waters of Creeks at Buffalo

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle says an atomic-waste treatment plant in western New York state is polluting the Cattaraugus Creek watershed with radioactive materials "grossly in excess" of permissible limits.

In a copyrighted story, the paper says the information was included in a report issued by the Rochester Committee for Scientific Information.

The plant, operated by Nuclear Fuel Services Inc., is in West Valley, about 35 miles southeast of Buffalo.

The report says a recent sampling of effluent from the plant in Cattaraugus Creek district disclosed the presence of 30,000 times more strontium 90 than the limit allowed by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

There was 2,800 per cent more of the radioactive substance in a tributary—Buttermilk Creek —than permitted, the paper adds.

Dr. George Berg, associate professor of radio biology and biophysics at the University of Rochester and co-author of the report, said the samples were analysed at the AEC's safety and health laboratory in New York.

Despite the presence of radioactivity, he said, there appeared to be no immediate threat to the well-being of residents in the area.

Wilson Cabinet Stands Firm In Plan to Bar Kenyan Asians

LONDON (AP) — The British government stood firmly behind its bill to limit the flood of Asian immigrants from Kenya despite growing opposition. But with the working masses opposed to colored competition, political observers predicted Parliament would pass the bill this week.

Influential members of all three political parties joined church and civil leaders in criticizing the bill restricting the entry into Britain of holders of British passports who were not born in Britain or whose parents were not native-born.

A group from Kenya's Asian community flew to London today to lobby against the bill.

Sir Dingle Foot, a left-wing Labor member and a former cabinet minister, said he would vote against the bill as it stands. He termed it "in effect racialist legislation."

A group of Conservative members of Parliament said the quota of 1,500 entry permits a year for those affected by the bill was "too low."

Representatives of Indian immigrants living in England's industrial Midlands voted Sunday night to hold a week of mass protests against the bill.

An estimated 2,000 British and Asian demonstrators marched through London Sunday to protest the bill. They were booed by 500 counter-demonstrators. Amid conflicting shouts of "Nigger, go home!" and "Fascist swine!" some scuffles broke out.

Editorials and letters in several newspapers called the bill "hypocrisy." One paper's cartoon showed three immigration booths at an airport, for holders of "British passports" "non-British passports," and "British non-passports." A turbaned figure was directed to the last booth.

Immigrants of Indian and Pakistani origin continued to pour into Britain to escape Kenya's new restrictive labor laws aimed at the 100,000 Asian Kenyans. With direct flights from Nairobi booked solid, the refugees came via Uganda, The Congo, Cairo and even Moscow.

Rebel Grit Joins Attack

Otto Delivers Unkindest Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — The government sat silent all day Monday as the opposition called its handling of the tax-bill crisis dishonest, irresponsible and dictatorial.

Only one Liberal — rebel Steve Otto (York East) — interrupted the six-hour opposition onslaught on the second day of debate on the government's confidence motion.

And he delivered perhaps the unkindest cut of all, saying he had "very grave doubts whether this government truly represents the Liberal party of which I am a member."

On the other side, the attack was c ied mainly by five Conservative members quietly dubbed as "Tory hawks" by Liberals: Eldon Woolliams, Erik Nielsen, Terry Nugent, Donald McInnis and Jack Horner.

Mr. Woolliams (Bow River) said the government h d set itself up as "somewhat of a dictatorship" by refusing to quit after its bill to raise income taxes was defeated a week ago Monday.

Mr. Nielsen (Yukon) compared the government to a three-toed sloth, directing all its efforts to clinging upside-down to the end of a limb.

Mr. Nugent (Edmonton-Strathcona) charged Prime Minister Pearson with dishonesty and deceit in a desperate bid to hang on to office, and recalled Hitler's removal of powers from the Reichstag.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South) suggested the Liberals didn't have enough intestinal fortitude to defend themselves and Mr. Horner (Acadia) said Finance Minister Sharp has got the country into the worst financial crisis in its history.

Several more Conservatives —and perhaps some government defenders—were expected to get into the fray as the debate continued today.

Liberals were hopeful of a successful vote before the day's end but there were no firm predictions.

Charles - Arthur Gauthier (Roberval) defended the Creditiste position, saying his party opposed an immediate election and would like to see a month or so of work to clear up urgent business.

Monetary Fund Assists Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has gone abroad for the second time since mid-January to get a big chunk of financial support for its dollar.

By the latest transaction Canada, in effect, takes back temporarily its $426,000,000 in pledges of cash and gold to the International Monetary Fund.

The arrangement is not officially a loan, but Canada will be obliged to restore the full amount with the IMF.

Finance Minister Sharp took the unusual step of announcing the IMF drawing Monday after a report appeared in the Paris daily newspaper, Le Monde.

The $426,000,000 in U.S. funds goes into official holdings of gold and U.S. dollars Canada keeps as a cushion to absorb unbalanced money flows resulting from its settlements with other countries.

By the laws of supply and demand, when the dollar is under speculative attack its value may fall in relation to the U.S. dollar unless the government stands ready to buy all dollars offered for sale in the exchange market.

A tally of these official purchases of Canadian dollars by U.S. dollars from the reserves indicates the amount of pressure being applied to Canadian currency.

In January two speculative attacks forced the government to use up $350,000,000 to keep the rate close to parity of 92½ cents.

The government put $250,000,000 back with a loan from the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, leaving total reserves of $2,418,000,000 at month-end.

The month-end report for February, to be released next week, would normally be the first indication of the IMF transaction.

But the exchange market has shown little sign this month of speculative pressure indicating exchange losses of any magnitude.

Red Tanks Appear in South

SAIGON (Reuters) — U.S. Special Forces scouting through jungle near the Cambodian border ambushed a column of armored vehicles driven by Viet Cong troops, a U.S. military spokesman said today.

The Green Berets, working with civilian irregular defence group troops—mercenaries they hire from Vietnam's ethnic minorities and train themselves—destroyed one of three armored vehicles and a half-track truck they caught Monday night, he said.

The column was moving out of a base camp less than a mile east of the Cambodian border and about 70 miles northwest of Saigon.

The U.S. spokesman said reports of the action did not indicate whether the armored vehicles were tanks or armored personnel carriers.

However, a government military spokesman discussing the same incident was adamant that the vehicles were tanks and said that, although one was hit in the ambush, all three got away and drove west towards the Cambodian border.

It was the first occasion that armored vehicles of any type were reported in the southern part of South Vietnam.

North Vietnamese troops used tanks earlier this month to wipe out the Special Forces post at Lang Vei, near the beleaguered marine base of Khe Sanh in the northwest corner of the country.

Since then there were reports, unconfirmed officially, of more tanks sighted around the demilitarized zone.

Saigon Hit by Shells and Rockets

SAIGON (Reuters) — Communist guerrillas launched six separate mortar and rocket attacks on Saigon early today, setting fire to buildings and killing and wounding a number of persons including civilians.

The attacks came only hours after the government announced tighter measures to prevent the infiltration of Viet Cong forces into the South Vietnamese capital.

A South Vietnamese government spokesman said Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base was hit today by rocket fire twice within four hours. The base is headquarters of the U.S. Vietnam commander, Gen. William C.W Westmoreland.

The spokesman gave no further information on these attacks following restrictions placed Monday on U.S. reports of attacks against bases like Tan Son Nhut and Khe Sanh in the far northwest.

The spokesman said the headquarters of the Saigon milit ,y governor also was hit this morning by six rounds of 75-millimetre recoilless rifle fire.

In Saigon's suburban Gia Dinh area, homes of government soldiers were blasted by mortar shells. A number of persons were wounded and homes burned, the South Vietnamese spokesman said.

He said mortar shells also fell on the homes of government civil servants near the Chi Hoa national prison in Saigon, killing one civilian and setting fire to a number of homes. Ten rounds of rocket fire also exploded around a Roman Catholic church 500 yards from the Saigon racetrack.

Hue's Inhabitants Scratch in Rubble

HUE, South Vietnam (AP) — They scratch in the rubble for what they can find. They elbow each other for a ration of rice. They gather tree branches for firewood.

After 26 days of fighting, the people of Hue live from minute to minute.

Some of those caught up in the tragedy are clearly not accustomed to misery.

A neat young couple in spotless clothes chopped firewood on a main street, apparently for the first time in their lives.

A middle-aged woman cleared bricks and splinters of furniture from the once fine porch of her shattered home.

Looting continues, even though there seems little left to loot.

After 26 days of fighting this northeastern city of 140,000, the old imperial capital, seemed 80 per cent destroyed.

It is estimated that 2,500 civilians were killed and 1,200 more wounded in Hue during the fighting.

Ted Kennedy Urges Talks

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.) said Monday night that the recent fighting in Hue, onetime imperial capital of Vietnam, is the best "example of our miscalculations" in the war.

"In order to flush out the Viet Cong we reduced that city to rubble," Kennedy said.

Kennedy urged "a peaceful settlement of the Vietnam war, in negotiations in which each side gives something to the other and if negotiations cannot begin in the near future, we should moderate our military activity to where the destruction of the Vietnamese people and our own soldiers is reduced."

CANDU Can Adapt To Cheap Atom Fuel

OTTAWA (CP) — The reported Dutch discovery of a cheaper way to produce uranium 235, key element of atomic bombs, may prove a boon to Canada's nuclear power plant program.

Dr. W. Bennett Lewis, senior vice-president of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, said Monday that an advantage of the Canadian power plants is that they can be adapted to use either natural uranium or enriched uranium.

The Dutch discovery was reported last weekend by the London Daily Telegraph science correspondent, Dr. Anthony Michaelis, who predicted nuclear power stations using natural uranium "will rapidly go out of date and will certainly not be attractive for export."

Not so, said Dr. Lewis in a telephone interview at AECL's Chalk River offices.

"One of the things we've been saying for some time is that a real advantage to the CANDU (the Canadian nuclear power plant) system is that it can adapt to the cheapest type of fuels."

Canadian plants at Douglas Point and Pickering, Ont., and at Gentilly, Que., now use, or will use on completion, natural uranium as a fuel.

Allegations of Vandalism Denied by Union Head

TRENTON — A union representative has denied company allegations of vandalism by picketers at the Essex Electronics plant.

Essex president J. E. Kalfus said "Go home, Yankee" was soaped on the Water St. plant's main entrance, and that mails had been strewn about the parking area sometime Sunday night.

He added the building's main gas - heating valve had been shut off from outside.

The 30 - member, all woman Local 539, International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers began their strike against the firm Feb. 14. Night picketing has been carried out by male members of other union locals in the Trenton area.

I.U.E. spokesman Harry Haddaway said Monday he had warned union members "not to get involved in any petty stuff," and doubted blame for the vandalism could be laid at the union's doorstep.

"It sounds like kids to me," Mr. Haddaway said.

The I.U.E. workers began their strike against the Essex plant — a subsidiary of the American - owned Nytronics Corporation — to back up demands for an increase in their $1.18 - $1.50 pay scale.

The firm president yesterday claimed two people approached by Essex management as prospective employees were "intimidated" by the union with threats of their husbands jobs, and picketing of their homes.

Mr. Haddaway said the two persons decided against taking jobs at Essex "when we explained our story".

Company letters to the 30 employees earlier promised 5 per cent pay increases to anyone continuing at their jobs.

Barber Shop Entered

Police are investigating a break-in which took place some time last night before 11:25 p.m. in Smitty's Barber Shop, 122 Frank Street.

A spokesman for the police today stated that about $200 worth of articles, cigarettes, cigarette lighters, pens, ten Timex watches and three straight razors were taken.

The only damage to the building was to the rear door which was kicked in so the thieves could gain entrance.

The break-in and theft was discovered when a police cruiser checking properties found the barber shop door broken.

Successful Program

Church Parades, Banquets End Scouting Week

The biggest events of the week were those associated with "B.P." celebrations. Probably the most significant were the many Church parades attended by over 600 Cubs, Scouts, Rovers, Brownies and Girl Guides.

On Sunday, February 18th, some 50 boys attended Holloway United Church from the 1st Avondale Group.

The "B.P." Boy Scout service at Emmanuel Baptist Church was attended by 30 boys and leaders of the 4th Belleville Troop and Pack. Several boys took part in the service, reading scripture lessons, taking collection, ushers, etc. The message by Rev. C. Savage, Chaplain of the Group, was of a Scouty nature and inspiring to all those present. Girl Guides also attended this service.

On Sunday, February 25th several services of a special nature were held to climax the week's celebrations.

Over 125 boys from 1st (St. Thomas) Pack, Troop and Crew, as well as a good representation of Girl Guides from 3rd Belleville Company, attended the special service at St. Thomas Church.

This service was taken over by Rover Scout Bruce Swan, with the Crucifer Scout Richard Fort. The boys choir included six Scouts in uniform supported by the men's choir, which included two Rover Scouts, and led the singing of praise. The lesson was read by Scout Bruce Downing. Ven. Archdeacon A. S. McConnell, Chaplain, took as his sermon topic "Be Prepared for the Unknown." Bringing this message to the boys and girls in particular he closed his remarks with "as long as one boy wears the Scout uniform and one girl wears the Guide uniform we shall not need to worry about the unknown tomorrow.

An inspiring part of the service was the presentation and receiving of colors from the Chaplin by the color parties. Presentation of religion in life awards to Guides Carol and Catherine Donly occupied an important place in the service.

Special guests present were Girl Guide Commissioners Mrs. T. R. Colden and Mrs. J. Miles and Guide Leaders Mrs. Russell and Mrs. T. M. Baird. Asst. District Commisisoner T. E. Yaeger and Scout and Cub Leaders. Members of 1st Group Committee and Ladies Auxilliary attended in a body.

The 1st Cannifton-Corbyville Cubs and Scouts had as their guests at the special service at St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton, members of the 14th (Lions) Cubs and Scouts and Brownies and Guides of Cannifton, in all about 100 members. Scout Keith Lawday read the scripture lesson and a Guide led the responsive reading. A message of special interest to boys and girls was given by the Chaplin Rev. J. Hobbs.

The 6th Belleville (Tabernacle) "B.P." Service had well over 125 Cubs, Scouts, Guides, Brownies, Group Committee and Ladies Auxillary present.

Queen Scout David Lott read the scripture lesson and Guide Brenda Lott led the responsive reading. The junior choir consisted of Scouts and Guides. An impressive part of the service was a trumpet accompaniment to the flag service at the beginning and end of the service.

The sermon by Rev. R. A. Crooks, Chaplain, was an impressive message stressing the importance to the young people that when you are travelling your name, age and where you are going is of utmost importance, especially in travelling along the trail of life. Members of the Group Committee and Ladies Auxiliary of the 6th Group attended church as a body.

Victoria Baptist Church had as their guests 11 Scouts of the 21st (B & D S R C) Troop, accompanied by their leader Scoutmaster Don Allan.

Cubs and Scouts of the 12th (St. Joseph) numbering over 150 with the Brownies and Guides attended the morning mass of St. Joseph's Church.

Over 150 boys, fathers, mothers and guests attended the Annual Father and Son Banquet of the 1st (St. Thomas) Group in St. Thomas Hall.

Guests included Ven. Archdeacon A. S. McConnell, Chaplain, Sponsors President J. R. Rollins, T. E. Smith, Chairman Group Committee, Group Committee members, Asst. District Commissioner T. E. Yaeger and several other guests.

A.D.C. — Yaeger led the sing-song after the special luncheon served by the Ladies Auxiliary and spoke to the boys and fathers about the new 5 Star Cub Program and the new Scout Program to take effect next September. The Rover Crew was complimented on their service at the construction of Centennial Gateway at Camp Sagonaska.

Presentations of Swimming Badges were made by Archdeacon McConnell to several Cubs, while the Buffalo Patrol received, through their Patrol Leader, David Yaeger, from the sponsors a trophy for their good work during the past year. Group Committee also presented the Troop with a soccer ball for summer and indoor use. Mrs. Gadd received from the Group Committee a Past President brooch.

The women were thanked by Cub David Fargey and Scout David Yaeger for their kindness and hard work in providing the dinner.

A display of hobbies by Scouts, Cubs and Rovers included many collections which created considerable interest, while there were a number of handicraft items. The balance of the evening consisted of displays and sketches by both Cubs and Scouts.

At Cannifton, St. Mark's United Church some 75 persons comprising Cubs, Scouts and parents met for the annual banquet served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The program included a toast to the Queen by Chairman Bill McMurter and introduction of guests, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Horton, District Commissioner Bud Bateman and guest speaker Mr. Jack McMurray. Scout and Cub Leaders from Pack and Troop were also seated at the head table.

After the delicious dinner of ham "with all the trimmings" and a sing - song under the direction of A.S.M. - Gerry Doyle, who accompanied on the piano, the main program of the evening followed. Mr. Charles Freemantle thanked the ladies for their kindness.

District Commissioner Bud Bateman extended greetings from the District Council and congratulated the Group on progress made. He presented swimming badges to the following: - Troop Leader - Mike McMurter - gold stage; Patrol Leader Martin Coxon - silver stage; Patrol Leader - Martin Coxon - bronze stage. Scoutmaster Coxon and Assistant Gerry Doyle presented Troop Leader Mike McMurter with a plaque for "good Scouting and putting forth that extra effort in going the extra mile". Mike will soon be Queen's Scout, the highest rank to be attained in Scouting.

The guest speaker, Mr. Jack McMurray of the Department of Lands and Forests surprised the gathering by stating that he too was a Scouter in his community, where Scouters were hard to obtain. He spoke on conversation, pointing out to the boys that in summer the woods were used constantly, but now that motor sleds are prevalent, the winter time was just as busy as summer. Care should be taken to preserve the forests for posterity, as their destruction affects bird life and surrounding farm lands and contributes to pollution.

6th (A) Tabernacle Pack had a varied program during the past week, which included a trip to see the new shooting range in Belleville police station, where president Louis Kulcsar, of Rifle Club gave a demonstration and allowed each boy one bullet to try, under supervision.

A visit to the Armed Forces Base at Trenton where Airman Alex Savage, also Asst. Cubmaster, showed the boys around the hanger and the helicopters and rescue planes, explaining northern rescue work. Cubmaster Mrs. Hine and helper Art. Grant accompanied the boys.

On another night Constable Kevin McCloud of the R.C.M.P. visited the Pack in full dress uniform, providing a thrill at seeing the famous R.C.M.P Mr. McCloud showed a film on the training of police dogs. There were 28 boys and leaders at this meeting.

17th (EASTMINSTER)

Troop A enjoyed a happy and profitable visit to the cottage of their Asst. Scoutmaster Dr. W. Ludolph on Moira Lake.

Twenty boys under S. M. in winter sports including Lew Kline spent the afternoon tobogganing, ice fishing, etc. Two old "friends of Scouting," Messrs. R. D. Lawrenson and Lloyd brought three "motor sleds' 'and kept the boys busy and happy riding up and down the countryside. At the end of the day's activities, Mrs. Ludolph served a most acceptable lunch to a "happy gang".

Thanks were extended to Dr. Ludolph for the use of the cottage and to Mrs. Ludolph for her hard work in preparing, serving and "cleaning up" after a noisy bunch of boys. Thanks for motor sleds rides were extended to Messrs. Lawrenson and Lloyd, with the hope that there will be more outing in the near future.

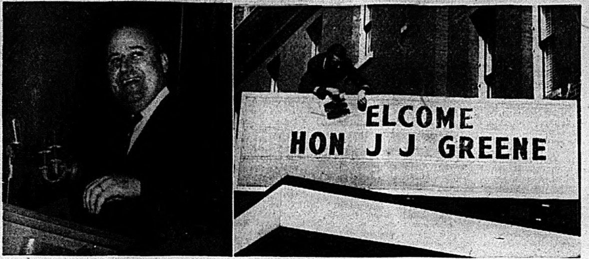
Productivity Increases

Area Farmers Hear Outline of Industry at Rotary Meeting



W. E. Jarvis: His Boss Was In Commons (Despite Sign)

In the last 15 years Canadian agriculture has increased its productivity as measured in terms of total cash receipts by 57 per cent, while during the same period prices at the producer level have risen by not quite seven per cent, W. Esmond Jarvis, assistant to the deputy minister of agriculture, told Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

Compared with 1949, the index of productivity per agricultural worker in 1966 rose to 337. The same index for all commercial enterprises excluding agriculture, rose to 156.

"In less than 20 years," said Mr. Jarvis, "we have increased our production by about 67 per cent, while at the same time the labor force employed in agriculture has been essentially halved.

"As a percentage of the total labor force agriculture has dropped in 20 years from 25 per cent to about eight per cent."

Mr. Jarvis, who was deputizing for Agricultural Minister Joe Greene at Rotary's annual Farmers' Day meeting attended by Quinte area farmers, described agriculture today as "a very fast moving and rapidly changing business that was making good progress.

However, agriculture, he emphasized, "must make special efforts to communicate effectively with the nonfarming public."

This was an age when people were concerned about images and it was important that agriculture reflect an accurate image of the industry today — an aggressive, progressive, and efficient enterprise which was conducting its affairs with a minimum of public support.

"The achievement of this industry is, in large part, due to the energy, imagination and fortitude of our farmers but is also a tribute to the many types of business that serve the farm — the bankers, the manufacturers and merchants of machinery and equipment, of feeds, fertilizers and pesticides, and the very essential group of industries which process and market the products of the farm.

"The percentage of his or her income which the Canadian consumer now spends on food is between 21 and 22 per cent. This percentage has been steadily declining. Compare this to the 29 to 30 per cent of Norway, Holland, France, and the 50 per cent and more for less developed countries.

"This is due directly to the steadily increasing efficiency of our agricultural industry — the adaptation of new equipment, new ideas and new approaches.

"The size of our farms, the size of our farm businesses has expanded dramatically. The number of farmers has sharply declined. Many have made very substantial adjustments in the farm business through almost heroic effort in some cases. Others have not been able to continue farming in this very tough competition and in the increasingly acute cost - price squeeze. Special programs have been and are being designed to facilitate these important but difficult adjustments.

"Our farms and our farmers in earlier days were rather self - sufficient. The horses provided the power, the oats and hay were grown to feed the horses. Little was purchased from outside the farm. Of course at the same time little was sold from the farm. This has changed dramatically, particularly in the last few years. Our farmers are serving ever - widening markets, and are increasingly dependent on others in conducting their farm business.

"The money spent by Canadian farmers for feed, fertilizers, machinery, equipment, farm chemicals and other items is increasing each year. The money spent by our farmers in operating expenses (this does not include labor and real estate) in 1966 totalled $2,424 million.

"Operating expenses have increased an average of 7.4 per cent per year over the last five years. Expenditures by farmers on feed purchased increased by 44 per cent between 1962 and 1966. Tons of fertilizer sold in Canada increased by 14 per cent per year between 1962 and 1966. Some farmers are spending upwards of $50.00 per acre on fertilizer each year.

"Expenditures on herbicides and pesticides increased by one-third from 1965 to 1966, to cover $40 million.

"We can see vividly that the farmer cannot go it alone. This is a partnership — of the farmer, the banker, those supplying goods to the farmer, and those processing the products of the farm.

"Industry and business, through research and development of improved chemicals and machines for the farm, of better methods of processing and merchandising the products of the farm, are a key to this progress.

"There is another important implication of these developments. Never before has the farmer been so dependent upon, yes at the mercy of, forces which are to a degree beyond his control, and on people and businesses which sevice his enterprise. The interests of these participating parties are common interests — interest in efectively maketing and merchandising our farm products, interest in most effectively using machines and other items which are available to the farm. Too often in the past the members of this team have tended to feel that their interests are opposite. This is not true. In the area of marketing farm products, for example, real progress has been made recently in joint efforts of our farmers and members of the trade in achieving greater order in the market place. This is to the betterment of both parties, and indeed to the consumer as well who gains through having a regular supply of quality product at orderly prices.

Juanita Power As Saucy Snowflake

Ameliasburg Youth 'Have It Made'

PICTON (Staff) — Young people in Ameliasburg and vicinity "have it made." They have no problems with lack of entertainment. The "Ameliasburg Swingers" have been seen to by Mr. and Mrs. Neil McMasters of Mountain View who organized and supervise a children's dance party. The dance is held in Ameliasburg Township Hall in that village and crowds of children of 100 to 150 are not uncommon on a Friday night.

Ages of the children vary but those in grades 4 to grade ten are accepted in the hall. Soft drinks and refreshments are usually on hand for the children. The dance has been operating since the first part of November 1967 and alternating as supervisors for the dance every other two weeks are Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Wood.

The colorful dance party continues from 7.30 p.m. until 10.30 and children are not allowed to leave the hall without their parents before the 10.30 wind-up time.

Music for the party and dance is sometimes records and occasionally an orchestra will be present. Friday night last, the orchestra was "The Lowmen" from Belleville, a young group recently started and who may really go places if they stick together. Anyway the kids certainly enjoyed the music.

"HASTINGS HERITAGE"
is the name of a group of citizens endeavoring to move the historic Grand Trunk Station from Shannonville to Zwick's Island Park in Belleville.
The Committee cordially invites everyone interested in this community effort to come to a PUBLIC MEETING
to be held on Thursday, Feb. 29th, 1968 at 7.30 p.m. in the Auditorium of the Belleville Public Library.
The purpose of the meeting is to get you acquainted with the project intended to preserve the heritage of Hastings County and to give the "Railroad Centre" of Belleville a lasting monument to the steam era. "Shannonville Station" on Zwick's Island will serve as a railroad museum reminding our children of the days when the steam engine blazed a trail through the wilderness and opened up our country.
Speakers of the evening: "Man of the Year" Jack Ellis and Committee Chairman Nick Mika.

Supporters Continue Bid To Establish an Authority

TRENTON — If support warrants the establishment of a conservation authority to serve Northumberland and west-Hastings counties, it will probably bear a "Great Pine Ridge" prefix.

A spokesman for the committee trying to organize the authority, Paul Heissler of Murray Township, said the name had met with more approval than the previous suggestion - Lower Trent Valley Conservation Authority.

Meanwhile, the organizing committee continues its bid for the establishment of the authority with the third in a series of information meetings to be held at the Castleton Town Hall this Thursday night.

Guest speaker will be J. R. Simonett, Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

Mr. Heissler said his committee was pledged support by the Otonabee Region Conservation Authority at its annual meeting last week in Peterborough.

Service club addresses and film showings have also been employed by the committee to put their case before the public for an authority to serve the Trent River watershed area.

The Campbellford Lions Club will hear a Wednesday evening address from Hal Hooke, of the Conservation Branch of the Department of Energy and Resources Management.

Representatives of 17 municipalities, along with any interested persons, have been invited to attend Thursday's meeting in Castleton.

Organizers hope the gathering will be the last before an organization meeting is called to determine municipal support for the project.

St. Gregory Musical

PICTON (Staff) — The "Winter Wonderland" musical presented last night at St. Gregory's Parish Hall in Picton was a great success. Well over 200 parents and interested citizens crowded the hall for the two hour show.

Held annually, the program was presented by the students of St. Gregory's Music Studio and the St. Gregory's School Choir.

Nearly 40 numbers were presented and they ranged from dancers to piano trios and novelty musical numbers.

Six-year-old Juanita Power, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Power of Camp Picton literally stole the show with her performance as Saucy Snowflake and an impromptu piano solo. Juanita has been studying music for a little over one year.

The St. Gregory's School Choir, well known in the area for its splendid voices, pleased the huge crowd last night as did "Frosty the Snowman, played by Jimmie Cassidy. The music class and choir along with Pat Hoag as Suzy Snowflake wound up the show in fine style.

Sister Marie, who is directly responsible for the fine qualities of musicianship displayed and the organizing of the many participants, kept the numbers running smoothly.

Steady Progress

Belleville's industrial prospects are showing some promise with the news that a new plant is expected to locate in the city shortly.

An announcement regarding the new industry is to be made tomorrow, according to Industrial Commission chairman George Hume.

Meanwhile it is encouraging to learn of expansion at a number of other firms during 1967. They include Deloro Stellite, Dussek Brothers Canada Ltd., Mead Johnson, Stephens-Adamson and Union Carbide.

These involved a capital outlay of $3,460,000 and the addition of about 75 employees to the work staffs. In addition, three entirely new industries came to Belleville in 1967 and they involved capital expenditure totalling more than $1,000,000. When fully operational they will employ some 155 workers.

If progress has not been spectacular on the industrial scene these capital outlays of about $5,000,000 indicate the city is making some headway. They provide momentum for the growth that must inevitably take place here, as in every other community of any size in Canada.

School Rituals

Those young people who decry the opening exercises of the school day — the reading of Scripture and the singing of God Save the Queen and/or O Canada — might do well to consider those memorable lines read by the Archbishop of Canterbury at the coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

The passage has nothing to do with the merits one way or another of morning exercises embracing a passage from Scripture or the two anthems. However the words are eloquent of a degree of respect and sense of the fitness of things that too often are lacking among young people as well as adults.

The Archbishop was speaking of the Scriptures when he read these words: "Here is wisdom, this is the royal law, these are the lively oracles of God." Where the lines originated we cannot say, but they have remained in the memory since that day some 15 years ago.

Canadians, whatever their age, cannot view this country as having moved so far toward republicanism that our monarchist traditions can be disregarded completely. Perhaps, young people today are not given the historic background that enables them to observe the country's entire heritage in perspective, and appreciate that while this is the era of the swinging generation it is still the product of all that went before, in days past.

While the law allows any student to leave the classroom during a prayer for religious reasons, it is surprising that official local reaction to students' views on the issue indicates a mood of indifference.

For instance, Bay of Quinte High School Board chairman James Clarke put it this way, "As far as the board is concerned we don't have any interest in the matter. It is part of the act and we cannot operate contrary to it."

A high school principal was quoted as saying he was inclined to agree that the Lord's Prayer "becomes monotonous due to the students' frame of mind," and he added, "But do you wipe out religion for that?"

The answer of course is no — but it is a pity all concerned could not find something of value, something more positive to say of morning observances than have been quoted above.

U. S. Court Incident

That the United States is a violent country is all to apparent.

So often, though, the kind of civil violence that erupts in that vast land is so unnecesary, and reflects a degree of underlying hysteria that fortunately is not present in our own society.

For instance, a recent news picture from Louisiana showed one Ed Campbell, his head bruised and covered with blood, being assisted by his wife.

Mr. Campbell was one of a group of spectators whom wardens pushed from a New Orleans court where civil right agitator H. Rap Brown was facing charges of bond violation.

Whatever Mr. Campbell's offence, it was probably totally disproportionate to the punishment meted out by the club swinging wardens.

Canadians are lucky they live in a country where legal proceedings are conducted with more decorum, and witnesses and public alike are not liable to have their skulls cracked for the slightest disturbance.

Bilingualism and Bigotry Is New "B and B" Concept

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Seems sort of odd, doesn't it, that the so-called "bigots" in the bilingual bit always turn out to be on the English side of the bicultural dialogue?

Perhaps Lester Bowles Pearson has had something to do with it.

Reeking with rectitude, he has given the back of his hand alike to Quebec's "Two Nations" not-so-quiet revolutions and to the Prairies "One Canada" nationalists.

For he has cuffed them in equal annoyance as the "extremists" he likes to call them.

While he may have been striving to set a style of fine impartiality, it just does not seem to have caught on as the fashionable thing in the way of Ottawa thinking.

Auguste Choquette, Liberal MP for Lotbiniere, cries in Parliament to "throw the Queen out of Canada," as he so often has put it, and moves resolutions for abolition of the monarchy.

But this self-proclaimed Quebec "republican' is regarded as little more than a naughty boy. Precocious, yes. Even mischievous. But tolerated, with amused understanding.

Quebec independent MP Gilles Gregoire can campaign in the Commons quite openly for separatism, and who objects? He is only saying what he thinks, argue the apologists.

Outside Parliament, Quebec separatist Rene Levesque is given a "hero image" by the CBC, provincial Liberals call for "special status," and Union Nationale cabinet ministers flock to Paris just to have General de Gaulle sanctify them politically with a mere touch of the hand.

And in Ottawa all this is regarded with sympathetic understanding. All concerned remain calm, even serene.

But let anyone object, allow anybody to protest — then this great cool is blown.

The man is an "extremist."

Even a "bigot."

Knowing this, anticipating the angry blast, right off the top he says he runs "the risk of being rated a radical and branded as a bigot."

Big Jack Horner, Conservative MP for Alberta's Acadia constituency, did just that the other day in the House.

And for it he got his lumps. In and out of the Commons. He is scolded on the floor, scored in the lobbies and scorned on the Toronto editorial pages.

He at once becomes the archetype of English Canadian "bigotry" to the self-styled sophisticates of Parliament and the self-proclaimed intellectuals of the metro press.

What did Jack Horner say that was so terrible?

Just, in essence, this:

"We hear continuing threats of Quebec separation.

"And we hear continuing demands by Quebec for more and more power at the expense of Canada as a whole.

"Are we prepared to accept the concept of two national governments in Canada, one for the French, the other for the English?

"You can no more operate a country on the basis of a two-nation government system than you can have two chickens in one egg."

Then "bigot" Jack Horner went on to ask where the Quebec separatists thought they were going.

"Out into the cold," he suggested, "to become a banana republic without the bananas.'

This kind of "extremism" was bad enough, but then he really outraged the intellectuals and sophisticates by looking at what he termed the "other side of the separatist coin.'

And oh, the bigoted shame of it, he said he was getting pretty sick of this nonsense of Quebec separating, because when it came to separation it actually was economically possible only for one section of the country—the West, the Prairies and the Coast.

"We could separate and do without the rest of Canada Separated, we immediately would shed ourselves of the financial contributions we make to the have-not provinces."

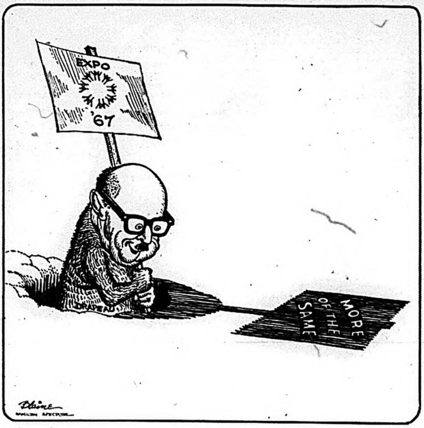
(Of the six provinces east of the lakes, only Ontario is a have," and Quebec by far the most demanding of the "have-nots.")

"It is a cruel but honest way of putting it," said Jack Horner, "but in the economic drag we would be rid of the cost of promoting bilingualism.

"So let us hear no more of the national and economic insanity of Quebec separatism."

Maybe what helped to get Jack Horner so fired up was a bilingual clash in this very national capital of bilingualism. The English-speaking residents of the largely French-speaking suburb of Outaouais, pleading for a fair language deal from the school board, referred to the prime minister's pledge of bilingualism in the national capital region.

"Perhaps", snapped the school board chairman, "if you spoke French I would understand you."



Not A Question of Fate There Is A Reason Behind Every Accident

Royal Bank of Canada monthly letter

Every accident is caused by something — an unsafe act, an unsafe practice, or an unrealized hazard. It is not "luck." If we wish to live we must apply our intelligence so as to preserve ourselves.

Thoughtful people can feel nothing but chagrin when they read the sad Canadian annual record of 11,000 men, women and children killed in accidents, more than a million injured, over a million million dollars lost economically, and 14,000 hospital beds taken up by accident victims every day. It is a national disgrace.

Look at Canada's record: of every hundred people who lost their lives in accidents in a year, 46 were killed in events involving motor vehicles; 15 deaths resulted from falls; 10 were drownings; six were in fires or explosions; six involved mechanical and food suffocation; four were from poisoning; and two each were caused by falling objects, machinery and firearms.

In every one of those "accidental" deaths someone was at fault. He used a safe gadget dangerously; he did a safe act in an unsafe way; he used a dangerous article carelessly, he failed to look ahead to the consequences of what he was about to do.

Although measurable progress has been made in reducing the death rate from home accidents, they still rank among the leading causes of death.

They happen all over the house: 30 per cent in the kitchen-dining quarters; 24 per cent in the porch or yard area; 18 per cent in the living and sleeping quarters; 12 per cent on stairs; 3 per cent in the bathroom; 3 per cent in the cellar; 2 per cent in hallways; 1 per cent in the garage; and 7 per cent in other areas.

They happen in all sorts of ways: 38 per cent result from falls on the level; 14 per cent from falls from heights; 13 per cent from hot or burning substances; 9 per cent from handling materials or objects; 2 per cent from falling material; and 10 per cent from other causes.

Accidental deaths happen at all ages: in one year there were 492 accidental deaths from all causes in the under one-year-old group; 712 deaths at ages 1 to 4; 1,137 at ages 5 to 14; 2,192 at ages 15 to 24; 3,111 at ages 25 to 44; 2,788 at ages 45 to 64; and 2,521 at ages 65 and over. The total of acidental deaths in Canada in 1965 was 10,978.

The prevention of home accidents is a challenging problem. Safety in the home is just as much a part of home operation as bringing home the pay envelope or cooking dinner.

Falls compose a large and increasing proportion of the total accident mortality not only during childhood but in later life. Only motor vehicle fatalities exceed the toll from falls. The causes are innumerable: toys left strewn on the floor, frayed ropes on swings, extension cords stretched across rooms, small rugs on smooth surfaces, badly-lighted stairs, neglect to use rubber mats in bath-tubs, water or grease on floors, torn linoleum or carpet, stepping on or off a chair that is resting on a waxed floor. All of these are preventable falls.

The last big battle of the Boer War was fought 68 years ago today—in 1900—at Paaredeberg, South Africa. Canadian units led a predawn assault on Boer lines but were forced back with heavy casualties. The Boers surrendered the following day after being surrounded since fighting began Feb. 18.

Sex Education

Brockville Recorder and Times

Brockville high school students and others from the area are to be offered a course in sex education during the winter vacation period, it was revealed at the recent meeting of the district high school board. While the course won't be offered by the high school but by a service club, the fact that the board has approved the use of BCIVS for the course points to the importance of such education in the minds of the members of the board.

This newspaper has lamented the lack of educational courses on the dangers of venereal disease today. High school students of yesteryear used to learn about the social disease through department of health programs, usually offered outside the school too. Any course on sex education should also provide knowledge of venereal diseases.

And if we recall some statistics on unwed mothers in this area, a change in behaviour and a need of sex education are apparent. We understand it was the number of unwed mothers that encouraged the promotion of the sex education course by a local service club.

The school board too, is going to explore the possibility of sex education in the schools as part of the curriculum and has asked for opinions from the school principals.

There is a difference between the school becoming involved in sex education to the extent of making it a course in the curriculum and courses being offered by a service club. The program of the service club is a voluntary one and the decisions of whether or not students should attend is up to the parents and the students themselves. But to assure success the service club should provide full and complete information on the course that is to be offered beforehand. We're frankly surprised that the school board didn't require such information before considering the use of the school auditorium.

Fancy Shoes Gave Men Edge Over Women Folk In Canada's Colonial Era

From Belleville Rotary Club Bulletin

In colonial days men were the fashion plates as far as shoes were concerned. Women's feet could not be seen, due to the long dresses and skirts that were worn. The early French settlers soon found that their European footwear did not stand up to life in the primeval forest. By the year 1650 there were 22 shoemakers in Canada, established along the St. Lawrence between Quebec and Trois Rivieres. By the end of the seventeenth century Canada was shipping shoes back to France.

In the beginning the shoemaker worked at home, but as settlements spread, he became an itinerant worker who peddled gossip and news as well as shoes. About 1850 mass production of shoes was begun in factories powered by steam engines. Up to the year of Confederation shoes were interchangeable. There were no lefts or rights. The fit did not matter.

After World War I skirts began to go up, the girls showed their legs, and all at once high button shoes were passe. Ever since, fashion changes have had a tremendous impact on the shoe industry.

"Because this is the number for the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan, the Health Insurance Registration Board, vices Commission.

"Too much to say every time the phone rings. So we just use the number."

She's right. It's easy to abbreviate, verbally, to OMSIP and HIRB.

'Greatest Political Show on Earth' Last Week in Ottawa

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

OTTAWA — Parliament last week traded its staid dignity for showmanship as its hallowed chambers became the centre of national interest.

Last Monday's upset of Prime Minister Lester Pearson's government — "accidental" if you're a Liberal; a "stunning defeat" if your sympathies lie on the other side of the House — turned Parliament's hallways into the greatest political show on earth.

Within an hour after the 84-82 Commons vote threw the Chamber into an uproar, the CBC had a camera positioned in the main lobby of the Centre Block, waiting to catch reactions of MP's either lamenting or gloating over the Government's apparent defeat.

Usually sparse gallery attendance swelled to unheard of proportions the following day, with buzzing spectators lining the corridors anticipating a view of history in the making.

The hundreds who waited hours for gallery seats Tuesday were in for a disappointment — the House adjourned after sitting for 150 seconds, at the request of a harried Prime Minister Pearson.

But they came back, and Friday morning — the day everyone expected the government confidence issue to explode in the Commons, hundreds lined up outside the Parliament Buildings in sub-zero temperatures — two hours before they could be admitted into the galleries!

Parliamentary security guards put in one of their most hectic weeks, being responsible for martialling the overflow crowds quietly into the galleries, and turning their heads while members of Parliament slipped home-town observers into advantageous spots in the waiting line.

Meanwhile, television and movie cameras focused on any politician who dared pass the main lobby, and microphones were poked towards anyone who looked like they might be the source of an original comment.

Newspaper reporters were often lost in the shuffle of electronic equipment.

Aside from the Prime Minister and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau was clearly a favorite target for cameramen and interviewers.

The "swinging" cabinet member gave his eloquent assessments to newsmen, while constantly trailed around by apparently-awe-struck admirers — usually female.

All this attention despite the fact the Liberal leadership hopeful was not a major figure in the week's Commons drama.

Virtually ignored, on the other hand, was New Democrat Leader T. C. "Tommy" Douglas, who Friday morning delivered a fiery indictment against the Liberals, and single-handedly heightened Commons tension about the possibility of a government defeat on Prime Minister Pearson's confidence motion.

The CBC alone gave its viewers 17 hours of Parliamentary television coverage, in English and French, between Monday and Friday.

And no self-respecting newspaper in the country ran anything but a "top-line" Ottawa story each day of the week.

Tension had reached a peak by Friday — the day the experts said the Commons could throw Canada into its sixth general election in 10 years.

The old Chief, John Diefenbaker, stalked the corridors of the Centre Block, presenting a striking picture of confidence — his famed grey locks crowning a most determined countenance. Perhaps thinking back to the night in 1963 when the Pearson-led opposition turned him out of office.

The Parliamentary restaurant was the scene of unofficial policy huddles. At this table Conservative House Leader Mike Star held court, while across the floor it was Liberal Agricultural Minister Joe Greene counselling backbenchers over a morning coffee.

Members threw jibes at one another. Referring to the uncomfortable balance of power clung to by the minority Pearson government, a Conservative MP ribbed a Liberal colleague: "How about you boys financing a quick trip for me to Florida?"

Some Members sat alone over their breakfast, intensely scanning their morning papers which hinted the government might muster enough support to survive the Commons crisis.

Anxious crowds, predominatly student-age spectators, shoved into the galleries at 11 a.m. Dozens had to remain outside and wait for a vacancy.

The stage was set for an afternoon climax. Prime Minister Pearson opened debate with a detailed, but not too convincing collection of sources to support his position that Monday night's vote did not constitute a government defeat.

Then rousing addresses by Opposition Leader Stanfield and NDP Leader Douglas scathed the Liberals for "thinking they have the divine right to govern this country."

Spectators filed out at the 1 o'clock adjournment, hoping to catch a quick lunch and hurry back to grab a place in the waiting lines.

Newsmen scrambled outside the Commons chamber to sidetrack the principals of the morning's action. But there were no lengthy interviews — just "wait and sees", a brief salute to the cameras, and off to closed-door assessments of the situation.

The end came suddenly.

Less than five minutes after beginning his scheduled address, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette pledged his splinter party's eight Commons votes to the Liberals, more than enough to give them a clear majority of the House.

Liberal MP's pounded their desks in delight when the unpredictable Mr. Caouette said he didn't have much confidence in the government, but had even less in the Conservative and NDP Opposition.

The Commons benches, virtually filled since the sparse turnout that led to Monday's controversial vote, began to show daylight.

Members of the press gallery, aware of the import of Mr. Caouette's stand, were the first to leave. Within an hour, less than half the Liberal members were in their seats, and vacancies began to appear in the galleries where spectators had been sitting in aisles.

It was back to business as usual. No more than 100 of the 261 Commons Members remained to hear vain attempts by front-bencher George Hees and others to keep the possibility of a government defeat alive.

By the time Independent Gilles Gregoire somewhat belatedly said he represented the balance of power in the divided House, only a few dozen spectators remained at their French-English translators to hear out the day's debating.

Afterwards, the cameras didn't flash so often outside the Chamber doors, and there were fewer interviews than before. Serious questions for the man who had swung the balance of power — Mr. Caouette — and light-hearted poses of Justice Minister Trudeau with some admiring high school girls.

Security guards didn't expect the overflow crowds would continue into this week.

From now on, nothing could be more anti-climatic.

Mother of Accused Testifies In Surprise Move by Crown

A surprise move by Crown Attorney Glenn Deline brought Mrs. Dorothy Morrison to the stand yesterday in the trial of her son Larry Morrison and Lawrence Schlaer.

Mrs. Morrison's testimony interrupted the presentation of the case for the defence. It followed an application by Mr. Deline to introduce new evidence which was accepted by the Honorable Mr. Justice Keith.

Morrison and Schlaer are charged with conspiracy to commit robbery and robbery with violence in the Sept. 1 theft of $10,000 from Food City manager Samuel Mulholland.

According to the crown, the new evidence did not come into his possession until this past weekend after a telephone call was made by him to Mrs. Morrison.

The mother of the accused testified that on Dec. 12 and Dec. 15 she had been asked by her son to visit him in the Hastings County jail. Upon visiting him, she said he had nodded and answered "yeah" when she asked "Did you do it?"

Mrs. Morrison testified that Larry had made reference to her other son William (an earlier witness for the crown) in saying "it might not be too safe for Bill". She also testified Larry had asked her to talk Bill into changing his testimony by telling the police the first statement he gave them was true and the second false.

Taking the witness stand for the second time immediately after his mother testified, Larry Morrison agreed that he had asked his mother "to reason with him (Bill) to explain the situation to the police or else I will be forced to."

The accused denied that the conversation about Bill's safety ever occurred.

Morrison testified that when asked "Did you do it?" by his mother he had answered "You know who did it."

Mrs. Morrison had also testified that the accused said to her that Mr. Mulholland "was not in any pain due to the way he was tied." Morrison denied that this conversation ever took place.

Earlier in the day Lawrence Schlaer, the other accused, was called to the stand by defence counsel Robert Carter. Schlaer testified that there was no conspiracy or participation in any robbery and that after driving Larry Morrison to Belleville to see his brother, he, Morrison, and a third man James Phillips had returned to Montreal by 10 p.m. Sept. 1.

Mrs. Lawrence Schlaer and Simon Slagen, who had been a dinner guest with his wife at the Schlaers Sept. 1, testified that the accused had arrived home shortly after 10 o'clock that night. Mrs. Slagen had already testified to that effect on Friday.

Morrison, in his earlier testimony, had stated that Schlaer had dropped him and Phillips off at the home of Phillips' parents in Montreal. Schlaer also testified that this had been the case.

Counsel for the defence called witnesses present at the Phillips' residence that night. Michael Phillips, Wayne MacDonald and Ellen Phillips all testified that Morrison and Phillips had arrived at the home around 10 p.m. Sept. 1, remained for an hour, and then left together.

The testimony of Ellen Phillips closed the case for the defence. However, due to the unusual introduction of crown evidence at such a late point in the trial Mr. Justice Keith granted the defence the right to call further witnesses this morning if desired.

Farmers To Meet

Farmers from the Bay of Quinte district are invited to attend the annual Quinte Farm Conference scheduled for the Club Canara in Belleville for three days next week.

The conference will open Wednesday morning, March 6 with discussions on dairy farming. March 7 will be Beef Day, with a special crops day on Thursday, the final day of the conference.

The annual farm conference holds considerable interest for Quinte area farmers. Last year attendance of up to 300 farmers daily was seen at the different sessions.

Again this year special speakers will be on hand to discuss requirements of a successful farm operation. The day to day program includes films, special speakers and a panel discussion to wind up the day's proceedings. Noon luncheon will be available on each of the three days.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Golds continued to boom as most other major categories on the Toronto Stock Exchange slipped in light mid-morning activity.

The gold index zoomed 4.30 to a new 31-year high of 235.11 as some jumped 2¼ to 80¼, Campbell Red Lake ⅛ to 35⅞, La Luz ¾ to 15⅞ and Camflo 20 cents to 5.70 in sales of about 21,000 shares.

Seagrams was off ⅛ to 40½ and Hudson's Bay Oil and Canadian Gridoil ½ each to 37½ and 10.

In uraniums, Denison was down ½ at 66, and Rio Algom fell ⅜ to 30⅝.

On index, industrials were off .45 to 151.02, oils .80 to 185.20 and base metals .18 to 98.73.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 623,000 shares compared with 865,000 at the same time Monday.

Monday, steels were hardest hit in industrials. Algoma Steel, which reported sharply reduced annual earnings, was off ¾ to 16 and Dofasco ⅝ to 16⅞.

However, golds, traditionally strong in a slipping market, hit a 31-year high as Dome Mines soared 3⅛ to 78⅛ and Campbell Red Lake 1¼ to 35.

The market followed the trend on Wall Street where the Dow-Jones industrial average dropped more than eight points following the Federal Reserve Board's tightening of credit and reports of caution in the auto industry.

Steels were hardest hit in the industrial list. Algoma Steel, which reported sharply reduced annual earnings, was off ¾ to 16 and Dofasco ⅝ to 16⅞.

Falconbridge dropped 1⅝ to 95⅝, Walkers and IMC 1 each to 31 and 25 and Inco ½ to 113.

Denison Mines, Canada's most important uranium issue, led declining base metals with a drop of 2½ points to 66½. Pine Point slipped 1¼ to 44 and Roman Corp., whose chief assets is Denison shares, ⅛ to 21⅛.

Camflo was among the most active gold issues, gaining 30 cents to 5.50 in sales of about 47,000 shares. La Luz rose ⅝ to 15⅛.

The gold index closed at 230.80, up 4.55 points, after hitting a 31-year high of 231.19. The index rose to a record 252.89 in February, 1937.

Volume was 2,860,000 shares compared with 2,844,000 Friday. Declines led advances 310 to 174 while 211 issues remained unchanged.

Estranged Dad Mending His Ways

Dear Doris: This man is divorced; his daughter went with her mother when she was 10.

Now she is 25; has two children. This man has been giving money and gifts for the children, but only in the past year, after he got track of them again.

The little granddaughter printed a thank-you note for his birthday present but not a scratch from his daughter. Should he ignore her or what? — A Mess to Untangle.

Dear Mess: He shouldn't be hasty. The hard feelings that so often go with divorce are not easily dissipated. If he is now in touch, after 15 years of absence, he is at best a friendly stranger, to his daughter.

She takes a step towards him in teaching her little girl to write that note.

Dear Doris: I am going to have a dance at my house but I am afraid it might end up in a flop. I am not much of a person who can get a party going. I was also going to have a slumber party with it. Any ideas on how to get it going and keep it going? My mother does not like too much noise. — Thirteen.

Dear Thirteen: You need ice breakers, dance helps, and a few games. You need a refrigerator full of refreshments. I can send you "Party Games and Refreshments" if you'll say who you are and send 10 cents.

As for the 'too much' noise" better get a concession for the first hour or so. Is a quiet party a party at all? Then decide with Mother about when to call a halt and send everybody home. Young people sometimes don't know when to stop and are just as glad to be told; otherwise nobody wants to be the first to break things up.

DORIS CLARK

If there's a follow-up slumber party with the girls, make it a contrast, with low-voiced story-telling instead of too much roughhouse. Give the Old Folks a break.

• • •

Dear Doris: For a hobby I collect poems. There are two I am interested in getting.

The first one is "The Legacy". It is about a man who died in a mental institution and among his effects was a will which was found legal and registered. In it he left things like summer nights and laughter to the children and lovers and old people.

The second poem is "The White Magnolia Tree". It was written by a woman, concerning her life with her husband John. She mentions how the tree blooms and never seems to get any older and yet she and her husband John are aging every year. — Poem Collector.

Dear Collector: I remember The Legacy; a delightful fantasy. If anyone comes up with either poem I'll let you know.

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.)

Clean Getaway

OSLO (AP) — Dashing through the snow, the young thief thought he had made a clean getaway with $70 snatched from an Oslo fruit shop. But it was a case made to order for policeman Kjellferd Weum, who saw the man run from the shop. Weum, who is also Scandinavia's champion high hurdler, skimmed across four-foot drifts and made the arrest.

1 cup shredded process cheese

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour

1 teaspoon baking powder

2 tablespoons sugar

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour

¼ teaspoon baking soda

1¾ cups quick-cooking rolled oats

1 cup light brown sugar

¾ cup margarine (or butter)

Combine and sift together flour and soda. Add oats and sugar. Work in butter with pastry blender. Divide mixture in half. Pat half into an 8 x 8" or 9 x 9" buttered pan. Woman Teacher Invades Boys' Privacy

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We are sixth grade boys with a big problem. We think you can help us. Almost every day a lady teacher busts into the boys' toilet and causes a lot of embarrassment. Somebody put out a rumor that certain guys smoke in there. The teacher is trying to catch them, which is why she comes clomping in without any warning.

ANN LANDERS

Please don't tell us to complain to the principal because the principal is always on the teacher's side. You are famous for your good answers so please don't fail us. Thank you. — PRIVACY NEEDED.

DEAR PRIVACY — A lady has no right to bust into the boys' toilet even if she is looking for kids who smoke. If there is a man teacher in school, he should do the surprise checking. If there is no man teachoer I suggest that the janitor or a paid supervisor be asked to do the investigating.

Ask your mother or dad to call or write the superintendent of school and report on this happening.

* * *

DEAR ANN — Now that you have published a blistering attack on mimeographed Christmas newsletters will you be good enough to give equal time to the opposition?

The woman who wrote made it sound as if people who send Christmas letters are braggers or mini-brains. In answer to her question, "Who wants to wade through all that drivel?" I'd like to reply, "We Do!"

When I open an envelope which is obviously a Christmas greeting I feel terribly let down when I see only a signature — often engraved. "The Andersons wish you a happy holiday" — nothing more. What could be colder or more impersonal? Sometimes there will be a hastily written line — "Will write later — no time now." (They rarely do.)

So, please, Ann, let your readers know their newsletters are appreciated by many people. Our family would be heartsick if our friends stopped sending them — VOTE FOR THE AFFIRMATIVE.

DEAR VOTE — You will be pleased to know I received hundreds of letters from readers who voted with you. So keep those Christmas newsletters coming, folks. Those who find them boring can toss them aside.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My brother and his wife came to town unexepectedly last Sunday and created a small problem. We were invited to the home of some friends for dinner so I telephoned and asked if we could bring Irma and George. The hostess was quite unpleasant and let me know she was not pleased at the thought of "extras."

Now I wish we had never gone, any of us. Fourteen people were crowded around a table meant for 10. I'm sure she put only one board in her table instead of two to let us know we had inconvenienced her. The hostess's very old parents did not fit into the social group (both are hard of hearing) and they could easily have eaten in the kitchen or been fed before the guests arrived.

The hostess was cool to me when we said good night. I am the one who should be mad — not her. Should I tell her I feel she was most ungracious? — ADA.

DEAR ADA — The real culprits are Irma and George. In this age of communication there is no excuse to arrive anywhere unexpectedly. When such things occur, it is best to call the hostess and only if she insists that you bring your guests should you do so.

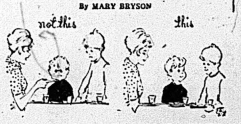
The notion that she should have put her parents in the kitchen or fed them first is outrageous. Is this the way you treat your parents? If so, I feel sorry for them — and sorrier for you.

* * *

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing an unstamped, self-addressed envelope, plus 6c for postage.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: (crossly) "John, come back here and sit down until you can ask to be excused from the table. Jim, you can't have another cookie until you say 'please.' How long will it take you boys to learn a few manners. I get so tired of telling you."

Mother: (pleasantly) "John, do you want to be excused? Before you leave, will you please pass the plate of cookies to Jimmy."

Jimmy: "Please may I have more milk, too?"

Learning almost anything takes time — and it's a long time before manners are learned once and for all. It's up to mothers to keep reminding children — just as teachers constantly drill them in schoolwork — but the reminding can be done in a friendly and mannerly way.

Luxurious Floating Homes Increasing in Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold carpet stretches wall-to-wall, draperies line the windows, warm teak panels and walls, color television, stereo and a bar wait in the lounge, an electric disposal and a rotisserie in the kitchen — and it floats.

Cruisers are more luxurious than ever this year, and so are the prams, dinks, canoes, skiffs, sailboards, kayaks, catamarans, slooops, houseboats and just about everything else that floats.

Americans spent $3,000,000,000 on boats last year, $183,000,000 more than in 1966. Dealers expect a similar increase this year.

"I expect recreation boating to continue expanding at least 10 per cent a year," said David R. Parker, president of Hatteras Yacht Co. of North Carolina.

"Today, you can get to spas everywhere to enjoy boating," he said. "You don't have to pack everyone in the car and drive three or four days to get there. You can enjoy your toy more."

Parker's toys run from $20,000 to $150,000 apiece.

Boating magazine says in its annual survey that buyers this year will have their choices of 3,419 stock models, from a $50 inflatable kayak to an 85-foot motor yacht for $393,000.

Most — 56.5 per cent of all boats built — are power boats. Sailboats account for 20.5 per cent.

And for do-it-yourselfers, there are 217 kits, costing from $54 to $3,116.

The survey found a significant gain in houseboats —199 different models, from 10 to 65 feet long costing $375 to $39,000. A 40-foot, 30-mile-an-hour summer home may cost less than $20,000. Houseboat sales are expected to reach 3,500 this year, double 1966. But the boat is only the beginning. After that comes sunbather seats, electric starters, transistorized echo sounders and hundreds of other accessories.

Dairy Princess Allergic to Cattle

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's Dairy Princess is allergic to cattle.

Janet Olesen, 19, used to take turns with her two brothers and two sisters herding cattle on her parents' mixed farm at Daysland, 100 miles southeast of Edmonton.

The Olesens found a two-pronged solution: allergy pills and a motorbike.

"When we found out I was allergic to horses and cattle, my parents bought me a Honda to herd them with, and it was a ball," she said.

Alberta Dairy Princess in 1966, Janet was chosen Canadian princess at last year's Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. One of her duties is to represent Canada at the 1968 world trade fair in Madrid.

She works in Edmonton as a receptionist and takes a modelling course as a hobby.

U.S. Is Creating More Viet Cong Than It Destroys---American

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is "creating more Viet Cong than we are destroying," says Arthur Z. Gardiner, former director of the American foreign aid agency in Saigon, who now heads a federally-backed organization operating there.

Saying he was expressing his personal views, Gardiner told an interviewer the U.S. should try hard for a peace settlement and pull its forces out of Vietnam.

He said such an approach would save American lives because "we are going down now on a course that has no ending whatsoever."

Gardiner, chief of the U.S. Agency for International Development mission in Saigon in 1958-62, receives a heavy flow of grass-roots reports from South Vietnam in his current post as executive director of International Voluntary Services.

IVS is a private non-profit organization which began sending youthful volunteers to South Vietnam for development work a decade ago. Their activities in the cities and countryside—similar to those of the Peace Corps, which has no unit in Vietnam—are financed by the Washington and Saigon governments.

In the wake of the Communist Tet onslaught, some of the 155 IVS volunteers have decided to quit before the end of their two-year tours.

But a spokesman for the aid-administering Agency of International Development said there is no thought of withdrawing IVS altogether.

Sources said Gardiner is free to air his personal views as a citizen and that AID's spending on IVS, about $1,200,000 this year, is related to the services IVS renders rather than the private opinions of its members.

Gardiner said he wrote letters to two U.S. newspapers before the outbreak of Communist attacks at the end of January. In them he said:

—Hatred for the U.S. exists in most of Vietnam today "from the 'overbearing presence of 500,000 Americans," from jealousy of South Vietnamese officials displaced in practice by U.S. advisers and from military tactics which have uprooted nearly a quarter of the civilian population.

—Constructive efforts toward a peaceful and prosperous Vietnam "are doomed if they must depend on the leadership of an unstable, little-respected military clique" elected "by a small minority vote."

—"Increasing numbers of Vietnamese are becoming benevolently neutral toward the Viet Cong—race, religion, xenophobia, all contribute."

—So much material and moral damage has been inflicted since 1965, when U.S. combat forces arrived, "that Vietnamese patriots will never be content until foreign influence has been eliminated from the government of their country."

U. S. Post at Khe Sanh Is Like Dien Bien Phu

KHE SANH (AP) — Fourteen years after the decisive French defeat in Indochina, U.S. marines at Khe Sanh are involved in a battle in an outpost that appears synonymous with debacle in Vietnam—Dien Bien Phu.

The topography is similar, the same North Vietnamese general commands the troops that surround the stronghold and initiative is with the attackers.

U.S. military officials say there is a major difference—the American command's ability to supply its men with firepower, material and virtually unlimited air support.

The absence of these factors during the 55-day siege of Dien Bien Phu are considered the decisive factors that made possible the Viet Minh attack which overwhelmed the garrison May 7, 1954. Two months later, France was ready to leave Vietnam.

The marine base at Khe Sanh, just south of the demilitarized zone dividing the two Vietnams is defended by 5,000 to 6,000 men. The French sent some 16,500 to their fortress about 180 miles northwest of Hanoi.

Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap's forces around Khe Sanh are believed to number about 20,000, some 10,000 fewer than the Viet Minh attack troops he assembled at Dien Bien Phu. But another 20,000 are believed close at hand around the demilitarized zone.

While the French conceived their Dien Bien Phu campaign as a way of bringing the opposition into a decisive conventional battle, their command was not prepared for the kind of fighting the Viet Minh did.

Coolies and bearers carted heavy artillery piece by piece through heavy jungle. Then they were assembled on the rim of the valley and the murderous pounding began.

Outposts Gabrielle, Beatrice and Huguette fell under heavy enemy attack. The Viet Minh took great losses, four times as many casualties as the French in one battle, but kept coming back.

Guns Do Not Stop Crime

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is interesting, if profitless, to speculate on what might actually happen if the American police seriously considered the idea of going without guns, as the bobbies do in England.

What made me think about this highly improbable gesture was a news item out of Wigan, England, reporting that a 35-year-old, 5-foot-2 barmaid utterly routed four young muggers with her umbrella. She attacked the youths when she saw them beating up an old man. Two ran away, and the other two were apprehended by the police.

This would, of course, be inconceivable in America. The public will not involve itself in such fracases because of the fear — quite legitimate in most cases — that one of the ruffians might be armed with a gun and would just as soon shoot as not, maybe sooner.

Most criminals here carry arms out of fear more than out of ferocity: this is pre-eminently a gun-loving, gun-toting, gun-using nation, and the criminal milieu merely reflects the dominant frontier mentality of the whole social order, top to bottom.

In England, practically nobody owns a gun, and even the police are not customarily armed, carrying only a truncheon: therefore, the criminals feel no urgent need to stock up on shooting irons before embarking on a little job.

Our heavily armed police force hasn't been able to cut the crime rate: on the contrary, almost all categories of crime have skyrocketed in the last decade, and a gun in the hands of a hoodlum has become the rule far more than the exception. Nor will "gun laws" of any kind inhibit the professional criminal who knowing that the police are still armed, will continue to feel the need to fight gun-fire with gun-fire.

There is no reason to believe that British criminals are any more kind of considerate or forbearing than our native species: crooks are crooks the world around, and will do whatever needs to be done to make a score. British criminals don't carry guns for the good and simple reason that they aren't afraid of being gunned down by cops. Both they and the cops are grateful for this mutual common sense.

Actually, the U.S. is rapidly moving in the opposite direction: Our fear of crime is so great and obsessive that we would like the police to be even more repressive—not realizing that, like a war, this will only bring further escalation of the criminal arms race. The only way to check crime is by a system of jurisprudence that is swift, fair, certain, and impervious to political influence.

In England, a captured criminal is almost sure to be convicted; in the U.S. his future depends on money, pull, and legal connections. It is awareness of justice that deters criminals, not fear of the law.

'Psychedelic' Minister Quits

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Vancouver minister who staged psychedelic services and spoke out against the U.S. being in Vietnam, Monday quit his job on the eve of an ouster vote.

Rev. James McKibbon, 37, has been in the Anglican church 17 years and became minister at St. Anselm's church in the University of British Columbia district 2½ years ago.

Mr. McKibbon said he had been "hounded" by the bishop ever since he took part in what was called a psychedelic service at University Hill United Church more than a year ago. The service was televised nationally, and became a topic of controversy. It included gogo dancers, flashing lights and pop music.

His resignation was tendered as 160 parishioners prepared to vote on whether to ask him to quit, he said in an interview. effective May 31, Mr. McKibbon said financial pledges to St. Anselm's had dropped to $18,000 from $25,000 since the first of January.

"One man sent $1,500 to the bishop and asked that it not be credited to St. Anselm's as long as I remained minister," he said.

Mr. McKibbon's views on Vietnam call for American withdrawal. He said prosecutions regarding marijuana should be stopped until a royal commission, or similar investigation, revealed the exact dangers of its use.

He said the church has completely lost touch with the world and sticks to a creed of success, hard work and "Victorian sex codes."

When he leaves St. Anselm's, Mr. McKibbon, who formerly served in Ontario, said he doesn't think he will be going to church himself any more.

He said "the really human, sensitive, concerned people that I have met are people who have nothing to do with the church."

"I would liken my years in the church," he said, "to being married 17 years and then finding my wife is unfaithful."

Atomic Pollution Figures in Error

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A government laboratory admitted Monday it made "an error in calculation" in computing the radioactive content of creek effluent near a western New York state atomic-waste treatment plant.

Dr. John H. Harley, director of the Atomic Energy Commission health and safety laboratory in New York City, said an error was discovered upon checking computations made in connection with two samples of effluent submitted by the Rochester Committee for Scientific Information.

Harley made his comments in a telephone interview with the Buffalo Courier-Express.

The Rochester group, a private organization of some 200 scientists and laymen, charged in a report issued Sunday that the effluent contained amounts of the radioactive substance strontium 90 grossly in excess of limits permitted by the AEC.

The charge was denied by officials of Nuclear Fuel Services Inc., operator of the plant near West Valley, 35 miles southeast of Buffalo, and by state and Cattaraugus County agencies.

The report said AEC analysis of effluent from Cattaraugus Creek disclosed 30,000 times mort strontium 90 present than permissible. A tributary, Buttermilk Creek, had 2,800 times more of the substance than authorized, it added.

Harley said "somebody goofed" in the laboratory and "used the wrong fraction" in measuring content of the samples.

A preliminary computation Monday disclosed that the original figures were about 10 times too high, he said.

Right to Criticize Courts Is Upheld

LONDON (CP) — Court of Appeal has strongly affirmed the right of press and public to criticize the courts, even when the criticism contains factual error.

Criticism of a court ruling is a right even if the case involved is subject to appeal, the court said Monday.

The three-man court unanimously dismissed an application for contempt of court against Quintin Hogg, Conservative member of Parliament and Queen's counsel, who "vigorously" criticized a court decision in an article in the magazine Punch.

"No criticism of a judgment, however vigorous, can amount to contempt of court, provided it keeps within the limits of reasonable courtesy and good faith," said Lord Justice Cyril Salmon.

Politicians, the public, press and broadcasters, said Lord Alfred Denning, Master of the Rolls, "can say that the courts are mistaken and their decisions erroneous, whether subject to appeal or not."

Lord Justice Edmund Davies said the Hogg criticism was inaccurate and its fairness and good taste were open to doubt, but it was still not contemptuous.

Ban on LSD Unenforceable

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican congressman says a proposal to make possession of LSD a crime "is absolutely unenforceable." He said indications are that nearly 2,000,000 U.S. students use the drug.

Representative Tim Lee Carter of Kentucky made the comment to a reporter Monday after a House of Representatives commerce subcommittee on which he sits heard Commissioner James L. Goddard of the food and drug administration support the administration bill.

Carter said surveys on LSD usage indicated that perhaps 1,600,000 high school and 300,000 college students use the hallucinogen.

"How can we imprison 1,900,000 students in the United States?" Carter asked.

Ross Stiver Holds Perfect Bridge Hand

Mr. H. Ross Stiver, Albert Street, retired secretary of the PUC, had the thrill of a lifetime one evening last week while enjoying a game of bridge with his wife and neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cameron. Mr. Stiver and Mr. Cameron were partners against their wives and Mrs. Stiver dealt the cards.

It is understood Mrs. Stiver made a bid, passed by Mr. Cameron and raised by Mrs. Cameron. Mr. Stiver looked at part of his hand and it was all black. He continued to pick up his cards and the same suit kept coming up until he had thirteen spades. He looked across at his partner and said "under the circumstances I will bid seven spades" and of course it was a lay down. The chance of holding a perfect hand in a suit in one in millions.

Child Found Suffocated In Crib

A post-mortem was scheduled today on the infant son of a Rossmore couple, found suffocated in his crib this morning.

The baby was born to Charles Lucas 24, and his wife Beverley, 21, on Jan. 5, said provincial police.

The tragic discovery was made by the child's mother about 8.40 a.m.

Rejuvenation

The Song Is Downtown The Tune Is Renewal

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville's heart is in the right place.

It doesn't beg a transplant.

But rejuvenation is sorely needed.

Otherwise, the city's downtown could succumb to creeping decay.

A community needs a vital central area for esthetic, commercial reasons.

One complements, guarantees the other

A thriving downtown is an assured tax endowment to its municipality.

Downtown crystallizes the style, flavor of its community, giving cohesion to its social character.

Downtown imparts a total sense of community identity.

But in Belleville?

Downtown has meant revised tax assessments, shorting municipal income.

It means dilapidation; buildings betraying obsolescence despite refurbished facades: the impact of new construction blunted by general drabness.

Downtown is parking problems, traffic problems, problems for property owners, for planners.

Downtown is a river—a distinctive asset—its esthetic potential partly beggared by surrounding seedliness.

But condemnation is not justified.

Urban renewal is no regional or national need. The demand is global.

Posterity can be the only fair critic if present-day purpose is lacking to solve the problem.

Every Bellevillian has a vested interest in the city's core — landlords, merchant-tenants, shoppers, strollers.

Now city council has taken an initial step. It is seeking higher-government approval for urban renewal plans.

A city-endorsed investment of $12,000 will draft engineering proposals, outlining the anatomy of renewal.

Organizing the situation on paper is a task for the experts.

Its solution is a challenge to community will.

But some of the pros and cons already have been assembled. They are published elsewhere on this page.

Early Belleville Turned Its Back On the Moira River

City Must Provide Impetus

Moira Should Be Treated as City's Prime Asset

Belleville has a priceless scenic asset right in the heart of town — the Moira River.

The river is a vital part of a plan for downtown rejuvenation which city industrialist Fred Deacon has been boosting for months.

It's the magic - circle concept — a plan sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce with Mr. Deacon as its spokesman.

The scheme conceives Front Street as a mall, ringed by a traffic artery that includes a riverside drive.

"We have the advantage of a river running through the middle of our city. If we were just to think of it as a place of beauty . . . " he ponders.

"How many cities would like to have the asset we have."

The original downtown layout however, placed the main street with its back to the river. Now the Moira runs behind a series of backyards.

"It looks depressing . . . but I think we could develop that into a thing of beauty," reiterates Mr. Deacon.

"I feel that if the city looks after the river road it'll be up to merchants to develop a mall"

City leadership, he believes, is crucial to any improvement moves.

"There's been a lot of re-investment in the area," Mr. Deacon says. "'I don't think it's fair to say there is no interest in re-investment.

"I think what they need is for somebody to convince them there is a future for the downtown area

"If the city would be prepared to re-invest and provide leadership, people would take advantage of it. I think too, at times the downtown people don't feel they're appreciated."

Mr. Deacon foresees quickening industrial expansion in the city in coming years and the possibility of its population climbing to 50,000 in the next decade.

However, he stresses the importance of present-day commercial assessment as a tax source.

Belleville is the main trading centre for perhaps 100,000 district residents.

"We're able to survive because we have a very high commercial assessment. We've a very valuable commercial establishment in the heart of our city and we must protect it."

"My feeling is we've got that assessment there. We must encourage it to grow and protect it. We shouldn't lose track of the value of present assessment."

The downtown establishment is interested in the area's renewal and "I think, with a spirit like that it'll take place.

"If council provides the leadership it will follow very quickly."

Downtown Area Problems

Neighborhood Containment No Substitute for Identity

Belleville has burgeoned with suburbs, residential units begetting shopping centres.

The traditional community flow downtown is now partially diverted as shopping and services become comfortably localized.

But snug neighborhood containment is no substitute for community identity.

Only a downtown area, integrating the city's commercial and social aspirations, can totally reflect the community spirit.

City planning director P. J. Beavis puts it this way:

"I don't know how you can develop a sense of total identity with a suburb, and human beings need a sense of identity with something.

"Downtown? I think it fulfills a psychological need as well as the purely physical one of being able to go to one place and fill a multitude of activities."

Contemporary downtown Belleville has its problems, but — the planner is quick to caution — they are not singular to one city

"I think before anybody gets thinking this it should be realized. Belleville doesn't have any problem uncommon to any other city, anywhere."

Obsolescence and the automobile have been maor contributors to the decline of city centres.

"The hearts of our cities were always the first locations to be developed," explains the planner.

"Generally, the problem has been accomplished by post-war developments."

Now it's "easier" for many people to seek out the comfort of suburban shopping centres. Parking is assured; a multitude of services are available nearby, even under one roof.

Like every other city Belleville's central area is stigmatized by the automobile — the impossibility of being able to accommodate parked cars, unable to orevent traffic jams

But, already there are welcome signs. City council is moving to bridge the Moira River at Dundas Street, hopefully paving the way to smoother traffic mobility.

But this is only a rudimentary beginning. After people leave their cars they must find themselves in an attractive environment.

Front Street today is no competitor for good looks.

Aging buildings make up what is much of the Quinte district's main thoroughfare.

But property owners are not the devils.

"Conditions are getting obsolete," says Mr. Beavis. "The biggest handicap is the obsolete land ownerships."

The division of land over the years has resulted in some rangy allotments.

Some properties may be 17-20 feet wide, says the planner, but 200-300 feet deep.

"Who the devil can afford to build a valid business organization on a lot that size and shape?" he ponders.

Such outmoded assemblies of land baffle private development, he points out.

"What government can do is to help in land assembly," says the planning director.

Obsolescence is graphically illustrated by a planning department survey.

The scrutiny computed, says Mr. Beavis, that public buildings (city hall, police headquarters) were worth 6.3 times the value of the site.

Such public service units as reataurants had a ratio of 2.2; household services (furniture, hardware stores), 1.4; personal services (hairdressers and such) 1.3.

In plainer comparative terms, the planner points out, a homebuilder who buys a $3,000 lot might expect to pay $18,000 for construction.

"I don't know how it is in other communities," says the planning director. "But it satisfied us of being a fair indication of the buildings — apart from their aged condition — of just being obsolete."

A contributing factor to downtown obsolescence is the fading of the family business.

Once, an entrepreneur expecting his son to inherit his ventures, kept up his holdings.

"This is no longer true," says Mr. Beavis. "I think the family business is tending to die and so it's not unreasonable that those businesses not keep up investment (in property)."

However, some property owners may "have to get more concerned" and deterioration could be worse before improvement is hatchd.

But there are signs of quickening interest.

The Chamber of Commerce is pushing a plan to revamp the central area and ring it with a riverside drive. A spokesman for Front Street merchants Monday spoke publicly for urban renewal.

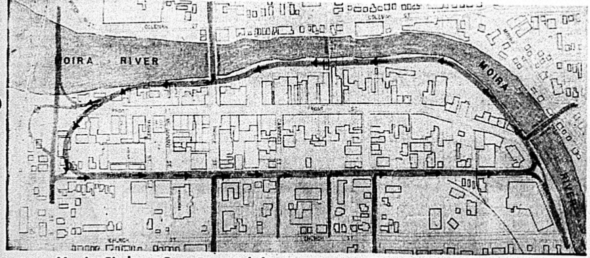
"And this is one of the hopeful signs for the future," believes Mr. Beavis, "that there are a number of private enterprises concerned. They recognize there is a problem."

Now, finally, city council has ordered consultants to survey the whole problem of urban renewal.

The results should be in within a year, concentrating attention on downtown Belleville.

Meantime, residential areas spread, the city suburbs grow wider and wider. A third shopping centre is on the books.

But, without a downtown core, believes Mr. Beavis, "Belleville would become a residential suburb with no heart. Who wants to go to a place like that? Human beings are rational — to a point. I think we all need this sense of identity."



Magic Circle – One Proposal for Revamping River-Downtown Area

Song Still Downtown But Tune Now Money

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Downtown means money, and it's Leighton Thompson's job to figure out just how much.

How much more — and how much less, as startled Belleville taxpayers discovered six months ago.

As city assessor it was Mr. Thompson more than anyone else who quietly drove home a need for renewing the city's centre.

Assessment of downtown property, he revealed, had dropped $1 million.

Were it nothing else, urban redevelopment spells good tax business for Belleville.

Decline of downtown property value was no news.

The trend was noticed some years ago, signalled by a drop in purchase prices paid for downtown property.

"There were a number of properties, which when placed on the market, didn't attain market prices, recalls Mr. Thompson. "We recognized our assessments were too high in relation to the market.

City hall officials played it cool, watching market conditions and various sales, before moving to revise assessment rolls.

The result made last September's headlines.

And the announced revision would have been that much greater if it were not for new buildings along Front Street in recent years, the assessor indicated.

So much for negative aspects. There is a credit side to the good-business coin.

Downtown is an impressive tax source for the city treasury. The area's assessment is a bulky entry in the tax books: More than $13 million of the $110 million which is the assessed value of Belleville.

Downtown business also is good, concedes Mr. Thompson, although flourishing commerce is encouraged these days by environment.

Assessment is only part of the money picture, since a thriving business means cash in circulation in the community.

Older buildings pose a problem, even for their owners.

"We've still some buildings where they have the top floors sealed off," says Mr. Thompson. "Good use is not being made of the land."

Nonetheless, redevelopment need not necessarily be related to demolition.

Front Street "is not too bad. It's the back yards (along the Moira River) we have to clean up, I think."

The upcoming Dundas Street bridge should provide an incentive toward renewing the city core.

Renewal "is a desirable thing and I look forward to it with a great deal of enthusiasm," says the veteran city official. "We've never seen any revolutionary change in the downtown area."

Multiple Sclerosis Victim Writes Story of Canadian Old West

COALDALE, Alta. (CP) — J. Fraser Hodgson bought a typewriter, had it attached to the arms of his wheelchair and six years later became an author.

It took that long partly because the 63-year-old multiple sclerosis victim never intended to become an author. All he had wanted was a record of his boyhood in Canada's developing West to give to his children.

The other reason: He was limited to typing letter by letter, not word for word, for an average of two hours a day. His workroom is his modest home in this town of 2,500 persons, 10 miles east of Lethbridge.

In those six years, Mr. Hodgson produced a 100,000-word manuscript of anecdotes, short stories and variety humor. His wife mailed it to a publisher and the manuscript ran for a year as a series in a rural weekly newsmagazine published in Saskatoon.

The publishers called for more. They were not aware that Mr. Hodgson had been in a wheelchair for more than 10 years and had muscle control over only one finger.

The publishers sent the series to their book department and a year ago it came out as a book: Once Upon A Lifetime.

While Mr. Hodgson worked laboriously on a 70,000-word sequel to the book, the disease spread. Multiple sclerosis attacks the central nervous system, causing a victim increasing disability such as impaired vision, speech and balance and loss of limb control.

At first, Mr. Hodgson used the one finger he could control to punch typewriter keys. When he lost that much control he used a pencil clenched in his fist.

Eventually, the muscles in his hand and arm would not hold the pencil. So he got a brace to hold a pencil, had it attached to his hand, and continued.

Mr. Hodgson decided to revisit Saskatoon when he heard the book was due to be published. He had lived in Saskatchewan as a boy and young man before moving to Alberta where he became a service manager for an international farm machinery manufacturer.

An official of the publishing house, Modern Press Ltd., was curious when Mrs. Hodgson asked the size of the building and whether it had a freight elevator.

It was a strange inquiry from the newest addition to a stable of western authors including Lt.-Gov. J. Grant MacEwan of Alberta. Only then did the publisher learn Mr. Hodgson was a victim of multiple sclerosis.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

Goal-scoring is what hockey's all about and few players in the brief but colorful history of Belleville senior "A" clubs were as capable in this respect as left-winger Hilary "Minnie" Menard.

The 19-year scoring [illegible] came to an abrupt and [illegible] in Napanee one month ago when the 34-year old veteran was injured by a stray hockey stick. Struck accidently in the right eye, Menard was to learn after two weeks of hospitalization that all attempts to save the sight had failed.

Minnie expects to leave Belleville General Hospital any day now. A TV-parts wholesaler with a wife and three children, he hopes to get back into the swing of things as quickly as possible.

But as he remarked to this writer during a recent visit: "It's going to take a while to get used to not playing hockey after all these years."

He won't forget the thrills of a 50-goal season here: of being a member of Allan Cup and World championship teams: of hundreds of games, some good and some bad — but most of all the pure excitement of being "a part of the team."

Current and former teammates and opponents of Minnie's are hoping to give him one more night to remember here, on Friday, March 22.

Headed by Mo-Hawk coach Floyd Crawford and team captain Lionel Botly, a growing group of local men and women are working diligently toward making the "Minnie Menard Benefit Game" something a little special

Naturally the main idea is to raise as much money as possible to assist the handicapped player.

And if the early response is any indication, the entire affair will be a roaring success.

For years some local sportsmen have knocked the idea about of bringing back as many players as possible from the haydays of 1957-'58-'59 for an exhibition match here.

Ike Hildebrand, one of the most popular players and coaches of that period, tossed the idea back at the local organizers of the Menard benefit here last week — and they grabbed it.

Plans call for an all-out effort to bring back as many of Minnie's teammates as possible, as well as some of the better-known opponents from the arch-rival Whitby Dunlops, for a March 22 battle against the Mo-Hawks.

Hildebrand, now coach of the Junior "A" Oshawa Generals, hopes to have such names as "Bep" Guidolin, Jean-Paul Payette, Jean-Paul Lamirande, Gordie Bell, Keith MacDonald, Bobby Attersley, Fred Etcher, Al Dewsbury, Willie Menard, Don "Turk" Barclay, Keith Montgomery, George "Goose" Gosselin, Flori Goegan, Pete Conacher, Billy Graham, Denny Boucher, "Bobo" Bobonic, Real Larouche, Lou Smrke, Rene St. Hilaire, Lionel Botly, Dave Jones, "Weiner" Brown, Eddie Marineau, big Joe Lepine, plus Mo-Hawks of last year, including Gary Darling, Rick Bradford, Gary Gresdahl and Steve Rexe.

There are others, some who won't be able to make it, at least not to play, such as the popular "Moe" Benoit, who is out of action with a compound leg fracture this winter, NHLer's "Red" Berenson, Gerry Goyer, Billy Reay, etc.

"We won't, of course, be able to get all these fellows here but many of them were at the sports dinner in Picton last spring and they were anxious then to play such a game.

"Now, with the proceeds going for one of their old buddies, we are sure as many will come as is possible," Botly said Sunday.

"Everyone we have spoken to in regard to helping with tickets, advertising, prizes and so on has promised to help out," Crawford claims, "and we are sending out tickets to nearly every hockey club in the country, both pro and amateur. Minnie has been around so long and has played either with or against somebody or nearly every club at one time or other, that we look for good results here."

City and district businessmen, merchants, industries, etc. are helping out with prizes, (and the list will be long) donations for advertising, etc.; other senior "A" clubs have offered to help any way possible.

Outlets are being established for ticket sales in all the surrounding areas: former Mac boosters and other workers are co-operating to the fullest. The price of a ticket is $1.50 and as Lionel Botly says: "We are keeping a tight set of books to account for every cent."

"We have about three weeks to round out the plans — and to sell tickets," he added, "and we hope the fans will give us their full support."

Remember that date: Friday, March 22.

Canada; Red Carpet Out For Nancy

MONTREAL (CP) — Nancy Greene, Canada's queen of the ski slopes, and the national ski team head for Ottawa today following a tumultuous welcome here on their return to Canada.

About 1,500 persons gave Miss Greene a hero's welcome as she and other members of the team arrived by plane Monday from Europe.

A motorcyle escort acompanied Miss Greene to city hall and a welcome from Mayor Jean Drapeau.

The ski team was scheduled to arrive by bus in Ottawa at noon today and immediately will attend a fitness council reception and luncheon at the Chateau Laurier hotel.

Miss Greene, of Rossland, B.C., will be made an honorary citizen at city hall and will give a skiing demonstration tonight at Carlington Park.

After more skiing Wednesday at Mont Habitant and a civic luncheon in Toronto Thursday, she will leave for Western Canada March 4.

Placards bearing slogans such as "Hi Tiger!" "Magnifique!" "Congratulations Tiger, from your fans in Nova Scotia" and "Dorval Island awaits your return" waved above the heads of those on hand for the occasion.

"It's fantastic, and I'm so happy to be back in Canada," Miss Greene said. "On ocasion like this, I don't know where to start, because I owe so much to so many people. I've had hundreds of telegrams from all over Canada congratulating me."

Sen. Jean-Paul Deschatelets, representing the federal government, told the crowd "all the superlatives have already been said about Nancy."

There should be some sort of national recognition by Canada of Nancy's feats, the senator added.

Ont. Women's Curling

Trenton Rink Beaten!

TORONTO (CP) — There were some close games in the first round of the southern Ontario women's curling championship Monday, but only one game needed an extra end to decide the winner.

The Fenelon Falls' rink skipped by Mrs. Mell Bell scored in the extra end to defeat Patricia Staples' rink from Hanover, 9-8.

In other afternoon action, Mrs. Lee Scott skipped Toronto Scarborough to a 10-5 decision over the June Boyd rink from Tillsonburg. Heather White led Burlington to a 12-5 win over Marion McIsaac's rink from Parry Sound.

In morning play, Orillia, one down, scored on the ninth and went on to steal the 10th end for a 10-9 victory over Kate Serviss' Galt rink. Orillia skip is Helen Varley.

Alice Bell's Windsor rink defeated Helen Lord's Trenton foursome 8-6 in a close game, and Doris Taylor's Uxbridge rink conceded victory to Helen Shyplik's St. Catharines rink on the ninth end at 12-5.

South Africa Swimming

Canadians Disqualified

BLOEMFONTEIN (CP) — Canadians finished third and fifth in the women's 200-metre freestyle event which Karen Muir won Monday night at the South African national swimming championships.

Fellow South African Katinka Germishius finished second behind Miss Muir. Marion Lay, a Canadian living in Los Angeles, placed third and Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., finished fifth.

Miss Germishius was timed in 2:18.1, Miss Lay in 2:18.9 and Miss Coughlan in 2:19.8.

The Canadian women's team placed first in the 4-by-100-metre medley relay, but was disqualified and a South African team was declared the winner.

The Canadians were timed in 4:55.8 and the South Africans in 4:59.8.

Not So Much On Sunday!

ATLANTA (AP)—Commissioner Pete Rozelle says he would like to see less "Sunday exposure" for professional football on television for the game and more Monday night action.

"Whether we can crack Monday night and whether they will pass by their regular programs, I don't know," he told reporters Monday, "but they're turning to an awful lot of movies now."

He said more television sets would be on Monday night and a bigger percentage of viewers would not be football fans, which he said "might make more fans."

Income from television may have "peaked," Rozelle said during a news conference after a civil club address. He said National Football League clubs now get about $1,200,000 each in television income while American League teams pull about $850,000 each.

Celtics Defeat San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Boston's Bill Russell sparked the Celtics to a 118-110 victory over San Diego Rockets in National Basketball Association action Monday night.

Russell scored 14 points and pulled down nine rebounds in the third period as the Celtics broke open a tight game.

Bailey Howell led Boston with 28 points and Dave Gambee had 25 for San Diego.

Name Hoop All-Star Team

OTTAWA (CP) — Centre John McAulife of Montreal's Loyola Wariors was selected by eight coaches to the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Intercollegiate Athletic Association's all-star basketball squad.

The first-line unit, announced Monday night, was rounded out with forwards Richie Campoli, a freshman at Sir George Williams University, Montreal, and Peter Munzar of Bishop's University, Lennoxville, Que.

Rounding out the first-string squad were guards Pat Stewart of Carleton University, Ottawa, and Winston Ingalls of Macdonald College.

College Scoring Champion

London, ont. (CP) — A seven-point scoring splurge in his final game against Laval gave Terry Cooke of the University of Waterloo the scoring crown in Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association intercollegiate hockey series.

Cooke picked up five goals, the most by a player in a league game this season, and two assists in the Warriors' 10-6 victory over Laval to give him 40 points for the season. He had 25 goals, the most by any player in the league, and 15 assists.

Right on Cooke's heels was teammate Ron Smith who scored 39 points, including 18 goals and 21 assists.

Three University of Toronto players, Paul Laurent, Bob McClelland and Murray Stroud, wound up in a three-way tie for third place with 34 points each. Stroud's 24 assists was tops in the league.

John Wrigley of Toronto finished as the leading goaltender allowing 36 goals in 16 games for a 2.25 average. He had two shutouts.

With The Trotters

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Leading Victory won the featured one-mile trot Monday before 4,469 harness racing fans at Windsor Raceway.

In winning her first race in eight outings this year, the winner paid $16.80, $5.40 and $3.60.

TORONTO (CP) — Cape Kaola, owned by Don Booth of Ottawa, beat five rivals in the second race Monday to complete a $140.50 daily double at Greenwood Raceway.

The sixth race exactor paid $23.20.

Summer Olympics

Russians May Join Boycott!

LONDON (AP) — Thirty-two African countries have pulled out of the Summer Olympics in Mexico City next fall and the big question now is whether the Russians will withdraw as well.

The Supreme Council for Sports in Africa met in Brazzaville, The Congo, and voted Monday to withdraw from the Olympics because of South Africa's re-admission to the competition, scheduled for Oct. 12-27.

In Moscow Monday, the Soviet Olympic Committee said it had not yet decided whether Russia would compete. The Soviets have criticized the International Olympic Committee's decision to allow South Africa in the Games.

South Africa has agreed to send an integrated team to Mexico City, but will not alter its policy against mixed sports events within the highly segregated country.

Russia normally sends a large contingent to the Olympics and the country now must decide between the prestige of a flock of gold medals and the compromise of its principles against South Africa's racial policies.

In Johannesburg, Frank Braun, president of the South African National Olympic Committee, said he thought it extremely unlikely that Russia will boycott the games.

"I just can't see the Russians pulling out and leaving all the gold medals to the Americans."

It is possible that some Eastern European countries would also boycott the Games if Russia led the way.

Before the Brazzaville conference, 16 countries, most of them in Africa, had voted individually to withdraw from the Games.

Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, said here that no matter how many countries pulled out of the Games, they would be held as scheduled.

"Papa Bear" Gives Warning to Cubs!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stu Miller is no lawbreaker. He knows the rules of the game and he's willing to live by them.

Happy about them he's not, but willing to live by them he is.

Miller's slow stuff was no mystery to American League batters last season and the result was a 3-10 record—the poorest the 10-year-old Baltimore Orioles' reliver has had in 19 years of professional baseball.

It will show in his paycheques this season.

"I expected a pay cut," said Miller, who was sliced from $40,000.

"What else, after the year I had? It's the law of the jungle. Win and you are rewarded. Lose and they cut your salary."

But lose at Millers age and sometimes teams cut more than your salary. Sometimes they cut you. Miller knows that and showed up at the Baltimore training camp weighing a trim 172 pounds, 10 under his playing weight. He went through his first workout Monday.

Meanwhile, Leo Durocher let his Chicago Cubs know they'd be in for it if he found it necessary to fine them this year.

"Just remember, fellows," Durocher told the Cubs at their first clubhouse meeting, "when I take hour money for breaking rules, I don't start at $25. It's more likely to be $200 for a starter."

New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians came up with a couple of starters of their own. New York signed southpaw Al Downing, 14-10 last season, to a 1968 contract and Cleveland added right-hander Sonny Siebert, 10-12, in 1967.

Downing got a reported $9,000 raise to $31,000 and Siebert moved into the $40,000 neighborhood.

Pitcher Jim Maloney, seeking a $15,000 boost to $75,000, is one of five Cincinnati regulars still not signed. Others are pitcher Mel Queen, second baseman Tommy Helms and outfielders Vada Pinson and Pete Rose.

Junior A Scoring

Flyer Has 10-Point Lead

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — With two weeks left in the regular schedule, right winger Tom Webster of Niagara Falls Flyers is continuing his bid to win the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring championship before turning pro next season with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Flyers played only one game last week, losing 7-6 to first-place Kitchener Rangers. But Webster scored three times to push his goal total ti 48 and take a 10-point lead over team-mate Gary Swain.

Webster now has 106 points with five games left to play. Swain has 96. Webster has 58 assists to go with his 48 goals while Swain has 37 goals and a pace-setting 59 assists.

Twenty points back of Webster in third place is Toronto's Richie Bayes, who has five games remaining to improve on his output of 37 goals and 49 assists for 86 points.

For the fourth time since Christmas, the netminding leadership has changed hands with Kitchener's Dave Hainsworth now holding a 2.96 average to 2.98 for Hamilton's Gerry Gray.

Rangers' Hot Rod Crowding Hull, Mikita for Top-Spot Berth

ROD GILBERT

MONTREAL (CP) — Stan Mikita, Chicago Black Hawks centre, still leads the National Hockey League's individual scoring race today by one point over team-mate Bobby Hull, but right winger Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers now is threatening the Chicago sharpshooters.

Gilbert, scoring the most goals by a player in a road game in six seasons, has zoomed to within two points of Mikita.

A week ago the Chicago pair appeared to have the race sewed up between them. Mikita, then also a point ahead of Hull, was eight points up on Gilbert.

But the Ranger player produced seven points last week including four goals and an assist in Rangers 6-1 thumping of league-leading Montreal Canadians here Saturday night.

The last time a player scored four goals on the road was Feb. 1, 1962, when Hull did it against the then-Detroit goaltender, Terry Sawchuk, in a 7-4 Chicago Victory.

Mikita and Hull were held to one goal each in Chicago's two games last week. That leaves Mikita with 71 points, including 35 goals, and Hull with 70 points, including a league-leading 41 goals.

Gilbert and linemate Jean Ratelle, who has been almost as hot as Gilbert in the last two weeks, lead in assists with 41 each. In over-all points, Ratelle is fourth in the standings with 66.

Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings is fifth with 63 points, followed by Phil Esposito of Boston with 62 and Ken Wharram of Chicago and Detroit's Alex Delvecchio with 58 each.

Right winger Andy Bathgate of Pittsburgh Penguins added a point to his total last week to maintain the lead among West Division scorers. He is 15th in the over-all race with 48 points, including 19 goals.

The leading goal-scorer on the expansion teams is Wayne Connelly of Minnesota North Stars with 27.

Lorne Worsley and Rogatien Vachon of Montreal lead the goaltenders' race with a combined goals-against average of 2.14 and Worsley is the individual leader with a 1.98 average.

Don Awrey of Boston took over the lead in penalties with 118 minutes and the Bruins continue to lead the team totals with 835 minutes in 60 games.

Leafs' Pair Make Strong Bid!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's difficult to judge the merits of a goaltender when he has a winning hockey club ahead of him. It isn't so difficult when he is stationed behind Toronto Maple Leafs.

As the defending Stanley Cup champion Leafs appear headed nowhere in their bid for a post-season playoff position Bruce Gamble and Johnny Bower are making a serious bid for top goaltending honors in the National Hockey League.

Gamble and Bower have the second best goals-against average in the league, while the Leafs stand nine points out of the fourth and last playoff spot in the Eastern Division with 16 games to play.

Bower, the 44-year-old sensation, has a respectable 2.31 goals-against average, while Gamble is 2.27. Their combined average is 2.36, second only to Gump Worsley and Rogatien Vachon of Montreal Canadiens at 2.14.

The Toronto goalies could win the prized Vezina Trophy as the league's best goaltenders even though Leafs finish out of the playoffs.

It's just another one of the lopsided statistics that crowd the NHL during its first season of expansion to 12 clubs from the original six.

Detroit Red Wings, for instance, have scored the second highest number of goals—192—in the league although they are currently trailing the Eastern Division, five points behind Toronto and 14 behind fourth-place Boston Bruins.

And in the Western Division, only Philadelphia Flyers have a won-loss record with more victories—26-24. The Flyers are also the only club in the West that have a better goals-scored total than goals-against—145 to 141.

The game is a key one for both clubs with the Bruins hoping to solidify their fourth-place standing and the Penguins hoping to climb past St. Louis Blues into fourth place in the West.

Esposito, traded to Boston by Chicago in the off season, is sixth in the over-all scoring race with 62 points. Mikita has 71 points, while Hull follows with 70, including 41 goals.

Battle for Men's Title!

GENEVA (CP-AP) — The world figure skating championships opened here today with the battle for the men's individual title—the only event where the Olympic winner won't be competing.

Wolfgang Schwarz, Austrian gold medal winner at Grenoble just two weeks ago, has turned professional.

So it looks to be a keen struggle between U.S. silver medallist Timothy Wood and defending world champion Emmerich Danzer of Austria.

Danzer appeared headed for the Olympic gold medal at Grenoble but suddenly cracked up during the compulsory figures. Despite a brilliant free skating display, he was too far behind to get a medal and finished fourth.

His coach blamed an attack of nerves for the surprise failure. The 23-year-old Austrian star should feel more relaxed in Geneva's cosy little indoor ice stadium and is widely tipped to regain his title.

French teen-ager Patrick Pera, the surprise of the Olympics, will be all out to prove his bronze medal was no flash in the pan.

Jay Humphry of Vancouver and Toronto, who many observers felt should have got a higher placing than seventh in the Olympics, and David McGillivray, Toronto, are Canada's entries in the men's singles.

The other events seem likely to run to Olympic form. Peggy Fleming, U.S. ice queen, is the world title holder and is almost certain to keep it after her unrivalled Olympic display.

No one can seriously challenge the Soviet husband-and-wife team of Oleg Protopopov and Ludmilla Beloussova in the pairs. They have been world champions for five years and twice Olympic gold medal winners.

The Funny Side of Sports

NEW YORK (AP) — Laughing at Sports:

Wilt Chamberlain scored his 25,000th point in pro basketball. Just goes to show what hard work, concentration and being 7-foot-1 can do.

Big league baseball players gained a $10,000 minimum salary . . . and they got it even before the first strike was called.

The management of the new Madison Square Garden is really getting concerned about spectators' visibility. Before each event now, the Garden organist asks musically, "Oh, say can you see? . . ."

I watched so many sports events on television the last weekend, I woke up Monday morning with pulled eyeballs.

A friend of mine, a sweet guy, turned the channel selector so much he developed a bad case of dialetes.

Wonder how the new Washington manager Jim Lemon will make out in the Grapefruit League.

They've got a big one going next week involving Frazier, Mathis, Griffith and Benvenuti. Isn't it a little early, though for the first doubleheader?

Massachusetts and New York will recognize either Frazier or Mathis as the champion. Maine and Vermont still favor Alf Landon.

Sandy Koufax predicts he'll improve as a sports broadcaster this year. Hasn't he heard about the sophomore jinx?

You don't hear much these days about the six-day bike races. Must be because we're on a five-day week.

Boston's star outfielder predicts another pennant for the Red Sox. He seems to be giving out with the same old Yaz.

It doesn't add up. Pro football has one commissioner for two leagues. Pro soccer has two commissioners for one league.

Vinegar Bend Mizell, the old pitcher, is going to run for elective office. Should add some spice to the campaign.

Big league clubs have scheduled 17 games for Memorial Day. What's baseball trying to do . . . horn in on hockey's Stanley Cup playoffs?

African nations insist they won't participate in the Summer Olympics. Wonder whether they're Ghana change their minds.

Comets Meet Crazy Legs In NE Finals

The Comets made their way to the Northern Electric Hockey League finals with a walloping 9-1 victory over the Bear Cats in their semi-final contest Sunday.

T. Ford paced the Comets with a four-goal performance. R. Smith picked up two goals and an assist, and M. Pukencik two goals. A. Jones scored the other Comet goal and assisted on four. S. Bazuk had two assists and T. Casselman one.

H. Wardaugh scored the lone Bear Cat goal, with C. Brailey assisting.

The Comets will now meet the Crazy Legs for the league championship.

Saskatchewan Grabs Early Lead!

WINNIPEG (CP) — Skip Barbara MacNevin and her Saskatchewan curlers from Delisle gave two rinks an important lesson in the finer arts of curling Monday—strike early.

Mrs. MacNevin parlayed her quick starts into run away victories to take an early lead after the first two rounds of the 10-rink round robin Canadian women's curling championship.

Eight other rinks were tied for second place with 1-1 won lost victories, while the Ontario representative, skipped by Peggy Wherrett of Dryden, was winless after its first two games.

The eight provincial representatives with 1-1 records were skipped by Hazel Jamison of Edmonton, Mabel Mitchell of Brandon, Man., Myrtle Fashoway of Cranbrook, B.C., Peggie Bradshaw of Hudson Heights, Que., Barbara Likely of Saint John, N.B., Shirley Robertson of Halifax, Gladys Carruthers of Charlottetown and Jeannette Blair of St. John's, Nfld.

Saskatchewan was scheduled to meet Nova Scotia in the third round at 9:30 a.m. CST today, while B.C. played P.E.I., Alberta met New Brunswick, Manitoba played Newfoundland, and Quebec met Ontario.

Mrs. MacNevin grabbed a 2-0 lead in the opening end against Newfoundland, increased it to 4-0 after four ends and went on to a 10-3 victory in the opening round.

Then, the Saskatchewan foursome leaped to a 4-1 lead after three ends and went on to a 9-4 victory in the second round against B.C.

In other first round play, in which only one game went the regulation 10-ends, Nova Scotia forced an extra end against Alberta by stealing two in the tenth before going down 10-9. New Brunswick downed Quebec 9-2. British Columbia bombed Ontario 13-4 and Manitoba walloped Prince Edward Island 12-4.

Schools Seek New Entry

KINGSTON (CP) — The University of Ottawa and Carleton University Monday dropped out of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Athletic Association and applied for membership in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association.

The two universities hope to play in the O-QAA during the next season.

Bob Pelletier, director of athletics at Ottawa, and Keith Harris of Carleton said both schools have grown too large to continue playing in the Ottawa-St. Lawrence association.

Bantams Make Good Showing At Cornwall

The Belleville Bantam Kinsmen went to the Cornwall International Invitational Hockey Tournament this weekend and made a good showing before bowing out.

In their first tilt, the Kinsmen blanked Athens 2-0, with Roger LaMorre in the nets for the shutout. Danny Lupinette and Cliff Janitsch scored for Belleville. Peter Ackerman, Mike Burley and Rick Meagher picked up assists.

The Kinsmen were due to play Renfrew but the Rochester squad was snowed in, so Renfrew played Brampton and went on to take the "B" championship.

The Belleville squad drew Arnprior and lost a 3-1 decision. McIntyre, Woermke and O'Neil scored for Arnprior. Doug James got the lone Belleville goal, Rick Meagher and Cliff Janitsch assisting.

Arnprior went on to win the "A" championship of the tournament, indicating that the Belleville squad by no means disgraced itself in the tournament, and especially Rick Meagher, who was named to the tournament All-Star team.

Juvenile Hockey

Melrose defeated Aces 4-1 and Tigers turned back the OSD 6-3 in BMHA juvenile play last night.

Melrose divided its four goals, R. Ritz, B. Jarrell, B. Beecher and W. Allen doing the scoring. B. Preston, E. Lazier, D. Beecher and Allen drew assists.

M. Acquafredda scored for the Aces, assisted by T. Sullivan.

G. Sero and W. Garland each scored twice for the Tigers, J. Kerns and B. Morrison also counting.

Sero and T. Ford each had two assists with Morrison, Garland, D. Holdcroft and D. Devena getting singles.

R. Lang scored all three goals for the OSD with assists going to L. Sicoli, J. Synder and T. Manketlow.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE

$18,500. is the full asking price for a beautiful family sized bungalow which leaves nothing to the desired? It's true. This custom built home features most attractive panelling throughout, living room with cathedral ceiling and natural fireplace, large modern kitchen with adjoining dining room, 4-pc. tiled bath with vanity, 3 bedrooms, an abundance of closets, recreation room carport and all this is situated on a fully landscaped lot in lovely residential section of west end.

KNOCK, KNOCK, WHO'S THERE?

I am — a very large two storey home that just needs a little loving care. Although I'm getting on in years I still have a great deal to offer — like 4 bedrooms, separate dining room, den, sunporch and tree shaded garden. It hurts a bit to think my owner is only asking $13,500 for me — with a low down payment too!

Island Lifts Three Feet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska's Montague Island cracked and lifted as much as three feet out of the ocean during the disastrous 1964 earthquake, the U.S. Geological Survey reports.

The spectacular uplift left the island in Prince William Sound as much as 1,000 feet of new beach deeply cut with streams the survey said in its latest report on effects of the earthquake.

"It was fortunate indeed that Montague was uninhabited on that fateful day," geologist George Plafker said in the report.

The island cracked and lifted on one fault line the full 22-mile length of the cigar-shaped island, Plafker said. Another fault line was traced four miles.

The greatest uplift—37.8 feet—was measured near the Pattan Bay fault on the island's southwest corner and portions of nearby seafloor may have lifted as much as 50 feet, Plafker said.

Salty Taste Can Have Varied Causes

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you suggest what might be the cause and cure of an overwhelmingly salty taste in my mouth? It is very unpleasant and nauseating. — M. M. M.

This is a farily common complaint, and the solution to it sometimes is very simple. Other times not.

One explanation involves folks who sleep with their mouths open. Saliva tends to concentrate by drying, and after a night's sleep the salt content can be high enough to be unpleasant.

Medications also can produce this taste, those containing iron, iodine or quinine among them.

Toothpaste, or perhaps more commonly some material for cleaning or holding dental plates in place, can be responsible.

Smoking can, in some people, produce this symptom.

Therefore my suggestions are to check (1) your sleeping habits; (2) your medicinal intake; (3) mouth hygiene.

If none of these begins to lead you toward relief from the trouble, see your physician, since this salty taste can be due to a nerve disorder, although that is rare.

It may be that your dentist can help you, if he detects any fault in the mouth or teeth.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been having such cramps in my legs and feet that I can't sleep. My doctor said to wear support hose, but I still couldn't stand it. I was also told to take calcium but I still have this trouble. I am heavy and can't lose weight due to a very nervous condition and diabetes. I am afraid to go to bed because of these cramps. — Mrs. C. E. P.

My booklet, How To Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains should help you. There are several methods of combatting this trouble, and often a combination of the methods will succeed when a single one does not.

I urge you to get hold of that "nervous condition," and stick to a diet, because it is of utmost importance in controlling your diabetes. Getting your weight down should also have a considerable effect on your cramps — quite in addition to the methods described in the booklet. To obtain the booklet send 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope plus six cents for postage to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: You wrote that "appropriate exercise" was one of the parts of treatment for osteoporosis. Just what would you consider the "appropriate exercise"? — Mrs. R. R.

You misunderstood me. I wasn't talking about some special type of exercise.

Exercise in general is one of the necessities in building strong bones. Osteoporosis is a softening or weakening of the bones because of loss of calcium. Therefore exercise helps restore strength.

Walking, washing the dishes, light gardening — whatever kind of exercise will help. But by choosing "appropriate" exercise, I mean exercise and effort within the capabilities of the patient.

What would be "appropriate" for a mild case might be entirely too strenuous for a severe case. Hence there is no way I can give you a general rule. Get exercise within whatever limits your doctor and your own common sense dictates. Exercise. Don't think that just rest will correct the problem.

• • •

Note to M.B.: Being morbidly depressed is part of the ailment we know as "depression," and I would suggest that your husband see his doctor. Modern medication is helping a good many of these cases. If it is too severe, better consult a psychiatrist.

Clark Gable Box Office Star Seven Years After His Death

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Seven years after his death, Clark Gable continues to be a box-office star.

If you have any doubts, just consult the latest grosses for Gone with the Wind, which is earning more money than during its first release in 1939.

A whole new generation is discovering the masculine charm of the man who was king of the movie world for 25 years.

March 5, NBC will observe the growing Gable cult with a special called Dear Mr. Gable. The title is from the love letter Judy Garland wailed to her favorite star when she was an adoring teen-ager. The man who produced and wrote the special is documentary expert Nicolas Noxon, 31, who was unborn when Gable became a top star by winning the Oscar for It Happened One Night.

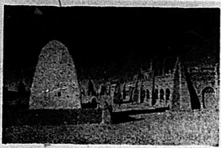
Noxon, maker of such Wolper productions as Biography, H·l-lywood and the Stars and Men in Crisis, created Dear Mr. Gable for MGM's new documentary department.

"For five months I have lived with Clark Gable; I've even had him in my dreams," said Noxon. "I found him to be a simple straightforward guy, and that is the same treatment I tried to give to the documentary about him.

"There is nothing bad you could say about him. He seems to have been a totally likeable person. Each time he played a role, he was enacting essentially the same character, and that character came very close to being Gable himself.

"People enjoyed seeing that character over and over again, and he became a part of everyone's life. He was a piece of folklore, like Dick Tracy. My main purpose in the documentary was to try to determine why so many disparate people liked him so much."

Noxon had access to the MGM films with Gable, and he viewed them all. The special includes full scenes from 10 of the features, plus 40 brief shots. For the first time on television two scenes from Gone with the Wind will be shown—the encounter between Rhett Butler and Scarlet O'Hara at the Atlanta charity bazaar, and the angry exchange late in their marriage.



'Timbuktu and Beyond' Next in Travel Series

"Timbuktu and Beyond" (Africa), by Romain Wilhelmsen of East Lansing, Michigan, is next in the Travel and Adventure Series sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville to be held this Thursday evening at 8:15 p.m., in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium.

Mr. Wilhelmsen attended St. Joseph's College in Indiana, and is a graduate of the Pasadena Playhouse, California — training school for the stage. He started his film lecture career in 1953, and, to date, has completed seven lecture films. It is estimated he has appeared, in person, before more than 2,000 audiences. He has enjoyed two successful seasons on Broadway.

The film to be shown begins in deepest Africa, west of the Mountains of the Moon and last of the old slave pens of Dakarat is the ancient city of Timbuktu, as remote as Tibet, and as legendary as Carthage to the north. A thousand years ago this city was one of the two most important cities of inner Africa; yet today there is a majority of people who believe there is no such place.

JACKIE WARNER

Broadway in Belleville

The World Stops Here

The first touring Broadway show to hit the Quinte district in years does exactly that March 7.

And it's a proven hit!

Here for a one-night stand is Anthony Newley's "Stop the World — I Want to Get Off," still playing to enthusiastic road crowds years after its debut as a revolutionary musical.

The show's fascination still glitters for audiences. So much so, it's difficult to appreciate it had its debut more than seven years ago.

Part of its perpetual appeal undoubtedly is built into its score.

Such melodies as "What Kind of Fool Am I", "Gonna Build a Mountain," and "Once in a Lifetime" still retain a haunting quality despite rapidly-changing musical tastes.

And rapid change is one of the show's themes.

Stop the World is the story of the seven season's of man's life from birth to old age.

In perspective, the cycle moves at a feverish pace.

But slowing it down for audience appreciation is achieved by the simplicity of production.

The cast is trimmed to a one-man lead with supporting actors and the scene centres around a circus ring.

The economy of style is one of the many attributes which gave the show its impact — and turned it into a trans-Atlantic smash hit.

Playing the role here originally created for himself by Newley will be show-business veteran Jackie Warner.

Warner understudied Newley in the Broadway production after he already was an established stage personality. His stage career includes roles in such hits as Damn Yankees, Bells are Ringing, Wish You Were Here and Irma La Douce.

The show's presentation here briefly revives a colorful era in Belleville's past.

The city was once a scheduled stopover for the great theatrical touring companies; its enthusiasm was a byword among tour managers.

For the event, the city once more has to thank the Belleville Theatre Guild, sponsors of Stop the World's latest scheduled stop.

Tickets are now on sale at Thomas' Cigar Store, and Tripp's of Trenton.

Chamber Orchestra Performs in City

By EUGENE LANG

The second of the season's Community Concert presentatioss was the first appearance in Belleville of the famed Munich Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Hans Stadlmair. Founded in 1950 and subsidized by its native city, this group of 17 artists has toured over much of Europe as well as South and North America in recent years. In its home city it plays to sold out houses at every performance.

Made up of five first violins, four second violins, 3 violas, 3 cellos and one double bass with harpsichord continuo when required, the orchestra is one of what one might call first desk calibre throughout, with everyone ranking as soloists.

Four numbers were given, three of eighteenth century vintage and one modern. Pergolesi's Concertino No. 3 in A Major was handled in a smooth styling with the flowing melodic line in ripieno tacitly balanced over the orchestral tuttis that vied for attention. The gigue-like finale was given with entracing fluidity of tone and preciseness in every detail.

Mozart's Divertimento K. 159 (in reality a string quartet) was brought forth with a soulful and pensive reading of the opening movement, with stately leanings in the minuet and a sprightly tongue in cheek setting to the final rondo. Sonorous balance was highly artistic in this work and an intimate feeling attained in the tonal perspective.

Mr. Stadlmair was represented also as composer, besides being the conductor of this fine string orchestra, but in this line of musical endeavor we were left in doubt. His Concerto for Violin and Strings written in 1961 was programmed with David Lukas as soloist in the tricky and toruous violin part.

Nothwithstanding what we must call a highly integrated rendition by both soloist and orchestra the concerto was not one that could be called endearing in melody or enduring in appeal. It was a meandering piece in which the solo part wobbled and wriggled with cacophonious splashes that brought forth screams of burning-at-the-stake horror. At times the orchestra tried to cajole the soloist only to be cursed at with vehement vindictiveness as the violin spit out its expletives.

There were certain touches of fellow Munich composer Richard Strauss that intruded now and then into this piece that was so aptly described as 'not derived from any existing models'. The cadenza was cruelly difficult both in technique which Mr. David hurdled with apparent ease, and aural assimilation as ears searched out for some sort of logical message such as radar scans the heavens for a communication that has so far not arrived — or if it has, cannot be comprehended.

Sir Thomas Beecham once described some of the avant garde in modern music in his dour and sour way when he told the orchestra that as long as they start and finish together he really didn't care what they did in between. And that is what we had last night. Viruosity — yes. Appeal — ?

To conclude the concert violinists David Lukas and Mladen Dean gave a sterling performance of the famous Double Violin Concerto in D Minor by J. S. Bach, one of the milestones of all works for the violin. The bold fugal first movement was given a strong masculine reading that contrasted decidedly with the sinuous bowing in the radiant beauty of the canon-like theme of the slow section.

The two soloists outshone themselves in their forceful playing of the dynamic finale that tossed the fugal statement back and forth from one to the other with bravado and briskness. The orchestra gave a most sensitive shading to the soloists in this sublime composition, with harpsichord adding a dash of spice as it did in the opening Pergolesi number.

Mr. Stadlmair has a fine orchestra under his command and the players are equalled by a knowing man on the podium — he knew what he wanted and he received the best from one and all under his helm. This was a serious program with no coddling at all to taste of audience. This can be to the benefit of everyone as all our presentations cannot at every time be just a skimping of dessert and no solid main course.

One afterthought — the conducter or some member of the orchestra should have let the listeners know that they were not listening to what was on the printed program — this is in reference to the last item. Or, we wonder, would it really have made any difference?

Members of the orchestra and the executive of the association were entertained at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Demeza, Ontario School for the Deaf, following the concert.

Lucille, Danny and Carol Provide 3 Splendid Shows

NEW YORK (AP)—There was nostalgia all over the television screen Monday night. Lucy was working with Viv again. Danny was reminiscing about the old days when he was poor and struggling. Carol returned to that wonderful year with Garry and Durward.

It all added up to a pleasant, lighthearted evening of entertainment.

Lucille Ball has, of course, ratings to prove that she doesn't need much more than a wisp of an idea to turn out a popular comedy show. But when she is working with her old colleague, Vivian Vance, a fine comedienne, things work out smoothly.

Monday night's CBS show had Lucy and Vivian meeting Joan Crawford and mistakenly believing that she is broke. They organize a benefit for her—and this of course gives everybody a chance to dress up and clown. Miss Crawford seemed a bit cautious during this rare opportunity to play for laughs but did nicely—and also did a few steps of the Charleston, the dance that started her off to film stardom in Our Dancing Daughters years ago.

Danny Thomas's weekly NBC hour was a tape of his nightclub act, a one-man show. His routines were a typical Thomas mixture of comedy, anecdote, sermonizing and song.

It was interesting to see Thomas in a nightclub background, and it was a welcome change of pace from the usual variety show format. He is a persuasive performer, puts over a song effectively, and is at his best when doing gentle, funny stories in an assortment of accents.

Highlights of The Carol Burnett Show on CBS was her reunion with Garry Moore and Durward Kirby and a revival of one of the most popular features of the old Garry Moore Show. They chose the year 1937, which gave them a chance to kid the opulent production numbers of the movies, sing some good old songs and to toss in a sketch about the husband-and-wife talk teams of radio days.

Recommended tonight: The Red Skelton Hour, 8:30-9:30 EST, an all-pantomime one-man show, taped in New York before a UN audience.

Louisiana's Million Acadians Want French-Canadian Links

BATON ROUGE, La. (CP)-Louisiana's 1,000,000 residents of Acadian descent should have cultural programs with New Brunswick and Quebec and the opportunity to learn French in school "as a matter of course."

"We in Acadiana want state officials—all agencies—to get involved in this vital work of preserving and utiliing our French language and heritage," former U.S. congressman James Domengeaux recently told the Louisiana Association of Fairs and Festivals.

"By preserving and utiliing the French language we serve America. We can provide diplomats, soldiers, international businessmen, technical assistance experts—all prepared to serve America's needs throughout the world where ever French is spoken."

Tourism is another lucrative reason for preservation of the French tongue, Domengeaux says.

He is bona fide Acadian—descendent of the French settlers uprooted by the British from Nova Scotia and dispatched to Louisiana in the 18th century. Domengeaux is a common Acadian name. A lawyer in Lafayette, La., he is a Roman Catholic who served in three congresses before retiring in 1948.

"There are more Acadians in Louisiana than in the entire Acadian part of Canada," says Domengeaux, yet New Brunswick has 70,000 of its 160 000 students in bilingual schools and even Ontario is moving in that direction

"French should be available from Grade 1 onward throughout Louisiana. Perhaps that is asking too much since it would require about 200 new teachers with annual salaries of about $1,200,000.

"In Acadiana however, French should be scheduled into the regular curriculum as a matter of course. Every child should have the opportunity to start French at the first grade, for at least half an hour per day."

North American French is "probably at its best and certainly strongest in Quebec," says Domengeaux. "Down here in Louisiana, we are a little rusty . . . but our French is potentially good French."

Granting that President Charles de Gaulle "has made France a trifle unpopular these days," he says: "We in Louisiana are not going to give up our language and heritage because of Gen. de Gaulle.

"Without the language it is impossible to preserve the French flavor and character of our state."

The tourist-attraction potential of the Acadian fact was ignored in a recent tourist commission program, Domengeaux charges.

"We believe the French heritage of Louisiana is a great potential attraction for visitors from all parts of the U.S. and particularly French Canada."

But there is no mention in the program of attracting Canadian tourist reporters or of advertising in Canada "and no firm conclusion to the program of cultural agreements with Quebec and New Brunswick which we would like to see in motion."

Canada's Wheat Market In Red Lands Dwindles

WASHINGTON (CP)-Canada has cornered the biggest slice of the Communist market for wheat and flour but U.S. agriculture department figures indicate it is a dwindling asset.

Sales to Communist nations by all sources totalled 400,000,000 bushels in the year ended last June 30 and present indications are that sales will decline again in this current year, says an appraisal.

"Sales to date support this expectation and production in Communist countries is again above average; also it is possible that intra-bloc wheat trade will increase further."

The all-time peak for sales to Communist countries was 765,000,000 bushels in 1965-66 crop year but a four-year low is represented by the 400,000,000-bushel total of the last year.

The record harvest last year in the Soviet Union is a factor as well as above-average yields in eastern Europe, more wheat trade among the bloc members and smaller purchases by China.

Up to early January, says the report, total sales by the West were about 260,000,000 bushels, including 75,000,000 by Canada to the Soviet Union and 78,000,000 to China.

It says no contracts have been arranged by Canada for this year under sales agreements with Poland, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

In the seven-year period ended last June 30, Canada is listed as having sold 1,296,000,000 bushels to Communist nations, 42.4 per cent of the Western share. Australia follows with 644,000,000 bushels, or 21.1 per cent; the U.S. 437,000,000, or 14.3 per cent; France 272,000,000, or 8.9 per cent; Argentina 252,000,000, or 8.3 per cent, and "others" 153,000,000 bushels, or five per cent.

Yugoslavia has been the major recipient of U.S. wheat, followed by Poland. The U.S. sold 65,000,000 bushels to the Soviet Union when its shortages were severe in 1963-64.

Now, however, the U.S. sales of just 18,000,000 bushels in the last year represent only 4.5 of the total, compared with 245,000,000 bushels, or nearly 61 per cent, for Canada last year.

Canada's sales were 54,000,000 bushels in 1960-61 but these peaked in 1965-66 at 335,000,000 bushels. The U.S.S.R. over the seven years has purchased 544,000,000 bushels, China 452,000,000 and Poland, Yugoslavia, East Europe and Cuba the rest.

"Bob" Ragsdale, (right), night operator at the Belleville Water Filtration Plant, checks weight of chlorine in big supply tank prior to retirement after 26 years' service. Looking on is plant superintendent, James Scriven.

Bob Ragsdale, Night Operator At Filtration Plant, Retires

After 26 years of checking the quality of kitchen tap water supplied in Belleville, Mr. Orville B. (Bob) Ragsdale, is retiring as night operator at the Water Filtration plant in West Belleville.

Mr. Ragsdale completes his final 4-12 shift at midnight tonight and already is looking forward to uninterrupted days of fishing next summer.

"I've got my boat and trailer all ready," he says.

Tomorrow, filtration plant superintendent James Scriven and his fellow employees will tender Mr. Ragsdale a retirement party.

Although he has been at the Belleville "pumphouse" for more than a quarter of a century, Mr. Ragsdale has not always been a waterworks employee.

When he left school he worked for a year or so in a bank then became associated with Direct Winters transport, working as a driver for many years and later in the company's garage in Toronto.

Since he became a waterworks employee 26 years ago he has seen the plant's pumping capacity increased from four million gallons per day to the present nine millions and has seen many expansion projects completed.

Included was the recent completion of the plant's new chemical building, construction of underground storage facilities and the elevated tank on the East Hill.

He considers the three most important expansion projects in connection with the plant are the water storage facilities, and the installation of micro strainers which strain out algae growth, thus reducing the amount of filter backwashing necessary.

Car Stopped on Rail Tracks Before Mishap Inquest Told

Ralph James Whiteman sometimes halted his car on the level-crossing near his home, alarming his passengers.

The practice had a tragic ending.

Last night inquest witnesses told how two passengers in the car escaped when a freight train plowed into the Whiteman automobile Feb. 3.

Mr. Whiteman was instantly killed.

"It was brought to my attention (that) on previous occasions Whiteman had stopped on the railroad track and taken (the ignition) keys out to frighten other passengers," OPP Constable W. F. Hawkins told the inquest at the Hastings County Court House.

The day of the accident, said the investigating officer, the Whiteman car was hit by a CPR 88-car freight travelling about 50 miles an hour.

Arthur Sexsmith, 50, and his brother Archie, 40, both testified the dead man had stopped the car on the tracks immediately before the mishap.

Archie Sexsmith said he heard the train whistle first.

"I was scared and I hollered 'There's a train.' "

Arthur Sexsmith said it "just seemed a matter of seconds" before the car halted and his brother yelled in alarm.

Afterward, everything "seemed just blurred."

The three men, the Sexsmiths testified were returning home after buying a 24-bottle case of beer and a 12-oz. bottle of whiskey in Deseronto.

At Marysville, they stopped at the local hotel and had "two beers."

Both insisted they drank no more beer up to the time of the accident — despite persistent questioning by Coroner Dr. D. C. McVicker.

A third brother, Borden Sexsmith, 54, confirmed the deadman's habit of sometimes stopping on the crossing.

Mr. Whiteman would remove the ignition keys and hold them in his hand.

"Would the passengers get scared?" asked acting Crown Attorney Tom Lally.

"I did," said Mr. Sexsmith.

"Would he be drinking when he did this?" queried Mr. Lally.

"Not always, no."

CPR fireman Hugh Cubit, of Smith's Falls agreed the train was about a quarter-mile from the crossing when the car was spotted and he slammed on emergency brakes.

He recalled seeing two figures scramble from the vehicle as the train bore down.

Mr. Cubit said he saw the driver's door open "just at the last second."

"The face of the man in the car looked out at me and his arm moved and the door did open . . . then we made contact."

Engineer Edward Powell, of Smith's Falls, said the train was "pretty well on top" of the car before the two passengers leapt out.

"I thought we were going to kill the three of them, actually," he added.

Dr. L. J. M. Tremblay, provincial pathologist at Belleville General Hospital, said Mr. Whiteman suffered severe head injuries in the impact. Tests showed .22 parts alcohol in the victim's bloodstream.

The pathologist said he had no doubt that driving under such conditions would be impaired.

The jury's verdict cited consumption "of an excessive amount of alcohol" and "stopping on the tracks" as contributing to the victim's death.

Walter Aselstine, Musician Former Garage Owner, Dies

WALTER ASELSTINE

The man who introduced motor transport to Belleville shortly after the turn of the century and an active bandsman and musician for 65 years is dead.

Mr, Walter Aselstine, 27 Grove Street, former Belleville stage coach operator and garage owner, died Tuesday evening in Toronto East General Hospital following a brief illness. He was in his 80th year.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Aselstine, he was born in Trenton but had lived most of his life in Belleville where he moved with his parents when he was about 10 years old.

He vividly recalled the horse drawn Trenton-Belleville stage coach operated by his father and drove the first motor bus operated in the city.

Aselstine's motor buses once ran between the North Station and the Hotel Quinte and the family inaugurated motor buses to Marmora and Tweed following the transition from horse drawn stages.

As a musician Mr. Aselstine had few equals in length of service and had been playing in bands and orchestras since his early teens.

The trombone was his favorite instrument but he still retained a liking for the drums which he played earlier in life.

He was a member of the orchestra at the old Griffin Opera House at Bridge and Church Streets and was the original sound effects man with the introduction of the old "silent" pictures.

He played in the Belleville Municipal Band, the Toronto Kilties Band, Odd Fellows Band, different military bands including the Princess Pats and the Shrine Band in Toronto.

He also played in the Commodores and other dance orchestras in the Belleville area and remembered making four-day trips to Bancroft with horses to play band engagements.

During the heyday of the old lake passenger steamers, he was an orchestra member on excursion boats plying the St. Lawrence River.

He was a charter member of the Belleville Federation of Musicians and recently received a Centennial Medal for his contribution of music.

A former chairman to the Belleville fair board, Mr. Aselstine was a life member of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A. F. and A. M., Moira Chapter No. 7 R.A.M., King Baldwin Preceptory No. 6 and the Rameses Shrine in Toronto. He was a member of Christ Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mae Olliphant, one daughter, Mrs. Les (Marguerite) Steadman of Courtney, B.C., four grandchildren and four great grandchildren and a brother Howard of Belle-A son George pre-deceased him.

The funeral will be held Friday from the Thompson Funeral Chapel where service will be conducted by Canon R. B. D. Wright. Interment in Belleville Cemetery.

Scouts Hear Hees

CAMPBELLFORD — About 125 Cubs, Scouts and their fathers from Campbellford, Warkworth and Norwood attended the annual father-and-son banquet at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall here Saturday night to mark Boy Scout Week.

Guest speaker was George Hees, MP for Northumberland. Mr. Hees presented a framed portrait of the Queen to the Campbellford group for the new Scout building.

Mr. Hees told the boys they were members of the best youth organization in the world and the training they received was aimed at building their character. He urged them to participate in sports, to play to win, but also to learn to lose gracefully. He said the discipline they were taught would stand them in good stead in their later lives.

He said he had looked forward to being in Campbellford last Friday for the visit of the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, but circumstances in the House of Commons made it imperative that he remain in Ottawa.

Al Weaver of the Scout committee of Campbellford Rotary Club was chairman for the evening. He urged the fathers present to take an active interest in Scouting and to volunteer their services as leaders.

Terry Brennan introduced the head table guests and Clarence Stephens brought greetings from the Rotary Club. Allan Grant accepted the portrait of the Queen from Mr. Hees. Scout and Cub leaders were introduced by Al Weaver.

Churchill

the confidence motion.

He announced his decision at the opening of the Commons sitting and won prolonged applause and sympathetic comments from his colleagues later in the day.

Even Robert Stanfield, the new Conservative leader who has made clear his party will not filibuster or disrupt the Commons business on the issue, applauded.

And John Diefenbaker, who held Mr. Churchill's loyalty through years of ups and downs as Conservative chief, saluted his deskmate's "loyalty to principle" while saying he deeply regretted the decision.

Mr. Churchill's defection and a thundering denunciation of the government by Mr. Diefenbaker were highlights of a day that also brought more confusion over the Creditiste stand on the disposition of money already collected under the tax bill whose defeat touched off the crisis.

The eight Creditiste votes had been expected to ensure a government victory on the confidence motion, but they were placed in doubt again by a midday statement to reporters from Leader Real Caouette.

He said he would vote against the government motion unless he received assurance that taxes collected "illegally" since Jan. 1 would be reimbursed.

Justice Minister Trudeau, the only cabinet minister to enter the debate this week, said later that the taxes collected would be repaid to the taxpayers.

The simultaneous English translation of his speech quoted him as saying the money would be refunded.

But the Commons record in French had him saying only that the money would be credited to the accounts of taxpayers.

Prime Minister Pearson said earlier that the government would have to raise revenue to replace what was lost by defeat of the tax bill. He said the taxes already collected might be credited against a new tax.

Mr. Diefenbaker's speech had been awaited with a good deal of anticipation since he has spoken only rarely since being deposed as Conservative leader last fall.

Alternately scathing, pulverizing and quietly serious, the old warrior shook his finger at the government ministers and accused them of trampling on the rights of Parliament because they were "gluttonous for power."

"You don't like this institution or you wouldn't commit this crime against it," he told them.

He had a poem for the Creditistes and another for the government. For the Creditistes he said:

> "A merciful providence > fashioned us holler
> A purpose that we might > our principles swaller."

For the government he said that "all Caouette's horses and all Caouette's men" wouldn't put humpty-dumpty together again.

Mr. and Mrs. Don McCallum have been selected for an interim committee to represent confectioners in Trenton and district. They were named at a confectioners' association meeting last night.

"Corner Store" Proprietors Showing Little Enthusiasm

TRENTON — A group of local confectioners is trying to sell the idea of an organization, but last night there weren't many buyers.

Only six of an estimated 40 confectionery owners within town and a ten-mile radius showed up at the Gilbert Hotel last night to hear plans for establishing an association to represent the interests of "corner-store" proprietors.

King Street businessman, Tom Brennan, told the sparse gathering an association would encompass the interests of four groups:

—the manufacturer, who could better deal with stores scattered in small centres like Trenton if they were represented as a group;

—the wholesaler, who could gain a better knowledge of store requirements by a collective listing;

—the storeowner, who could become more familiar with his products, and better equipped to give the public what they wanted;

—and the consumer, who stood a better chance of receiving price reductions when confectioners bought goods as a group.

At regular association meetings, Mr. Brennan said, manufacturers could acquaint confectioners with their products, as well as innovations in marketing, like contests.

Last night's small turnout prompted questions of the advisability of taking any immediate action to form a group.

Did the apparent lack of interest suggest abandoning the idea altogether? Should an interim committee be appointed until further local support was indicated? Would setting of prices be involved in any store-owners' organization?

These and other questions prompted a decision to adjourn until next Tuesday night for a second meeting.

After a series of nominations, and declinations, Don McCallum was declared temporary association president, and John Tripp secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Maxine McCallum, George King, and an as yet unidentified third party will act as committee members.

Spring Must Be in the Air

Spring must be in the air!

A Belleville woman has reported seeing an early crow and a Hillier woman, Mrs. Wayne Ellsworth and her son Terry this week saw a robin near her home. The harbinger of spring was perched on some plum bushes.

And also in Prince Edward county it seems the wolves are plentiful.

Last week Greg Cole shot a 31-pound female wolf within sight of his place of business, Cole Brothers Farmers Market, R.R. 9 Picton.

And then on Saturday Leland Fraser shot a 35-pound wolf at Long Point. He was accompanied by Greg Cole, who had the misfortune to fall and break two ribs.

Prison Terms Given Defendants In $10,000 Food City Robbery

A one-time Belleville man was sentenced to 12 years last night for the $10,000 robbery of an abducted food store manager.

It took the jury nearly six hours to return its verdict against 23-year-old Larry Wayne Morrison, ending a six-day Ontario Supreme Court assizes trial here.

Lawrence Schlaer, 37, charged with Morrison, was sentenced to 10 years after Mr. Justice Keith noted the verdict "overwhelmingly supported by the evidence."

Both men were charged with robbery with violence and conspiracy when provincial police traced them to the Montreal area.

The hunt started after Food City manager Samuel Mulholland was abducted outside the west Belleville shopping complex.

Mr. Mulholland was left trussed and gagged in nearby bushland on the Bay of Quinte shoreline. He was in hospital for shock and exposure.

The jury, which finally returned about 9 p.m. earlier listened as Crown Attorney Glenn Deline and defence counsel Robert Carter, wrapped up the case after a week-long courtroom contest.

Pointing out that William Morrison, brother of the accused and a primary witness for the crown during the trial, was an accomplice Mr. Carter said to the jury that it is dangerous to convict on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice."

On the question of the crown's corroborating evidence Mr. Carter stated that "what was said" was the matter in question — not whether phone calls were made or the defendants were where William Morrison said they were.

Referring to a meeting at the A and W drive-in on Sept. 1 he stated, "there is no doubt they (the accused) were there, that is not disputed . . . it doesn't corroborate Bill Morrison as the question again is what was said."

Continuing with examples he said "the purchase of the tape doesn't corroborate Bill Morrison any more than it corroborates Larry Morrison." "All of these things tend to confirm parts of Bill Morrison's story — the parts that aren't in dispute."

Mr. Carter also brought to the attention of the jury that Bill Morrison had at first lied to the police and that he had been told he would not be charged if he co-operated.

"If 12 jurymen can act on that kind of evidence then I'm never safe — you're never safe," he said to the jury.

Crown Attorney Glenn Deline told the jury the defence had proceeded on the assumption that "the best defence is an offence."

"Who do you believe?" the crown asked the jury stating that the case had now come down after all legal hodgepodge to the decision of "12 reasonable men on the basis of common sense."

The "straight from the shoulder" testimony of William Morrison was emphasized by Mr. Deline to the jury. "He didn't hedge around" about testimony that involved himself, the crown stated and he didn't falter under cross-examination.

Identification by three witnesses placing the accused at the Wayside Inn at Shannonville (the accused denied they were ever there) completely destroys the alibi that Morrison and Schlaer were in Montreal, said the crown.

Mr. Deline also went over the evidence of the numerals on bills found in possession of Larry Morrison when he was arrested and the similarity between his hair and the hair found at the scene of the crime.

Both counsels had reviewed all of the evidence given during the trial in their addresses before the Honorable Mr. Justice Keith gave the jury its final instruction in regards to the law.

The jury retired shortly after 3.30 yesterday afternoon, was called back for further instruction once, and delivered its verdict shortly after 9 p.m. last evening.

Two Property Owners Win Assessment Appeals

PICTON (Staff) — Some Ameliasburg Township property owners are smiling this week, others may appear more glum as proceedings continue with the assessment hearings in Picton.

The hearings began on Monday this week before Judge Wilfred S. Lane and so far about six property owners have presented their cases for a lower assessment. Tuesday afternoon the two cases heard were granted reductions while one property owner this week withdrew his case and another was dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence. Four more cases are expected to be heard this week. So far all of the properties in question have not been considered the more expensive properties in the area.

March 7 is the date designated for the balance of the taxpayers to appear and have a convenient date set for their hearings. The hearings arose following a petition by about 25 Ameliasburg Township property owners complaining that their assessment rate was set too high. Assessments were carried out last summer by County Assessor S. G. Manley and his department.

Quebec Versus Ottawa

Premier Johnson's running battle with the Federal government has now taken on a new dimension in the shape of a personal vendetta with Justice Minister Trudeau.

The Quebec leader has accused Mr. Trudeau of fostering "dangerous, backward and retrograde attitudes" towards French Canadians.

One has to read between the lines of Mr. Johnson's discourse, at a Union Nationale fund-raising dinner in Montreal. By doing so however, it is possible to perceive something of what ails Quebec.

Quebec is the home of the French Canadians who until only comparatively recently languished under the heel of provincial authority wedded to the authoritarianism of the Church. Quebecers then looked inwards. They still do — but with a new spirit of identity and pride, and yes, arrogance.

Be that as it may, the federal government now has this so-called French fact on its hands. If the talk of outright secession has receded somewhat, the bickering still continues and Mr. Johnson's words give some insight into what is troubling Quebec.

It is like an argument between relatives of differing backgrounds and traditions and outlook who nevertheless hope for improved relations and understanding for the sake of good manners and just plain civility.

That Quebec and Ottawa and its representatives like Mr. Trudeau have a rocky road to travel before reaching any such rapprochment is indicated by Mr. Johnson's accusation against Mr. Trudeau. He said the Justice Minister was attempting to build a career by "resurrecting all the old myths which have poisoned the relations between our two cultural communities since the Durham report."

Significant in this regard is the premier's charge that the Quebec government has had to write to Ottawa about once a month to protest federal attempts to invade fields of provincial jurisdiction.

"We want a new constitution precisely because we do not know where the encroachments of Ottawa under the present regime are going to stop."

Well, this for long has worked both ways. Quebec needs no lessons in the usurpation of federal authority. That is why, when all is said and done, a new constitution is desirable. Such a document should erase the barriers to understanding inherent in the friction of the present time.

Beatle's Advice

In these days of "anything goes" behavior, of marijuana and LSD, it is wise to keep things in perspective.

What we do not hear about are the millions of people who are living perfectly straightforward and useful lives without recourse to eccentric or unacceptable practices.

Even eccentricity has its good points — as the Beatles are demonstrating. The celebrated British apostles of the Mersey sound have exerted enormous influence on contemporary musical trends, as well as on the hearts and minds of young people and society at large.

Mostly their influence has been positive. Some dabbling with LSD and atheistic thought in their lives has been supplanted by a desire for higher things. The Beatles, unlike many who fail to recognize the stupidity of embracing the drug habit, are intelligent.

They are now in India, studying the meditative art of the leader of a body called the World Spiritual Regeneration Movement. They are apparently motivated by a genuine desire for a life based on this premise.

A clue to their thinking is afforded by Beatle George Harrison, in an article in the current issue of Holiday magazine. Talking with writer Michael Thomas about his recent visit to the hippie district of San Francisco, Harrison said: "San Francisco is great, there are so many great people there, but there are so many, you know, bums too, spoiling a great idea. It is lovely, but it is going bad because a lot of people there believe the answer is to take drugs and drop out.

And they drop out onto the pavement, hoping that God is going to manifest Himself, and take them off with him. Well, He is not. That's not it, that's not being hip, in fact anything further from hip I have yet to see, because they are only fooling themselves.

"I mean, even if they just worked chopping wood they are nearer to God than by dropping onto the pavement. You don't need drugs, you see . . . the answer is not pot, but yoga and meditation and working and discipline . . ."

That's the word from Beatle George Harrison, and it is not bad advice.

Gulf of Tonkin Affair

Naval Incident Three Years Ago Haunts U. S. Strategists

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—The Vietnam war, as State Secretary Rusk suggests, may be approaching a "climactic" point.

But as President Johnson prepares to entertain requests for another 100,000 troops beyond the authorized level of 525,000, and as North Vietnam strains to maintain unprecedented military pressure in the South, Washington's hottest debate concerns a naval incident more than three years ago.

This concern about the Gulf of Tonkin affair, now academic and perhaps even futile in any direct application to the war, exists for more than one reason.

It represents congressional unease about a still bigger war. It reflects suspicion whether the Tonkin Gulf incident happened the way the official scorecard says, if it happened at all.

There is concern about the implications of such incidents in the future, sharpened by the North Korean seizure of the spy ship Pueblo and open anger and frustration on what is felt to be President Johnson's use of the Tonkin Gulf incident to seize foreign-policy decision-making.

The U.S. destroyer Maddox reported Aug. 2, 1964, it had been fired on by North Vietnamese patrol boats in international waters. Aug. 4, the Maddox and the Turner Joy reported a hostile, somewhat confused encounter with enemy vessels firing torpedoes.

Aug. 5, the U.S. launched 64 air sorties against the North in retaliation—the first such bombing which presaged adoption of permanent bombing the following February.

More important, President Johnson with only two dissenting votes, obtained from the U.S. Senate approval for "all necessary measures" to repel North Vietnamese aggression against the South.

The Gulf of Tonkin incidents remain controversial and cloudy despite intensive debate and fresh scrutiny from the Senate foreign relations committee.

Committee chairman J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas called Sunday for congressional review of "our interests of pursuing this war on an ever-increasing scale, possibly until the time we engage China."

He did so after repeating charges the U.S. was guilty of "over-reaction" in the Tonkin incident even if the North had attacked the U.S. vessels.

William Bundy, assistant State Secretary for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said Sunday there is "absolutely no doubt" the ships were attacked. He denied they were conducting "provocative" action.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, like Fulbright a dedicated critic of the war, alleges the destroyers were under orders to intrude on North Vietnamese coastal waters to trigger and then track radar defences with their electronic listening machinery.

Whatever history decides to record about the ins and outs of the Tonkin Gulf episode, one thing seems clear now. This is the futility of Senator Fulbright's hopes for a congressional inquiry centred in his committee on the war.

State Secretary Rusk has declined for more than two years to appear publicly before the committee and Monday brushed aside Fulbright's latest invitation for a full-scale review.

He did say he expects to discuss Vietnam with the committee March 11 at a hearing on foreign aid.

Vincent Masssey was sworn in as Canada's first native-born Governor-General 16 years ago today—in 1952. Born in Toronto in 1887, he was president of Massey-Harris Co. from 1921 to 1925. He was appointed minister without portfolio in the Mackenzie King cabinet of 1925, but failed to gain election to Parliament. He was Canada's first ambassador to the United States, 1926-30, and Canadian High Commissioner in London 1935-46. In 1949 he was appointed chairman of the royal commission on development in the arts, letters and sciences which presented its report in 1951. He died Dec. 30, 1967, in London, at the age of 80.

German Women Blast Curlers in Public

Hartford Courant

As every poll ought to do once in a while, public opinion samplers in West Germany recently shelved questions about the popularity of Chancellor Kiesinger, of the progress of the European Market, and turned to matters upon which people feel . . . strongly.

Life's little niceties came up for inspection instead. Does a married woman take exception when she sees another woman go out shopping with curlers in her hair, or when a man goes to church in a sport shirt without necktie? You might imagine in more casual America, that the response to the query would be a shrug and So Who Cares?

It turned out that this business of curlers and cravats was one on which German women not only wanted to speak but to do so with fire in their eye. To go shopping in curlers is extremely bad form, 87 per cent of German women answered. . .The place for a woman in curlers is in the kitchen with the Kinder. But when it comes to going to church without a necktie, only 50 per cent found fault with that. Who worries how your husband looks provided he doesn't have his hair in curlers?

There were other questions in this poll-taking aimed at getting the profile of the average German citizen. Answers showed for example that the typical German family has 12 potted plants in the house. Given a choice between Mediterranean cruise, seeing the nightlife of Paris, and meeting the Pope, 34 per cent plunked for the cruise, 10 per cent for the bistros, and 8 per cent for a Vatican visit. The Pontiff should not feel offended. Asked how they feel about politicians and news paper editors, West Germans gave these bracketed worthies little regard, placing them far lower than clergymen, school teachers and businessmen, and a cut above the military. Just wait until we have to write another editorial about the desirability of increased foreign aid, that's all we can say.

Dental Fees Go Up

Toronto Telegram

A visit to the dentist hurts twice, once when you sit in the chair and once when you get the bill. Now it's going to hurt even more, according to the Ontario Dental Association's new fee schedule.

With commodities and services generally going up, the dentist can justify fee increases. In dentistry, as in any other profession, there is no such thing as painless fees, and we might as well accept the fact.

As an indication that it is not only the cost of their services which is goining up, the dentists will henceforth separate their fee from laboratory charges in the case of dentures.

That's a kind of bookkeeping worthy of a first - class public relations man. In the first place, the patient knows exactly what he's getting, and in the second place, the dentist thereby points out that the pain causing is not his alone.

So far, laboratories haven't announced their new charges. That may be because they wish to administer the pain of increasing costs gradually. Now that's nice of them. In this world of rising prices and falling stock markets, one should be grateful for small mercies.

Faithful—in Their Fashion!

Vancouver Sun

The school board isn't doing its stenography students any favor by pensioning off classroom typewriters when they are six years old.

It's tiring just to think about the number of quick foxes that must jump over lazy dogs during the machines' classroom incarnation.

For all that a typewriter that is only six years old is still in the springtime of its life. To replace it with a fresh young thing with fancy ribbons is infidelity of the cruelest sort, and almost certain to put it in a foul temper for the rest of its days.

The worst thing about the school board replacement practice, however, is that it can only give students a deceptive picture of the commercial world.

Possessions Tyrannize

Letter to The Globe and Mail

On a panel discussion Feb. 11, your columnist, Richard Needham, stated that he was free from the responsibility of possessions. He only owned the suit he was wearing and his fountain pen. He said that possessions are a nuisance and he was spending about $10,000 each year to live but also could live on $25 per week if necessary.

We salute Richard the Free and offer our sincere congratulations for this unusual philosophy. We trust that he will extend a helping hand to rescue us from the ratrace, and deliver us into freedom.

Mrs. E. H. Hollaman,
Don Mills.

Still Dry

The Globe and Mail

Liquor votes in Ontario demand 60 per cent proof of the voters' wishes before any change can be made. Owen Sound, the last dry city in the province, went to the polls on Saturday and recorded a vote that was one half of 1 per cent under proof; and so, unless the result is upset by a recount, the city will stay dry.

None of the Owen Sound residents is likely to take great satisfaction from the result. For those who voted for dining lounges, there is the intense frustration of having come within a whisker of sucess.

Where Were the Ninety And Nine in Commons Vote?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Concerning last week's events in Ottawa, what disturbs me about the defeat of the Government's bill is not whether or not the Government should resign. To me that is not particularly important, save the fact that an election at this time would not reveal the will of the electorate until the new leader of the Liberal party is chosen. And for the people to have an opportunity to assess his potential, then and only then in my opinion can the people of Canada make a choice between our two major parties.

What does disturb me very much is a simple matter of arithmetic. There are 265 seats in the House, yet only 166 members were present for an important vote. At $18,000 per year I would like to know where were the ninety and nine?

I presume some of these were elsewhere attending to the Nation's business, but surely not that many — I believe that at their salaries they should be in Ottawa doing their job.

WONDERING.

Family Court Services Unavailable to Woman Deserted By Husband

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The courthouse on Pinnacle Street contains offices responsible for some of the more important aspects of provincial and county administration. Not least among these are the offices of the probation and juvenile family court.

Both are concerned with the humanities, but, I understand, each service is separate and apart from the other in its operation, although both are ultimately responsible to the office of the attorney general for the province.

One afternoon, a few weeks ago, I was in the hallway outside this office. A lady from the probation service was trying to assist a woman with three small children. The woman was in tears, and apparently in need of the services of the family court.

As a first step to receiving assistance she had been referred to the family court office to lay an information against her husband, who had apparently departed the home, leaving the wife and children without support.

I was aghast to hear the probation office employee advise the woman there were no family court personnel available in the afternoons, as they work on a part-time basis, and that no family court JP was available on that particular afternoon (a Wednesday) as this was his day off.

The woman left with her children, and it is my sincere hope that her circumstances were such as to enable her to keep her family functioning until the following day, or until such time as she was able to comply with the necessary red tape.

One wonders, in such circumstances as this, how many people, especially women with youngsters, trying desperately to meet all the legal requirements for assistance, finally add to their burden by resorting to shoplifting.

I was greatly concerned to learn there were no family court personnel available to the public in the afternoons, and that such an important public service should be handled on a part-time basis.

I question the practice of no family court personnel being on duty in the afternoons, and find it very odd that no family court JP is available on Wednesdays. Perhaps it is felt that human frailties are not likely to succumb to a need for assistance on that day.

Belleville recently passed through a trying time with its welfare department. I am sure many people were needlessly humiliated and embarrassed before this situation was corrected.

It is to be hoped that similar frustrations will not arise in the family court office due to frustration and indifference, and the unavailability of qualified personnel.

There must be many people, not in need of charity, or welfare, who, in order to meet legal requirements, must utilize the services of the family court. It is unthinkable in this day and age that hardship may arise simply from lack of availability of personnel.

It is my hope that the authorities will take every step necessary to ensure, that during the normal daily office hours, both AM and PM, there will be available to the public qualified personnel.

DISTURBED.

Dome mines, which sold at a record of 80¼, slipped ¼ to 78.

A drop in liquor stocks pulled down the industrial average.

Parks Board Lists Officers

A former chairman of the Toronto Parks Management Board held its initial meeting last Thursday evening and appointed William Higgins as chairman and Bert Lloyd as vice-chairman. Committees will be set up at the second meeting to be held in March

Secretary is Jack Layfield, and he will be assisted by Mrs. Blanche Detlor, part-time secretary to clerk-treasurer Joseph Reynolds who is treasurer. All appointments to the board were made by the council.

Chief business of the meeting was to discuss plans for the year. Lack of time prevented the completion of some of last year's projects such as completing the fencing to prevent cars from driving on to the parkway itself. Because the soil is so thin, there is the possibility that lawns will require spot attention in the spring. A water system is essential and steps must be built for the change house. Some painting will be required, also, and doors destroyed by vandals must be repaired or replaced.

Time had not permitted the erection of signs last summer, but the board felt that this should be one of the first projects undertaken next spring. Exits and entrances must be marked, and signs placed on the washrooms and change houses.

The question of maintenance also came up for discussion, as well as steps which must be taken to develop the trailer park.

No definite plans were made. The board members simply assembled the problems ahead.

Eight voting members were appointed by the council, Councillors William Hoags and Clayton Brooks, and six citizens, Mrs. Jean Griffiths and Mrs. Kay Hood, both on the White Elephant Store committee; Bert Lloyd, Ralph Lawlor Ernier Dorey and Don Kimmett.

Negro Tops Polls In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Negro leader Charles Evers prepared today for his uphill runoff battle against white conservative Charles Griffin for the congressional seat vacated by Gov. John Bell Williams.

"We're going to win this election," Evers told his followers after clinching a place against Griffin, Williams' key Washington aide for almost two decades, in the March 12 runoff.

Evers, the first Negro to become a serious challenger for a Mississippi congressional post this century, took advantage of a six-way split in the white vote to lead the first round of balloting Tuesday.

Paris Fashions Woo Favor with Feminine Allure

PARIS (AP) — Paris fashions swing into springtime with swirling pleating, circular fullness, ruffles, flounces, frills and furbelows.

Photos of the latest Paris trends were released today. Red, white and blue leads the color spectrum. White alone is a close runnerup and is used as trimming on most spring coat-dresses, suits and costumers.

Wool crepe and wool gabardine are favorite fabrics for daytime, with organza in plain and printed versions leading for after five and evening.

The shift-dress-Bermuda-legged or with a multiple or box-pleated skirt-appears everywhere. Newest by Saint-Laurent are in harlequin-printed silk with a contrasting navy, black or brown wool or alpaca jacket. Floppy pussy-cat bows adorn the neckline, while sleeves and suntan backs are optional for sportswear.

As for hemlines, there have been all sorts of trial balloons. But short skirts around the kneecaps, generally above, are at a status quo, and will breeze happily through the summer months. You may choose to drop your minis from mid - thigh to two or three inches above the knees.

Designers are concentrating on the feminine look. Fashions are seductive. Nostalgic flashbacks to the era of Marilyn Monroe, Rita Hayworth, Greta Garbo, and the stars of the silent movies and early talkies have brought into the limelight a series of new hair styles from the tightly curled short hair to Marcelle-waved shoulder - length locks. And Bonnie's beret and Clyde's fedora carry out the note.

This spring season will be remembered as one of many trends. They range from Mexican and Russian folklore, the Vietnam pleasant, through Spanish toreadors, the Paris gamine, Baby Doll, and honest-to-goodness modern elegance for the woman today.

The geratest impact was made in Paris by the new coat - dresses, some with cape sleeves others partly tailored to resemble a suit, still others more of a cape than a dress.

Fashions play a major part in the spring collections. The most popular fabric for city wear beside wool crepe is the shantung family. Come evening, organza, in plain and printed florals, takes its place.

Prints are less violently psychodelic. Jungle florals in explosive colors and true-to-nature. The revival of dotted and pencil-striped fabrics is significant. Dio and Courreges like naive florals on a wool ground.

Belts are on everything, mostly in leather and placed at one of the three strategic levels: below the bosom, at the natural waist or at the hipline — all depending on the style of the model.

The revival of the "Sunday night" little dress, displacing the sleeveless "nothing" sheath of past seasons, is prophetic and a precious asset to anyone's wardrobe.

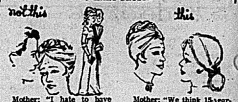
The spring suit is mostly on blazer or cardigan lines, mostly edged in white or if in the "classic tailored" mood, in a tweed with cutaway corners. The sequin suit imitates herringbone wool. Hippie-style jewelry in the "more the merrier" mood is fun.

TOTAL ESTIMATED

Brazil's population will reach 89,400,000 about July 1, it is estimated.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I hate to have Jeanie go to the big spring dance, but all the rest of her high school crowd is going, so I guess we really have no choice."

Mother: "We think 15-year-olds are too young to go to a night club dance, I'm sure all your friends are not going so why don't you have a party here."

Parents should not let themselves be pressured because "everyone else is doing it." What everyone else is allowed to do may not always be wise.

Bride Ponders Over Inviting Uncles

Dear Doris: Our niece, whom we have raised from a baby, is being married. She has two aunts on her mother's side who are known to her. There are three uncles whom she has never seen.

Is it necessary to ask these uncles if she asks the aunts? She wants to keep it small. — Aunt Ellie.

Dear Aunt: Any of the uncles who happen to be married to the aunts ought to be invited.

A bride may invite or leave out whomever she wishes; but it might be worth considering that here is a chance to re-establish some contacts with her own flesh and blood.

She is entering a new life, becoming an adult and a homemaker in her own right. The time may come when she will prize family rlationships more than she does now. It has happened.

Dear Doris: My friend and I have been disputing over pierced ears. She says that it is not etiquette for a lady to have pierced ears. — Who's Right?

Dear Who's: Oh, come now. Some of the most fashionable and high-born women of history have had pierced ears. Etiquette has nothing to do with it.

But healthy ears have. The job should be done by a practitioner who knows his business; preferably a medical doctor. The subject must have the good sense not to weigh the ears down with heavy dingle-dangles to the point where flesh is pulled and torn.

This can happen with clip-ons too. Don't stretch the lobes or you could do permanent damage.

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Regarding the item from "Wanting to Share", I would like further information about mild brain damage in children.

Can you tell me if there is a cure for this type of child? — Concerned.

Dear Concerned: There are so many variations of brain damage, and the term covers such a wide range of difficulties, that there is no one diagnosis or treatment. In most cases it can be overcome.

Your source of information is your own family doctor.—

Confidential to Lynda: Everything gets you down. To me that spells ill health or fatigue.

You worry about the typing, but here's a thought: In just about any course a student is apt to reach a sort of plateau and stand still a while, before spurting ahead. Ask your teacher what she thinks about your aptitude as a typist.

Moving out won't cure what is wrong with you. Get a medical check-up, some extra rest and some new things to think about. My private letter goes into details.

Good Samaritan

Even a long-term hospital patient has to cope with income tax returns, but the job is made easier for Miss Kathleen Brownlee, left, through the assistance of Hospital Auxiliary volunteer visitor Mrs. Joan Low.

New Service Given By Hospital Auxiliary

For some hospital patients, visitors can be a big headache.

For others, the absence of visitors is a heartache.

To ease this extra discomfort of hospitalization, Belleville General Hospital's Women's Auxiliary has begun a new volunteers' activity — a visiting service for long term patients.

The service has been operating since mid - November, and already the three volunteers have visited about 40 long-term patients whose relatives live too far away to make regular calls.

Primary purpose of the visitors is just to call once a week, chat, and help relieve some of the loneliness of a long hospital stay. But as they get to know their patients they try to find other little ways to serve — picking up items at the canteen, arranging for laundry and hairdressing, delivering parcels and sending mail.

Last September, while driving home along highway 7, she struck a patch of loose gravel on the road and went into a skid that landed her in hospital with multiple fractures. The five subsequent months she spent in traction in a strange city with no nearby friends or relatives to drop in would have been tedious without the friendly interest of Auxiliary volunteer Mrs. Joan Low.

"She brings her nice personality here every week, and I've enjoyed her visits so much," says Miss Brownlee. "She's destroyed my old concept of hospital visitors as dull elderly ladies with a mission."

For her part, Mrs. Low has developed a bond of friendship with Miss Brownlee and a deep pride in her progress.

Mrs. Low claims she has no special training in the art of meeting and "just chatting with a wide variety of people. But through the Women's Hospital Auxiliary she has found a way to put her rare attributes — a bright personality and a genius for friendship — to use in a way meaningful to her and, incidentally, helpful to others.

Ann Landers

Alcoholism Contributes To Personality Needs

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have worked with the public for many years and have seen a good deal of tragedy which has resulted from alcoholism. It is clear to me that many wives of alcoholics have personality needs which are fulfilled by their husband's excessive drinking.

ANN LANDERS

Such women (1) want to be martyrs (2) need to be sure of their "special place in heaven" (3) must have something to complain about.

The woman who signed herself "Mystified" sounds as if she fits into all three of the aforementioned categories. When a wife writes to Ann Landers because her husband has stopped drinking and his "self-righteousness is driving her crazy" and she can't understand why he has to keep going to those meetings, it's a pretty good sign she was happier when he was drinking and she was "putting up with him." Now that he is sober she has nothing to talk about, no one is telling her how marvellous she is (in fact, now he is the marvellous one) and losing the spotlight more than she can stand. I can guarantee you that if this woman divorces the "dry drunk" she will marry another alcoholic within a year. — SPADES ARE SPADES.

DEAR SPADES: I have read stacks of literature on the personality characteristics of people who marry alcoholics and the authorities concur with your analysis.

There is much truth in your last statement. Surveys show that the majority of women who divorce an alcoholic remarry another alcoholic promptly.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I do babysitting for four or five families. They all pay the same and are pretty nice people. The problem is that one certain woman cancelled me out twice in the last three weeks. Both times she had engaged me several days in advance and I turned down other jobs. Last night she cancelled on the morning of the night I was supposed to sit for her. I don't think this is fair because I turned down two other jobs and I don't know what is fair. Do you feel this woman should have paid me anyway? Please advise. — HIGH AND DRY.

DEAR H. AND D.: In my opinion, a sitter should receive at least 48 hours notice of cancellation or be paid half the usual night's compensation. This understanding should be discussed and agreed upon when the girl accepts her first job with new people.

For girls such as you — girls who are already working and have no such understanding — I suggest that you have to talk with your employers and get such an agreement.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This may sound like a stupid question but I need your answer. How often do you think a 17-year-old girl should be allowed to date. — A SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: Before I answer the question I need a little information. These may sound like stupid questions but . . .

What kind of grades is the 17-year-old girl getting? Does she do her share of work around the house? Is the girl honest and reliable? Do her parents know with whom she is going, where she is going and when to expect her home? Does she honor her curfew — or does she try to sneak in late and make some excuse if she is caught?

If you will answer my questions I will answer yours.

CWL Entertains WI

The February meeting of Read Catholic Women's League was held recently in St. Mary's School with members and executive of Melrose Women's Institute in attendance.

Rev. W. V. Hamilton opened the meeting with the president Mrs. T. V. Corrigan presiding. All the conveners read the directives which the council had received in a newsletter from the diocesan conveners. A request was read from Father J. Farrell, a Jesuit missionary which asked for books and clothing to be sent to the Indian children.

During discussion it was decided that the spring tea and bazaar would be held the first week in May.

Father Hamilton welcomed the group from Melrose W.I. and in turn the president of the W.I. Mrs. D. McLaren introduced the executive and the district president Mrs. J. McLaren. At this time she outlined the history of the Institute and dealt in particular with the work accomplished by each branch.

Thanks for a most interesting and informative talk was expressed to the speaker by Father Hamilton.

Radio and TV convener Mrs. T. Callaghan took over the meeting and organized a group discussion on various TV programs, after which those present were divided into groups led by Mrs. J. Hogan, Mrs. J. Jordan, Mrs. C. Jordan, Mrs. A. Callaghan, and Mrs. G. Walsh. At the conclusion a summary from each group was given.

Refreshments were served at the close.

This picture alone will pull you to the kitchen to make Fresh Apple Coffee Cake. Match-maker Mary calls it man hunter's bait for Leap Year Lenas.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Apple Coffee Cake

By MARY MOORE

Man hunters — tomorrow is your day. The way to your prey's heart is through his stomach. Lucky the man who is caught by the girl who makes this fresh apple coffee cake.

Add bait to your leap year trap by baking it late in the evening before his very eyes, having made careful preparation in advance: mix topping ingredients; butter pan; sift dry ingredients into bowl; grate the orange rind; measure the wet ingredients. The butter has to be melted and the apples have to be prepared at the last minute, obviously.

FRESH APPLE COFFEE CAKE

Topping:

½ cup chopped blanched or unblanched almonds (or walnuts)
¼ cup brown sugar
⅓ teaspoon cinnamon
2¼ cups coarsely chopped, peeled apples

Cake:

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 one third cups granulated sugar
2 large eggs
two-thirds cup milk
½ cup melted butter
2 teaspoons grated fresh orange rind

In a small bowl combine first 3 topping ingredients—but not the apples.

Butter a 9" square cake pan.

Sift together into a bowl the sifted flour, baking powder and sugar. Beat eggs well and stir in milk, melted butter and orange rind. Make a well in dry ingredients and add liquids all at once, mixing to barely combine. Turn into prepared pan and smooth top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 15 minutes. Carefully remove from the oven and top with prepared apples, then sprinkle over dry topping mixture, and bake 30 to 35 minutes longer or until when tested with toothick at centre it comes out clean. Cut into nine squares. Serve fresh from the oven with steaming hot creamy coffee.

After his second serving, have your pretty mouth empty and ready.

Quinte Archers Pick Up Five Awards

PICTON (Staff) — Robin Hood—watch out! The Quinte Archery Club from Picton are developing a fine group of marksmen—and women.

Taking honors in Kingston Sunday the Picton group are jubilant for their club has only been formed about one year.

At Barriefield CFB drill hall Sunday many Eastern Ontario archers competed with their American counterparts for international trophies as well as participating in competitions for eastern Ontario class trophies.

Canadians took the trophies for freestyle shooting while the USA claimed the honors for instinctive shooting. About 61 shooters attended the match wtih a good number from the Belleville Archery Club.

Don Jackson of Lindsay, one of the Canadian Team to go to Holland last year for the world championships, took the men's high with a very respectable 292 points of a possible 300. Leola Doxtator of Belleville claimed the ladies high of the day, with 278 out of 300.

Quinte Archery Club of Picton surprised all of the veteran archers by taking home 5 of the trophies.

George Jones of Picton, shooting in the expert class, carried off top honors over a substantial number of shooters. He also was named to the Freestyle International team and took a team member trophy for being on the winning Canadian team.

The women did well in the Picton group also, Carolyne Jones won her class and walked off with the trophy for the ladies expert class. Margaret York took the award for the Archer Class.

Cliff Nutley took second place in the Bowman class while Bob Manlow kept his trophy in the Intermediate Boy's Archer class.

Two new members of the Quinte Archery Club who also shot well were Elwood Lewis and his wife Elaine.

It looks as if the Picton Club's motto "Aim high and shoot straight in everything" is beginning to pay off for local bowmen.

Do You Believe in Ghosts? Belleville Has History of Supernatural Forces

Editor's Note

From October, 1957, to December, 1960, The Intelligencer published a series of 141 articles entitled "Historic Belleville" and "Historic Hastings". This column was prepared by Gerald E. Boyce on behalf of the Hastings County Historical Society.

Parts of these articles were included in "Historic Hastings", the 400 - page book sponsored by Hastings County Council as its Official Centennial Project in 1967. We welcome back the series which again is being prepared by Mr. Boyce on behalf of the Hastings County Historical Society.

Comments, questions, and suggestions for future articles are invited. Correspondence should be addressed to Mr. G. Boyce, c/o Centennial Secondary School, Palmer Road, Belleville.

By GERALD E. BOYCE

Do you believe in ghosts? Do you believe that supernatural forces sometimes make themselves visible to men?

If you believe that ghosts and similar creatures cannot exist, then read no further. If, on the other hand, you are prepared to admit that perhaps - just perhaps - there may be an element of truth in some supernatural stories, consider the following.

Before the turn of this century, a prominent Belleville citizen decided to write down what he knew about the subject of Belleville's ghosts. This account appeared in a small family newspaper exactly 75 years ago this month.

The writer began by suggesting that, although some readers might object strongly to ghost stories, he was persuaded to write a few words upon this "uncanny subject" at the urgent request of the paper's editor. The account continued by narrating a few incidents that were said to have taken place "in our quiet little city".

"The late D. D. Bogart, who was well known by many of the clan, stated to me that one dark night he was returning from Shannonville. As he approached a house situated at the outskirts of the city, he saw every window brilliantly illuminated.

As the hour was late, and the house untenanted, he was naturally surprised at the light. He rapped at the door, and attempted to open it but found it locked. On looking at the windows the lights had disappeared. Driving on, the lights again were seen in every window in both stories — not a sound could be heard.

"No one has been able to account for this strange appearance. The house was locked — the key in the possession of the proprietor, and the windows secured. There were no lights in the vicinity which could have been reflected in the windows.

"Mrs. MacAnnany and her daughter Miss Smart (two women of the highest respectability residing here) were returning to their home one summer's evening. As they approached their house, looking at the front, they saw the window in Miss Smart's storey, brilliantly lighted, and the figure of a young woman walking about the room dressed in white.

Miss Smart, thinking the figure was that of a sister, called to her, 'Margaret, why have you lighted the gas; the room will be filled with insects.' At that instant, the sister addressed put her head out of the drawing room window on the first floor and said, 'Why Sarah, I am here. I have not lighted the gas'. Just then the light disappeared.

"No one was in the house, save those with the young woman who was addressed!

"Old Mrs. Phillips, who resides with her daughter, a few doors from Randolph Place, states that one night, after the house had been closed and locked and the family was retired, she desired to go to the kitchen for some article. Thinking if she lighted a lamp it might disturb someone, she went down the stairs in the dark.

On turning into the hall which led to the kitchen, she saw standing before her, a young girl, in white, with what seemed a halo of light radiating from her entire person.

The dress seemed to be of some light material — the collar of white lace — the face very pale — eyes and hair dark. The figure remained motionless for about a minute and then disappeared.

"Mrs. Phillips is a person of strong nerves, cool and not excitable", concluded our local writer of the past century.

Should these accounts be believed? Could the witnesses, described as reliable and not excitable, have been mistaken? Were there natural causes for these happenings?

Was the writer, himself a prominent and distinguished citizen, attempting to delude the members of his own family for whom this account was intended?

If you are still in doubt — or if you reject the possibility of ghosts — consider that the writer of the 1893 article confessed that he himself had seen ghostly apparitions on two occasions . . . but more of this in next week's column when we'll unmask the writer and let his description of these personal visitations speak for itself.

(Article 142 in a series sponsored by the Hastings County Historical Society. Correspondence should be addressed to Mr. G Boyce, c/o Centennial Secondary School, Belleville.)

MUSHMOUTH REPORTS

Dear Boss: —

The fortnightly bull-sessions of the Clam-and-Eel faithful got under way as usual despite the fact you were coming up from your second nose-dive into the Dundas Street halls of medical mending.

Now that they've got your umbilicus within shouting distance of the seventh dorsal via the flea-bite diet system, I should inform you, boss, that senior "A" and junior "B" hockey have passed away and are now interred in the boneyards of record and memory.

You may have read about it in the newspapers, although I doubt it, that the Junior B's farewelled the mortal coil of hockey with all colors flying. They went down with their fowling pieces in their hands, bayonets fixed and with the knowledge they had given their best with every man a do-or-die Lord Nelson.

The senior "A" Mo-Hawks shuffled off their share of the hockey coil with streamers at half-staff to the memory of a number who failed to respond at crucial times when the bugles called for efforts above and beyond the average call of duty.

The last conclave of the bull-sessioners called for a vote of confidence in "Is Senior Hockey Wanted in Belleville?"

The sessioners, boss, voted unanimously in the affirmative. But they debated the issue. Nearly all of them felt that some changes are necessary if a loyal fandom is to be rewarded with the sight of a team appearing in league playoffs.

It was pointed out, boss, that senior "A" fans of this city are the best in the ten-team circuit. That was proven by estimated figures that claimed the Mo-Hawks outdrew, at home, any other club in the circuit.

They proved it, attendance-wise a year ago when senior "A" hockey was resurrected from a five-year dormancy.

You were told, boss, by the Mo-Hawk brass that the average home attendance of the Mo-Hawks the past season was 1,100. A Toronto writer claimed he was told it was 1,200.

Be that as it may.

Fandom proved something else too, boss. Regardless of "average" figures, the boys that pay the box-office shot demanded by fluctuating attendances they should get some degree of consistency from playing personnel.

The regular John Fan is nobody's fool. He or she knows when a player or players are out there to play hockey or just to get in a skating practice. If you don't believe that, boss, look at the box-office figures here when the Mo-Hawks were putting on the act — and when they were out there giving everything they had.

I think it was on a Tuesday night. The Mo-Hawks were in the doldrums, and no storm signals were being hoisted. The pewsters numbered an official paid 800-plus. Add, as always, a couple hundred season ticket holders.

Then something happened. I don't know what Coach Floyd Crawford used in his "needles." The Mo-Hawks started to win-at-home. John Fan reacted. The box-office began to click in two-four time. Four home games later the attendance was high in the four-figure bracket.

It was during this period of renaissance that Sunday afternoon hockey was given its first trial. The box-office? Some 2,500.

The Mo-Hawks were in full stride. The win-at-home streak continued. Then it ended as abruptly as it started. The honeymoon was over. The Mo-Hawks failed to recover from that final home defeat and were swept into playoffs oblivion.

There is no reason why senior "A" hockey should not be a success here next season. But the onus rests squarely upon management, team personnel and other requisites.

The bull session, boss, gave Coach Crawford an unanimous vote of confidence. He gave everything he had — but at times the situation needed a miracle worker. Crawford was not that.

Nothing has been done, to my knowledge, boss about next year's senior "A" activities. General fan opinion is that new blood — new, younger players are needed. Above all a fifty-fifty club, that, win-lose-or-draw will give all it has all the time.

The least of senior "A" hockey worries in this city is fandom. It will be waiting and ready with its support if the above paragraph becomes a reality.

Bruins' "Hawks" Pin Down Penguins

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston Bruins without all-star defenceman Bobby Orr were supposedly like a ship without a rudder in the heat of the National Hockey League pennant race.

But the Beantowners haven't folded, thanks to a patchwork defence and a couple of off-season trades.

One of these trades—bringing Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Fred Stanfield from Chicago Black Hawks—continued to prove it's worth Tuesday night when Hodge scored twice, Stanfield once and Esposito picked up three assists in a 5-3 victory over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Esposito's 30 goals and 35 assists place him fifth among the NHL scorers this year; Stanfield has 18 goals for a 10th-place tie with team-mate John Bucyk at 57 points and Hodge has 18 goals.

The victory also padded Boston's lead over Toronto Maple Leafs to 11 points in the race for the fourth and last playoff spot in the Eastern Division. The Leafs, however, have played three fewer games.

KEN HODGE

The loss prevented the Penguins from overhauling St. Louis Blues for fourth place in the west. The Penguins trail St. Louis by a point but have played two more games.

Skip Krake and John McKenzie scored the other Boston goals, George Konik, Paul Andrea and Bob Rivard tallied for Pittsburgh.

Tonight's schedule has Montreal Canadiens at St. Louis Chicago at Toronto and Minnesota North Stars in Oakland against the Seals.

Thursday Toronto is at Boston, New York Rangers at Detroit Red Wings in Detroit and Los Angeles Kings at Philadelphia Flyers, leaders in the Western Division.

Orr was considered the Boston ice leader although only 19 and in his second professional year. Feb. 18 he limped out of a game in Detroit and onto an operating table where the medial cartilage was removed from his left knee.

This also removed him from the lineup until at least the playoffs.

Instead of sagging as most pundits predicted, Boston moved Gary Doak up onto defence with Dallas Smith and imported Barrie Gibbs from Oklahoma City of the Central League.

"Losing Bobby makes things a little harder, I'll admit," said coach Harry Sinden after Orr's operation. "But with everyone playing a little harder we will be all right.

PHIL ESPOSITO

"I originally thought it would take 86 points to make the playoffs. But the expansion teams have changed my mind.

"I think now 81 or 82 points will do it.

"I think we can do that even without Orr."

In Bucyk and McKenzie Boston had a pair of proven NHL performers, but it's the outstanding play of the three former Hawks that has been the big plus this year.

The best Esposito has ever done before was 27 goals and 26 assists whil with Chicago in 1965-66 while Hodge only had a total of 16 goals in two years with the Black Hawks before joining the Bruins.

Stanfield's NHL experiense had been extremely limited in three previous professional years—seven games with Chicago in 1964-65, two the next year and one last season—but he's more than lived up to expectations this year with 39 assists to go with his 18 goals on a line with Bucyk and McKenzie.

NHL Scoring Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League scoring race is becoming as close as any other challenge in the league although Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks still are in command.

Mikita has 71 points on 35 goals and 36 assists while Hull leads in goals with 41 and has 29 assists for his 70 points.

Last weekend Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle of New York Rangers surged into third and fourth places with 69 and 66 points respectively and Tuesday Phil Esposito loomed back on the scene.

Esposito, leading scorer with Boston Bruins, has challenged before this year and fallen back, but he picked up three assists to climb into fifth place among the leaders with 65 points as the Bruins dropped Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3.

He now has 30 goals and 35 assists. Hero of the game, though, was Ken Hodge—like Esposito a Black Hawk last season—who scored his 17th and 18th goals of the year to lead the victory.

Match Play Return?

NEW YORK (AP) — Match play golf, which disappeared from the pro circuit 10 years ago, may make a return, Max Elbin, Professional Golf Association president, said today.

"A number of proposals have been made," Elbin said, "and are under consideration.

"It could be as early as this fall, perhaps something of a spin-off from our PGA championship, a tournament of champions or something on that order."

If so, it would meet the approval of the touring pros.

"There's no doubt that golf galleries need something more than week-to-week stroke play," said Jack Nicklaus, who received the Gold Tee award for outstanding contributions to the game at the Metropolitan Golf Writers Association dinner Tuesday night.

"I'd like to see it. I'll even go one step further. In addition to a match play title tournament, I think we also should have a national team four-ball championship."

Ex-McFarlands Star

A Dash of 'Red' Sparking Blues!

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "I wanted a chance to play myself into the league or out of it," said Gordon (Red) Berenson, "but I just didn't want to sit on my backside."

RED BERENSON

Berenson got his chance with "You play the way you're treated," Berenson pointed out. "Scotty (Blues coach Scotty Bowman) told me he knew I could help and I knew I could too." Berenson said there was no pressure to make a good showing in his first few games because of Bowman's confidence.

Bowman doesn't shrug off Berenson's importance to the club's playoff hopes. "Just look at the record," he said. "He's certainly scored five or six game-winning goals since he came."

An all-American at the University of Michigan, Berenson said his college hockey helped him mentally. "But I may not have been prepared hockey-wise," the Regina, Sask., native added. "I may not have been ready to play in the pros when I finished junior hockey."

American colleges stress skating, while Canadian and pro hockey stress harder body checking and a tighter defensive game.

St. Louis Blues, and he responded by giving the Blues a chance at the National Hockey League's playoffs.

"When I came to the Blues, they had 10 points and were in last place," the six-year pro noted. "Now we have a shot at second place and the playoffs."

The Blues are currently in fourth place in the NHL's Western Division, three points out of third and four out of second place.

Since he was traded from New York Rangers to the Blues in late November, Berenson has scored 16 goals and 19 assists.

With New York he had two goals and one assist.

"I can't blame (Emile Francis, Ranger coach-general manager) or say he made a mistake," the 28-year-old Berenson said. "He just didn't use me because he had the players. The Rangers have had a set club for a long time."

Berenson said the trade that sent him to the Blues in exchange for right-winger Ron Stewart was the biggest break of his career. Berenson said he has much more ice time and has gained a world of confidence.

Bisons Tie Aces 1-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Unless Buffalo Bisons and Quebec Aces break their waltz-time tempo in the Western Division of the American Hockey League, the final playoff berth could be a matter of mathematics.

In last place, each with 58 points, the Bisons and Aces played to a 1-1 tie Tuesday night that did nothing to ease the situation.

In the only other game scheduled, Baltimore Clippers found Phoenix Roadrunners more than they could handle and dropped a 5-3 decision to the Western League team.

Marlies Grab 3-0 Lead

Woodstock Trumps Aces 6-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Scoring against Woodstock Alcans can be dangerous.

This was evident Tuesday night when the Alcans clipped Kingston Aces 6-1 to square at 1-1 their best-of-seven quarter-final playoffs in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

Shortly after Syl Apps Jr. scored the Kingston goal late in the third period, Alcans exploded to score three times in less than two minutes and tie the series.

The third game will be played Friday in Kingston.

Meanwhile in Toronto Grant Moore scored four goals to spark Toronto Marlboros a 7-4 victory over Barrie Flyers. The win gave the Marlies a commanding 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven series with the fourth game set for Friday at Barrie.

In Woodstock, the Alcans were paced by Garry Sharp and Wayne Boddy who scored two goals each. Bobby Robinson and Dave Del Papa scored the others.

Moore shared the Toronto scoring with Bob Fornham, Larry Babcock and Moe Galand while Barrie markers came from Corby Adams with two, Ron Vermette and Ken Robertson.

Adams opened scoring at the 13:03 mark of the first period, but Moore tied the game on a power play at 18:30.

At the end of the second the score was 4-4, but in the third Moore put the game out of reach with his third and fourth goals with Galand firing Toronto's seventh goal.

The Marlboros play their fourth game Friday at Barrie and Kingston travels to Woodstock for the fourth game Sunday.

Body Says Gifts Won't Jeopardize Nancy's Amateur Status

OTTAWA (CP) — Nancy Greens Brand X skis and the other gifts she has received as an olympic champion took the limelight Tuesday as she returned to her birthplace for a world champion's welcome.

The plaque she received from Mayor Jean Drapeau in Montreal, the silver jewel box presented to her by Ottawa, the gold watch from a former coach, the very skis she wore in winning the gold medal for Canada at the winter Olympics in Grenoble, France, all were related to an ancient Olympic rule saying competitors can't accept gifts worth more than $50.

The relevance of the rule to modern times is reflected in the fact that the gold medal Nancy won is itself worth more than $50.

And the World Cup for Alpine Skiers, of which she became the first winner last year, is worth more than $500 and is a permament prize.

"The rules are so silly, the rules are so outdated, that nobody follows the rules," Miss Greene, 24, said in a bristling reply to questions about whether the gifts threw her amateur status into jeopardy.

Saying she regards herself as "a non-commercial skier," she added that she has no intention of turning professional.

"I want to remain amateur for two years," the spunky champion from Rossland, B.C., said.

President Pierre Alain of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, said neither Nancy nor the association has any reason to believe her amateur status is in jeopardy.

The statement by Alain was issued in reply to a report quoting Nancy as describing herself as "an amateur professional" and outlining the gifts she has received.

"Nancy is anxious to enhance the national team's financial position by charging for personal appearances," the Alain statement said. "However, she intends to work through her ski association for all contributions, both those given in the past and those that will be given in the future."

At Grenoble, Olympic officials refused to allow competitors to pose for publicity shots with their brand-name skis.

Mrs. Pat Ramage, women's coach of the Canadian team, said it couldn't enter the Olympics without the $50,000 worth of equipment manufacturers provide.

Nancy herself said she was given a watch by Dave Jacobs, of Lang-Jacobs, an old friend.

"Most of the presents I've received have been from friends," she said.

As for gifts like the plaque from Mayor Drapeau or the silver jewel box from Mayor Don Reid of Ottawa, "Am I supposed to give them back and say I don't want them?"

Nancy returned to Montreal today after breezing through an Ottawa luncheon, a parade, a visit to city hall, and a night-time skiing demonstration on a west-end slope.

Margaret Rideout, Liberal MP for Westmorland, was so impressed by the poised skier that she suggested that Nancy go into politics. Nancy just grinned diplomatically.

Four Western Rinks Traffic-Jam Top

WINNIPEG (CP) — Saskatchewan lost its cool in a crucial game Tuesday night, and slipped into a four-way tie for first place in the Canadian women's curling championship.

Saskatchewan's Barbara MacNevin and her Delisle rink met a fired-up Alberta representative in the family-foursome skipped by Hazel Jamison of Edmonton. The result was a 16-2 drubbing.

The encounter received top billing in fourth-round play, but failed to reach expectations as the Saskatchewan four conceded after eight ends. It ended Saskatchewan's winning streak at three.

Saskatchewan's 3-1 won-lost record now is shared by Alberta, Manitoba's Mabel Mitchell of Brandon and British Columbia's Myrtle Fashoway of Cranbrook.

Four rinks are jammed at the bottom with 1-3 records.

They are Shirley Robertson of Halifax, N.S., Gladys Carruthers of Charlottetown, P.E.I., Jeanette Blair of St. John's, Nfld. and Peggy Wherrett of Dryden, Ont.

Other action in the fourth round saw Manitoba down Nova Scotia 11-5, British Columbia take an extra end to defeat Newfoundland 10-5, Quebec topple P.E.I. 11-9 and New Brunswick down Ontario 10-5.

Mick Says Stick Will Click In 1968

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The psychology of contract negotiations has taken over camps.

The trick, of course, is for the players to remind the owners how important those hits and shutouts were last season, and for the owners to get off as cheaply as possible for 1968.

MICKEY MANTLE

Curt Flood and Mickey Mantle headed Tuesday's list of players reaching terms while Cincinnati with Jim Maloney, Vada Pinson and Pete Rose among the dissatisfied, seems to be having the most trouble in the signature derby.

Flood, who hit .335 for the world champion St. Louis Cardinals in 1967, signed for $75,000 —a figure he described as "a happy medium" between what he was asking for and what the Cards were offering.

Price was never a problem for Mantle, New York Yankees' veteran slugger. He signed his sixth straight $100,000 agreement with a pledge to improve on the .245 batting average and 22 home runs he had last year.

Phil Seghi, Cincinnati's assistant general manager, said he plans no discussion for two or three days with Maloney, Pinson, Rose, Chico Ruiz, Tommy Helms, Mel Queen and the Reds' other non-signees.

"This is a period of meditation for them," said Seghi.

Clete Boyer has not yet reached terms with Atlanta and when he does, he'll find the Braves' camp a beehive of activity.

"We'll be out on the field from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. if necessary," said new manager Luman Harris. "Whatever it takes, we'll use."

The Yankees eliminated two signing problems by placing injured third baseman Charlie Smith on the restricted list and withdrawing John Boccabella's invitation to training camp.

Ontario Women's Curling

Heather White Unbeaten

TORONTO (CP) — Rinks from Orillia and Burlington remained undefeated Tuesday night after two days of competition in the southern Ontario women's curling championships.

In sixth round play Tuesday night, Heather White of Burlington trounced Jean Drennan of Toronto Humber Highland 11-5 while Orillia's Helen Varley took a hard-fought 7-4 win over R. Bell of Windsor.

The winning skips, heading the only undefeated rinks in the 16-rink, double knockout competition, clash today in the first match of the seventh round. Competition ends Thursday.

Eliminated Tuesday were Tillsonburg, Sudbury, Fenelon Falls and Oshawa. Six other rinks still in contention are Windsor, St. Catharines, Meaford, Toronto Scarborough, Humber Highland and Trenton.

By Degrees

Palmer Easing Out!

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Palmer, golf's greatest money winner, is calling it quits—by degrees.

"Don't misunderstand me," the muscular millionaire said Tuesday.

"I hope to be around for a long time.

"But I'm easing out, as of now.

"You might call it a phasing-out operation. I'll be getting out, but I'm going to do it in a way that no one will notice. I'll just drop a tournament here, take a rest there. But I'll be around for the big ones.

"Look I play 14 or 15 tournaments a year. Maybe more. I'll just cut down a little at a time."

Does that mean that the fierce desire is no longer there?

"It's just that the time comes when you have to start thinking about easing off.

"This might even help my game."

Gibson Blasts "Bible"

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — An angry Bob Gibson, St. Louis Cardinals' outstanding pitcher criticized Tuesday a publicized editorial that disapproved of his "patience and affability."

Gibson said an editorial in the

BOB GIBSON

Current Sporting News, "teed me off." The editorial questioned his actions when he told a photographer in St. Louis to "see my agent." The photographer asked to take a picture of Gibson with the car he was awarded by a magazine for his 1967 World Series play.

The right-harder explained that he felt an automobile agency was using him for publicity purposes. Gibson pointed out that the auto was given to him by the magazine, not the agency, so he refused to pose for the photographer.

Terrorist Bomb Found in Mount Royal Mail Box After Riot

MONTREAL (CP) — A terrorist bomb was found in a mail box in suburban Mount Royal Tuesday night during the height of a fight-punctuated demonstration by more than 2,500 persons.

A policeman successfully dismantled the bomb.

Police Chief Walter Boyle of Mount Royal said the bomb was discovered during a routine clearing of the box.

He said a note from a "known" terrorist organization was attached to the explosive device-described as small but potentially lethal.

The discovery was made after a wild mob of demonstrators marched past en route from a strikebound Seven-Up plant to the suburb's city hall to back Mount Royal blue collar workers who have been on strike for several weeks.

Six persons—five men and a woman—were reported arrested during the outbreak of violence and dozens of people were injured.

The demonstrators smashed windows, tore down signs, attacked police with burning placards and touched off fires during 2½ hours of turmoil through the streets of the fashionable suburb.

The demonstrators smashed windows of several firms, battered at least two police cars and a radio station news cruiser and threw fire bombs at the soft-drink plant.

Several police were among the injured as demonstrators hurled rocks, ice and other objects at them. A demonstrator was beaten severely after throwing a flaming placard at police lines.

The protest was organized by a dozen labor and political groups and originally was intended to back 106 workers on strike at the bottling plant for the last eight months.

A large contingent from the separatist Rassemblement pour l'independance nationale joined members of the Quebec Federation of Labor and the Confederation of National Trade Unions at the start of the march.

Chanting "re-vo-lu-tion" and "en bas les scabs"—down with the scabs—the marchers smashed windows along one side of the plant, tore down drainage pipes and used them as battering rams on garage doors.

The demonstrators were met at city hall by suburban police, reinforced by that time by about 150 riot-trained provincial police.

After hurling projectiles and slogans, the mob headed back to the soft-drink plant. They dispersed after discovering that police had reached the plant before their return—but only after a fresh outbreak of violence.

School Boards Fear Political Control of Educational TV

OTTAWA (CP) — Divergent opinions on the possible misuse of educational broadcasting facilities were placed before the Commons broadcasting committee Tuesday by three Ontario groups.

The Ontario education department and the Metropolitan Educational Television Association of Toronto both suggested problems along this line are unlikely to arise and could be resolved easily if they did.

But a joint brief by the Ottawa public school board and the city's collegiate institute board sounded a clear warning that "cultural" educational TV should not be placed under provincial government control.

The Ottawa boards said instructional TV programs tied directly to school courses, for children or adults, obviously come under provincial constitutional jurisdiction. But they doubted that broader programs of a cultural or enrichment nature should be classed in the same way.

"It would be extremely dangerous if this kind of programming were left in the hands of any form of political body at the federal, provincial or regional level," the joint brief said.

"Many examples could be cited where political power has been used to slant public service programming, to the point where it has become a vehicle of political propaganda.

"In view of this, we strongly recommend that the control of the broadcast medium for educational purposes be allocated to non-political authorities."

A. P. Hanwell, in charge of TV production for the public school board, said in reply to questions that he is not worried about possible misuse of an ETV system by the Ontario government at this time.

But he added:

"There are certain provincial authorities that I would hate to see in charge of ETV."

He was not taking the attitude that there could never be misuse in Ontario, only that "I don't envisage it happening here now."

The Ottawa boards suggested creation of a non-political federal agency that would make recommendations on the issuing or withdrawing of ETV licences. Representatives of provincial governments would be on this board.

Such a system would give the non-political federal authority the right to recommend withdrawal of a licence where it felt ETV was being turned to propaganda purposes, Mr. Hanwell said.

This brief was in contrast to the one by the Ontario education department presented earlier in the day.

William Davis, provincial education minister, was quite definite in maintaining that once federal facilities are made available to the provinces for ETV the content of the programs should be strictly a provincial responsibility.

He also urged the committee to make all possible speed in putting its recommendations before Parliament and in getting a bill through to set up ETV.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are planning to go away for a few days skiing holiday. Could you list for me some good places to ski in Ontario, and anything you can tell me about them.

ANSWER: Here are some top places in Ontario you can go to. They are:

1 — Blue Mountain, Collingwood. The biggest (eight open slopes, 16 downhill runs, 12 lifts) busiest ski spot in Ontario, Blue Mountain was top rated by a good margin. It has the greatest variety of runs and the hill is the highest in the area.

2 — Beaver Valley, Flesherton. A most pleasant spot for the average skier, Beaver Valley is one of Ontario's oldest ski areas. Its hill is ideal for the intermediate skier.

3 — Georgian Peaks, Collingwood. It has some fine easy skiing plus a good test for the expert; and has the best artificial snow in Ontario.

4 — Horseshoe Valley, Barrie - Collingwood Horseshoe has a very friendly environment and is one of the best organized areas in Ontario. The area's situation in a snowbelt, plus the sunshielding shape which provided the name, allows Horseshoe Valley to hold its snow long after other hills are bare.

5 — Mansfield Skiways, Alliston. A pretty casual, friendly ski area, Mansfield has aimed at the family trade. The hill is not overly difficult the atmosphere relaxed.

6 — Hidden Valley, Huntsville. With its three-tiered discotheque styled lodge, Hidden Valley is the top spot for the go-go crowd. The cold Muskoka nights and an expensive snow-making set-up gave the area more days for skiing than any in Ontario last winter.

7 — Talisman, Kimberley. This plush, complete resort in the Beaver Valley is Ontario's finest, except for the shortness of its ski runs. For facilities and atmosphere, Talisman is tops.

8 — Mount St. Louis, Barrie. Opened three years ago, this area rapidly gained popularity. It's easy to reach from Toronto by Highway 400. A good hill holds its snow well.

9 — Limberlost, Huntsville. Despite its small hill, this homely old lodge in the Muskoka bush attracts the skier who wants peace and quiet. After a snowfall and with the lake in the background, "it's one of the most beautiful spots in Canada," enthused one pollster. "And the food there is superb".

10 — Ottawa—Hull, Camp Fortune Ski Area, has 15 open slopes, four downhill runs, double chair lifts, one J-bar, two poma, two T-bar, ski lifts, six rope tows.

11 — Smith's Falls, Rideau Ski Club. Two open slopes, one downhill run, one cross-country trail and two rope tows. Under development, chalet snack bar, skating and tobogganing.

Napanee Tax Rate Stabilized

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — After a 26.5-mill tax increase over the last two years, council Monday night held the line on taxes for this town of about 4,500 population.

The 1968 mill rate will be up one-fifth of a mill for commercial and industrial ratepayers, and will decrease one-tenth of a mill for residential property owners.

The new rate for homeowners is 92.5 mills, which means taxes of $277.50 on a home assessed at $3,000. For such a home this brings a 30-cent saving over last year's taxes.

Robichaud Plans to Make French Official

FREDERICTON (CP) — The speech from the throne of the 46th legislative assembly Tuesday said what had been expected for several weeks: Premier Louis Robichaud's Liberal government will attempt to implement French and English as official languages in New Brunswick.

While neither language is official, English has been predominant in official use in the province with a population of about 600,000—60 per cent English-speaking and the rest French.

Shulman Tables Rebuttal to Parker Report

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, fired by the Ontario government as chief coroner of Metropolitan Toronto, Tuesday released a report criticizing a provincial royal commission report that criticized him.

Dr. Shulman, New Democratic member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, said in his 65-page rebuttal the commission did not consider "what is the proper function of the coroner, nor did it question whether his actions 'were in the public interest.'

"In the matters which it does consider, its conclusions are in striking contrast with the facts from which the conclusions are drawn," Dr. Shulman said.

His rebuttal was tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

The commission, which consisted of William Parker, justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, studied inquests and investigations relating to 13 deaths before rejecting Dr. Shulman's allegations.

Dr. Shulman said in his report that the commission raised only legal questions.

"What really matters is not the question of law, but the issues raised by the charges," he said. "These are issues relating to public safety, public welfare and public interest. They are not questions of law at all."

He said this basic question remains: "What is the real purpose of a coroner's inquest?"

"Is it merely to determine the cause of death, or is it to determine, first, what was the cause of death and second, can a recurrence of such a death be prevented by remedial measures?"

Dr. Shulman said Judge Parker "decided that I was glib, irresponsible, unworthy of belief, inconsistent, and finally smack of McCarthyism, a technique repugnant.

"In reply I have . . . presented the facts of each case as extracted from the official transcript, together with Judge Parker's judicial conclusions.

"I invite the people of Ontario to read this volume and also Judge Parker's report and then decide where the truth lies."

Strictly Personal

True Strength Always Reveals Itself Through Gentleness

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

As I was edging out of a parking - lot the other day, some Clyde in his Bonneville cut sharply ahead of me, flashed a sour smile of triumph in my direction, and scooted away.

He evidently thought he had "won" something, but in my view, he had lost. He thought he was displaying strength and aggressiveness; I thought he was displaying weakness and bad manners.

What the prevailing ethos in modern American life does not seem to understand is that true strength always reveals itself in gentleness and courtesy; this was the whole medieval idea of knighthood and chivalry — a knight was chivalrous because he felt strong enough to afford it.

We tend to confuse rudeness with power, and aggressiveness with virility. Many, if not most, of the bad-mannered drivers on the road are slack-jawed youths who privately feel weak and insecure in their personal relations with the world; tooling a ferocious car gives them a vicarious sense of power they do not posssess in person.

Genuine strength of character is always accompanied by a feeling of security that allows one to practice civility and courtesy — but in our perverse culture, civility and courtesy are often regarded as signs of weakness or some lack of "manliness."

And it is largely this perverse evaluation of what constitutes manhood that accounts for so much of the dangerous discourtesy on our nation's highways — somehow, the education of boys here has stressed aggressiveness at the price of gentleness, so that many youths act like boors in order to be thought of as "men."

This is fairly indigenous to our culture; in other countries a more balanced view is taken of what comprises "manliness," and one of the main criteria of an adult male is his considerateness for others. And the poor result of our misconception of manhood can be seen in many failing marriages, where the wives uniformly complain that their husbands are just "little boys who failed to grow up."

There is little doubt in my mind that girls here grow up to be women more easily and successfully than boys grow up to be men; or that most "immaturity" in the marriage relationship is displayed by the husbands. Women have other conjugal faults, but they tend to accept adult obligations with better grace than men do.

No one, to my knowledge, has ever made a study of the social psychology of driving; but I think that such a study would show that the males with the worst manners are the least sure of their masculinity and the most resentful toward the deeper responsibilities of manhood. For true strength always exhibits itself in generosity of spirit.

Summerside Air Station Won't Close

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — Government leaders are now optimistic over the future of the Canadian Armed Forces air station here. But there is lingering doubt whether the station would continue at its present level of activity.

The 10,000 residents of Summerside, second largest community in the province, have been hearing rumors for months that the station would be closed or that some of its activities would be decreased.

A delegation, headed by Premier Alex Campbell and Mayor George Key of Summerside, met with Defence Minister Cadieux in Ottawa Monday and were assured the rumors were unfounded.

Premier Campbell said Tuesday he is considerably more optimistic over the future of the station.

The provincial legislature has unanimously passed a resolution to the federal government protesting any planned decrease in activities at Summerside.

U. S. Buys Arms Here

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States placed contracts in Canada in 1967 for about $305,000,000 worth of armaments, informed sources said Tuesday.

The figure is preliminary and the final one is not yet available.

The tentative figure, however, represents a decrease of $12,000,000 from the $317,000,000 worth of arms contracts placed in Canada by the U.S. in 1966.

Canada in 1967 placed orders in the U.S. for about $290,000,000 worth of arms, a decrease of $42,600,000 from the $332,600,000 figure in the previous year.

Despite the increasing tempo of the Vietnam war, American arms orders from Canada slackened slightly last year in comparison with 1966.

There have been frequent calls by some politicians and some university professors for Canada to halt arms sales to the U.S. altogether, on the grounds that some of these weapons are used by the Americans in Vietnam.

Skelton, Master of Silent Art Gives Delightful Performance

NEW YORK (AP)—Once a year Red Skelton treats the television audience to a one-man show in which the performer does what he does best—pantomime. His Tuesday night CBS hour for this season was a taped program of pantomime performance he recently gave on a New York stage for an audience drawn from the United Nations.

Skelton, a master of the silent art, was by turns funny and sad, gay and wistful, staggeringly drunk and shaking with old age. He moved from one characterization to another with ease, used few props in most of his sketches and delighted his audience.

Although there were announcers on hand to give the names of Skelton's numbers—"A Girl Dressing in the Morning," "Man at a Drive-in Movie"—in English and French—the veteran clown had no problems of communication with anybody.

One of the most moving of his sketches was an old man watching a parade. And he apparently can not resist slapstick. Perhaps the least effective number in the show was the one in which he had some help, playing a raffish old man conducting a courtship with the agile little old lady next door.

Later Walter Cronkite appeared in a half-hour program giving a report on his observations during a recent visit to Vietnam.

The first part of the program was a sort of illustrated briefing on the Tet offensive by the North Vietnamese, some interviews with military men and experts, with emphasis on the breakdown of the pacification program.

Most interesting was the conclusion when Cronkite presented his "personal, subjective" thoughts about the situation. His impression, generally, is that the confict is mired in stalemate, that the character of the conflict has changed now that the North Vietnamese have switched from guerrilla tactics to "a more Western style of war."

It was not an optimistic report, and Cronkite gave it in cautious language.

Recommended tonight: Present Laughter, ABC, 9-11 EST, adaptation of Noel Coward's 25-year-old comedy, with Peter O'Toole and Honor Blackman.

Heart Catheter Can Assist Diagnosis

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Could you explain in layman's language what heart catheterization is; why it is necessary; how it is done and what the mortality rate is at the age of 60? — C. C. T.

Your veins, as you know, carry blood back to your heart before recirculating it. Well, if a catheter (small tube) is inserted into a vein of fair size, usually in an arm, the tube will follow the vein until it reaches the heart.

Afterward, the catheter is withdrawn, and the only aftereffect is the rather trivial incision where the tube was inserted in the arm.

There are various benefits from doing this, most of them related to a more exact diagnosis of the condition of a person's heart. Pressure can be measured at various points inside the heart. This can be very helpful in ascertaining the condition of certain values in the heart. The oxygen content of the blood at different points also can indicate how effectively heart and lungs are working.

Since the progress of the catheter can be watched with a fluoroscope, it is also possible to use the catheter to introduce a quantity of dye which will be visible on the fluoroscope or with X-ray. The progress of the dye, as the blood flows through the heart, can let the doctor see any defects that exist, as well as indicating their location and size. It is quite possible, with proper equipment, to take X-ray motion pictures of this.

Thus, catheterization becomes a valuable addition to the other diagnostic tools — electrocardiogram, stethoscope and conventional X-ray.

Naturally the catheter must be inserted gently and carefully but the techniques have now been developed to a stage at which even quite small children have it done repeatedly with no harm. Much more accurate information as to how they should be treated for various heart conditions results. Thus an adult of 60 certainly should not be unduly alarmed over having it done.

As time passes, new uses are found for catheterization. One is using the catheter to carry fine wires and a faint electric current into the heart itself, for "pacemaker" use, or regulating the heart beat.

But the more common use is for diagnosis of heart defects.

Dear Dr. Molner: Have you any information on an itching nose? It is becoming very annoying. I've tried to keep my nose out of other people's business so I don't think that is the cause. — Mrs. L. R.

There are too many causes of itchy nose to try to guess. It may be allergy or worms. Better talk to your doctor who may (depending on whether the itch is inside or outside) send you to an ear-nose-throat specialist, or to a dermatologist.

Dear Dr. Molner: With a detached retina of the eye, is it always necessary to have surgery to correct it? Is surgery always a success? — Mrs. M. Y.

There is little to be done, as a rule, except surgery. There is constant improvement in methods, but — and you can say this of almost any operation or treatment — there is no way to guarantee that every case will be a success.

Knowing when to undertake such eye surgery, and estimating the probability of success, is so complicated that the only good advice I can give you is to ask your eye specialist for his frank opinion. If he says there is a good chance of success, then go ahead. Delaying invites total loss of vision.

Napanee News

Schedule Crowded In Scout Week

NAPANEE — Boy Scout and Girl Guide leaders had difficulty in arranging events for Boy Scout week, to enable the commissioners and their assistants to be present at each. Scouts and Cubs have three events: church parade, father-and-son banquet, and Open House, or parents' night when the public is invited to view displays of work the boys have done as Scouts or Cubs. Some of the activities had to precede Boy Scout week, and some have not yet taken place.

The earliest of the church parades was held February 11 in St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church, when the First Napanee Scouts and Cubs, joined the Rangers, Guides and Brownies of the district in a colorful and impressive service. A week later, Feb. 18, the Third Napanee Scouts and Cubs paraded to Trinity United Church, to take part in a service conducted by the minister, Rev. Irvine Johnston, a Queen's Scout. The Second Napanee patrols and packs have postponed their church parade in Grace Church until March 10, when the boys will have completed their Religion and Life course, and their awards can be presented.

All three Napanee groups have now held their banquets, the first in St. Mary Magdalene Church on February 9, and the Third on St. Valentine's Day. In both cases Paul Coakwekk showed slides of the Scout Jamboree last summer in Saskatchewan. The Second Napanee banquet was Monday of this week, when films were shown.

Parents and friends visited Grace Church Tuesday night of Boy Scout week for the "Open House" of the Second Napanee, and the following night the boys of the Third Napanee displayed their work for their parents and friends in Trinity Church. The date for Parents' Night has not yet been set for the First Napanee in St. Mary Magdalene's church.

Guides and Rangers of Napanee united for a dessert party for mothers and daughters in Trinity Church Monday, Feb. 12, and the same church saw mothers and daughters attending a Brownie dessert party on Feb. 13.

Thursday of last week saw the newly-formed Sea Scouts of Deseronto having fun at a birthday party to honor Lord Baden Powell, founder of the movement, and last Friday evening the father-and-son banquet for the Sillsville troop and pack was held in the church in Sandhurst.

Church Groups

DESERONTO — At last week's meeting, the members of the evening branch of the ACW of St. Mark's Church made plans to hold a party for the patients in the Quinte Beach Nursing Home o nthe outskirts of Deseronto. On March 13 they are taking the normal refreshments for a party, with fruit in addition. They have made arrangements for games such as cards, or will just visit with the patients, if that is what they prefer.

The group decided that a suitable way to express their sympathy for a former rector in the loss of a son would be to make a donation to a memorial fund set up for the son. Major Harold Coleman, the son of Rev. Canon Coleman, died recently in Petawawa, and a memorial fund has been established, the funds to be sent to another son, Rev. Kenneth Coleman, for his work as a missionary in India.

Date for the annual bazaar was set for October 23.

President Mrs. Robert Tucker was in charge of the meeting, which had a routine opening. Minutes read by Mrs. John Punchard, secretary, and the treasurer's report, presented by Mrs. C. A. Sergeant, were accepted.

The success of the St. Valentine's Day tea and sale was discussed. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. A. F. Dowdell for making the rectory available for the event.

Entertainment and refreshments followed the formal meeting.

Alaska's Output of Petroleum Cuts Into Canada's Markets

WASHINGTON (CP)-Fast-rising Alaskan petroleum production has already begun to bite into U.S. markets available to Canada. More competition can be expected.

Alaska is the 49th state but now 10th in production of crude oil, averaging 155,000 barrels daily. The bureau of mines of the interior department says that by the end of 1968 more than 200,000 barrels a day may be moving south by tanker to refineries in Washington and California. Production started only 10 years ago.

The U.S. Pacific northwest lacks low-priced U.S. crude from any other source Canadian oil has been finding a market there—an official allocation last year of 144,000 barrels a day and actual deliveries of 195,000 due to shortages caused by the Middle East war.

The U.S. import allocation for Canadian oil for the first seven months of this year, however, underlines the bigger role Alaskan oil is playing. Canadian imports are down to 135,000 and could fall farther.

Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says Alaskan prospects are "extremely bright." His department has tentative plans to start in 1969 on sales of off-shore—or continental shelf—leases for oil and gas exploration. By last December, the state had 94 producing oil wells, 58 off-shore. Output doubled over 1966.

Confidence also is expressed about outlets for natural gas.

Gas reserves, coupled with new technology and Japanese interest, are also facing a rosy future, the mines bureau says

Japan has contracted—on a long-term basis for 50,000,000,000 cubic feet annually. The gas will be liquefied and transported in specially-designed refrigerator ships. The shipping plant is under construction.

The bureau says a chemical fertilizer plant and others for producing chemicals including ammonia are in the works.

In 1967, Alaska was able to sell only one-seventh of the 62,000,000,000 cubic feet it produced. The rest had to be burned as fuel for operating the petroleum field, stored or used to increase oil output by applying more pressure.

1967 Demand Heavy For Crown Lands

TWEED — Year end reports indicate that 1967 was the heaviest year for sale and development of Crown lands.

Two hundred and thirty-five private cottage locations were sold on lakes north of Kaladar and in the Bancroft area, with Clarendon, Kashwakamak, Weslemkoon and Baptiste Lakes being the most popular choice.

Baptiste Lake is now closed to further development and Kashwakamak Lake will be closed within the next two or three years.

These closures are mandatory as prescribed in the Public Lands Act, which requires that on lakes where the Crown is the owner of a greater amount, a minimum of 25 per cent of the total shoreline must be reserved for public use.

Applications were accepted and approved for commercial marinas on Skootamatta Lake and an extension to an existing commercial site on Weslemkoon Lake. A commercial enterprise has also been established on Crown land at the north end of MacAvoy Lake in Effingham Township and a new commercial establishment was surveyed and approved on Clarendon Lake.

About 165 lots remain in the Crown land inventory for private purchase. The Department of Lands and Forests has recommended that an additional 200 lots be made available on ten lakes now under development.

Inquiries as to the availability of Crown land in the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac and Renfrew should be made by mail or in person to the district forester, Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed.

Liberal Government Wins Vote of Confidence, 138 to 119

OTTAWA (CP) — As generally expected, the minority Liberal government won its vote of confidence in the Commons Wednesday.

Now it must find a way to replace the revenue lost Feb. 19 when a tax bill, which was to raise $550,000,000 in the present and coming fiscal year, was killed by a Commons vote.

In Wednesday's vote, labelled by Prime Minister Pearson as a test of confidence on which the government would rise or fall, the Commons voted 138 to 119 for the government.

Mr. Pearson said later the government will introduce new fiscal legislation—he didn't say when—to replace the revenue lost when the tax bill was defeated.

It was supposed to raise $210,000,000 through a five-per-cent surcharge on personal income tax that has been collected since Jan. 1, and $340,000,000 from the accelerated collection of corporation tax

Because the same legislative measure can't be introduced twice in one session, a new tax to raise the revenue will have to be found.

The usual way to increase taxes is through a budget. But whether one will be presented before or after the Commons rises in mid-March for the Liberal leadership convention is a question only the government can answer.

Mr. Pearson said Wednesday the House probably will adjourn during March for the convention April 4-6 that will choose his successor as Liberal leader and prime minister.

Although the government's future appeared in doubt for a time last week, a promise of Creditiste support for Mr. Pearson's confidence motion gave it relief.

But the 129 Liberals who voted Wednesday could have swung the victory alone. They were supported by the eight Creditistes and Independent MP J. A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivieres).

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, the 130th Liberal, doesn't vote because of his office.

The 119 opposition MPs arrayed against the government included 93 Conservatives, 20 New Democrats, three of the four Social Credit MPs, Gordon Churchill (Ind. PC—Winnipeg South Centre) and independents Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke) and Gilles Gregoire (Lapointe).

Mr. Churchill illustrated the seriousness with which MPs took the crisis Tuesday when he left the Conservative party to sit as an independent Conservative on the grounds that it had "capitulated" in not prolonging the debate.

Abstaining from the vote, though present, were H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West), Jack McIntosh (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek), and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo).

The only MP who wasn't in the House was Reid Scott (NDP—Toronto Danforth), ill in a Toronto hospital.

Three Commons seats are vacant.

The turnout was better only once in Commons history—the 1962 confidence vote that brought down the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker.

Smiling Fly-In

Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle (right) and Ald. Gerald Joyce had good reason to smile at CFB Trenton yesterday. Flying in to confirm a new $2,000,000 industry for Belleville were Allied Chemical president Max Hendrick and Robert Aitken, general manager of new plant.

Civic Leaders Are Jubilant

Seldom has an industry moving into a community generated the enthusiasm evident in Belleville today with the announcement of Allied Chemical that it is to be in production by the end of this year, civic leaders are jubilant.

Coming on the heels of industrial expansion last year centred around Superior Electric building a subsidiary plant here, the industrial commission and the city is hoping Allied's move here will spark an industrial splurge.

The Intelligencer takes a look at Belleville's latest acquisition on the first page of the second section.

At last night's announcement celebrations:

- Canadian President Max Hendrick told the Allied story.
- General Manager R. C. Aitken said "I've already bought a house."
- And the employment picture brightens.

Forty Workers Get High Pay

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

New industry for Belleville dropped from the skies yesterday.

Flying into CFB Trenton, officials of Allied Chemical Canada clasped hands with city representatives, sealing a $2,000,000 boost to Belleville's industrial assessment.

That's the quoted value of Allied's latest venture, a small — but highly-automated — plant producing food packaging, employing about 40 and scheduled for operation by December.

Construction of the sophisticated production facilities is to begin in April — on a 20-acre site in northeast Belleville, south of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

The project links Belleville to a global network of United States chemical enterprises, counting customers in more than 80 countries.

Value of the plant's payroll was not estimated by company officers.

However, city industrial commissioner Ray Brown believed it might be in "excess of $250,000" annually.

"It must be borne in mind that this is a highly-automated facility."

Robert V. C. Aitken, general manager of the new plant, emphasized the operation would require a high degree of worker skill and "we expect to pay accordingly."

"I think you can look to us for a very high payroll," he added.

The plant will process a packaging film trademarked as Capran, a derivative of a nylon product used in a wide range of products by Allied's customers.

The production process requires "very sophisticated" control systems, explained Max Hendrick, Allied's Canadian president.

To confirm the city's new industrial arrival, Mr. Hendrick flew in from Montreal, flanked by a retinue of company officials.

On familiar ground — he once was stationed at Trenton RCAF base — he met Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle and members of the Belleville industrial commission.

Winters Quitting Cabinet To Make Leadership Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Winters, who said 48 days ago "I am ready to go back to private life," now is prepared to stay in politics and go for the top job.

Reliable reports Wednesday said he has tendered his resignation from the cabinet.

The 57-year-old engineer, businessman, university executive and sometime art patron is expected to announce Friday he will, in fact, be a candidate for the Liberal party leadership. He will be the 12th man in the race.

It ends April 6 at the party's national convention here and the winner a few days later will succeed Prime Minister Pearson as head of the government.

Mr. Winters conferred with Mr. Pearson Wednesday after the government was sustained in its crucial confidence vote in the Commons. He then closeted himself with his advisers.

A committee of MPs, and committees of Winters supporters across the country, have been pressing him to stand for party leader and prime minister.

Mr. Winters expressed strongly his dislike for the current kind of leadership campaigning. He believed that to run properly a minister should resign from the cabinet, cutting his governmental responsibilities and severing the ties of cabinet solidarity.

When he announced Jan. 12 he did not intend to run for the leadership, he left the door partly ajar. He said he had already had several hundreds urging him to run for the leadership, but didn't know whether that was a draft.

He said a few weeks later he might reconsider if circumstances changed. He said Wednesday the circumstances had, in fact, changed considerably.

He found growing support and, apparently, growing room for a moderate right-wing candidate in the race.

Mr. Winters has advocated balancing the budget in prosperous years and what he called "fiscal integrity." If he had been finance minister, he said, he would have made balancing the budget a goal "and I am confident that it could have been done."

Nixon's Growing Strength Forces Romney From Race

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — Governor George Romney of Michigan has quit the Republican presidential race two weeks before the New Hampshire presidential primary because of sagging support and the growing strength of Richard Nixon.

The eyes of many Republicans also focused on Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York as a candidate to run against the Democrats in the November general election.

Rockefeller said the wishes of his 26 fellow Republican governors will be a major influence on his future course.

Romney said only he will "support wholeheartedly the candidate for president to whom the Republican governors give their support." So far, those governors haven't given it to anybody.

Romania Wants Apologies From China's Critics

BUDAPEST (AP) — Romania today demanded apologies from the Soviet Union and other nations that have attacked China at the Communist conference in this Hungarian capital and threatened to walk out if the apologies weren't forthcoming.

It appeared unlikely that any apologies would be made at the meeting of delegates of 66 Communist parties.

Romania also demanded an apology from Syrian Communists, who accused the Romanian government of following a pro-Israeli policy for nationalist reasons.

Marchand Tells Johnson To Mind Own Business

QUEBEC (CP) — Manpower Minister Jean Marchand Wednesday night told Premier Daniel Johnson to mind his own business and stop trying to destroy Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau as a candidate for the prime minister's office.

Mr. Marchand, delivering an attack on the Quebec premier at a meeting of his federal riding association, said he will keep on criticizing Mr. Johnson so long as he continues to intervene in federal affairs.

The leader of the Quebec wing of the federal Liberal party said the race for the national leadership of the federal Liberals is "none of Mr. Johnson's business."

On 14th Birthday, He Gets Long-service Medal

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Fred Howard marked his 14th birthday today — by receiving a long-service medal.

As CNR Special Agent Howard, Fred has been in charge of railway security in this part of Ontario for some years.

In all, he has been with the force 25 years — and the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police sent him his award today.

It arrived with his Leap-Year birthday, and since Feb. 29 comes only every four years, it's an event he has only known 14 times in 56 years.

He joined the railroad force at Guelph in 1941, and has served at Fort Erie, Parry Sound, Stratford, Kitchener and Brockville — where he was promoted special agent in 1961. The following year he was transferred to Belleville.

It's not the first time the officer has been singled out for special mention. In 1950 he was cited for single-handedly extinguishing a fire which threatened the Fort Erie station.

Also awarded a long-service medal today was CNR Constable Francis Culhane, who joined the force at Belleville in 1943.

The presentations were made by Inspector Stewart Barth, of Montreal.

A Medal--and Only 14?

CNR special agent Fred Howard was a Leap-Year baby 56 years ago . . . so today he celebrated his 14th birthday. He also received his long-service medal with Const. Frances Culhane (rear). Pinning it on are Inspect. Stewart Barth, Montreal, and Harry Fast, CN Rideau area manager.

'Y' Report Shows Increase In Membership, Small Deficit

"A good attendance" was present at the YMCA Wednesday evening for the annual meeting of the Association.

Following a dinner and greetings from the city of Belleville, delivered by Alderman Donald Williams, two youthful members of the YMCA, Danny Bone and Valerie Geen, spoke to the members of what the organization had done for them.

Leaders Fellowship Awards were presented to Mrs. Nancy Jackson and Harry J. Fast.

President of the YWA, Holway gave his report, stating that the YMCA had had a 20 per cent increase in membership during Centennial year.

As well he reported that 69,835 persons had attended the Y's facilities during that time.

Mr. Holway explained that during 1967 the budget of almost $69,000 came as close as possible to a balance due to the increase in membership.

H. A. Messacar, general secretary of the YMCA, mentioned "special efforts" made in the areas of fitness, community service, leadership training, family programming and work with teens.

Jack Mosley, treasurer reported that revenue had amounted to $57,227.85 compared to an expenditure of $69,741.85 causing a deficit of $12,514.

During the meeting H. B Varcoe, D. Ashley, David Bell, Mrs. Donald Lockyer, Stuart Robertson, John Steadman, John Hayman, Robert Icely and Eric Deacon were appointed as directors for the next year.

Harry J. Fast became the new president last evening taking over from W. A. Holway. J. S. Hayman became vice-president, Jack Mosley was re-elected to treasurer and Mrs. Donald Lockyer became secretary.

Failure Motivates People: Speaker

Judge William T. Little, Judge of Juvenile and Family Court for Metropolitan Toronto explained to YMCA members at their annual meeting last night the importance of failure and self-image concerning youth.

"Failure motivates people very much and to some self-assurance never comes back."

He outlined some causes of a feeling of failure in today's youth, inability to retain or attain friends, relationships with the other sex, or failure to gain admittance to certain organizations.

He cited examples of what youth will do when it feels that it has failed. "They react by wearing strange clothing such as the group in Yorkville. These are failures. I don't believe those people are happy. If they had been successful I don't think they'd be there."

Judge Little mentioned other ways of reacting to failure, such as taking drugs, marijuana, LSD, cigarettes and alcohol.

He explained that failure can cause mental illness and suicide, citing statistics of youthful self-inflicted death.

He defined self-image as "the way you see yourself."

"A child derives an image of himself from those around him, father, mother, brother."

"Self - image will mean success or failure to an individual. Many, by their own standards, consider themselves failures."

He suggested that school could be one of the many troubles with self - image.

"At least 25 per cent of all children fail once during public school and more than once during high school."

Parents were another source.

"How often have you seen parents try to make their children what they themselves failed to be?"

Judge Little explained that today the young do not wait for opinions from adults but formulate their own.

"The role of parents is changing from authority to guide of authority."

"The YMCA has a real responsibility. If our children are the clay of civilization then we are the potters."

Allied Will Build Automated Plant

paired to the Hotel Quinte's Pinnacle Room, where formal announcements were exchanged.

A combination of "certain fortunate circumstances" resulted in Allied's choice of Belleville, Mr. Hendrick revealed.

These were tariff protection, assistance under the Ontario government's industrial equalization program and "great pains" taken by city officials.

Mr. Hendrick said "modest tariff protection" would help offset higher costs of operating a small plant. While waiting for domestic expansion, excess production may be exported under Commonwealth preference.

"We are in Belleville due . . . to the efforts of the Ontario Development Corporation and its system of incentives," he revealed.

"This makes the location in Belleville economically much more attractive," added Mr. Hendrick.

"In addition, the city itself has gone to great pains to assist us . . . and given us the land for a nominal sum."

Such incentives, he said, make the difference between a viable and marginal venture.

While the Belleville plant "will be substantially bigger than the market calls for today" he was optimistic of growing markets.

". . . And I assure you," Mr. Hendricks told the civic representatives, "your desires to expand in this city are equalled by our desires to expand with you.

"We will use all our ingenuity to find means of making this plant grow."

Four Africans Stranded on Bridge

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP)—Four Africans have been stranded on a bridge over the Zambezi River for five days after being deported by Zambia and refused entry to Rhodesia.

One reason for the deportation was that they did not have identity papers, which is the same reason Rhodesia refuses them entry.

A government spokesman said here the men claimed to be Rhodesians and it was up to them to convince the Rhodesian authorities of this. Rhodesian border officials believe the men may be connected with African nationalist groups.

The men are reported in bad shape due to lack of shelter and food.

The military spokesman said the government troops were sweeping across Gia Hoi Island in an area still largely under Communist control when they found the cave filled with the bodies of South Vietnamese abducted from Hue earlier this month by Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces.

Ice Truck on Ice

One of Glen Roy Creamery's ice trucks discovered yesterday that it's simpler to carry ice than to drive on it. The truck, owned by Donald McNevin, slid off the driveway beside the creamery and fell over the ledge coming to rest on its side on the railroad tracks.

Drawing Card for U. S. Visitors

'Living Color' Campaign to Attract Tourists

TRENTON — The Department of Tourism is convinced "the medium is the message."

A spokesman for the provincial government said Wednesday night Ontario is launching a "living color" campaign as a drawing card for potential visitors.

Fred Boyer, executive director of the Department of Tourism and Information was in town to give tourist "traders" in the area a preview of his department's 1968 advertising campaign.

And the featured attraction was a trio of 60-second, full-color film clips designed to capitalize on the fact that color television sales in the United States have tripled in the past year.

"We direct about 75 per cent of our advertising budget (which last year was about $1 million) towards the U.S.," Mr. Boyer said "and we now know that some 23 per cent of American homes are equipped with color television."

The 180 seconds of film represent epic efforts to capture "brief experiences of Ontario's vacation pleasures."

"In producing these commercials our crews have travelled over 2,100 miles, visiting some 28 locations, and shooting more than 23,000 feet of film. This is roughly equivalent of a movie the length of 'Cleopatra' or 'Gone With The Wind'."

Ontario's debut into television this year will portray, primarily for U.S. audiences, the "adventure vacations" that await them here.

The potential U.S. visitor will see Ontario as the home of the trout, the go-go dancer, and the Old Fort Henry Guard.

". . . Each commercial has been designed to allow the viewer to become emotionally involved . . . to feel part of the scene, and to feel closer to Ontario.

"Television, that highly potent mass communications medium, will bring the full impact of Ontario's sights, sounds, colors, and vitarity alive."

Not that the province has given up on the printed word as a tourist-bait.

A 48-page "lure-book," also in full color, will "sell Ontario's contracts, people, varieties, events, and activities" to potential tourists.

Mr. Boyer promised the new publication will contain "fewer words and more pictures," and will be a first-class booklet" designed for coffee tables, not glove compartments."

The lure book will follow the 1968 Ontario tourism theme of a province "Friendly, Familiar, Foreign, and Near."

And like other printed advertisement, it will be highlighted by pictures of Ontario's "photogenic personalities," including miners, fishermen, beach bathers or bush pilots.

Included in the 1968 campaign will be a follow-up of the successful co-operative advertising program initiated during Centennial year with Quebec. "Heritage Highways" literature recommends a holiday along the scenic and historic route from Niagara Falls to the Gaspe.

All this in addition to the extensive full-page advertising campaign directed at outdoors magazines, and other publications. "Every major magazine in the United States featured Canada last year," the Tourism spokesman noted.

A major emphasis in Ontario tourism promotion for 1968 will be on the fact that Ontario has no "off-seasons" for visitors — a skiling vacation can be just as rewarding as a fisherman's holiday.

Centennial A Breakthrough For Tourism in Canada

TRENTON — Centennial year in Canada marked a breakthrough in tourist promotion for Ontario.

Fred Boyer, executive director of the provincial Department of Tourism and information made the observation at a preview of his department's 1968 advertising campaign here last night.

Attractions like Expo did more than yield record-breaking revenues throughout Ontario, he said. They created an unprecedented awareness of what this province has to offer to other Canadians, as well as to visitors from outside the country.

"In 1967, Canada and Ontario made more good news in a mass communications sense in one year than in the 99 that preceded Centennial. Last year, we learned to take pride in our achievements, and to enjoy ourselves."

The Centennial fact also laid foundations for increased tourism in the future, Mr. Boyer said, with the creation of new accommodation, new entertainments "calculated to keep our guests a few hours, or a few days longer."

"Today, Ontario has tourism facilities that it can sell in world markets with a pride and confidence never before possible."

"Last year, travel spending in Ontario alone reached 1.5 billion dollars," Mr. Boyer said.

The Tourism spokesman stressed the importance of advertising Ontario's drawing cards, since "the starting point for a vacation is intelligent, informed, compelling awareness."

Mr. Boyer said U.S. awareness of the pleasures of an Ontario vacation "has been of a low order."

"Ask the man on the street in Chicago about Moosonee. Would he shoot it, wear it, or visit it?"

Budget Increases

TRENTON — Ontario's tourist trade will likely reap "modest" benefits from U.S. President Johnson's attempts to curb American tourism abroad.

This was the opinion of Fred Boyer, executive director of the Department of Tourism and Information.

Mr. Boyer said President Johnson's New Year's Day announcement indicated a program aimed at "reining in the free - spending, globe - trotting U.S. tourist abroad.'"

Any extra flow of visitors into Ontario from south of the border this year would help alleviate an anticipated post-Centennial slump, he added.

He predicted a possible drop of 10 per cent in U.S. tourism in this province from 1967, but told his audience the government will increase its $1 million advertising budget to meet the challenge.

"What our advertising program will say, in effect, to potential U.S. visitors is: 'You don't have to cross the pond — we've got an ideal vacation spot right here in Ontario . . . and President Johnson won't get mad at you!"

OPP, City Police Searching for Suspect

An O.P.P. and Belleville City Police stake - out yesterday and last night failed to nab a suspect wanted for questioning.

Police were acting on a claim by a 17-year-old Belleville girl that she had been raped late Tuesday night.

The stake - out was planned after the girl informed police officers that she had suggested a meeting with the man for the next day on the Shannonville road about nine miles east of Belleville.

A police spokesman stated, "I think she was playing it cool," in explaining why the meeting was suggested.

The girl, from the Bayview area in Belleville, was picked up just before midnight Tuesday night by a man who showed her some form of identification and who said he was a policeman.

She got into the car and they went east to Shannonville and then north to Highway 401.

Here the girl said she attempted to get away and according to her statement, was dragged back into the car and raped.

Afterwards she was brought back to the Bayview area, near her home and freed. She went home and told her parents what had happened. She was taken to Belleville General Hospital, where she is at present.

According to police the girl had "two badly lacerated knees", scraped hands and elbows, a bruised face and a cut lip.

The girl explained to police that she had left her home at 11.30 p.m. to meet her boyfriend when the man came along.

Belleville detachment of the O.P.P. has taken over the investigation.

Two Wolves Shot

AMELIASBURG — Two Gosport youths are riched because a pair of brush wolves ventured too far away from the wooded protection of Presqu'ile provincial park and wandered out on the ice of Brighton Bay.

Bill Quick and Doug Cooper shot the pair and will collect the bounty of $65 paid by the county of Northumberland.

Incidentally, taxidermist Stan Olsansky of Stirling is looking for a wolf's head to stuff and mount for a cubmaster at Cooksville. He has made enquiries at Lands and Forest offices at Presqu'ile Point and Tweed.

Life on the Farm

Communications as the key to increased efficiency and productivity in the agricultural sphere in an era when the farm population is declining was the theme of Monday's address to Rotary by W. Esmond Jarvis, assistant to the deputy minister of agriculture.

A native of Glasgow, Manitoba, Mr. Jarvis was able to draw on his own experiences as a youngster out west where people were even closer to the land than in the industrial east.

The close ties between the farmers and the business and technical people upon whom the farmer must rely ever increasingly today Mr. Jarvis contrasted with life on the farm only a generation ago.

Then, most city children had a grandfather or grandmother, an uncle or an aunt or some other relative living on the farm. They could visit a farm readily. All in all a much greater percentage of people were associated with farming.

Today, with many leaving the industry and training for positions in the urban world, those remaining in agriculture have to make a special effort to "communicate with the non-farming public."

Yes, it is a changing world in agriculture as in other spheres. And as Mr. Jarvis suggested, it is one in which the old family ties that bound the industry together have been loosened considerably and technology has taken over.

Vietnam Ambushes

It would make interesting — if melancholy — reading — to know just how many United States soldiers have lost their lives in ambushes in Vietnam.

Ambushes by the communists are frequent and often follow a pattern the Americans by this time should have learned to avoid. In one just the other day a survivor said the U.S. patrol point man saw two North Vietnamese soldiers moving away and the platoon chased them, a common manoeuvre to lure troops into an ambush.

The result, according to the survivor, "A whole bunch were killed in the very beginning."

A second platoon of 45 men sent to their aid also suffered casualties. Yet we never hear of the tables being turned and the North Vietnamese or Viet Cong being ambushed. Nor do we hear of ambushes being sprung on the Australians who have some 10,000 men fighting in Vietnam. But then, they are waging guerrilla-style warfare based on their jungle training in Malaya.

It seems the Americans are only inviting trouble by establishing fixed bases that with the best will in the world (as in the case of the French at Dien Bien Phu) are still vulnerable, and by sending out patrols into enemy country. They might just as well use binoculars or reconnaissance planes. It would probably save lives in the long run.

Glimpse of Tomorrow

A fashion magazine has been indulging in some flights of fancy about the future.

Naturally the space age intrudes so that interplanetary suits and eye makeup inspired by the galaxies enter into this feature on the women of the 21st century.

Nor has food been forgotten, for if clothes maketh the man, or woman, so too does food play a major part in our lives.

Perhaps the most interesting glimpse of the world of 2,000 and beyond is afforded by this observation on the subject of education: "Everybody will be going back to school periodically. The university is going to become a really marvellous institution, with tools like individually-selected and articulated two-way TV that will permit any student anywhere in the world to select from a vast stockpile of documentaries in any subject and watch it on his own TV set at home."

Yes, that likely is the way it is going to be. At Expo and here in Belleville — at the Science Fair and Hobby Show (being featured again, incidentally, next month) we have seen such developments as telepones combining two-way televised pictures of the speakers.

Of such will be our possibly brave new world, provided it does not approximate too closely the predictions of H. G. Wells or George Orwell — on the subject of atom bombs and big brother and all that.

Ottawa Offbeat

'Spend' and 'Save' Synonymous in Mitchell Sharp's Book

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Had you forgotten, for one gloriously untroubled moment, that other crisis?

(Could be there have been so many in these last five star-crossed Liberal minority government years that who can keep track of the disaster-days and of what particular section of the federal roof is falling in.)

Well, this "other" crisis is the dangerous financial bind crippling the economy with ever-rising living costs, still-spiralling interest rates, falling federal bond prices and a weakly wavering dollar.

The direct disastrous result of runaway federal spending, the crisis is still here.

And the merest glance through the new federal spending estimates makes it painfully plain that, barring miracles, it can only get worse.

Because almost every one of the 605 pages of those estimates is dollar-by-dollar evidence that Lester Pearson's and Mitchell Sharp's understanding of the words "savings" and "economy" is not the meaning found in the dictionary.

It was only four months ago they promised a worried Parliament that in the government's new spending estimates "hundreds upon hundreds of millions of dollars" would be saved.

They were going to cut back unmercifully, they swore time and again, swinging the axe ruthlessly on the 65 federal desions and assorted government agencies that last year spent $9,927,698,631.

(That, of course, was only part of the bill, just the cost of the departments, with everything else in addition.)

Well, the cutting, chopping, slashing, trimming has all been done, and the estimates reveal — surprise, surprise — that Lester Pearson and Mitchell Sharp "saved" those solemnly promised "hundreds upon hundreds of millions" by planning to spend $357,033,401 more than last year.

(That is federal "officialese" for you, the double-talk of the bureaucracy in which save apparently means spend.)

Give them their due though—for in 12 of the 65 departments they really were saving, in the meaning of the word, $281,619,260.

But in 53 other departments they were going to spend $638,652,661 more than last year.

So, if two and two still makes four, Lester Pearson and Mitchell Sharp were going to "save" by spending a net $357,033,401 more.

Some "saving!"

But that is not the sickest part of the federal financial joke.

The biggest laugh comes when you look over the 12 departments on which they were going to be spending less.

And you know where they were making the greatest saving?

In the Secretary of State Department where they are going to "save" by not spending $34,468,200 on the Centennial Commission.

That is what they spent on it last year.

They are not spending it this year — not so much as one penny of it, those miracle federal cabinet economizers — because the Centennial was last year and the Commission, its job well done, has gone out of business.

What kind of people must those gold-dust twins, Lester and Mitchell, think Canadians are, to try palming off a piece of financial phonus balonus like that?

It is like Lester Pearson, not so long ago, at one of his press conferences, confided with a chuckle.

When you are in government, he chortled, you "save" by not spending something you were not going to spend anyway.

That is the way he personally did it, he confessed, when he was deputy minister of external affairs.

Then he had maybe $50,000,000 to play around with.

In the current estimates there is almost $10 billion with which to pull sick financial jokes on the taxpayer.

Immigration Headache

Montreal Gazette

Day by day, the issue of race produces more trouble in the world. This week, prejudice in two countries, Britain and Kenya, is uprooting thousands of Asians and leaving thousands more to an uncertain future.

Since the beginning of the century, some 200,000 Asians, Indians and Pakistanis, have settled in the former British East African colony of Kenya, and they have prospered there, adding a skilled middle class to the population, which lacked such a class.

Though Kenya needed these immigrants to fill jobs as managers and clerks, tradesmen and shopkeepers, their position in Kenya caused widespread resentment in the native population.

In December, 1963, when Kenya gained its independence, the 40,000 Asians who were born in Kenya were automatically given Kenyan citizenship. The rest were given the choice of Kenyan or British citizenship. Most of them, more than 100,000, chose British.

During the last four years, as Kenya became more nationalistic, there has been a gradual exodus to Britain, rising from 500 a month to 1,000 a month last year.

Late last year, the pressure became stronger in two new laws restricting the jobs permitted "non-citizens." The exodus to Britain swelled to 1,000 a week.

But prejudice, unfortunately, is not confined to developing nations. It lives in Britain, too. And sufficient pressure has been put on the Government to have it push through a law this week which will cut all immigration from the Commonwealth to a total of 1,500 a year.

Many Britons are ashamed of the law. It seems incompatible with the tradition of British justice and the meaning of the British passport. The whole matter is a sad one for the nation.

Kenya may soon have more cause for sadness. If all the Asians who are not citizens are expelled, the Kenyan economy may be seriously crippled. It does not have enough skilled Africans to replace them.

Elliot Lake Go-Go Girls

Letter to The Globe and Mail

It was with absolute disgust that I viewed your feature front-page picture of Toronto go-go dancers at Elliot Lake. As a subscriber to your paper, I do not wish such a picture staring up at us at the breakfast table in the future.

I have always considered myself to be rather broadminded and far from being a prude, but as the mother of four young boys 12 years and under, three of whom are at a very impressionable age, I do not feel that it is at all necessary to have such unsolicited vulgarity find its way into my home— if such were the case the news stands are full of it.

I am sure that many parents share my feelings.

Tax on New Enterprise May Discourage Industry

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It seems to the writer that the matter of a tax on Cablevue to be levied by the city is being kept rather quiet. Is it apathy on the part of the citizen, or is it sheer indifference to matters that seemingly don't directly affect the individual? If this is the case they would seem to be in for a shock.

Surely the proponents of this unprecedented tax aren't so naive as to think that the principals (Cablevue) are going to, or will be, in a position to absorb this charge. It will be a direct increase to the user. I do not believe that the specific amount of tax has been suggsted. Is this then, not carte blanche permission to charge whatever the traffic will bear?

The point that escapes this writer is why this particular service has been singled out for this taxation? I am sure they, like all other businesses, pay their business tax. Are they perhaps making use of city land? Are they using city equipment? Are they asking for any other form of municipal assistance? No! None of these apply. Does it then not seem that they are being discriminated against?

In the event this taxation was approved, would this not be the thin edge of the wedge to levy a tax against other services? Why not? There doesn't seem to be any qualification necessary.

At a time when we are bending every effort to entice industry to our city it would seem prudent to discourage any unusual levies however small, that would in any way cause negative thinking on the part of prospective industries. Surely if they think we are looking for such far out sources of revenue, they might well fall victim to our whimsical taxes.

Let us not be penny wise and pound foolish and most of all let us be fair and encouraging to new businessess and services.

JAMES CATHCART,
65 Elizabeth Crescent.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 29, 1968 ....

The calendar was reformed by Julius Caesar 2,014 years ago today—in 46 BC—setting the solar year at 365¼ days and giving February 29 days every fourth year, instead of 28 days. Caesar abolished the use of the lunar calendar and the intercalary month, and regulated the civil year entirely by the sun. With the advice and assistance of Sosigenes, he decreed every fourth year should have 366 days and the others have 365. The first Julian year began with the first of January of the 46th before the birth of Christ, and the 708th from the foundation of the city. In order to simplify matters he ordered that the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth and eleventh months—that is January, March, May, July, September and November—should have 31 days each, and the other months 30, excepting February.

1792—Italian composer Giocchio Rossini was born.

Berliners Support U. S. Stand

Montreal Gazette

The popular view on the Vietnam War depends largely on geography.

Those close to the conflict believe U. S. intervention is justified and necessary, that Communist aggression in the area must be halted. The free nations of Southeast Asia believe this. South Korea, Australia and the forces to the fight.

In the United States and Canada, opinion is divided. In Western Europe, far from the confrontation, the war is generally condemned.

One European city, though, rejects this attitude. In one European city last week, in reply to an anti-American student demonstration, 150,000 people gathered to demonstrate solidarity with their "American friends."

That city was West Berlin, deep in Communist Germany, where the people know well the face of Communism. The speeches were many and so were the posters — "Berlin Stands By America" and "Peace for Vietnam: Yes. Communism for Vietnam: No."

Romania Points the Way

Moscow's Influence Over Its Satellites Is Slipping

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Moscow, which once ruled the Communist roost with comparative ease, seems determined to defy opposition and seek restoration of some measure of its old monolithic control over the world movement.

But the current conference of international Communists in Budapest indicates that the opposition has taken on a fervor reminiscent of President de Gaulle's refusal to acquiesce to any American claim to all-powerful status among Western countries.

The Russians long ago wrote off China as impossibly rebellious.

Now they find difficulty in bringing to heel a Communist country modest in size but sharply independent in spirit—Romania.

At the time Soviet arms brought Romania forcibly into Moscow's camp, the Russians under Stalin, flushed by this and other Second World War triumphs, were enjoying a maximum of undisputed power in the rapidly-expanding Communist world.

Gradually the East European and later the Chinese Communists developed sufficient muscle within their national spheres to shake free from absolute subservience to Moscow's wishes.

Romania for some years has been a sparkplug of this trend in Europe.

Currently that country's Communist party opposes Soviet efforts aimed at speedily bringing on a Communist world summit —a Kremlin policy considered a first step towards re-establishment of Moscow's hold over disciples of Marxism-Leninism everywhere.

There is even talk of Russian moves to set up a central co-ordinating agency for Communist parties in all countries.

Suggested as a possible Soviet choice for top man in such an organization is Wladyslaw Gomulka, first secretary of the Polish party's central committee.

But a plan of this sort is bound to arouse bitter memories of the now-defunct Comintern, an agency used by Stalin to ensure his iron rule over international communism.

The Russians at present are in a position unheard of in the Stalin era—having to justify their claim to primacy among international Communists.

They can point to some success for their two-pronged policy of peace co-existence with the U.S. in a number of areas—Latin America, for instance—and support, sufficiently indirect to avoid world war, for "anti-imperialist" efforts in areas deemed ripe for revolution, primarily Vietnam.

Alluring as this "best-of-both-worlds' strategy may be, there was no sign early in the Budapest meeting that such delegates as the Romanians were succumbing to arguments for an omnipotent Moscow.

Ship Burns, Eight Men Missing

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A collision between an oil tanker and a Japanese logging ship in dense fog Wednesday turned the tanker into a mass of flames fed by 300,000 barrels of oil 350 miles off the mouth of the Columbia River.

Eight men were reported missing in the crash between the Liberian ship Mandoil II and the Japanese vessel, the Suwaharu Maru. Elias Karavitis, captain of the tanker's all-Greek crew, was reported badly burned in the crash.

A coast guard spokesman said the captain and 32 of the 41-man Greek crew were picked up by another Japanese freighter, the Kure Maru.

Research Group Predicts . . .

Britain Better Than Canada for U.S. Investment

LONDON (CP) — A British economic research group predicts Britain may fare better than Canada as a site for foreign investment by American companies.

The National Institute of Economic and Social Research, in its quarterly review of world conditions, refers to the fact Canada and Britain are numbered among countries partly exempted from a far-reaching clampdown on the flow of American capital abroad.

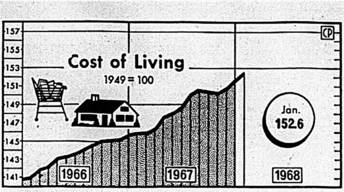
The review, published today, says U.S. firms may tend to concentrate in Britain the expenditures they are allowed to make in the partly-exempted countries.

Among reasons cited was the fact "investment in the other countries in the group, particularly Canada, was exceptionally high in 1965-66."

The independent, privately-operated institute says:

"The Canadian economy should benefit this year from faster growth and stronger demand in the United States, although the last survey of investment intentions did not point to an early revival in fixed-asset formation and this is not now expected to show much increase in 1968."

The institute warns against increases in British consumer spending and estimates that the hard budget expected next month should provide for tax increases totalling between £450,000,000 and £600,000,000.



The consumer price index rose to 152.6 in January, almost a point higher than the December figure. In December the index stood at 151.8. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said the index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, was 4.5 per cent higher than a year earlier. The rise was a result of increased costs for food, housing, tobacco and alcohol. (CP Newsmap)

Charlie MacLellan has interesting views on life insurance and his London Life policies.

Halifax businessman has special reasons for London Life policies

(Is it because he gets a good return on his money?)

Charlie MacLellan was born in Pictou, N.S. During the war he was an artillery officer teaching maths and gunnery theory in Halifax. He grew to love the city and eventually returned there to live.

He now owns one of the most successful car dealerships in Halifax. He had two specific purposes in mind when acquiring his London Life policies:

"For most people, buying a business means borrowing money. And, consequently, you need a lot of temporary financial protection for a minimum cost. For instance, if I died it was very important that my estate should have sufficient cash to repay the outstanding part of my loan.

"So my two $25,000 term insurance policies with London Life cover part of that particular and temporary risk.

"On the other hand, I look upon my two Jubilee policies as both protection for my family and as forced savings. I'm afraid I'm a good spender! Probably the only money I save, other than the equity I'm building up in my business, is through my insurance policies."

Here are the facts. Charlie has two types of Jubilee policies. A $10,000 whole life, purchased when he was 36. And a $5,000 life premiums to 65, purchased when he was 41. His monthly premiums amount to $34.24. By age 65 he will have paid in $11,069. But, if he leaves his dividends to accumulate, he can take out $16,893*.

"Like any businessman, I'm looking for a good return on my money and with London Life it's very good." Charlie has great respect for his London Life representative, too.

"Dave calls me once a year. We get together in the afternoon or evening to review my needs. I appreciate the time he spends bringing me up to date on my program."

A London Life representative doesn't consider his job finished when you've bought a policy. He knows people's needs are constantly changing and he will offer advice whenever you require it.

To learn how much return on your money you could get with London Life, talk to a Company representative. And send for your free copy of the handbook "Plain talk about life insurance". Write to Department A, London Life Insurance Company, London, Ontario.

This figure is made up of $8,820 in guaranteed cash value and the balance in accumulated dividends based on the current scale. While dividends are not guaranteed, London Life for years has had one of the most outstanding records of dividend payments in North America.*

New Calendar Is Needed

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large on Leap Year Day:

Our whole foolish and cumbersome calendar system needs a thorough overhauling today, just as the Gregorian Calendar overhauled the ancient Julian calendar four centuries ago.

We need an utterly new World Calendar, with a year of 13 months divided equally into four weeks each.

Each week would begin on a Sunday and end on a Saturday, as it should. Each year would begin on a Sunday.

In this way, holidays would be uniform each year, thus saving many millions in labor and production costs, and providing a more rational basis for vacations.

There would be no need for a Leap Year Day every four years, and therefore no need to reconcile solar and lunar reckonings of time.

Payments of salaries, rents, and other financial transactions would be made at an even rhythm, without the present need for special computations because of extra days or short months or other irrational calendar factors.

The same day would fall on the same date each and every year, making for great simplicity and regularity in planning for the future.

At present the day of the month which fell on Monday last year will not fall on Tuesday this year, but on Wednesday, for an extra day is added to February on Leap Years. Both Christmas and New Year's Day will fall on Wednesdays in 1968 which merely interrupts the workweek without giving adequate holiday time.

We are now beginning to reach some uniformity in coinage (the British are changing to a decimal system of money and are approaching some uniformity in weights and measures (with the adoption of the metric system in most scientific and technical areas); yet our system of dating is archaic, inaccurate, unwieldy, inconvenient, unfair and difficult for future projections.

Everyone would benefit from the change to a World Calendar, and no one would be harmed; nevertheless, despite the absence of vested interests against this proposal, human inertia is so great and the hand of habit so heavy that virtually nothing has been done to make this simple, and ultimately quite economical, reform.

If the human race can't obtain action and co-operation on a proposal that would help all and hurt none, how can we expect any kind of consensus for proposals where some self-interest is involved?

Easy to like.

That is if you like an easy whisky. If so, you should have no difficulty liking 5 Star.

Where things get difficult is in making a whisky this good. It means selecting whiskies from our five distilleries across Canada (only Seagram's has 5, by the way). Then blending and re-blending them to get 5 Star's easy taste.

Is it worth all the trouble? Easy for you to find out.

Surtax Collected Averages Under $4

OTTAWA (CP) — Most taxpayers have so far been docked less than $4 due to the federal surtax in force since Jan. 1.

The government is in the process of withdrawing the surtax, following defeat of the legislation that gave it formal status.

A tax credit will be granted for the amount paid, but it is so small that most Canadians will hardly notice it by the time they get around to making out their 1968 tax returns a year from now.

A revenue department spokesman said Wednesday that the surtax amounts to $4 in January and February for a single taxpayer with a gross annual income of $5,000.

A married taxpayer with no children, earning the same amount, has been assessed $2.50 in the two-month period.

For a married taxpayer with two children and an income of $5,000, the tally is $1.66.

Most taxpayers earn less than $5,000, and even a $10,000 single man has turned over only $14.50.

The five-per-cent surtax applies to federal income taxes after a basic $100 exemption. There is a limit of $600 on the amount any one person must pay.

Finance Minister Sharp estimated it would mean $25,000,000 in total revenue for the last three months of the current fiscal year- January, February and March. He expected it would mean $185,000,000 for the fiscal year 1968-69, which begins April 1.

The surtax is collected, along with regula income taxes, on the basis of deduction tables provided for employers by the government.

The revenue department spokesman said there is no way of knowing until the end of the year how much income tax has been paid or should be paid by any individual. This makes refunds of the surtax impossible.

Two Services On World's Day of Prayer

Things have been changed for the World's Day of Prayer March 1 this year.

A spokesman for the Belleville Ministerial Association revealed today instead of one service being held in the afternoon and attended almost exclusively by women, there will be two services and men are invited to join in.

The first meeting will be held at 2:30 p.m. in St. Margaret's on the Hill Anglican Church. Captain June Dwyer of the Salvation Army will speak.

Later on in the day, at 8:00 p.m., a second meeting will be held in the Wesleyan Methodist Church at Everett and Henry Streets. Rev. J. Wm. Lamb will officiate.

Representatives from different denominations will be participating in each service and in the choirs.

The program, prepared by Mrs. Rathie Selvaratnam of Ceylon, has the theme, "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens."

Mrs. Selvaratnam is chairman of the Asian Church Women's Conference.

Brantford Children Beaten to Death

BRANTFORD (CP) — Mary Biron, 35, of Brantford was charged Wednesday with the non-capital murder of her two children, who were found in their home, apparently beaten to death with a hammer.

Mrs. Biron was taken to hospital where she is reported in serious condition from an apparent overdose of pills.

The woman's husband was at work a few blocks from his home when the bodies of Pierre, 6, and his sister, Christine, 4, were discovered by six-year-old Gordon Lee when he called at the home Wednesday to walk to school with one of the children.

Wrestling Title A Triumph

Townsend--Top Sports Figure and All Round Student

By STEVE BISHOP

Football, hockey and basketball player, wrestler, water skier, track man, gymnast. And a fine student to boot. That's Quinte Secondary School's Harold Townsend one of the finest athletes Belleville has seen in many a year.

The All-Ontario wrestling title he won at Centennial Saturday night was one of his greatest athletic achievements but it was by no means the first triumph he has achieved either as an individual or as part of a team. It was not even his first provincial championship.

Harold has spent the better part of his 20 years in one type of athletic endeavor or another, and often more than one in the same season. In the winter of 1966-67 for instance, he competed for Quinte in basketball and wrestling, and played Junior "B" hockey.

He was born in Kingston, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Townsend, and moved to Belleville when he was two. The family returned to Kingston long enough for Harold to attend Kingston Collegiate for Grades nine and ten.

His first venture into organized competition was squirt hockey. This career blossomed and carried him through four years of Junior "B".

He began his football career at KCVI in Grade nine. Since coming to Quinte, he has been the leading ball-carrier on the senior squad that has swept the Bay of Quinte title for the last three years, and won COSSA title in 1966.

He has competed in gymnastics at both KCVI and Quinte. Track is one of his less successful sports, but, in Grade 9, he was a member of the KCVI relay team that won the COSSA championship.

Last winter was the only one in which Harold found enough time to play a full season of basketball, although he has played for the team whenever possible this year.

One of his favorite sports is water-skiing. He teaches it during the summer at Collins' Bay, and last summer he captured the Ontario championship in the Men's Division on a 110-foot rope.

He has received all the sports awards Quinte can bestow upon a student. In 1965-66 he was honored as the student who made the greatest contribution to athletics, and last year he was named the school's outstanding athlete.

With all this, Harold still finds time for his studies. He is in his sixth year of high school, but not because of any academic failure. After completing the four-year course, he decided to go on, and took five-year Grade 12. He is now in Grade 13.

If his marks need be attested to, there is a plaque in a hallway leading from the Quinte rotunda with the pictures of Quinte's outstanding all-round students for each year. In 1965-66 that honor went to Harold Townsend.

Of all his sports achievements, Harold states that the Ontario wrestling title was one of the most thrilling. Certainly it was for those fortunate enough to witness the event.

It was not however, his first wrestling championship. He is a four-time COSSA champion, in the unlimited class in 1965, and the 183-lb. class the past three years. And, adds Harold, "I'd like to thank Mr. Urhunyk for all the help he has given me."

Walter Urhunyk, Quinte's wrestling coach, has been glad to work with Harold.

"Harold Townsend is the hardest-working athlete I've had the pleasure of working with," said Mr. Urhunyk. "He is well-organized. He participates in all these athletic events and keeps in top physical condition. And he fills in the rest of the time with homework."

"And I'd like to point out that the other boys on the wrestling team helped Harold. While I was working with the younger wrestlers, the others helped him develop the moves to go with his strength. He did not win the championship on strength alone."

The athletic career of Harold Townsend is not over yet. Nor, if all goes well, will his academic career be finished at the end of Grade 13. He intends to go on to University. His three choices are Toronto, Guelph, and Queen's.

While at university, Harold would like to participate in football during the fall, and either hockey or wrestling in the winter. He would also like to make the Canadian water-ski team.

Given his ability and dedication, it would not be surprising to see Harold Townsend achieve all this, and more.

Bus Trip to Kingston

Quinte Sponsors 'Man for All Seasons'

By SUE BOARDMAN

WHAT'S BEEN happening at Quinte for the last two weeks?

On the 16th we had another one of our fabulous Quinte dances, with The British Modbeats providing the music. The dance was a great success and I hope all those who attended enjoyed themselves.

Last Wednesday, Feb. 21, Sing Out from Trenton came to entertain us for our assembly. The assembly was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

On Monday our student council sponsored a bus trip to Teenage Dance Party. Forty-one students went to Kingston for the small price of 50 cents each.

• • •

TONIGHT the student council of Quinte is sponsoring the play "A Man For All Seasons" which is being put on by the Clark Players of Newcastle. It will take place at Centennial Secondary in the auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $1 a person, and will be sold at the door.

I'd like to remind all Quinte students, that this is the last week that milk tickets and meal tickets will be valid. Starting next week all foods will be bought with cash.

In my last report, I gave you some information on some of our clubs and organizations here at the school. Today I'd like to tell you about some of the rest of these clubs.

• • •

THE CAMERA CLUB is an organization for students interested in photography. The club has developing and enlarging equipment and a dark room. Members of this club took some of the pictures for our yearbook.

The World Affairs Club is for students who are interested in vital issues of our time. It has a debating team that competes with other schools. It was this club that brought Laurier LaPierre to our stage.

The Library Club provides a service to the school. Experience is gained in checking books in and out of circulation, shelving them, and repairing and classifying the books.

Nearly a whole new squad of cheerleaders will have to be chosen next year. Practice has already begun for those girls who are interested.

Our Band is present at nearly all of our assemblies. Besides this, they represent Quinte in many of the parades in the area. The Band has also given concerts to King George School and Harmony Public School.

KEYETTES is a club for girls in grades ten to 13. They sponsored our first Quinte dance this year. At Christmas time they helped decorate the school and collected goods for needy families. Keyettes operate our lost and found, and if you are hungry after school, the Keyettes are usually selling donuts.

The Art Club is responsible for the posters that advertise coming events at Quinte. They also did the decorations for the graduation, Variety Review, and the Christmas dance.

Lastly I'd just like to remind you that exams start - week tomorrow so you can take it from there.

Concern Over Lack of School Spirit

By STEPHEN HUNTER

THE WRESTLING is over for this year, but before we forget all about it, I would like to add on behalf of all Moira, congratulations to the team and the coach Mr. Bell.

The Trojans placed first among local teams and 13th in the Ontario championships. A record typical of Trojans. So once again, congratulations!

In interform sports, the boys have wrapped up their basketball season and foul-shooting contest and the standings now are: Grade 9 — on top is 9H with 82 points, far ahead of the closest contestants, 9C with 48 points.

In grade ten action, 10F holds the lead with 117 points; 10B are the runners up with 72 point- Grade 11G has the honors with 170 points, while 11C trails close behind with 134 and, in the closest race of all, 13C with 144 (but feeling confident of increasing their lead) holds a small lead over the students of 13A who have managed to accumulate 139 points.

• • •

SPEAKING OF HUMOR, we have the girls' scoreboard report. With an accumulated total of 82 points, 9E holds a very slim lead over 9G with 74. Even closer is the Grade 10 race with 10D at 64 points, only four ahead of 10G.

Grade 11G is on top of their group with 82 points, the margin over the second place team once again standing at four.

On the senior scene Grade 12 BCD is holding the lead over the combined Grade 13 forces. If this continues we may have - cut the privileges of room 212 for the Grade 13 girls — 12BCD has 57 points, 17 better than the second place Grade 13 girls.

IN RECENT years there has been a great deal of concern over the school spirit of Moira, so much in fact that this year a school spirit committee was formed to revive what seemed to be a dying cause. The result was that the committee died of lack of participation.

This is a common disease infecting many organizations in the school. What is the cure? What is the problem?

The problem is more serious than the faculty is ready to admit and not quite as hopeless as the students let on.

It seems at times that the Tse-Tse fly is making its rounds and putting the students to sleep. Those students who are wary enough to escape have to look hard for a place and a time to display their enthusiasm.

At the same time, when the opportunity does arise, the lack of participation is appalling. The winter carnival is a classic example. The turnout at Moira was just over a hundred which is poor considering that the school contains 1,100 able - bodied persons.

The fact that the weekend was a success, with Moira tying BCI for first place indicates that the cause is not lost, and that attempts to bolster school spirit are not entirely in vain.

WHERE IS the spirit? In the study I made, from questioning and from my own experiences, the mainstays seem to be among the Grade 9 and Grade 13 students.

The graduates, senior students with five years or more behind them, have developed a pride for the school, admit it or not. This, coupled with their ability to find places to express their pride, is the reason they lead the polls in school spirit.

The Grade 9 students are very spirited, and in awe of the whole concept of high school, and their high spirits, although not always properly applied, add the necessary color to the school, the harmless fun that all too often is severely suppressed. What happens between Grade 9 and Grade 13 is a mystery to me. There must be something lacking.

THERE ARE some suggestions I would like to make. First, the Trojan identity should be pushed more and adopted as school symbol.

Second, a good spirited song should be produced that appeals to the students.

Third, there should be more interform rivalry, and teacher - student competitions. Finally, a school flag should be designed.

A lot of this could be done by school-wide competition, and could be great fun. If you like those ideas, sign a petition, form a committee, let me know and we'll get something done. It is up to you!

Exams Coming at CSS

By VICKI ANDERSON

IN THE past week not much has been happening at CSS because most of the students have been studying for the exams which are only two weeks away, or attending extra classes after school.

On Monday night the student council finally agreed on the design for the school crest. This design is to be the Centennial emblem with a large circle placed around it.

THE NEW reporter for the months of March and April will be Sandra Kinzel.

This week's poem is by Anna Pertschi.

IF

If all the world were free,
If all the world rejoice
If all the world be never sad,
How would it come to be?

Only if, and only if
You and I be friends
And all within the vast expanse
Be mine and mine be yours.

But mind I say, if
Mine is yours and yours mine
Then all is yours, all mine.
What need be there for foes?

Kampus Kapers Outstanding at BCI

By RON CHAPLIN

OUR KAMPUS KAPERS show this year was the outstanding success expected by everyone here at BCI. It provided us with our last glimmer of glamor and excitement before the pre - exam blues set in.

Well planned and arranged, it included such acts as the Collegiate choir (formerly the Glee Club), a trumpet solo by Ted Shaw, and both boys' and girls' gymnastics, including work on the high bar, the trampoline, the uneven parallel bars, the balance beam, and tumbling.

The band played four selections, one of which was an arrangement of Jean Sibelius' "Finlandia."

A piano ensemble — six players on three pianos performed. They were dance routines in the show — a tap dance by Pamela Thornton, a dance with unusual lighting and choreography by the same and a well - performed and original modern dance on a James Bond theme.

There were comedy acts sprinkled through the show also.

Special mention should be given to two acts in the show. Scott Bradford, who played the Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6, has astounded BCI students with his skill and dexterity, and has performed on the radio, aspiring to go to great heights.

The Charivaris is a folksinging group whose abilities have given them the opportunity to audition for CBC television the results of which they are still awaiting. Good luck to these people.

KAMPUS KAPERS' climax — her crowning glory — was, of course, the staff act. Our favorite teachers paraded for us in shorts, long, straight hair and miniskirts.

Thanks for the memory!

'Youthquake' Success at Nicholson

By DONNA WHALEN

THE RETREAT at NCC (this year called a "Youthquake") astounded, confused and yet clarified the thoughts and ideas of many of our students. The retreat itself spanned an interval of three days during which time everyone was encouraged to participate in the discussions and to think with an open mind.

Communications, forums (group gatherings) and allelus (hootenannys) made up the greater part of the provocative period and "bear pits" (informal meetings) were held on Wednesday night in three different homes. Films were shown in an effort to induce discussion on modern, controversial topics and parents were invited to give their own evaluations and interpretations.

Some students described the ideas presented as liberal; others said they were radical. But ultimately all were unanimous in their decision that this year's retreat retained interest and offered much food for thought.

THE POSTING of a formidable schedule last week awakened students from grades nine to 12 to the realization that in less than two weeks they will begin their second set of examinations.

These exams will be most important for they will determine whether the students can be exempted from writing the final set in June. Although the same consequences hold true for the grade 13s, they don't write their exams until the middle of April, which means that the winter vacation will unfortunately be an excellent time to study.

A VARIETY SHOW is now in the process of organization and will be presented in the near future. Any Nicholson student with talent is asked to curb his inhibitions and submit his name to a member of the Student Council.

800 View Canadian Fashions

OTTAWA CP — About 800 women were urged Wednesday to learn more about Canadian goods, and treated to a gala show of Canadian fashions as a tempter.

The women were attending a conference sponsored by the women's advisory committee of the Ontario economics and development department.

Mrs. Lilah Lymburner, chairman of the women's advisory committee, asked the women to support Canadian goods if, in price and quality, they are equal to imported products.

However, she said it is "nonsense" to buy something just because it is made in Canada.

"We ask that you become wise shoppers . . . You get only what you pay for you are the people who, through discriminating shopping, can help to develop quality in our products here in Canada and wider markets for them abroad."

Women influence the spending of 80 cents of every dollar earned in Ontario, she said.

Mrs. Una Abrahamson, consumer affairs editor for Chatelaine Magazine, said that a discriminating consumer is the Canadian manufacturer's best friend, if the criticism is constructive.

Two South African Housewives Steal Spotlight From Younger Women

CAPE TOWN AP — Eye-catching pictures of film stars, leggy models and bikini-clad beauties have been knocked off the front pages here by two unpretentious South African housewives in their middle years.

In the space of a few weeks, Ann Washkansky, 41, and Eileen Blaiberg, 54, have become the best-known, most-discussed, most-photographed and probably most-admired women in South Africa.

One is the widow of the first person in the world to have his heart replaced by another human's heart. The other is the wife of the only surviving heart transplant patient.

Great courage was shown by the wife of Louis Washkansky, who lived 18 days with a 25-year-old woman's heart before he died of pneumonia, and of Dr. Philip Blaiberg, a retired dentist, who is recovering from his Jan. 2 operation.

The operations placed an immense strain on the two women. Not only were they under extreme tension but suddenly they found themselves in the spotlight of world publicity.

For two suburban housewives unused to anything beyond an occasional meeting of a local women's organization, the situation was bewildering and at times overwhelming.

The trial was more severe for Mrs. Washkansky, a buxom, pleasant-faced woman who immigrated to South Africa from Lithuania as a child. Her telephone never stopped ringing. Reporters and other visitors filled her home throughout the day and evening.

She met all with a smile and unfailing patience.

Then her husband developed double pneumonia 13 days after the operation and died. At the graveside, Ann Washkansky was full of grief but kept herself under control.

Eileen Blaiberg is a composed and self-confident woman.

Ann Washkansky's greatest wish now, she says, is that Philip Blaiberg recover sufficiently "to walk out of Groote Schuur Hospital under his own steam."

"Otherwise," she added, "nothing has been conclusively proven."

Her home has been inundated with letters and cables, many of them written before her husband's death and still coming by slow surface mail. Some were addressed simply "Mr. Washkansky, Africa" or "Heartplant Patient, Africa."

Mr. and Mrs. Barrons were married in Woodfield Anglican Church, Toronto. She is a daughter of Mrs. John Vincent and the late John Vincent. Mr. Barrons is a farmer and an employee of Marmoraton Mines. The couple has two children, Penny and Donald, attending high school.

Mrs. R. Michener Receives Mural

OTTAWA (CP) — The ambassadors' room at Rideau Hall is neither large nor filled with beautiful furniture, but any woman would be happy to browse in it.

Its most recent acquisition is a mural, The Creation, painted by noted Indian artist Arup Das. It was presented to Mrs. Roland Michener, wife of the Governor-General, by the Indian high commission and officials of the India pavilion at Expo.

The mural, which takes up most of one wall, shows people and animals in a rising column which gradually fades into less distinct figures. The colors are varied and bold.

Kitty-corner from the painting is a large wooden cabinet with glass-panelled doors containing a fascinating collection of native dolls Mrs. Michener brought from India.

One doll, not one of the elaborate, eye-catching ones, is said to be a favorite of Mrs. Michener, reminding her of a holiday in Kashmir while her husband was high commissioner to India.

The tiny clay figure is dressed in a brown cotton robe and carries a little fire pot of burning charcoal to provide warmth in the cold climate.

Mrs. Michener has been interested in dolls for a long time.

As honorary president of the Parliamentary Wives Association while her husband was Speaker of the House of Commons, she helped start a collection of Canadian dolls.

Across the room from the cabinet, near the window, a portrait bust is proudly displayed on a large wooden table between two pots of flaming red flowers.

The bust of Arthur Maheux, a former archivist of Montreal University, was sculpted by the Micheners' daughter, Joan. It was modelled in clay, cast in plaster and painted to simulate bronze.

On the floor near the table is a handsomely mounted leopard presented to Governor-General Michener by the people of Kenya. The leopard was also displayed at Kenya's Expo 67 pavilion.

Pork Prices Down at Present

By MARY MOORE

Pork tenderloins were under a dollar per pound. Pork shoulder was a "special" at 39 cents per pound. Hamburg was up to 69 cents per pound and stewing beef was 99 cents. I cornered the butcher and asked why the rise in beef prices.

"Canadian beef is being shipped to Great Britain because their beef population was ravaged by disease."

So folks it is a pork and turkey diet for those of us who are watching costs.

Obviously I bought the pork shoulder, then I selected some canned sauerkraut, went home, invited folks for dinner on Sunday and made what follows:

Menu
Roast Pork Shoulder with Sauerkraut
Potato Pancakes
Grapefruit and Avocado Salad
Cherry Batter Pudding with 10 percent Cream (See Mon. Feb. 19)
Tea

ROAST PORK SHOULDER WITH SAUERKRAUT (serves 6)

3½ - pound pork shoulder (bone - in, rind - on) salt pepper paprika
two 14-oz. cans sauerkraut

Cut rind and some of the fat layer from top of pork shoulder. Sprinkle surface with salt, pepper and paprika. Roast on trivet at 300 deg. Fahr. 4 hours. One-half hour before serving time remove meat from oven and pan and cautiously pour off all but ¼ cup pan drippings. Open tins of sauerkraut and spread over bottom of pan. Put pork on top and return to oven to heat and cook sauerkraut. Serve on preheated platter. Have very sharp knife for carving pork shoulder. (Note: I had 12 oz. waste fat and 6 oz. bone. It was still an economical meal.) Serve with —

Ann Landers

Reader Eats Humble Pie; Now Needs Help

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a male who used to laugh at my wife because she always turned to your column first thing and quoted from it. I'm ashamed to admit I made fun of her . . . and of you, too. Now I am eating a big chunk of humble pie and it serves me right. I need your help.

Our daughter is nine years old and small for her age. Yesterday as she was going from her bedroom to the bathroom I noticed she was wearing a bra. I did a double take . . . couldn't believe it. That kid doesn't have anything to put in a bra and the whole idea is ludicrous.

I went downstairs and asked my wife what it was all about. "Oh," she replied, "Harriet's best girl friend has started to wear a bra and she feels very left out. I bought her one for emotional support."

I told my wife I thought she was cuckoo. She told me to mind my own business. I said I was going to write to Ann Landers. She replied, "Go ahead, Ann will be on my side." How about it? Where do you stand? — GOGGLE-EYED.

DEAR GOG: Not with a nine-year-old flat-chested kid and her cuckoo mother. The way to give pre-adolescent girls emotional support is to help them enjoy being nine years old. They should be taught to wait for adult accessories until the time is right. A brassiere can be a symbol of other things and in this instance the symbolism is all too clear.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the soon-to-be-married girl wanting to know if she should confess all in regard to her past. She wanted to enter her marriage "with a clear conscience." You advised her to volunteer nothing and if he asks tell him, "Take me as I am or not at all."

That was excellent advice and I hope she listens. Too bad you weren't writing your column 16 years ago. May I say a word to every conscience stricken girl who wishes to unburden herself:

Keep your silly mouth shut — unless you are willing to pay for it for the rest of your life. I married a rigid, unbending puritan after confessing an indiscretion which occurred when I was 16. We have been married 14 years and not a single day passes that he doesn't remind me that I was a tramp when he married me. Every time I look at a man he accuses me of something rotten. "If you did it once, you'd do it again."

He has made me feel totally inadequate as a love partner and I have become completely passive in order to protect myself against future accusations. I don't dare show any enthusiasm for his love-making because he wants to know where I learned "that trick."

Two years ago I discovered the Great White Knight had fallen from his horse. I caught him having an affair with a woman at work. His defence was, "I am entitled to do as I please because you did."

Please, Ann Landers, continue to advise girls to keep their lips buttoned if they want to have a happy married life. Telling everything one knows is not a sign of honesty. It's a sign of stupidity. — SORRY.

DEAR SORRY: Thank you for your letter. The last two sentences are gems. Are you listening, students?

* * *

Confidential to I'M FOR YOU, PEACHY: You are right. Too clean is as sick as too sloppy. Moderation makes the best sense. If I had to settle for one extreme or the other, I'd sooner live with someone who is too clean.

Successful Living

Student Impatient with Mom's Ideals

Dear Doris: I am a first year Arts student. I am constantly faced with education, and the more I learn the more I know there is to learn.

My mother does not get out very often. She is a seamstress usually working about 15 hours a day. I find it very hard to talk to her. Everything I say ends in an argument.

I guess I am too over-confident and think I can change the world, but I try to encourage her to broaden her outlook. Paw! Another argument.

Her life is very confined. I like to be on the go, and am impatient with her drawn out stories. — Impatient.

Dear Impatient: If your mother is working 15 hours a day, how on earth can she ever be "on the go"? You're lucky she can still speak to you.

When you talk to her, try sharing this new-found excitement of yours. Bring home a little color about what you are learning; ask her opinion about things. Never, never criticize.

Don't wait until you are 40 to get some grasp of the nobility and patience it takes to stick at a sewing machine from dawn until dusk and beyond.

• • •

Dear Doris: You published the name of a booklet explaining schizophrenia. Would you please send me the booklet? Enclosed is the 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I am particularly interested in the possible effect upon children of people having this type of problem. — Family Member

Dear Member: It can be devastating if the sufferer is in a position of intimate contact and authority. Children need warmth, closeness, normal living.

A boy or girl will look to Mother and Dad for reassurance and steadiness and will depend on the explanation they are given about anyone who behaves abnormally. They should know what to expect of the strange, sick one; and if the explanations are done properly, they may make not too bad a job of adjusting to him.

The excellent booklet is on its way (and may be had by any reader for 20 cents and a large, five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

• • •

Dear Doris: I would like information about electric instant curl and electric comb. I am 16 and have very soft hair.

In place of a hair dryer I want to get either an instant curl or an electric comb.

(1) Can you use both on wet hair?

(2) Is there danger of scorching the hair or burning my skin?

(3) Is it possible to set straight, wet hair into a loose curl with the electric comb?

(4) Which one do you think will be better in my case?
Very Leary

Dear Leary: (1) No.

(2) Yes, plenty. It is just as hot, when hot, as the iron you press your clothes with.

(3) Hair should be dry. The electric instant curl will give a loose curl or turn ends neatly under. The electric comb is sometimes a help in turning up ends in a flip. If you want to do a quick job for a special occasion, these gadgets are a help.

(4) According to my hairdresser, the ordinary rollers give a more lasting curl; and your best investment is in a hair dryer.

The Experts Say

Turtleneck Shirts Here to Stay

MONTREAL (CP) — "It looks as though the big T is here to stay for a long time," says Fredrick Leber, an expert in men's fashions for the last 28 years.

The big T is the turtleneck which has catapulted into the male fashion scene with such force manufacturers just can't catch their breath.

"We are constantly sold out," said a spokesman for a department store, referring to the newest in silk and lame turtleneck shirts to be worn for formal occasions with dress suits.

"They are far more popular than frilled or pleated dress shirts which are less expensive."

One men's clothing shop claimed it had sold more than 600 of the silk turtlenecks in two months.

Turtlenecks which fit snugly around the neck are available in casual sports jerseys, sweaters, as inserts under shirts and V-necked pullovers and of course, for formal wear.

Handkerchiefs or pocket puffs in a variety of colors and patterns have also edged out the white handkerchief.

"White just doesn't sell anymore. What the men prefer is a multi-colored silk square which can be arranged within the pocket to display any six patterns or colors and matches ties or ascots."

But while the white handkerchief popularity has died, the color white will be big news come spring.

"Usually reserved for cruisewear, white will make its appearance on a large scale as a background color for many clothing items, including sports jackets, trousers and patterned shirts.

"Women are largely responsible for the new color and texture trends in fashion as they are forever badgering their menfolk to get out of their drab apparel and slip into something with more zip to it."

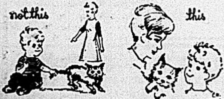
Mr. Leber advises the smart man never to wear the same suit two days in a row.

SEEK ABORTIONS

More than 70,000 women in Czechoslovakia requested abortions during the first nine months of 1967.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Dickie, you're always mauling that cat. Stop pulling its tail. It will scratch you."

Mother: "It hurts the kitty when you are rough with her. Pick her up like this and pet her gently. Hear her purr when she's happy."

Instead of scolding a child when he mistreats a pet, show him from the beginning what to do and the proper ways to play with a cat or dog.

Ivory Tower Is Not Suitable Spot for Writers Says Sisson

LONDON (CP)— Modern government may be going grey and faceless but there still is room for unconventional men of letters in the corridors of British power.

Proof of this is a quiet figure who oversees the organization and staffing of this country's labor department, with its 20,000 employees.

Away from the office, Bristol-born C. H. Sisson, 53, pens poems and fiction of compressed ferocity, together with essays on British and foreign literature and studies in administration.

Newly launched is his ninth published book, a volume of verse packed with stinging satire and relentless probing of mankind's ultimate fate.

Doom and irony ring through this latest work of Sisson - called Metamorphoses — but also felt are the pulsations of a deep religious faith.

One of his novels, Christopher Homm, tells the story of its working-class hero backwards—from death to birth.

The book was termed Sisson's masterpiece by one critic, who added:

"The greatest irony of all is that this writer, whose learning, sharpness of mind and awareness of foreign literature . . . make most of the clerks, columnists . . . and verse-makers look silly, should himself come from Whitehall."

The name Whitehall denotes the British civil service. And Sisson looks and acts every inch the civil servant.

Steeped in the literature and politics of France as well as in his own country's heritage, he has produced studies of such legendary French figures as poet Charles Feguy, killed in the First World War, and of the administrative methods characteristic of Britain's cross-Channel neighbor.

Sisson considers his civil service career a fuel rather than a block to his writing. The new poems are published by Methuen of London.

He seems to think that full-time involvement in the literary life undermines something a writer needs for his own good and for society's—a steely sense of the world's realities.

In a collection of essays called Art and Action, Sisson argued that in past centuries the privilege of ivory-tower detachment for men of letters meant that "even men incapable of regulating their own private affairs did not hesitate to recommend themselves as practical guides to whole nations."

In the 1930s, "the delusion of grandeur broke out again in the persons of young poets then near-Communist, who at any rate seemed to claim a clarity of insight on the ground that they were poets."

Their political attitudes turn out in retrospect to have been "only the vulgar fashion of the age."

As a specialist in British methods of administration, Sisson has sparked controversy unusually torrid for a field dominated by cool-minded academics.

A Sisson book, The Spirit of British Administration, drew bitter rebuke from Max Nicholson, former government adviser who recently won headlines with a polemic against this country's administrative class.

The attack, mounted in a book called The System, was itself criticized in some quarters which alleged it to be ill-informed and over-sensationalized.

Sisson's work, Nicholson charged, was a "quintessential" expression of the mentality behind administrative ways that mean self-destruction for Britain.

Sisson, unruffled, concedes that "the British system of administration, like any other, is always in need of reform."

He also hits out at what he considers an increasingly prevalent characteristic of officials here and elsewhere—an inability to write well.

"The official utterance, as such, is slithering into unintelligibility," he says.

MPs Divided About TV in House

OTTAWA (CP) — The big eye of television should be in the House of Commons "free to roam, to go anywhere, to scan the empty seats and catch the MP behind his newspaper or comic book."

TV in the Commons would be an "affront to the chamber," would distort the institution and prevent it doing the job it should in legislating for the country.

The first opinion is that of Robert McCleave, 45-year-old lawyer-broadcaster and Conservative MP for Halifax. The sec- Social Credit MP for Okanagan-Revelstoke.

Their views point up the opposed sides in the debate on whether TV cameras should be allowed into the Commons chamber.

Discussion of the question got some added impetus in the parliamentary crisis that was resolved by a vote in the government's favor Wednesday.

At the height of the crisis much of the debate took place in the corridors outside the chamber.

Crews from the two TV networks set up camp in the hallway, collaring party leaders and other MPs as they emerged from the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux has said it would require unanimous consent of the members to allow a film crew in and there has not been such consent.

Three Reasons

Belleville Wins Plum Sought by Many

By DONALD MACKENZIE
(Staff Reporter)

Why Belleville?

After having options on land in communities as far away as Owen Sound and as close to Belleville as Trenton and Cobourg, Allied Chemical decided to build its new plastics manufacturing plant here.

Before examining why the company came to Belleville it's necessary to examine why it came to Canada or even Ontario. The American-based corporation has similar operations throughout the world.

According to M. M. Hendrick, president of Allied Chemical Canada, Ltd., "each level of government provided a reason for locating in Belleville."

By providing a "moderate tariff protection" for the product against imports, Mr. Hendrick stated the Federal government is enabling the company "to neutralize the inherently higher costs of a smaller plant."

"Without this protection the plant most probably would not have been built."

Ontario was chosen because the "market for our product is centred in Toronto and the closer to the market — naturally the better," stated the president.

Now — Why Belleville.

According to Mr. Hendrick: "We are in Belleville due to the planning and assistance of the Ontario Development Corporation and the invaluable aid from the city of Belleville and its industrial commission."

Allied Chemical has applied for financial assistance under the provincial incentive program. In Belleville the assistance should amount to $500,000.

One reason for choosing Belleville over Cobourg could be the fact the grant would be cut in half (to $250,000) if the company wished to locate in Cobourg.

But what's $250,000?

"There's a lot more to consider," pointed out general manager Robert Aitken. "When you are talking about a capital investment of over $2,000,000 it really does not make that much difference."

"Of all the locations we saw, the concessions and business approach of Belleville was by far the best. People here have gone out of their way and I can't emphasize it enough. The whole approach of Belleville to business is exhilarating to people like ourselves."

Of the circumstances that led to Allied Chemical locating in Canada, in Ontario and in Belleville the one that counted the most, according to the company, was Belleville itself.

In Business : R. V. Aitken, H. J. Bolhuis

Plant Officers Ready to Go

"First Impressions are lasting ones," or so they say.

If this is the case then two of the Allied Chemical executives that will shortly become Bellevillians are going to like their stay here.

"My wife and I would move tomorrow," said General Manager R. V. Aitkens. Showing that he's been keeping up on the municipal problems during the past months, he said "I thought I might have a problem buying a home, but I found one already."

Manager of the new plant will be Hero Bolhuis who was in Belleville for the first time yesterday. "Even with weather as miserable as it was yesterday," he said, "I like it here."

Mr. Aitken will be coming to Belleville from Montreal while Mr. Bolhuis was formerly the plant manager at Corunna. Both men have been with Allied Chemical just over 3½ years.

Before joining Allied, Mr. Aitken was sales manager at Chemcell (1963 Ltd.) while Mr. Bolhuis, after coming from Holland 15 years ago, spent eight years with Fibreglass Canada Ltd. in Sarnia.

Both men are looking forward to moving to Belleville. Mr. Aitken with his wife and two sons, plans to move as soon as possible. Mr. Bolhuis, who has four children, plans to wait until school is out before coming.

Plant Here A Part Of Global Empire

Already one of America's largest chemical firms, it supplies domestic markets with more than 3,000 products from 125 plants in the U.S.

Its range of sophisticated products contribute to jetliner metals, paper cups, picnic jugs.

In Canada, Allied claims most major industries "north of the border are customers of this company subsidiary."

Allied Chemical Canada Ltd., — which now is establishing its newest branch in Belleville is a consolidation of "smaller Canadian subsidiaries," organized in 1958 with headquarters in Montreal.

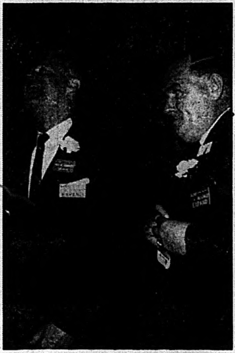
Latest company information lists a total work force of 1,100 in plant and offices from New Brunswick to British Columbia.

While the Belleville unit will be a small addition to the huge organization it will share in the future fortunes of the Allied — linked to market demand.

"Long-range planners at Allied Chemical are continuously exploring and evaluating challenges and opportunities for extending the company's business horizons," says an Allied company program.

At present, plans call for the Belleville operation to produce food packaging film, trademarked Capran.

Robert V. C. Aitken, general manager of the Belleville unit, says Allied may expand to five production lines within five years, with a payroll "doubled, perhaps tripled."



Smiles : Hendrick and Hume

Hendrick No Stranger To Quinte District

His early memories of the area date from the late 30s as an RCAF fledgling.

"I'm happy to be back — as an individual — in this area," he told civic representatives at the Hotel Quinte last night as he confirmed his company's expansion to Belleville

He recalled the district as he knew it in his early days and the contacts he made then.

"Therefore," he added, "my immediate reaction to this area is basically one of a friendly community and one that is physically attractive."

Aside from industry, he progressed far from those early service days when he was known as a young airman stationed in the Quinte area.

Mr. Hendrick retired from the air force in 1965 — with the rank of air vice marshal. That was the year he joined Allied Chemical, as executive vice - president and director

Until his service retirement he was commanding air oficer of the Air Defence Commond at St. Hubert. This posting gave him responsibility for 14,000 men and six flying stations and 29 radar units.

Employees To Need Training

"Allied Chemical is putting a smile on the face of the local Manpower office," said H. Karn, head of the federal government's Canadian Manpower in Belleville.

By next September the new Allied Chemical plant to be built in Belleville should be producing its nylon film.

With a capital investment of over $2,000,000 the plant will initially employ 40 people, all of which will be drawn from the Belleville area.

Naturally, since the operation of the highly technical extruders needed to produce the film requires skill, all of the employees will have to be trained.

R. V. Aitken, general manager of the company, said that the employees will be sent to the company's plant in Pennsylvania to be trained during the summer.

Capran 6 Versatile Filament

Nylon isn't new but uses being found for it and its subproducts are.

Allied Chemical by this December will be producing nylon film in Belleville. Known as Capran film, the product and variations of it are already in wide use throughout Canada, the United States and the Commonwealth countries.

The film itself, only 1,000 of an inch thick, can be adapted for almost any purpose because of its versatility and tensile strength.

One of the major markets for the product is the packaging industry. By selling its nylon film to major Canadian film converters, the film is adapted to serve the market.

For the meat and cheese packaging industries the nylon film is coated with polyethylene and then used by companies such as Swifts, Schneiders and Maple Leaf to vacuum pack their foods.

The product is not limited to food packaging as it can be adapted for other needs. It is also used in carpets, tire cords, and other diverse articles as dress fabrics. Instead of being coated with polyethylene it can be metalized, thus increasing its strength even more.

The metalized variation of Capron 6 is already in use in the U.S. and a new company has recently opened in Toronto that requires the film.

Although at first the company is only going to manufacture one type of plastic (Capran film) the plant is going to be built large enough to accommodate expansion into five lines.

R. V. Aitken, general manager of the company, hopes that these new lines will be introduced at a rate of one a year as the market opens up. He mentioned that the market for the product so far had to be created and as it expands so will the company.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The senior and junior Kingston-Belleville rivilary may have ended early this winter but a couple of intermediate hockey clubs are doing their best to provide the centres' fans with some action.

Belleville Oil Kings and Kingston Merchants are locked in a best-of-seven OHA Intermediate "A" playoff set.

The Oil Kings played their home games in Tweed this winter but with more ice time now available in this city, they are moving "home" for at least some games.

Kingston won the series opener in the Limestone city last weekend and the second battle will be played at nine Friday in Memorial Arena. These two clubs were the only "A" entries in the OHA Intermediate grouping this winter and have staged some tidy squabbles to date, with plenty more expected before this series is settled. Other teams in the regular-season grouping were Picton, Napanee, Trenton CFB and Campbellford and they are continuing in other intermediate divisions below "A".

On the Oil King roster are some pretty well known local players, including "Pug" Kellar, Chuck Rowbotham, Hylie Bryant, Bill Moxon, hardrock Jud Semark and numerous others.

Kingston Merchants have a solid, fast lineup consisting mainly of good junior grads, some former seniors and veteran intermediates, including the Lavallee brothers, Gary and Leo, Jim Stinson and many others.

The rivalry is there and the brand of hockey is deserving of fan support.

Softball enthusiasts are reminded of the Trent Valley League's annual meeting on tap here Sunday afternoon.

League president Cliff Belch requests all possible entries be represented in the Belleville Recreation Centre (Pinnacle Street) at 1.30.

"I think all concerned realize how important it is to get the groundwork laid early so we are looking for a good turnout," Belch says, "and aside from team representatives, other interested persons and possible executives are also urged to attend."

Point Anne, Madoc, Trenton CFB and Trenton Carm's made up the league last season and they are hoping to expand to at least six entries for '68.

Have you obtained your tickets for the March 22 Minnie Menard benefit hockey game yet?

Plans are said to be progressing nicely for the game involving the Mo-Hawks of the last two seasons plus many of the old Senior "A" McFarlands of Allen Cup and World championship renown.

Tickets are a buck and a half each and will be distributed in surrounding centres such as Batawa, Trenton, Tweed, Picton, Trenton and Napanee, as well as being available through players, boosters, etc. here in the city.

All proceeds will go to Menard, the Mo-Hawk winger who lost the sight of his right eye when accidently hit by a stick a short while ago.

Ye old "Lady of the Moira" should be overflowing for a good cause — and to once again watch the likes of Ike Hildebrand, "Bep" Guidolin, big Joe Lepine and many others.

By the way, if you wish to assist in any manner, contact Lionel Botly or Floyd Crawford. It will be appreciated.

Hawk Rookie Wins It

Blow 3-0 Lead

Leafs Lay 1-0 Egg; Blues Tie Habs

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When you've got two older brothers who have knocked about in the minor pro leagues as long as the Schmautz boys, even playing in the National Hockey League is a thrill.

But Bobby Schmautz, the 22-year-old Chicago Black Hawk rookie, went one better Wednesday night in Toronto when his first-period marker stood up for the only goal of the game.

DENNIS DEJORDY

The 1-0 Chicago victory may have written an end to the defending Stanley Cup champion's hopes of even making the playoff this season.

With only 15 games left in the 74-game schedule, Toronto trails fourth-place Boston by 11 points and tonight they face the Bruins in Boston in one of three scheduled games.

In other games played Wednesday, St. Louis Blues exploded for three unanswered goals in the third period to tie Montreal Canadiens 3-3 while Oakland Seals piled in six goals before holding off Minnesota North Stars 6-3.

Other games scheduled tonight have New York Rangers visiting Detroit Red Wings and Los Angeles Knigs at Philadelphia Flyers.

Schmautz, who arrived in the Chicago camp just three games ago from Dallas of the Central Pro League, blasted a partially-screened slap shot past goalie Bruce Gamble on a pass from Dennis Hull at 15:48 of the first period.

And while Toronto managed to hold the Hawks off for the rest of the game, they were unable to get anything by Chicago's Dennis DeJordy who registered his fourth shutout of the season.

The loss for Toronto was their ninth in 10 games and greatly dimmed their hopes of overtaking Boston Bruins for the fourth and last playoff spot in the east. It would be the first time in nine years for Boston to make the playoffs and the first time in 10 years that the Leafs didn't.

Chicago goalie Roger DeJordy was full value for his fourth shutout of the season, handling 38 shots, 16 in the final period, as the Leafs carried a great deal of the play throughout the game.

At Los Angeles, Ted Hampson continued to make an early-season trade look good and Billy Harris appears to have shaken a season-long slump.

The two centres scored two goals each in the victory over Minnesota. Other Seals' goals went to George Swarbrick and Wally Boyer.

The North Stars, who remained four points behind idle Philadelphia in the western standings, got goals from Mike McMahon, Parker MacDonald and Andre Boudrias.

YVON COURNOYER

Dickie Moore went through enough Montreal rallies in 11 seasons with the Canadiens to know how they get started.

Moore, who now earns his salary with St. Louis, carried over his knowledge to Wednesday night.

It was Moore's third period goal that started a three-goal spurt for the fired up Blues and earned them a tie.

Yvan Cournoyer scored twice and assisted on a goal by Gilles Tremblay that gave the Habs a 3-0 lead.

But Moore opened the St. Louis flood-gates at 3:54 of the third period and Red Berenson and Frank St. Marseilles followed him through.

Clippers Shade San Diego

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Willie Marshall made all the difference Wednesday as Baltimore Clippers evened their record with teams from the Western Hockey League on a five-game western trip by the American League club.

The Clippers lost their opening game of the trip 5-3 Tuesday to Phoenix Roadrunners

The veteran winger set up Tom McCarthy for the tying goal then took a pass from McCarthy for the winners with 46 seconds left in the game as the Clippers registered a 4-3 victory over San Diego Gulls.

The only other scheduled game had Hershey Bears scoring five times in 13 minutes of the third period on their way to an 8-5 victory over Cleveland Barons.

Hialeah Record

Rides 6 Winners, Fined

MIAMI (AP) — Jockey Angel Cordero Jr., set a track record at Hialeah Wednesday by riding six winners on one program. Off the track he drew a $200 fine and was released from his $100,000 a year contract.

The 26-year-old Puerto Rican had eight mounts and was out of the money on only two to set a record at Hialeah. Braulio Baeza held the previous track record with five victories in one day at Hialeah in 1966.

Stewards fined Cordero $200 for striking jockey Earlie Fires after the running of Tuesday's 10th race. Cordero finished second in the Tuesday race and survived a claim of foul lodged by Fires, who finished fifth.

Also Wednesday, Louis Wolfson disclosed that Cordero is being released from his $100,000 annual guaranteed contract with Harbor View Farms.

"We are releasing Cordero as of March 1," Wolfson said. "Angel wants to ride in New York, and the main division of our stable will be based in Chicago this summer."

Lacroix Still Tops In AL Race

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — With Quebec Aces Andre Lacroix off in the National Hockey League, his American League opponents are trying to put a dent in the little centre's scoring lead.

Lacroix was called up by Philadelphia Flyers and left behind a 20-point lead on 41 goals, 46 assists and 87 points. The bulge is down to 17 now with Bob Barlow of Rochester Americans picking up four points and moving into second place with 70 points, including 32 goals.

Simon Nolet of Quebec is third with 69 points and only one point separates the next five scorers.

Roger DeJordy of Hershey Bears and Dave Creighton of Providence Reds have 67 points each and Jean-Guy Gendron of Quebec, Jimmy Paterson of Cleveland Barons and Mike Nykoluk of Hershey each have 66.

Knudson Loot Leader

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — George Knudson of Toronto, with total earnings of $50,310, is more than $10,000 ahead of the nearest contender in the list of professional golfers' winnings this year issued Wednesday.

Knudson won $43,662 in official, Professional Golfers Association-sanctioned events and $6,648 in unofficial money up to last week's Tucson Open.

Second was Tom Weiskopf with $34,242 in official money, $6,303 unofficial and $40,545 total.

Al Geiberger, $32,575, $1.130, $33,705; Kermit Zarley, $27,732, $3,742, $31,225; Billy Casper, $23,319, $17,943, $41,262; Dave Marr, $22,371, $237, $22,609; Arnold Palmer, $15,256, $21,471, $36,727; Ray Floyd, $15,106, $6,218, $21,324; Frank Beard, $14,450, $2,277, $16,727; George Archer, $14,224, $2,510, $16,734.

Manitoba, BC Rinks Head For National Women's Curling Title

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba and British Columbia made it through a day of cliff-hangers Wednesday to enter the final day of the Canadian women's curling championship tied in first place each with six wins and one loss.

Both Mabel Mitchell of Brandon and Myrtle Fashoway of Cranbrook, B.C., ran into trouble in the fifth round and needed extra ends to salvage wins.

They had relatively easy sixth round matches, but Manitoba came close to blowing its seventh round game against Ontario's Peggy Wherrett of Dryden, needing an extra end to win.

Barbara Macnevin of Delisle Sask., and Hazel Jamison's family rink from Edmonton were locked in third place with 5-2 marks

Nova Scotia's Shirley Robertson of Halifax won one out of three rounds Wednesday to move into sole possession of fifth place at 3-4, while the other provincial champions were bunched in the cellar with 2-5 records.

They were Ontario, Peggie Bradshaw of Hudson Heights, Que., Barbara Likely of Saint John, N.B., Gladys Carruthers of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Jeanette Blair of St. John's Nfld.

In the eighth round starting at 9:30 a.m. CST it was: Prince Edward Islands vs. Ontario, Saskatchewan vs. New Brunswick, Manitoba vs. British Columbia, Quebec vs. Alberta and Nova Scotia vs. Newfoundland.

In seventh round action, Manitoba took an extra end to nip Ontario 8-7, Saskatchewan edged P.E.I. 8-7 in the only other game that got past nine ends, Alberta disposed of Newfoundland 10-2, Nova Scotia beat Quebec 7-6, and British Columbia handled New Brunswick 5-4.

Mrs. Mitchell sent her Manitoba rink into an extra end with Ontario in the seventh round when she missed a wide-open take-out with last rock, but redeemed herself in the extra frame by making a similar shot to count.

Manitoba came back in the late stages to tie its fifth round game against Alberta and then stole one in the extra end for the win.

Manitoba managed its 8-6 win over Saskatchewan on a missed take-out by Mrs. Macnevin. With last rock and Manitoba laying second shot, she needed the take-out to count four and win the game. She missed and only counted a single.

Mrs. Fashoway said she was "rather jubilant" in getting British Columbia through the day undefeated.

"We're playing a lot better and have finally got the weight. But we've still got two big ones Thursday against Manitoba and Alberta."

British Columbia built up a 4-1 lead over Nova Scotia after six ends in the fifth round before the eastern team started its comeback. A steal by Nova Scotia in the 10th sent the game into overtime with B.C. taking advantage of opposition misses to count two and wrap up the win.

Many of the 35 games played up until the final two rounds were one-sided and 21 of them have ended before the 10th ends.

Title Double-Header

Emile; Nothing Gone to 'Waist'

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Emile Griffith says he's in great shape. One look at him in action is enough to convince anyone that he's not kidding.

Showgirls hate him when they see his narrow waist. Musclemen turn green with envy when they look at his broad shoulders and bulging biceps.

The boxing program tale of the tape says his waist is 28 inches.

"It's 26½ inches right now and I've never felt better," said Griffith, who defends his world middleweight title against Italy's Nino Benvenuti at Madison Square Garden Monday night.

This will be Griffith's third title fight with Benvenuti. Griffith lost his crown to the tall, stylish Italian last April and regained it in September.

In the second fight on the doubleheader title card, Joe Frazier of Philadelphia and Buster Mathis of Grand Rapids, Mich., a couple of young, undefeated fighters, will meet for a piece of the world heavyweight title. New York and Massachusetts will recognize the winner as champion.

In working at the same place and by watching each other they have helped each other. Frazier, a knockout puncher with a left hook, has learned from Griffith how to use his right hand more effectively.

Griffith, a much more experienced fighter, has become more aggressive because of Frazier.

Wins Slalom

Nancy Raises $4,690!

ST. SAUVEUR, Que. (CP) — Nancy Greene paced other members of Canada's national ski team Wednesday night to win the annual fund-raising invitational giant slalom at Mont Habitant near this Laurentian resort community.

A total of $4,690 was collected from the 7,000 spectators who turned up for the event and the entire amount was immediately donated to the national ski team fund.

Miss Greene, gold and silver medalist at the recent Winter Olympics in Grenoble, France, made it down the 38-gate course in one minute, 8.7 seconds—seven-tenths of a second better than runner-up Judy Leinweber of Kimberley, B.C., also a member of the national team.

Betsy Clifford of Ottawa, a national team member, was third in 1:10.2 as light snow flurries came down during the mild evening of skiing under floodlights.

Rod Hebron of Vancouver captured the men's event in one minute and 2.6 seconds, followed by Dan Irwin of Princeton, B.C., in 1:03.6 and Scott Henderson of Calgary in 1:03.7. All three are members of the national ski team.

A total of 93 skiers—including the 26-member national ski team—participated in the competition. Women skiers totalled 32.

All three Midget games were won by scores of 5-2. In the first, the Elk Hawks defeated the Canadiens. R. Mitchell paced the Hawks with a pair of goals. J. Drummond, W. Wilkinson and N. Pope scored the others. D. Irwin and P. Hall scored for the Canadiens.

Two goals by S. Muldoon helped carry the Wings to their win over the Bruins. G. Salmon, D. Murray and T. Lynch scored one goal apiece for the victors. R. Richardson and W. Farrell scored for the Bruins.

The Leafs won their 5-2 victory over the Rangers with the aid of yet another two-goal performance, this one by G. Bridge. A. Belch, F. Calder and P. Scott scored the other Leaf goals. G. Hughes and A. Hayman scored the Ranger goals.

In Tyke, the Penguins edged the Hawks, 5-4. D. Shaw and A. Plane scored two goals apiece for the Penguins. B. Slavin scored the fifth. Jianopoulos scored a pair of goals for the Hawks. Bennett and Bell each scored one.

The lowest-scoring affair of the night found the Canadiens and Bruins battling to a 1-1 tie. C. Ripley scored for the Canadiens and T. Dicker for the Bruins.

The only shutout of the evening went to Mike MacDonald of the Wings. I. McCuthcheon scored two goals, MacDonald held the Aces out, and the Wings had a 2-0 victory.

Finally, in Tyke, the Seals edged the Barons, 2-1. M. Gadbout and M. Crawford scored for the Seals. R. McBrien scored the lone Baron goal.

Toronto Honors Nancy

TORONTO (CP) — The top rung of Canada's skiing ladder belongs to Nancy Greene and today the City of Toronto honors her success with floats and a ticker tape parade.

Nancy, Olympic gold medalist and 1967 World Cup skiing champion, will be honored by a parade which demonstrates the stages a racer must go through to become world champion.

The parade will be led by members of the Nancy Greene Little Leaguers, racers from eight to 13 years old, representing the first organized program for potential competitors.

The next group will be the Southern Ontario Junior Racers, followed by Les Espoirs, the National B team and the National A team.

What's New Psychology In Baseball!

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Black is to white as night is to: A—Green. B—Day. C—Evening. D—Morning. Pick one.

Psychological testing, long a method for gaining insight into students, job applicants and draftees, is being adopted to baseball.

Anxious to learn all they can about their athletes, Pittsburgh Pirate officials invited Dr. Tom Tutko, a San Jose State psychologist, to administer a motivational test to the Pirates.

Dr. Tutko ran his test Wednesday and although it could not be confirmed, it was rumored one of the questions dealt with why the Pirates insist on hitting one another with baseballs.

Two players were hit by balls Wednesday. Tom Sisk stopped a line drive with his left leg while pitching batting practice and Willie Stargell was hit on the batting helmet by a Luke Walker pitch.

Neither was badly hurt but Dr. Tutko might point out to the Pirates the advantages of not incapacitating one another.

Joe L. Brown, general manager of the Pirates, said several pro football teams have used the tests, long a favorite of large companies across the country.

Meanwhile, Gil Hodges, new manager of New York Mets, has learned something about his club in the few days since training began.

The Mets, Hodges learned, don't have a third baseman.

New York used 11 men at third base in 1967 and finished 10th, which is trouble.

Alvin Dark, another new manager who inherited an eighth place Cleveland team, said only first baseman Tony Horton and third baseman Max Alvis are assured of regular jobs with the Indians.

"We have plenty of time to decide," said Dark of his other positions. "When you finish eighth as the Indians did last year, you must try to do anything for improvement."

Ollie Brown, an outfielder, signed his contract with San Francisco Giants and Baltimore Orioles' Boog Powell took a cut from the Orioles.

Tony Conigliaro, Boston Red Sox' slugging outfielder, put in a length batting drill against the pitching machine and pronounced his left eye 100 per cent fit. Conigliaro missed the last six weeks of the 1967 season when he was struck in the face by a pitched ball.

Clay Carroll, Atlanta Brave pitcher, suffered a broken left ankle while running in the outfield and will be out for a month to six weeks.

Centre Hastings Playoffs

Six teams of the Centre Hastings Hockey League are in the throes of the seasonal playoffs.

The Ivanohe Knights are battling the Stirling Rebels and at present hold a 3-0 game lead in their best-of-seven series.

The Rebels have been hit hard by injuries and have reached the bottom of the man - power barrel .

The Knights have won their games by 5-3; 7-4 and 11-2 scores. The teams meet in what could be the final game of the series Saturday night at Stirling at 9 p.m.

In the other series, best-of-three, the Cloyne Blazers hold a 2-0 game lead over Foxboro by virtues of 6-4 and 4-1 victories.

Frankford holds a one - game lead 7-4 over the Batawa Braves.

The winners of the Cloyne-Foxboro and Frankford - Batawa series will meet in the semi - finals, the winners to clash with the winners of the Ivanhoe - Stirling series in a best-of-seven championship final.

Tonight at Madoc, Frankford meets Batawa at 7 p.m. with Foxboro and Cloyne tangling at 9 p.m.

Saturday night at Madoc, Foxboro and Cloyne meets, if necessary, while in Stirling, Frankford and Batawa clash at 7 p.m. with Ivanhoe and Stirling meeting at 9 p.m.

White Rink Ousted

TORONTO (CP) — Lee Scott's Toronto Scarborough rink advanced to the finals of the southern Ontario women's curling championship Wednesday night by defeating Alice Bell of Windsor 9-5.

The Scott rink will face undefeated Orillia, skipped by Helen Varley, today for the championship.

Toronto Scarborough must defeat Orillia twice today in the double knockout competition if it is to win the championship.

Heather White's Burlington rink, in strong contention going into play Wednesday, was eliminated when beaten 10-9 by Mrs. Varley and 12-7 by Mrs. Bell.

In the Orillia-Burlington match, Mrs. Varley's last rock of the match took out Mrs. White's shot rock to give Orillia a four-ender.

Macmillan, A Study in Ambiguity, by Anthony Sampson.

A penetrating study of Sir Harold MacMillan and of the political scene in Britain during his term as Prime Minister. Mr. Sampson outlines the divergent influences from Sir Harold's youth and how these effected his handling of various political issues.

Due To Circumstances Beyond Our Control, by Fred W. Friendly.

Fred Friendly was with the Columbia Broadcasting System for 16 years, the last two as president of the news division. He worked with Edward R. Murrow to produce many outstanding programs. This book is a withering criticism of current programming and gives persuasive arguments for fresh guidelines.

The Death of God Debate, edited by Jackson L. Ice and John J. Carey.

What is one to make of a "Godless theology" or a "Christian Atheism?" The editors of this collection of articles are attempting to provide a responsible discussion of the issues involved in the new theological ferment, in contrast to the more sensational journalism which misrepresents and confuses.

The Wind and Beyond, by Theodore von Karman with Lee Edson.

Thedore von Karman was a mathematical genius from childhood who became one of this century's greatest scientific geniuses. Although not widely known to the general public, von Karman's work in aerodynamics and rocketry can be seen in the blast-off of every rocket from Cape Kennedy. He has given a straightforward account of his life and work.

Across The Top of Russia by Richard Petrow.

In 1965 the U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker "Northwind" sailed on an oceanographic mission to polar seas and was ordered to make the Northeast Passage across the top of Russia, a route normally closed to non-Russian ships. Richard Petrow, a television journalist, sailed with the ship and has written a blow-by-blow account of the ship's activities and encounters with Russian ships.

Rule of Three by Iris Butter.

Sarah Churchill, first Duchess of Marlborough, was a remarkable woman. She was at the center of the court for most of her life and gained great influence over Queen Anne. This account of how she came to have that power, how she used it, and how she was overthrown by her cousin Abigail makes fascinating reading.

'Pat' Patrick Honored by Moose Lodge

In recognition of more than 50 years' service to Belleville Lodge, No. 1004, Loyal Order of the Moose, Mr. C. E. (Pat) Patrick has been doubly honored by his fellow lodge members.

Early in December lodge members held an Ed. Patrick Day when he was presented with a 50-year jewel.

Then recently lodge members visited him at Belleville General Hospital to present him with a distinguished service citation plaque.

Mr. Patrick has been active in the lodge until a few weeks ago, when he was admitted to hospital. He has held every office in the order and currently is treasurer of the local lodge.

A retired barber, Mr. Patrick has been a sports enthusiast all his life. He was sponsor of the Moose bowling team and the many trophies he displays at his home at 40 East Moira Street are indicative of the success of his teams.

Mr. Patrick was also a hockey enthusiast and a number of years ago sponsored Belleville hockey teams.

Dief Lays Rumors To Rest

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker cheerfully laid to rest early today a widespread report that he had been taken ill Wednesday.

As Mark Twain said 'the reports of my demise are greatly exaggerated,'" Mr. Diefenbaker, awakened at 2 a.m. at his home by a reporter, said chuckling.

When Gerald Haslam, his executive assistant, and other persons close to him were unable to say for sure that it was merely a rumor, a reporter called the Diefenbaker residence.

"Who's this?" growled a sleepy voice.

"Is this the Diefenbaker residence?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, it is," was the reply, now clear and unmistakably Diefenbaker.

"Are you Mr. Diefenbaker?"

"Yes, I am."

"Were you asleep?"

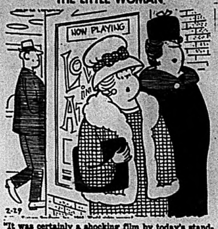
"Yes. What's this all about?"

"Well ah um. . . ."

Told that someone apparently had confused him with Mr. Justice Douglas Abbott of the Supreme Court of Canada, who took a heart attack Wednesday, Mr. Diefenbaker replied:

"I'm awfully sorry to hear about Abbott."

THE LITTLE WOMAN



"It was certainly a shocking film by today's standards—the leading lady was completely clothed all through it!"

Well, So What's New?

It's Crisis Time on Parliament Hill

OTTAWA (CP) — Ho-hum. One parliamentary crisis finished. Another shaping up. Maybe three.

The government needs money desperately. It says so.

Prime Minister Pearson Wednesday repeated that the government will introduce new financial legislation. It is designed to replace the revenue lost through the Feb. 19 defeat of the bill to increase personal income tax.

What form will this legislation take? The government isn't saying, even if it knows at this point.

If the legislation is another personal income tax boost, the government can expect to run into heavy opposition. The opposition says so.

That's crisis No. 1.

The government still must get parliamentary approval for further spending appropriations in the current fiscal year which ends March 31, 1968.

The opposition says it will have a lot to say about this.

That's possible crisis No. 2.

The government will also time to cruise around for delegate votes.

That date now appears optimistic, if not impossible.

Mr. Pearson said Wednesday need parliamentary approval for money it will spend while the Commons is adjourned for the April 4-6 Liberal leadership convention—if it does manage to adjourn.

That's possible crisis No. 3.

The parliamentary crisis which ended Wednesday when the government was sustained by a Commons confidence vote of 138 to 119 began over money.

And money will be the crux of the rest of the present session.

Mr. Pearson had hoped the session could be prorogued by March 10 to give the leadership candidates in his cabinet some after the vote that the government still intends to balance the budget for the 1968-69 fiscal year. To do that, it needed more revenue.

The government was trying to get more revenue on the night of Monday, Feb. 19, when it suddenly fell on its face.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, Mr. Pearson asked for unanimous Commons consent for immediate debate on his motion declaring that the 84-to-82 defeat was not a vote of non-confidence in the government.

He didn't get it. He didn't get it the next day, either.

Instead, the Conservatives moved a censure motion against Mr. Pearson for accusing them of "trickery" in the Monday night vote. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux threw out the motion.

The debate began Friday after the required 48 hours' notice had expired.

The crisis eased that day when Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said his eight-man group would uphold the minority government. This support was all the Liberals needed for victory.

Later, Mr. Caouette gave the government a couple of bad turns by threatening to reverse himself.

The focal point of the lively, at times dramatic, debate was this:

Does the government, after defeat on a major bill, have the right to go on governing and ask for a vote of confidence?

The government claimed it did. The opposition, or most of it, claimed it didn't.

The government won. But it may be a Pyrrhic victory if it can't get its new tax bill through.

Stand by for further crisis bulletins.

Province Gears to Regional Goals

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts outlined in the Ontario legislature Wednesday reorganization and streamlining of government departments to "ensure effective planning . . . so far as economic, fiscal, financial, taxation and inter-governmental policies are concerned."

He said the cabinet committees on economics and finance and regional development have been merged into a committee on policy development. The treasury department would be reorganized to create the department of finance and economics. The creation of a department of provincial revenue would concentrate on the administration of all tax statutes and revenue collection.

Concluding the throne speech debate, Mr. Robarts said the trend was towards regional government and the departments were being geared to achieve specific goals.

In reply to a question, Mr. Robarts said the government will be flexible about a March 1 deadline for receipt of briefs commenting on the Smith report on taxation. This was to give everyone an opportunity to make his view known.

Mr. Robarts said he plans to reappoint the legislature's select committee on company law which had recommended sweeping changes in corporation laws last year.

Education Minister William Davis said his department is considering assigning to county boards the responsibility for education of retarded children.

He also estimated that the Ontario government gives the out-of-province student attending university here the equivalent of $2,500 annually. He was replying to Tim Reid (L—Scarborough East) who asked why such students were not eligible for bursary aid.

The legislature gave first reading to a bill that would enable the cabinet to establish an apple marketing commission. The amendment to the Farm Products Marketing Act would authorize the commission to designate local boards responsible for the control and regulation of apples.

The proposed route of a 48-mile section of a new highway between Sarnia and London was announced by Highways Minister George Gomme. The first stage of Highway 402 would be designated a four-lane controlled access road bypassing all towns and villages. It would take about one year to complete the preliminary design after which property would be acquired for the right of way.

Council Sets Year's Tax Rate

NAPANEE — Much to the relief of Napanee ratepayers, there will be little change in their taxes in 1968. The mill rate for residential property is [illegible]2.5 mills, one-tenth of a mill lower than last year, and for commercial and industrial property is 102 mills, one-fifth of a mill higher.

This is in marked contrast with the last two years, which saw a 26.5 mill increase.

Both high school and public school costs to the town were only an estimate, chairman of the finance committee, Reeve Glenn C. Herrington stated. He did not disclose the estimates.

The special meeting had been called to permit citizens to present their views on the proposed closing of the Thomas St. crossing over the Canadian National Railroad tracks. As no one appeared to voice an opinion, council proceeded to conduct other business. The by-law authorizing closing the crossing has received two readings. Advice is being asked of the Department of Transport before the by-law comes up for its third reading. At one time it had been proposed to build a pedestrian subway under the tracks.

Council once more grappled with the ever-present dog question. A full-time dog catcher will be hired, if one can be found. Also, it was decided to accept the offer of the local Humane Society, which is ready to accept dogs from the town on payment of $5 each. These will be cared for in the shelter erected by the Society last summer. The licence fee will be raised, also, to $5 for male dogs and $8 for females. The fees are $2 and $4 at present. These matters were agreed upon and by-laws will be passed to put them into effect as soon as these can be prepared by the town solicitor.

What is perhaps the most important item of all to be dealt with by the council passed almost unnoticed. On recommendation of the chairman of the finance committee, it was agreed to proceed with the proposal to have an official plan for the town drawn up.

The regular meeting will be held next Monday evening.

Four Payments Left On High School Debt

NAPANEE — Only four more payments remain to be made on the original debenture for Napanee District Secondary School.

The payments, due Dec. 20 of each year, will end in 1971, Lennox and Addington County treasurer, Mrs. Harold Wilson, said Monday.

The school was officially opened in 1952 with a capacity of 650 students.

A debenture was obtained in 1952 for $780,000 and interest of $429,000 over a 20-year period brought the total cost to county residents in the school area to $1,209,000.

The high school was enlarged in 1962 wih accommodations for 1,080, but no county funds were required. The provincial and federal governments paid the complete cost when a technical wing was added.

A further enlargement, to accommodate 1,800- students eventually, began in 1966 and will be officially opened this year. Municipalities in the school area approved debentures totalling $740,000 for the latest addition.

Puppies Found Abandoned Along Road

NAPANEE — Mrs. Chester Wemp, volunteer custodian of the animal shelter of the Humane Society, tells a story of cruelty to animals which has filled her with indignation.

Saturday night a cardboard box was brought to her which had been picked up at the side of the highway. In it were eight puppies about five weeks old, one dead from starvation and exposure, one dying, and a third so badly injured through being trampled by his brothers and sisters that he, also, had to be destroyed. The man who brought them to her took one home with him, and she has been battling ever since to restore the others to health.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Wemp stated that she was amazed at the speed with which the four pups have recovered. They were already beginning to be playfull. They had taken a great deal of her time, however, especially at first when they required nursing and frequent feeding. But the fact that they will live is reward enough for her time and work, she stated. She believes that it will not be long until they are ready for "adoption." Two are male and two female.

Police Corporal Appointed

NAPANEE — J. S. (Sid) Fretts, a town constable for the past five years, has been promoted to corporal.

The position of corporal on the seven - man force is a newly - created post. The department had a sergeant until the recent resignation of Lawrence V. McTaggart.

The promotion will bring an increase of $200 a year, bringing Cpl. Fretts' salary to $5,600.

Noel Coward's Wartime Show Good Story for Peter O'Toole

NEW YORK (AP)—There was a buzzing beehive of activity on ABC Wednesday night as a number of talented English performers raced and roared around, furiously reviving Noel Coward's wartime comedy, Present Laughter.

The vehicle, slight and genially satiric, showed its age a little but served nicely as an opportunity for Peter O'Toole to display his ability to handle a light, brittle line. Although from time to time the actor seemed to overdo things a little, the total result was a merry two hours of television entertainment.

O'Toole played a London matinee idol constitutionally unable to stop acting for a moment and with a special talent for getting involved with women .He was surrounded by an assortment of determined eccentrics. He tried to get out of the clutches of a predatory woman and also to prepare for a foreign tour

The script could perhaps have been tightened a bit, but from start to finish the special Noel Coward touch was evident. O'Toole played one of those apparently sophisticated rakes who is at heart just a helpless male who must be protected by strong, motherly women.

Honor Blackman, once the nemesis of James Bond, played the attractive estranged wife of the actor with whom of course he was eventually reunited.

Lucille Ball, plugging her forthcoming motion picture in England now that the current season's production of The Lucy Show is finished, told a reporter for Variety that the format of her CBS series would change next season.

The trade paper quotes the star as saying that she plans to get those two children back into the series—the boy and the girl who were shipped off to school several seasons back and never heard from again. The locale of the series shifted from Connecticut to Hollywood. But when the children reappear, they will be the two Arnaz children, Lucie and Desi Jr. both in their teens.

Both of them, have appeared from time to time on the program, and young Desi has had considerable show business experience playing in a musical trio that includes Dino Martin, Dean's young son.

Recommended tonight: Carol Channing and 101 Men, 9-10 EST, special program with Walter Matthau and George Burns.

Glen Campbell Devotes All Time to Singing

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To the outsider, the pop music field seems to offer ample opportunity to get rich in a hurry. Glen Campbell, a handsome six-footer from Delight, Ark., knows better.

For five years, Campbell played guitar for recording artists like Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin and for movie scores such as Cool Hand Luke and In the Heat of the Night. Meanwhile, he tried to establish himself as a singer, but met with scant success. Finally, last December he hit with a haunting lament, By the Time I Get to Phoenix.

"That's when I made a New Year's resolution," he recalls.

"I vowed to give up accompanying other singers and devote full time to my own career."

The resolve was fiscally more brave than it seems. Campbell was turning his back on a career that earned him a handsome $50,000 a year and was embarking on the chancey life of a pop singer.

"Believe me, I know how tough it can be," he remarked.

"I've played for recording sessions of some of these teenage sensations, and I've seen them come and go. Nothing can be less permanent than a singer who hits with one smash record."

However, Campbell has followed up the Phoenix hit by playing concert dates all over the country. And his most promising opportunity will come this summer when he takes over as a host of the Smothers Brothers replacement show.

Before embarking on his new venture his skill with the guitar made him much in demand for record sessions.

OSD Students Ready To Present Concert

Now receiving finishing touches is the annual concert presented by school students.

This year's show — Presentation '68 — had its dress rehearsal yesterday and showed the versatility of the youngsters at the school.

To Your Good Health

Long Bed-care Bad for Patients

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Why is it that with a hysterectomy operation years ago you couldn't return to work or do any housework for a whole year, and now you can do both in two to four months? — A. R.

It's because we know more than we used to.

Surgery has been revolutionized in many ways in the present century, within the lifetime of many of us, and in some respects in the last decade or two.

Well into the 1920's, it was the custom to keep any surgical patient — major surgery, that is — in bed and as quiet as possible for at least a week or 10 days, often longer.

Then, weak and trembling, they were gotten up cautiously and gradually. And we did not realize that it was bad for them!

The truth popped out by accident. Dr. Daniel J. Leithauser removed a patient's appendix and as was customary, he was put to bed. He very soon said he wanted to get up and (of course) was told he must not.

But he was a stubborn cuss, and when the nurses left, he climbed out of bed and started walking around. There was all sorts of fuss when he was discovered, but there wasn't any apparent way of keeping him in bed without tying him down. The upshot was that the doctor, unable to find that any harm was resulting, let his strong-minded patient go home much sooner than usual.

This seemed — by standards of that day — so risky and even threatened to denounce the doctor publicly for saying that we'd been wrong about the whole custom of making patients stay in bed while they healed.

But a good idea is hard to suppress, and others tried letting patients get up sooner. Today we not only let them; we insist on it.

For experience soon showed all sorts of benefits. Sutures held incisions safely together. Getting up instead of lying in bed kept a patient's strength up — a week of lying in bed can make your muscles flabbier than you think.

Moving around prevented a great deal of trouble formerly and the number of blood clots was drastically reduced. Circulation was better and healing was not impaired.

Early ambulation — early walking — thus was discovered through the bullheadedness of one patient and the astute observation of an open-minded surgeon.

Hysterectomy is one of many types of surgery helped by early ambulation. The patient is sitting up, and then got on her feet sooner. There are fewer complications. She does not have to spend months regaining lost muscle tone.

In the great majority of surgical cases, a patient is sitting up at least by the next day, and very often on his feet within 12 to 24 hours.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: You recently said that "growing never made anyone hurt" and "growing pains" has been discarded by pediatricians.

Then why do my two children wake at night with pains behind their knees and the doctor found nothing wrong with them and prescribed aspirin? — Mrs. J. J.

Could be muscle cramps following too active a day. It happens. But if you are going to insist on "growing pains" why don't all growing children have them?

• • •

Note to A.P.K.: You were well-advised. When a head injury leads to loss of direction, occasional hallucinations and such symptoms, a neurologist is the proper specialist to evaluate what has happened, and to guide you in proper treatment, if it is called for, or to tell you what you can do to avoid further damage.

• • •

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Wolf for A Pet

Mike Hampson of Edmonton romps with his six-month-old pet timber wolf, convinced the animal is as trustworthy and loyal as a dog. Mr. Hampson said he would have no fear of walking into a pack of wolves because they would be frightened away. He and his wife are unconcerned when their two-year-old son, Kip, plays with the wolf, named Wolf-Wolf. (CP Photo)

Industrial Accountants Meet

On Monday, the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants held its monthly meeting. The vice-chairman of the Chapter, Mr. John Cameron, R.I.A., of the regional office of the Federal Excise Tax Audit Office, introduced the speakers, Mr. E. W. Scott, R.I.A. vice-president S.I.C.A. of Canada and Mr. J. N. Allan R.I.A., executive vice-president. Their topic was "What's In It For Me, Mr. President?" The meeting was in the form of a panel discussion in which the speakers outlined the overall objectives of the society:

(a) to maintain the high standards of the Accounting profession

(b) the recognition of the Accounting profession in the society

(c) to co - operate with other Accounting groups and bodies

(d) to remain as lexible as possible and to keep an open mind towards improving standards of accounting

They also emphasized the importance of flexibility by stating that the society and individuals:

(a) must anticipate the changes the computer will make in Organizations

(b) must be able to adapt themselves to the subsequent changes that will occur

(c) must establish the role of the accountant in this new age

(d) must train the accountants in the new concepts as well as develop a program for the graduate accountants.

After some discussion, the chairman thanked the speakers for their thought - provoking discussion.

Britain Will Admit Citizens Expelled from Native Lands

LONDON (CP) — Critics of the British government's bill limiting colored immigration claimed today to have won a major concession—agreement to admit any British citizens expelled from their native lands.

The controversial Commonwealth Immigration bill was passed by the House of Commons today after a marathon sitting which could give thousands of Asians from Kenya another day to beat the deadline.

Members of Parliament wrangled for 15 hours and 25 minutes on the floor of the House before approving the bill by a vote of 145 to 31.

Most of the 635 members were not present for the vote.

During the all night committee-stage battle in which 33 amendments and new clauses were thrashed about, Home Secretary Callaghan told MPs that British passport holders thrown out of work or rejected from Kenya would be allowed into Britain despite the bill.

"If a man is thrown out of his country and out of work we shall have to take him," Callaghan said. "You can't do anything else under the circumstances."

Although Callaghan refused to have his concession written into the bill, his words were taken as a promise that the quota would be modified to admit any British citizens expelled by their country of residence.

Britain's national Conservative newspapers splashed the Callaghan statement:

"We can't keep them out!" said The Daily Express banner headline.

"Jim in chaos on immigrants," said The Sketch.

As the weary MPs left the House of Commons at 7:28 a.m., three charter flights from Kenya, with 350 Asians aboard, circled over London waiting for the early morning fog to lift. Another five flights from Nairobi were expected during the day.

Prospects of getting the bill through all stages before Friday are slim. Already 43 peers have given notice they wish to speak on the measures this afternoon.

The bill allows the government to set an annual quota of 1,500 on immigrants who are British citizens but not born in Britain or the children of native-born Britons.

The immediate target is about 100,000 natives of Kenya of Indian or Pakistani origin who retained British citizenship when Kenya became independent in 1963.

Now they are being frozen out of business, trade and employment by new restrictions on non-citizens of Kenya.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTER

What to do when an existing mortgage carries a low-interest rate but is not sufficient to provide the funds necessary to buy, is a contemporary problem. How a buyer can take advantage of a low-interest mortgage and save it is discussed today.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have a problem which I have never before seen or heard discussed. I'll bet many people are now facing a similar situation.

I'm buying a $22,000 house. The mortgage remaining amounts to $12,000, but best of all, the interest rate is 4½ per cent. The owner is willing to turn this mortgage over to me.

I have only $5,000 saved, so I'll need a $17,000 mortgage to buy. The best I can do in today's market is an interest rate of 6½ per cent. The extra 2 per cent a year in interest is going to cost me an awful lot of money.

I'm stuck at this point. I need your advice badly. — Mr. I. M.

ANSWER: Your problem is a matter of interest and money. The 4½ per cent first mortgage should not be disturbed, if possible. It cannot be replaced today. The $5,000 lack should be made up in either one of the following two ways.

The best method would be for the owners of the property to take back a mortgage of $5,000 at 6½ per cent interest. You might even give them an additional bonus of ½ or 1 per cent. If they can spare the money, they will then have a good investment at a high interest rate.

If the owner cannot or is disinterested, you will then have to borrow the $5,000 from a second mortgage-lender. The interest rate will vary, depending on location. But in situations of this type, a 12 per cent rate for about five years would be the best term available normally.

The second alternative, as is apparent, involves a large monthly payment because of the high interest rate and the short term. The income of many buyers would be insufficient to allow them to undertake such an obligation.

If this be true, then the buyer would be forced to get a new mortgage for a longer term (say 25 years, for example) for the total amount. Unfortunately, he would then be unable to take advantage of the low interest-rate associated with the existing mortgage.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Not long ago, I looked into my back yard and there was a large hole. The ground had fallen in. Peeking in, I saw a tangle of tree trunks.

A neighbor tells me that about 10 years ago, years before our house was built, the land was cleared and the fallen trees were buried. New holes are cropping up with regularity.

I have two questions. What must I do to overcome my sinking ground problem? Whom can I get to pay for the necessary work? — Mr. H. T.

ANSWER: The best advice would be to dump fill into the holes as soon as they appear. Eventually, the voids will be filled and the ground will consolidate.

While this is happening, keep praying that no holes appear under your foundation. Should this occur, your house will suddenly show severe cracks and could possibly collapse.

Theoretically, someone is liable. As a practical matter, from experience I have learned that it is almost impossible to collect. The question of proof, of who did what, who knew what and when is too involved and complicated normally to be resolved.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have $2,000 to spend on my house. I can either add a game room with an attached carport, or I can install new appliances, fixtures, and cabinets in the kitchen — I can't do both.

Which of these two would most increase the value of my house? You probably can guess from this letter that my husband and I disagree, but we have agreed to abide by your answer. — Mrs. L. H.

ANSWER: Reading between the lines of your letter, I can sense that you would prefer that I would vote for the kitchen. Sadly, I must tell you the game room and carport will add more to the investment value of your house.

The above addition would enlarge the living room and utility of your property. It should add almost a dollar-for-dollar increase in value. The kitchen improvements, however, involve the ripping out of serviceable units and their replacement.

In contrast to the game room and carport, my best judgment is that the value-increase associated with the kitchen improvements is only about 25 to 50 per cent of the money spent.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My fireplace brickwork is smoked and sooty. It's a mess! I want to clean the brickwork. How do I do it? —Mrs. C.

ANSWER: First, try scrubbing the brickwork with a stiff brush or steel wool dipped in a paste of strong soap or scrubbing powder. Then remove all traces of the cleaner by rinsing with clear water. If the above does not do the job, and I doubt that it will, then comes heavy action.

Buy a carborundum block at your hardware or paint store. Rub briskly the face of the brick. This method literally grinds away the surface of the brick and therefore requires plenty of elbow grease. It's a slow job, but it will remove the smoke and soot.

Scientists Spend Week Adrift Off Gaspe Coast

OTTAWA (CP) — Gaspe folk talkes of the terrors of winter storms in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, always regarded as exaggerations, are plain, unvarnished truth.

Three government scientists who spent a week adrift with a rubber raft on the gulf ice can testify to that.

Picked up last week, they reported temperatures that never got above seven below zero and winds that never dropped below 20 miles an hour and at times got up to 70.

With the wind-chill factor, that's a high temperature of 42 below zero.

The three men—electronics expert Harold Serson and physicist John Keys of defence research telecommunications establishment, and W. J. Seifert, a mines department meteorologist—had a more serious purpose than checking the accuracy of Gaspe folklore.

They are forerunners of what may be the first real effort to study and chart ice conditions in the gulf shipping lanes. With increasing winter use of St. Lawrence ports like Montreal, the study has an important bearing on commercial shipping insurance rates and cargo vessel scheduling.

Don Lindsay, chief of the mines department's sea ice studies, was the fourth man on the team, manning a shore-based radio at Ste. Anne des Monts, Que., to receive twice daily reports from the floating team on wind, current and ice movements.

Lindsay and his chief, Dr. E. E. Roots, who co-ordinates the mines department's polar continental shelf project, said Wednesday in an interview that studies developed from the pioneering efforts of Serson, Keys and Seifert may enable scientists to plot the Gulf's ice movements.
